Extract of a Letter from the Governor General and Council; dated the 15th October 17-8, and received the 18th December following, per Terrible.

We adviſed you in our laſt of the appointment of Mr. Elliott to the court of Moodajee Bonſicello, the Rajah of Berar, with inſtructions to negociate and conclude a treaty of alliance with that Chief; but we are ſorry to inform inform you of the demiſe of Mr. Elliot, on his way to Naguipore, at a place called Sarungur. The Rajah having expreſſed great ſatisfaction at the overtures which we made for a connection with him by this deputation, and being, as we have every reaſon to believe, firm in his attachment to the Engliſh, we conclude, as ſoon as he hears of the unfortunate event of Mr. Elliot's death, that he will take an active part in proſecuting the intended negociation, either by deputing a proper miniſter to us on his part, or by ſoliciting our alliance on ſuch terms as may prove a general advantage to the Company's poſſeſſions. For theſe reaſons, we do not mean to appoint any one to ſucceed Mr. Elliot, until our advices from the Rajah ſhall enable us to determine on the expediency of that meaſure.

We have thought it incumbent on us to remove Colonel Leſlie from the command of the detachment of forces which was ordered to march for the ſupport and aſſiſtance of your Preſidency, on account of the little progreſs it had made under him; as we underſtand he was advanced no further than Rajgur on the 25th ultimo, and of his manifeſt diſobedience alſo of our poſitive orders, in forming and concluding a treaty of perpetual peace and friendſhip, in the name of the Company, with the Rajahs Gomaun and Comaun Sing, Chiefs of a part of the Bundelcund diſtrict.

Colonel Thomas Goddard is now appointed to the chief command of theſe troops, and we have ordered him to proſecute his march, without further loſs of time, into Berar, where on his arrival he will apply to Moodajee Bouncello; and if that Chief ſhall agree to join him with a ſufficient body of forces for the purpoſe, he is to continue his route in conjunction with them; but if he ſhall not have received any freſh directions for his march, or if the Rajah ſhall decline or refuſe to grant him his aſſiſtance, we have then veſted in him a diſcretionary power to ſuſpend his proceedings.

If the plan which you had reſolved to adopt and carry into execution in September, for the reſtoration of Ragoba, and which you notified to us in your letter of the 25th July, ſtill ſubſiſt; or if you ſhall have formed any other for the ſame end, conſiſtently with the terms preſcribed for our aſſent to that meaſure; or if you ſhall judge a ſtrong reinforcement immediately and indiſpenſably neceſſary to enſure the ſafety of Bombay againſt a French invaſion, and ſhall deem it requiſite or adviſable in either of theſe caſes, to command the detachment at all hazards to proceed further towards Bombay, even without the junction of the troops of any power in alliance with us; you will in ſuch caſes, and ſuch only, require Colonel Goddard to advance with it; but in all other caſes you will give him notice of your intentions, and leave him to act under our directions.

A true extract.
Edward Ravenſcroft,
Secretary to the Select Committee.

To Colonel Goddard.

Sir,

The Governor General and Council have adviſed us of their reſolution to have removed Colonel Leſlie, before they heard of his death, and of their having appointed you to the chief command of the detachment of forces ordered for the ſupport of this Preſidency. They have alſo apprized us of the orders they have given for your conduct on your arrival in the Berar country. We congratulate you on this mark of diſtinction conferred on you by the Governor General and Council; and though we hope this will meet you well advanced on your march, in conſequence of our letters of the 15th of November and 6th inſtant; yet to prevent all diſappointment, and that you may not be at any loſs in your proceedings, we judge it proper to repeat to you, that our forces have actually taken the field, in proſecution of the plan communicated to the Governor General and Council, for the reſtoration of Ragoba, and that we deem it requiſite and adviſable that the army under your command ſhould move forward towards Bombay. We therefore hereby require you to advance according to our former orders, even without the juncture of the troops of any power in alliance with the Honourable Company; and we likewiſe deſire and enjoin you to conduct your march with all poſſible expedition. Appendix. No. 130.

The ſettlement of the Government of Poonah is committed to Meſſrs. Carnac, Egerton, and Moſtyn, with whom we deſire you will correſpond; and we flatter ourſelves, the movement of our forces will facilitate your march in like manner as we expect the advance of your detachment will leſſen the oppoſition to our forces.

We yeſterday received your letter, dated at Bhoſſall the 26th ultimo, and we now ſend a fifth copy of our letter of the 6th inſtant.

It is worthy obſervation, that by the accounts taken this day, either in or after the attack made on Captain Stewart's poſt at Condolah, it appears that the body of men which made this attack firſt went to Corindah Gaut, where they were purpoſely diſpatched to ſeize the perſon of Ragonath Row, whoſe intentions to proceed up that Gaut his enemies at Poonah had been well adviſed.

The army proceeded up the Gaut to Condolah. In the evening received a letter from Dadajee Adaujee at Poonah, to Mr. Lewis, informing him that he had learnt from Mhaderow Jadooſy, that Nanah Furneeze would not permit of his (Adaujee's) remaining in Poonah; requeſting to know what was to be done with the Company's effects at Poonah, the removal of which would coſt very dear on account of the people having moſtly deſerted Poonah. It was ſaid Nanah expected ſome troops from Goa, French and Portugueſe, who were to ſet out this day from Cudkey; that our factory was given to the French gentleman who before lived in Curril Row Bullol's ſtable. Gentlemen,

We have received the letters from Meſſrs. Carnac and Egerton, dated the 20th inſtant.

We are ſorry to obſerve, that any occaſion of difference has already ariſen, and at the ſame time ſurpriſed to find an idea could be entertained, that the powers of the committee were ſuſpended by the ſickneſs or accidental abſence of one of the members, when it is ſo obvious, that the practice in all communities or bodies of men aſſociated in any public ſervice, is directly and univerſally the reverſe. But ſince ſuch an opinion has prevailed, we find it neceſſary to direct, and lay it down as our poſitive order, that whenever any one of the members of the Poonah committee is by ſickneſs, or any other accidental cauſe, unavoidably abſent, the full exerciſe of the powers granted to the committee, ſhall be veſted and continue in the remaining two, and in caſe of a difference of opinion, the ſenior member muſt, as always uſual, have a caſting voice.

Sunday, 26th. Received the following letter from Colonel Goddard to the Select Committee at Bombay, at 8 A M. in original and duplicate.

To the Honourable William Hornby, Eſquire, Preſident, &c. Members of the Select Committee, Bombay.

Gentlemen,

I wrote you the 26th from Bhopall, ſince which time I have croſſed the Nerbuddah, at Huſſingabad, and am encamped on the ſouth bank of it.

Not having been favoured with any letter from you of a later date than the 21ſt July, I am in daily hopes of receiving one, informing me of many circumſtances highly neceſſary at this time to determine the meaſures proper to be purſued, and the plan of my future operations.

It appears from every intelligence I can obtain, that the Peiſhwa and his miniſters have taken the alarm, and are aſſembling troops in every quarter to oppoſe my march, conceiving, that the intention of it is to aſſiſt your Government in advancing the pretenſions of Ragoba. It becomes therefore expedient that ſome vigorous ſteps be immediately taken to counteract their deſigns and cauſe a diverſion from different quarters, in order to prevent their aſſembling their whole force, which I am apt to believe will be ſtrengthened by that of the Nizam againſt me.

I learn that Hyder Ally is in the field with a large army; and how far his views might concur or his motions be made to co-operate with ours, you muſt be beſt able to determine. I am perſuaded that every neceſſary precaution will have been uſed by you; but their not being communicated to me deprives me in a great meaſure of the opportunity a knowledge of them would furniſh for regulating my future operations.

I ſhall halt a few days in this place in determining the route, which I expect will be by Burhampore, and in the intervening time I hope to be able to prevail on Moodajee Bouncello, the Rajah of Berar, to join me with a body of troops, by which means the inconveniences I might otherwiſe experience reſpecting the ſupplies of proviſions may be obviated.

I hope alſo to be favoured with letters from you during my ſtay here, and as ſoon as I have fixed upon any route from this place, I will ſend off a diſpatch informing you of it.

I think it proper to acquaint you, that two letters received within this month from Mr. Lewis at Poonah, being written in cypher different from the one you ſent me through Mr. Boddam, I have not been able to underſtand their contents.

I have the honour to be, with the greateſt reſpect,
Gentlemen,

Received at the ſame time, a letter from Dadajee Adowjee at Poonah, dated the 23d inſtant, mentioning, that he now ſends letters received from Colonel Goddard's army; that 5 days before he had ſent 2 Madras packets with 4 P^r^ of Pattamars; that Mhadoo Row Jadooſey acquainted him Nanah Furneeze would not ſuffer any Engliſh Vackeel there, or have any thing to do with the Engliſh; that the agent to the Nabob of Tall Boppal informed him he had aſked Holkar whether he meant to obſerve his word paſſed to Mr. Moſtyn? who ſaid, he ſhould till death.

On Wedneſday laſt the troops marched from Condolah to Mount Snarl; on Thurſday, from Mount Snarl to Dungergaon plain; on Monday, from Dungergaon plain to Corla, where Captain Stewart was unfortunately killed by a cannot ſhot; proceeded from Corla on the Wedneſday following to Mondhurna plain. Wedneſday, 6th.

At a Committee; PRESENT,

John Carnac, Eſquire,
Colonel Charles Egerton.

Colonel Egerton now repreſents to the committee, that having borne up as long as he could againſt an illneſs with which he has now for ſome time paſt been afflicted, he at length finds himſelf under the diſagreeable neceſſity of acquainting the committee, that the Surgeon-Major is of opinon, that the fatigues of a campaign co-operating with his indiſpoſition certainly endangers his life, and that at any rate he cannot hope to have the requiſite ſtrength to attend properly to the many avocations of the Commander in Chief; for theſe reaſons he requeſts permiſſion to reſign the command to Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, and proceed immediately to Bombay; which is agreed to.

The committee taking into conſideration the neceſſity of having an able and experienced officer to command the army now in the field in caſe of accidents to Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, think proper to recommend it to the Commander in Chief, to appoint Major Dagon of the artillery, to act as Lieutenant Colonel till the pleaſure of the Honourable the Select Committee at Bombay ſhall be known; and that it ſhall further be recommended to our ſuperiors, to continue this appointment.

The departure of Colonel Egerton, the unfortunate loſs of Lieutenant Colonel Cay, and of Captain James Stewart, the firſt wounded and returned to Bombay, and the latter killed, and the proſpect there is that the preſent ſervice may be much more ſevere, and of much longer continuance than was expected, render it very expedient that the army ſhould be ſupplied with as many officers of experience as can be ſpared from Bombay; and it is therefore reſolved to recommend it to the Honourable the Select Committee, to ſend up Major Hopkins, Captains Eames and Jameſon, to join the army as ſoon as poſſibly can be done with ſafety to them.

We reflect with ſome concern, on the difference between the expectations we were flattered with on our arrival at the top of the Gauts, and the actual ſtate of affairs. We were given to hope, that immediately on the appearance there of the ſtandard of Rogonath Row, Holcar, and many other Chiefs of rank and reſpect would join him with a numerous body of horſe; and there was every reaſon to hope we might have terminated ſpeedily the object of our commiſſion. Inſtead of theſe reputable partiſans, none but a few mercenaries have yet joined us; and Ragonath Row, in a meſſage yeſterday by Mr. Sibbald, gave us plainly to underſtand he had been deceived; that unleſs we could convince his friends of their ſafety in joining us by the ſpeedy defeat of his enemies, he had no hope of being joined by any one; and that our ſituation would rather prove worſe than better as we advanced towards Poonah, by being cut off from all communication with the Conkan, from whence we may now be ſupplied with proviſions and ſtores. The mode adopted by the enemy, of retiring before us, and ravaging the country, ſeems to render his reaſoning apparently juſt; but we ſtill hope as we advance towards Poonah, Holcar, on whoſe junction there may be ſome dependance, will be enabled and encouraged to keep firm to the promiſes he has given us through the late Mr. Moſtyn. It is further obſervable, there is too much reaſon to apprehend that Ragonath Row, truſting to ſubdue every one by our arms, has not only neglected the fit means to conciliate the reſpectable Chiefs to his cauſe, but has acted in ſuch a manner as will naturally tend to unite them againſt him. The grounds of this ſuſpicion are theſe: The agent of Moraba in our camp, informed Mr. Lewis, that he had learnt from his maſter that Ragoba, inſtead of taking the proper means for his releaſe from Ahmednagur, had ſecretly ſent directions to the Killedar not to releaſe Morabah till he got poſitive orders from him on his arrival at Poonah. This is in direct violation of his agreements with us, and could the fact beclearly proved, it would have been ſo ſignified to him.

Reſolved, That we do immediately acquaint our Superiors at Bombay with the foregoing, that they may ſend requiſite orders, in caſe it ſhould appear that the extent of our military operations in the cauſe of Ragoba may be very indefinite and uncertain: at any rate aſſure them, that at preſent we ſee no proſpect of their terminating on our arrival at Poonah, which by their inſtructions to us, they ſeem moſt confidently to expect.

By the death of Mr. Moſtyn and the departure of Colonel Egerton, the powers of this committee may ſeem ſuſpended for the preſent: it is however recommended to Mr. Carnac to continue ſtill to act when it may be requiſite, till explicit orders may arrive from our Superiors at Bombay. Adjourned.

John Carnac,
Charles Egerton.

To the Honourable William Hornby, Eſquire, Preſident, &c. Select Committee, Bombay.

Gentlemen,

On the 25th ultimo we received your commands of the 24th.

We are ſorry to acquaint you, that this day Colonel Charles Egerton repreſented to us in committee, that having borne up as long as he could againſt an illneſs with which he has been for ſome time paſt afflicted, he at length found himſelf under the neceſſity of acquainting the committee, that the Surgeon Major is of opinion that the fatigues of a campaign co-operating with his indiſpoſition, would certainly endanger his life; and that at any rate he cannot ſoon hope to have the requiſite ſtrength to attend properly to the many avocations of the Commander in Chief in the field; for which reaſons he requeſted permiſſion to reſign the command of the army to Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, and proceed immediately to Bombay; which being complied with, he now accordingly proceeds.

Taking into conſideration the neceſſity of having an able and experienced officer to command the army now in the field in caſe of accidents to Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, we thought it adviſable to recommend it to the Commander in Chief to appoint Major Gaſpar Dagon, of the artillery, to act as Lieutenant Colonel till your pleaſure ſhall be known; and having by this means ſecured, as far as in us lies, a fit commander on the event above ſtated, we hope for your approval on this occaſion, and that you will be pleaſed to direct this appointment to be continued.

The return of Colonel Egerton, the unfortunate loſs of Lieutenant Colonel Cay and Captain Stewart, the former wounded and returned to Bombay, and the latter killed, together with the proſpect there is that the preſent ſervice may be much more ſevere and of longer duration than was at firſt expected, render it very expedient that the Army ſhould be ſupplied with as many officers of experience as can be ſpared from Bombay, having firſt had reference to the opinion of the Commander in Chief, we therefore take the liberty to recommend, that you will be pleaſed immediately to direct Major Hopkins, Captain Eames, and Captain Jameſon, to proceed to Bhore Gaut, in order to join the army, in caſe it ſhall appear to them practicable with any degree of ſafety; regarding which they will be furniſhed with ſuch information as we can ſend to them, and proper guides ſent to meet them at the Gaut. Appendix. No. 130.

It is with ſome concern we muſt now acquaint you with the difference between the expectations we were flattered with on our arrival at the top of the Gauts, and the actual ſtate of affairs. We were given to hope, that immediately on the appearance there of the ſtandard of Ragonath Row, Holcar and many other Chiefs of rank and reſpect were to join him with a numerous body of horſe. With theſe, in caſe of reſiſtance from his adverſaries, we might at leaſt have been able to have ſecured proviſions and forage from this country; and there was every reaſon to hope that we might ſpeedily have terminated the object of our commiſſion. Inſtead of theſe reputable partizans none but a few mercenaries have yet joined us; and Ragonath Row yeſterday, in a meſſage by Mr. Sibbald, gave us plainly to underſtand he had been deceived; that unleſs we could convince his friends of their ſafety in joining us, by the ſpeedy defeat of his enemies, he had no hope of being joined by any one; and that our ſituation would rather prove worſe than better as we advanced towards Poonah, by being cut off from all communication from the Conkan, from whence we may now be ſupplied with proviſions and ſtores. The mode adopted by the enemy of retiring before us, and ravaging the country, ſeems to render his reaſoning apparently juſt; but we ſtill hope, as we advance towards Poonah, Holcar, on whoſe junction there may perhaps be ſome dependance, will be enabled and encouraged to keep firm to the promiſes he made us through the late Mr. Moſtyn. We muſt further obſerve to you, there is but too much reaſon to apprehend that Ragonath Row, truſting to ſubdue every one by our arms, has not only neglected the fit meaſures to conciliate the reſpectable Chiefs to his cauſe, but has acted in ſuch a manner as will naturally tend to unite them againſt him. The grounds of this ſuſpicion are theſe: The agent of Moraba Furneeze in our camp, informed Mr. Lewis, that he had learnt from his maſter that Rogoba, inſtead of taking the proper meaſures for his releaſe from Ahmednagur, had ſecretly ſent directions to the Killedar not to releaſe him (Moraba) till he got further poſitive orders from him on his arrival at Poonah. This is in direct violation of his engagements with us; and could the fact be clearly proved, it would have been ſo ſignified to him. We have thought it neceſſary to be thus explicit as to our ſituation, that you may reflect on the neceſſary meaſures to be purſued, and ſend explicit orders, in caſe it ſhall hereafter appear to you that the field and extent of our military operations in the cauſe of Ragoba may be very indefinite and uncertain; and we are ſorry to aſſure you, that at preſent we ſee no proſpect of their terminating on our arrival at Poonah, which, from your inſtructions to us, you ſeem moſt confidently to have expected.

By the death of Mr. Moſtyn and the departure of Colonel Egerton, the powers of this Committee may ſeem ſuſpended: it has however been recommended to Mr. Carnac to act as occaſions may require in the ſeveral points entruſted to us, till explicit orders may arrive from you, which Mr. Carnac requeſts may be as ſpeedily as poſſible.

The army marched this morning from the village of Koſla. During the march, the guns of the enemy opened on our line from the wood of Mondhurna in our front; and a large party of horſe ſeemed inclined either to take us in flank, or to enter in our rear among the baggage. They were however prevented from both, driven from the wood of Mondhurna into the plain below. Our army ſtill advancing, drove them from a height near the Ridorainy, which we now poſſeſs. This party ſent to haraſs us, we are informed is commanded by Bhim Row Ponſia, and may conſiſt of about 5,000 horſe and ſeven guns. We have the pleaſure to inform you, that both officers officers and men behaved on this, and all occaſions, with the greateſt cheerfulneſs and intrepidity.

Camp near the Indorainy, 6th January, 1779.

P. S. After writing the above, Colonel Egerton, who had ſet off for Bombay, was obliged to return, on the receipt of certain intelligence from the officer at the paſs at Condolah, that a large party of horſe were in the Conkan, ſome of which he could perceive at Campoly. On this account Colonel Egerton is compelled to proceed for ſome time with the army; his return, however, makes no change in the purport of the foregoing with regard to the command of the army, which ſtill remains with Colonel Cockburn.

Tullegaon, 9th January 1779.

Saturday, 9th. The army on Thurſday laſt moved from Mondhurna plain to Carculla; on Friday, from Carculla to Wurgaon; and on Saturday, from Wurgaon to Tullegaon.

At a Committee; PRESENT,
John Carnac, Eſquire,
Colonel Charles Egerton.

Read, and approved, the minutes of our laſt committee.

The apprehenſions expreſſed in the minutes of our laſt meeting ſeem verified now beyond all doubt. So far from any perſon of conſequence having yet joined Ragoba, Holkar, the only one from whom there appeared the leaſt aſſurance of ſupport to his cauſe, is now in arms againſt us, and joined with Scindia and other Chiefs, whoſe guns have been firing on our camp, and who are now before us with a large army. The burning of the large and populous town of Tullegaon alſo confirms our ſuſpicion, and the general information we daily receive from all ſides, of their intended mode of procedure, viz. by the deſtruction of the country, by haraſſing us, and cutting us off from all ſupplies of proviſions. In ſhort there appears to be a general determination to oppoſe the eſtabliſhment of Ragoba with that degree of authority, which from his confident aſſurances of effectual ſupport, and from the repreſentations of the late Mr. Moſtyn, the Honourable the Select Committee have been led to engage for.

This diſappointment in our expectations opens to us a ſcene very widely different from that we had in view at our firſt ſetting out from Bombay. From the open diviſions amongſt the Brahmins, and from poſitive engagements with the party in oppoſition to Nanah Furneeze, we were given moſt confidently to expect immediate and effectual aid, if we once openly and declaredly entered on meaſures for the ſubverſion of his government, a general reputed indiſpoſition to that government amongſt the Maratta officers and people alſo afforded good grounds of expectation for effectual aid: The words of our inſtructions warrant theſe ſuppoſitions: From all which it was concluded that the march to Poonah would be attended with little difficulty or oppoſition; that little time would be employed in military operations; and that our great difficulty would not be in reducing the Maratta officers to obedience, and placing the government of the country with Ragoba, but in ſettling the different pretenſions of theſe Chiefs, and bringing Ragoba to form his government from men on whom he might depend for effecting the great object of this expedition, namely, the entire ſubverſion of the party in the French intereſt. After having thus conducted him to Poonah and ſettled his government, there remained only to receive the Sunnuds for the grants that were to form the rewards of our aid, and the monthly ſtipend for the expence of our army. It ſeems never to have been doubted that all this would have been effected, and the army returned to Bombay time enough for its defence.

Inſtead of this definite and limited ſcheme, it appears to us that we are engaged in an indefinite ſcene of military operations, without any reſources but our own, againſt the moſt reſpectable chiefs of the Maratta empire, and againſt an enemy with whom we cannot hope to bring matters to the only iſſue from which we can obtain reaſonable aſſurance of ſucceſs; viz. the trial of arms. We muſt repeat that we are confirmed by the deſtruction of Tullagaon, as to their intended mode of procedure, a mode which muſt infallibly force us back in a ſhort time to Bombay without reaping the leaſt benefit in any one point, both from the great exertions and expence of the Governor General and the Government of Bombay. It is requiſite here alſo to obſerve, that from every information we can obtain from deſerters, priſoners, and others, it is determined to burn Chemſwer, a town ſtill more large and populous than Tullagaon, and that meaſures are alſo taken even for the deſtruction of Poonah, ſo bent are thoſe now in oppoſition to Ragonath Row to avail themſelves of every poſſible means in their power, in order to fruſtrate the plan we are now proceeding on in conjunction with him.

From all theſe circumſtances it appears to us, that the plan of eſtabliſhing Ragonath Row even but in the Regency of the Maratta empire, without the immediate co-operation of a reſpectable party in that State, is impracticable, with any probability of ſucceſs; and having decided this point in our own minds, the preſent ſtate of our army with reſpect to proviſions, and the total improbability of a ſupply, render it neceſſary to turn our attention immediately towards the means of compaſſing, as well as in us lies, the main object which led towards our engagements with Ragoba, the defeat of the deſigns of the French.

From every experience we have had of the Marattas, and particularly in this buſineſs, it appears clear to us, that the tie of their own intereſt is the only one to be depended on. From all the late Mr. Moſtyn's advices, and from every information we can obtain, it appears that Saccaram Pundit and Nanah Furneeze, though at times apparently united, have each been aiming, though by different modes, to ſecure to themſelves the effectual power in the Poonah Durbar. As Nanah, from ſeveral circumſtances, ſeems peculiarly to look to the French, and is indeed the very man whoſe ſubverſion is the object we now aim at, we are of courſe precluded forming any connection with him: it therefore appears to us, that Saccaram Pundit is the only man with whom we can hope to form the engagements that muſt lead to our main object; Moraba Furneeze and Butcheba Pronder, the two perſons mentioned in our inſtructions, being at preſent impriſoned, and, as far as we can perceive, wholly incapable of affording us any effectual aid, whatever their intereſts may incline them to do.

The two next perſons who ſtrike our attention, are the Jaghirdars Holkar and Scindia, whoſe troops form the chief force of our enemies, and whoſe deciſions, if favourable to us, muſt, to all appearance, enable us effectually and ſpeedily to cruſh the powers of Nanah Furneeze and his party. During the diviſions amongſt the Brahmins, we are given to underſtand, they have made great acceſſions to their Jaghires; and was the Poonah Durbar once in power to enforce their demands, they would probably inſiſt on the reſtitution of theſe, as well as the arrears due from them for the country they hold. Theſe are conſiderations that muſt ever influence them to prevent the unconditional reſtoration of ſuch power amongſt the Brahmins; and therefore it ſeems they are naturally led to oppoſe the eſtabliſhment of Ragoba, which great line of intereſt ſeems on the trial now to influence them both, notwithſtanding any promiſes or writings they may have given, relative to a junction with Ragoba.

The mode of ſecuring theſe ſeveral perſons and their partizans, appears to us as follows: To aſſure them that we we mean the government ſhall go on in the name of Mhadoo Row Narrain, leaving only to Ragoba the Naibſhip, as in the time of the minority of Mhadoo Row; to aſſure Saccaram of the Duanſhip, of our ſupport to him in the real powers of it, and of the aid of our army, in conjunction with Scindia and Holkar, againſt Nanah Furneeze; to offer to the two Jaghire Daars our guarantee, ſecuring to them their Jaghires, free from all demands for arrears from the Poonah Durbar.

Agreed therefore, that Mr. Sibbald, who was deſired to be preſent at this meeting, ſhould acquaint Ragoba, in a ſuitable manner, with our ſentiments relative to the cauſe we are embarked in; to remind him we have been led into this diſtreſſed ſtate by too great a reliance on his promiſes and aſſurances, relative to a plentiful ſupply of proviſions when we got above the Gauts, and to the junction of Tookajee Holkar, which he acquainted Mr. Sibbald on the 22d ultimo, he was confident would be in eight days; that the ſingle circumſtance of having now but ſufficient proviſions to conduct our army back into the Conkan, added to the total impoſſibility of procuring a ſupply in a country laid waſte all round us, muſt infallibly force us to retire, which would be the total ruin of his cauſe poſſibly for ever: That the only probable mode to remove this diſtreſs was to make immediate overtures of accommodation to Scindia, and to Holkar, and to Saccaram, which muſt be done by committing to us the power of negociating for him, ſignifying to theſe different perſons his conſent to any agreements we might conclude for him: That we ſee no alternative between this and an inſtant retreat to Condolah; and that unleſs he conſents to it our army muſt per force immediately retire, in order to prevent a total diſtreſs from the utter want of proviſions. That we muſt leave to him the mode of opening this negociation; and that during the courſe of it, we ſhould be guided as much by his advice and intereſt as we conſiſtently could.

Sunday, 10th. Tullagaon, 10th January 1779.

At a Committee; PRESENT,
John Carnac, Eſquire,
Colonel Charles Egerton.

Read, and approved, the minutes of our laſt committee.

Mr. Sibbald now delivers in writing his report of his conference held yeſterday with Ragonath Row, which is entered hereafter.

The Commiſſary, Mr. Holmes, being ſent for, and aſked how long he can depend for a certainty on ſupplying the army with proviſions, informs the committee, from his ſtock now on hand, which is all he can depend on, he can ſupply the army till the 28th inclusive, barring the accidents which on our further advance into the country we may expect, having met with ſome loſs on our march of yeſterday: and the Commander in Chief, Colonel Cockburn, being called on, further acquaints the committee, that without a body of horſe he thinks it impoſſible, as we advance further into the open country, to ſecure our baggage from the numerous cavalry, and that of courſe the proviſions are equally expoſed with the reſt of it.

Upon duly weighing theſe circumſtances, it appears clearly that the prediction Ragonath Row mentioned in our proceedings of the 6th inſtant, relative to the multiplication of our diſtreſſes as we advanced forward, are now certainly verified; and that even ſhould we proceed to Poonah during the courſe of any negociation that might be opened, the army would moſt probably be reduced to ſuch diſtreſs as would compel us into any terms the party we might treat with ſhould think fit to impoſe upon us, for it is certainly not preſumable that they would fail to avail themſelves of a circumſtance ſo ſignally favourable as our total dependance on them for proviſions, which they muſt very ſoon perceive. Appendix, No. 130.

With reſpect to the confident aſſertion of Ragoba relative to the junction of Holkar, and to his ſupplying our army with proviſions for ſome days from this place, we muſt obſerve from the information of Mr. Holmes, who has examined into the probability of this with his own eyes, that Ragoba, whatever he may be led to believe by the people about him, muſt be ſo totally deceived in this point of ſupply that there is no dependance on him. It appears that what grain the enemy could not carry off from the plunder of this place, they have ſcattered in the ſtreets, and mixed with pernicious ſeeds ſo as to render it almoſt wholly uſeleſs. As to the junction of Holkar, it appears wholly imprudent to ſuffer ourſelves to be led into a ſcene of diſtreſs by this ſo long protracted hope; but as from the report of the Commander of artillery it appears requiſite to remain here a day longer, we may make a virtue of this neceſſity by a compliance with his requeſt, and at the ſame time acquaint him if we are now deceived, this compliance he muſt feel to be the laſt we can poſſibly give into; and farther, to do as much as in us lies towards fulfilling the hope he entertains of the junction of Holkar: It is reſolved immediately to write that Chief a ſuitable letter, reminding him of his promiſe made to Mr. Moſtyn, and expreſſing our ſurpriſe, that inſtead of joining with us he appears now in league with our enemies, and acting hoſtilely againſt us; as we mean to oblige Ragoba to fulfil all the promiſes and engagements which had been made him relative to his Jaghire.

Mr. Lewis preſents to the committee a paper, containing information relative to the march of a body of troops belonging to Moraba Furneeze into the Conkan. On this we muſt obſerve, that however uſeful this body might be, it does not appear to us that this circumſtance can effectually relieve our preſent main difficulty, which conſiſts in the total improbability of any further ſupply of proviſions but through the Conkan.

Upon due conſideration of every circumſtance, it is reſolved inſtantly to ſend off copies of the minutes of yeſterday's and this day's conſultation, for the information of our ſuperiors at Bombay: and unleſs the army of Tookajee Holcar does join us conformable to the aſſurances of Ragoba, it is farther reſolved, however diſpleaſing the circumſtance may be, to ſecure effectually the preſervation of our army, by falling back ſo far from this place as is requiſite to ſecure our communication with the Conkan, and that the Commander of the army muſt be inſtantly acquainted with this our reſolution, in order that he may have time to concert the requiſite means for putting it in execution.

As to the troops of Moraba, ſaid to be below the Gauts, they will be of infinite ſervice in conducting our ſupplies of proviſions through the Conkan, and therefore the officers who command them muſt be directed by the agent of Moraba Furneeze to remain at Campoly till he receives further directions from him. Mr. Frazer muſt be immediately acquainted with the circumſtances of theſe troops being friendly to us, but directed not to ſuffer them to aſcend through the paſs he commands until further orders.

Adjourned.

John Carnac,
Charles Egerton.

Mr. Sibbald this evening waited upon Ragoba by the committee's directions, to make known to him the reſolutions of this day, which he delivered to the following effect: That Ragoba muſt be ſenſible that when the Governor and Select Committee firſt engaged, by treaty, to ſupport him and place him in the Regency of the Maratta empire, that they were induced thereto by the aſſurances of being joined by a conſiderable body of troops belonging to Holkar, and other Maratta Chiefs, who had entered into engagements with the late Mr. Moſtyn to this effect, and which aſſurances had been repeatedly peatedly confirmed to the committee by Ragoba himſelf, at their different meetings ſince leaving Bombay, till within theſe two days paſt; but that he himſelf now allowed matters were ſo ſenſibly altered, that he did not expect to be joined by any one, unleſs a defeat could be given to the miniſterial army now in our fronts, which by their mode of proceeding, in retreating as we advanced, appeared impracticable: That he muſt therefore allow that we are greatly deceived and diſappointed in his aſſurances and repreſentation; and that ſo far from having any friends in the empire, that the whole empire was in arms againſt him, and Holkar amongſt the reſt, who was the perſon he ſeemed to have the moſt dependance upon: That it was with concern the committee muſt obſerve that they had too good reaſon to believe that there ſubſiſted a total want of confidence on the part of the Maratta Chiefs in his promiſes and aſſurances; and that no negociation would ever be ſet on foot with them, unleſs commenced by us. In this ſituation of affairs (as he was acquainted we had only 16 days proviſion for the army) the committee ſaw an abſolute neceſſity of taking ſuch meaſures as appeared to them eligible, without further dependance on him, and had therefore ſent to adviſe him, that they were determined, in the name of the Engliſh Company, to invite Holkar, Scindia, and Saccaram to a conference, and upon their ſhewing an inclination to join the Engliſh in the preſent buſineſs, that we would guarantee to them their reſpective Jaghires, together with all their other pretenſions, as officers of the Maratta State. After deliberating ſome time upon the ſubject of the committee's meſſage, he allowed that their reaſons for their determinations were juſt; that he certainly did give us the ſtrongeſt aſſurances of being joined by a large body of troops, in which he had found himſelf deceived: he allowed that Holkar appeared in arms againſt him, and that he had this day two guns firing upon our camp, but that conformable to his aſſurances all their ſhot had fallen ſhort. He however earneſtly requeſted the committee would defer for one day writing to any of the Maratta Chiefs but Holkar, as he expected in the courſe of to-morrow a Vakeel from Scindia, which a letter from the committee might probably prevent, as he would from thence infer that we began to deſpair of ſucceſs, which would of courſe encourage the whole of the miniſterial party to hold out. Mr. Sibbald obſerves to him, that the loſs of a day would be a matter of no great conſideration, had we any proſpect of meeting with ſupplies of proviſions for our army; but as that was not the caſe, we had not an hour to loſe. To this he replied, that the care of ſupplying the army with proviſions was his, and that he would furniſh the Commiſſary from this town with a ſufficient quantity for ſome days, and that we ſhould get more at the next village.

To the Honourable William Hornby, Eſquire, Preſident, &c. Select Committee, Bombay.

Gentlemen,

We addreſſed you on the 6th inſtant, and now ſend a a duplicate of that addreſs.

On the 7th in the morning the army moved from the plain below Mondhurna to Carculla, on the 18th from Carculla to Wargaon; and on the 9th from Wargaon to this place, where we were given to expect they had aſſembled their whole force, and were determined to make a ſtand and oppoſe our advance; the event however has proved to us their determination of adhering to their plan of burning the towns, ravaging the country, haraſſing us, and cutting off our ſupplies of proviſions. We are informed, that on Friday laſt the 8th, about noon, this town was given up firſt to be plundered, and on the evening of that day it was ſet on fire. We found it yeſterday in flames as we entered, which was with ſo little oppoſition, that we are convinced they do not mean to hazard an engagement with us, but under ſome manifeſt diſadvantage on our ſide. The mode they have invariably purſued is a very diſtant cannonade, and by movements with their horſe, haraſſing our men by conſtantly engaging our attention on every ſide.

For the ſake of expedition, we determined to ſend you immediately copies of the minutes of our conſultations when met in committee yeſterday and to-day, which will fully inform you of our ſituation and intentions. We are informed, that Saccaram, Nanah, Holcar, Scindia, Bhim Row, Ponſia, and Hurry Punt, with other Chiefs, are now in the field, and that the real number of their troops is about 25,000 horſe.

We are, with reſpect,
Gentlemen,
Your moſt obedient humble ſervants,

Tullegaon, 10th January 1779.

Jn° Carnac,
Cha^s Egerton.

To Tookajee Holcar.

After compliments:

The agreements which you made with Mr. Moſtyn are well known to you. The Engliſh army is now come to this place in their way to Poonah, and I am much ſurprized that you have not yet acted according to your promiſe; if you have any doubts about what was promiſed you by Mr. Moſtyn, on the part of the Company, I muſt tell you that the government of Bombay has given the full powers to ſettle theſe matters into my hands. I know what Mr. Moſtyn told you; and I write this letter under the ſeal of the Company, to acquaint you, if you comply with your agreements, I will ſecure to you fully all that was promiſed by Mr. Moſtyn, and the Engliſh friendſhip to you will laſt for ever. What can I ſay more?

J. Carnac.

At a Committee: PRESENT, Monday, 11th.

John Carnac,
Colonel Charles Egerton.

Read, and approved, the minutes of our laſt meeting.

The committee met to conſider on the following report from Mr. Sibbald.

That Ragonath Row had told him, that finding the neceſſity of gaining over Scindia to his party, he had three days ago written him a letter, ſignifying to him, that though the Miniſters had confederated againſt his government, and were deſtroying the State, yet it was ill in him and Holkar, the two ancient officers of the Circar, to abet them; that he wiſhed to end every thing amicably with them, and therefore offered them his friendſhip; and that if Scindia would ſend two perſons to talk with him, whom he named, he truſted by their means to accommodate all differences: That he muſt not think he made this overture from any ſenſe of an inability to oppoſe his enemies, as he held himſelf equal to it by the aid of the Europeans only, but that theſe Europeans, in taking part in his quarrels, ſought only their own aggrandizement, and to obtain the country; which neither ſuited his views or Scindia's. That Scindia had returned an anſwer, the purport of which was, that he had ſent two perſons who would communicate what he had to ſay on the ſubject; and if it then pleaſed Ragoba, he might ſend his orders, and the two men he requeſted ſhould come: That Ragoba had ſent back theſe two men, deſiring Scindia's Vakeels might be ſent, and that he expected them this evening. He ſaid his ſcheme in this was, by a total compliance with the demands of Scindia, to gain him over for the preſent, and afterwards he would do as he pleaſed; that he meant even to deſire the Company's guarantee to his agreement with him. Whilſt the committee was debating on this buſineſs, a meſſage arrived from Ragoba to Mr. Sibbald, who on his return acquainted the committee, that Ragoba now told him, that the two men he had ſent back to Scindia had been prevented from going by a party of horſe, and that therefore he could not expect the Vakeels of Scindia to-night; but as the people were gone in the habit of Jogeys, and it was now three hours ſince he had ſent them, he hoped they might get ſafe, and that he ſoon ſhould have an anſwer.

Whatever importance the gaining over Scindia may be in our preſent ſituation, yet this uncertain ground we do not think ſufficient to warrant any departure from our reſolutions of yeſterday, particularly as it is now certain, that though Holcar may not act againſt, yet that he cannot act for us: This Ragoba plainly declares; and in further confirmation, Mr. Carnac now lays before the committee a letter from Lieutenant Richardſon, this inſtant received.

Reſolved therefore, that the Commander of the army, Colonel Cockburn, who was preſent at this committee, and concurred in opinion with us, be directed to march back the army this night towards Condolah.

To Colonel Goddard, commanding the Engliſh forces from Bengal.

Sir,

You will no doubt ere this have received advice from the Select Committee at Bombay, of our being appointed conjointly with Mr. Thomas Moſtyn, who is ſince deceaſed, a committee for conducting Ragonath Row to Poonah, and their directions for your communicating with us on all important occaſions.

Within theſe two days paſt the face of our affairs is ſo changed with reſpect to the primary cauſe that led to directing your march towards Kineer, a fort in poſſeſſion of Moraba Furneeze, that we muſt now give you the following advice:

If you are joined by ſuch a body of the forces of Moodajee Bouncello, that you can advance forward in ſpite of an enemy, who with a large body of cavalry will keep hovering round you on all quarters, aiming at the ſeizures of your baggage and proviſions; and if you have alſo a ſufficient quantity of proviſions to laſt you till you can either reach Broach or Surat, we would then adviſe you to proceed forward to either of thoſe places, as may be moſt convenient for your ſpeedy arrival there; but if you think you cannot proceed forward in face of ſuch an enemy as we have deſcribed, without imminent hazard of diſtreſs on your march, from accidents happening to your proviſions, of a ſupply of which you may not be certain till your arrival either at Broach or Surat, we then adviſe you to remain on the borders of Berar, or wherever you think you can ſecure proviſions, till you may receive further directions from the Select Committee at Bombay.

We are, Sir,
Your moſt obedient humble ſervants,

Camp at Tullegaon, 11th January 1779. — Jn° Carnac, Ch. Egerton.

To Lieutenant Colonel William Cockburn, commanding the Engliſh Forces now at Tullegaon.

Sir,

Having maturely deliberated upon the neceſſity of the meaſure, you are hereby directed to march back the army under your command towards the paſs at Condolah, as expeditiouſly as poſſible.

We are, Sir,
Your obedient humble ſervants,

Tueſday, 12th. The army fell back to the village of Wurgaon.

Wedneſday, 13th. Received the following letter from the Honourable the Select Committee at Bombay.

To John Carnac, Eſquire, and Colonel Charles Egerton.

Gentlemen,

Having thought proper to promote Major Gaſpar Dagon to the rank of Lieutenant Colonel; we now enclose a commiſſion for him, ſigned by the Board, which you are accordingly to deliver to him. Appendix, No. 130.

We are very ſorry to adviſe you, that Mr. Moſtyn departed this life, the 1ſt inſtant, at this place.

We are, Gentlemen,
Your moſt obedient humble ſervants,

Bombay Caſtle, 7th January 1779. — William Hornby, Daniel Draper.

Addreſſed the Honourable the Select Committee at Bombay, in the following letter.

To the Honourable William Hornby, Eſquire, Preſident, &c. Select Committee, Bombay.

Gentlemen,

Agreeable to what was written to you under the 9th inſtant from Tullegaon, we fell back with the army to this place on yeſterday morning; and the enemy having by ſome means got intelligence of our moving, attacked us on the march before day-light, which they continued with great vigour until two o'clock in the afternoon.

Their numerous bodies of cavalry rendered it impoſſible to protect our baggage, a part of which conſequently fell into their hands, as the commanding officer foretold would be the caſe; and it is with concern we acquaint you, that in the courſe of the very long attack our people yeſterday ſuſtained, we ſuffered ſome loſs, the particulars of which ſhall be hereafter tranſmitted. In juſtice to our troops, both Europeans and Sepoys, we have the pleaſure to acquaint you, that they behaved with the utmoſt intrepidity and alacrity during the whole attack.

We ſhall continue our march to Condolah with all poſſible expedition, in the purſuit of which we expect to be much haraſſed; but to render our baggage as little troubleſome as poſſible, and our body as compact as circumſtances will admit, the commanding officer means to reduce every part of the baggage that is not abſolutely neceſſary.

We are, with reſpect,
Gentlemen,
Your moſt obedient humble ſervants,

Wurgaon, 13th January 1779. — J. Carnac, Ch. Egerton.

A committee held to deliberate relative to overtures for the peaceable return of the army to Bombay. No minutes taken, being in a ſevere cannonade, and a number of perſons ſtanding round.

Letter to the Peiſhwa.
Ditto from ditto, in anſwer.
Ditto to ditto, at night.

This morning Mr. Farmer was ſent to the Maratta camp to propoſe an accommodation, which we judged might be brought about by Rogoba's going over to Scindia, which he ſeemed determined to do, rather than run the riſk of another day's march with our army, as he declared his fears of its proving fatal both to him and us, ſo great an idea does he ſeem to entertain of the enemy's ſtrength. We directed Mr. Farmer to deliver the following meſſage to the Durbar, "that having had aſſurances given us, that the eſtabliſhment of Ragoba in the Regency of the Maratta empire, was a meaſure much wiſhed for by many of the Sirdars of the Maratta Sircar, as well as by the country in general, we had conſented to conduct him with an Engliſh army for that purpoſe; but contrary to our hopes and expectations, we found his eſtabliſhment oppoſed by the whole empire: That we had ſeen with infinite concern the country laid waſte and deſtroyed at our approach, which being ſo very contrary to our intentions by eſpouſing the cauſe of Ragoba, that we were determined to be the occaſion of no further deſolation, and were therefore reſolved to march back with the army to Bombay: That after this declaration we expected all hoſtilities would ceaſe, and by ſo doing, peace and friendſhip would be eſtabliſhed between the Engliſh and the Maratta State; if on the other hand ſhould we Thurſday, 14th.

experience the leaſt act of hoſtility on our march, we ſhould conſider it as a declaration of war againſt the Engliſh nation."

Received the following letter, with a note written in cypher, from Mr. Farmer.

To John Carnac and Charles Egerton, Eſquires.

Gentlemen,

I was conducted to the Topa High Hill, where I was preſented to Mhadja Scindia, Nanah Furneeze, and Hurry Punt Furkia, as to the Durbar, and delivered them your letter. They appointed Hurry Punt Furkia and Badjee Punt Ponſia to talk with me, and deliver their anſwers. I explained the cauſe of our coming in the manner you directed, and the reaſon of our return, and I left it to them to accept on one hand the friendſhip of the Engliſh nation, by ſuffering us to return peaceably, or their enmity by moleſting us on our march. After many exclamations for our coming thus uninvited, and repreſenting the great charges and loſs their State had ſuſtained by the aid given to Rogoba, their final anſwer is this, That if we wiſh to remain at peace with them, Ragonath Row muſt be delivered up, and then we may return quietly; otherwiſe we may do as we pleaſe. I write ſurrounded with people, not permitted to go down to my cheſt for paper, and hardly permitted to have my palankeen brought up, and I am to wait your final anſwer; regarding which I dare not venture any opinion.

I am, with reſpect,
Gentlemen,
Your moſt obedient humble ſervant,
W. G. Farmer.

Maratta Camp,
14th January, 12 A. M.

The purport of the note received from Mr. Farmer, written in cyphers.

They are fully informed of your ſtate. I ſee no remedy, but either to give Scindia to underſtand, through Ragoba, that you ſhall puſh on with him in your hand at all perils, or to treat with them whilſt you have him, which muſt ſtill be on their own terms. Of proviſion there are no hopes.

As Rogoba has already intimated his intentions of delivering himſelf up to Scindia rather than run the riſk of marching with our army, and has in conſequence carried on a correſpondence with Scindia for two days paſt, we think in the preſent ſituation of affairs it is moſt adviſable to write to Mr. Farmer, that all difficulty of accommodation is removed by Ragoba's deſign of going over to Scindia; and that we expect in conſequence the proper ſecurities from the Durbar for our proceeding unmoleſted on our march.

Sent off the following letter to Mr. Farmer at ten o'clock this morning:

To Mr. William Gamul Farmer.

Sir,

We have juſt received your letter, and have in anſwer to acquaint you, that we do not conceive there will be any difficulty in complying with the propoſition of the Miniſters, as Rogoba has juſt informed us of his deſire to deliver himſelf up to Madjee Scindia at nine o'clock tomorrow morning, in conſequence of a conference he had this morning with his Vakeels; and upon his ſo doing we have no doubt that the Miniſters will give us proper ſecurity on their part for a due performance of the terms now propoſed, and that you will return with them. Mr. Sibbald will accompany Ragoba to Scindia's encampment.

We are, Sir,
Your obedient ſervants,

Wurgaon Camp,
14th January 1779.

This morning Mr. Farmer's ſervant returned with the following letter diſpatched laſt night. Friday 15th.

To John Carnac, Eſquire, and Colonel Charles Egerton.

Gentlemen,

I waited on the top of the hill where the Durbar ſat till near ſun-ſet, when I received yours; and having ſent to acquaint Hurry Punt Furkia with an anſwer being come, he conducted me to Nanah Furneeſe. I there told them, That the difficulty, which I apprehended, was removed by the determination of Ragoba to ſurrender himſelf to Madjee Scindia; and I now imagined the Durbar would preſerve the friendſhip of the Engliſh Nation, by ſuffering our army to return quietly to Bombay. Nanah Furneeze ſaid, as we had broken the treaty concluded by Colonel Upton before our army moved we muſt agree to remain as we were by our treaty formed with the late Peiſhwa Nanah. I obſerved, that in the morning the only difficulty that was ſtarted was relative to Ragoba, who had ſmoothed it by conſenting to ſurrender himſelf; that I deſired at once an explicit anſwer, whether or not hoſtages would be given for the march of the army to Bombay, if Ragoba did ſurrender himſelf? They then ſaid they muſt conſult Madjee Scindia. I then withdrew; and after ſome time Hurry Pundit came again to me, and told me I might go to my tent to-night, and that an anſwer would be delivered to me in the morning; but I inſiſted on a clear and poſitive anſwer inſtantly to that queſtion relative to hoſtages for our proceeding unmoleſted, if Dada Saheb was permitted to ſurrender himſelf to Scindia. Hurry Punt went back, and I was ſoon after introduced to a Durbar, where Madjee Scindia entirely preſided. Hurry Punt was there, and other perſons whom I did not know. After ſtating the buſineſs which I came on this morning, which related only to the two queſtions, whether they would ſuffer us to proceed peaceably to Bombay? or, whether they would declare what, by moleſting us? and reminding him of the objection relative to the perſon of Ragoba being removed, by his voluntary conſent to ſurrender himſelf, I deſired an explicit anſwer. He ſaid, that as to the ſurrender of Ragoba, it mattered little; that we muſt ſettle a new treaty with the Maratta State, the one made by Colonel Upton being entirely broke by the preſent invaſion of their country. In a few words, they ſeem to me to feel themſelves in that ſituation with reſpect to us, which the Turkiſh Vizier felt himſelf in with reſpect to Peter the Firſt, at the time the Empreſs Catherine ſent in her jewels to the Vizier. I dare not ſpeak any plainer; but by their language you may judge what they think: in any ſituation whatever they could not ſpeak in a higher tone. The reſult of my converſation with Scindia was juſt this, that whether there was peace or war, it was equal to him; but that having broken the treaty made with Colonel Upton, we muſt now on the ſpot ſet about forming a new one, to ſerve as a future guide between the Maratta State and the Engliſh. I told him, that my buſineſs at firſt related only to the two points, of their permitting us to proceed peaceably, or not; that I had then further to deſire an explicit anſwer relative to the wilful ſurrender of the perſon of Ragoba. To both which he replied, that excluſive of this, a peace muſt now be ſettled betwixt the Maratta State and the Engliſh on the ſpot. That I had no directions about this; but I would communicate to you this night what he ſaid, and get an anſwer to-morrow morning. Although my heart is full, yet I muſt reſtrain my pen; nor dare I by any means, in ſo nice a caſe, offer any mark to guide you by. I beg a ſpeedy anſwer to this, and remain with reſpect,

Your obedient humble ſervant,
W. G. Farmer.

P. S.—I waited on the hill where the Durbar met till paſt ſeven; and where I was then led, and how conducted, the bearer will inform you. I am afraid no good effect will come from my deputation, though I riſk my life.

By

By what with want of food, and watching, I am fatigued to death; ſo you will excuſe my writing. 11 o'clock, 14th January.

Colonel Cockburn being called upon by the Committee to give his opinion in writing, relative to the practicability of marching back the army to Bombay, delivers in the following:

Being called upon for my opinion on the poſſibility of making a retreat to Bombay, I muſt declare that I think the ſame utterly impracticable. Our troops are already much haraſſed and diſpirited from the neceſſity we were under of retiring from Tullegaon: and were we to ſuſtain another attack from the Maratta army, I am of opinion the troops would not ſtand it; and that conſequently the whole army, with its numerous followers, would be cut to pieces. But the diſtance from Panwell being about forty-five miles, it is not the attack of one day we ſhould have to ſuſtain, as I think, were it poſſible to move from hence, that we could not gain that place in twenty days; and it is therefore chimerical to the laſt degree, to ſuppoſe that our ſmall army could ſupport themſelves from the daily attacks they would be certain of for ſo long a period. I therefore cannot charge myſelf to conduct the army under theſe circumſtances to Bombay; and humanity muſt prompt ſome other method than an attempt to retire in the face of the whole ſtrength of the Maratta empire with ſuch a handful of men, who muſt in ſuch caſe be ſacrificed.

Wm Cockburn.

15th January 1779.

We obſerve with concern, that the enemy appear too ſenſible of our preſent very diſagreeable ſituation from the dictatorial ſtrain in which they now deliver themſelves. It is, however, neceſſary we think to adviſe Mr. Farmer that we have no powers to enter into or conclude any treaties, ſuch powers being lodged ſolely with the Governor General and Council of Bengal; but if the Durbar will abide by their firſt propoſal, we are ready to agree to it on our parts.

To Mr. William Gamul Farmer.

Sir,

We received your letter of laſt night only an hour ago, the Harcarrahs having been detained by ſome accident. In anſwer to which you muſt acquaint the Durbar, that they demand what we have no power to agree to, the entering into and concluding treaties being ſolely confined to the Governor General and Council of Calcutta, to whom therefore they muſt ſend their Vackeels. The only power left to us, is the giving up the cauſe and perſon of Ragonath Row, which done muſt certainly put an end to all diſputes between the Engliſh and the Maratta State, and there is no doubt that peace and friendſhip will then ſubſiſt between us from henceforwards.

You muſt inform them, ſhould we enter into any treaty we ſhould only deceive them, having no ſuch powers; we therefore deſire they will immediately acquaint us, whether upon our abiding by the conditions firſt propoſed, of delivering up Ragoba, they will comply on their parts by ſuffering us to march unmoleſted to Bombay, and for which purpoſe to give us the neceſſary ſecurities.

We are, Sir,
Your moſt obedient ſervants,

Wurgaon, Jn° Carnac,
15th January 1779. Ch. Egerton.

As we have good reaſon to believe, that a gentleman being ſent from us to Madjee Scindia, is more likely to produce an accommodation than a deputation to the Durbar in general;

Reſolved, immediately to diſpatch Mr. Thomas Holmes, who has offered himſelf for that purpoſe; and to give him full powers to ſettle with the Durbar for the peaceable return of the army to Bombay, on ſuch conditions as he may be able to obtain, ſince it is the opinion of the Commander in Chief that a retreat is impracticable. Appendix No. 130.

At noon to day received the following letter from Mr. Farmer, dated this morning, which it is now unneceſſary to anſwer, as Mr. Holmes is diſpatched with full powers.

To John Carnac, Eſquire, and Colonel Charles Egerton.

Gentlemen,

I am this inſtant arrived at the Durbar, where your letter was delivered to me by Apajee Bawn, on the part of Mhadjee Scindy: as repreſenting the Durbar, he deſired to be informed of the contents; when I explained what you ſaid relative to the want of powers, and deſired an explicit anſwer relative to the ſingle propoſition, whether on the delivery of Ragoba, ſecurities would be given for our ſafe and unmoleſted arrival at Bombay? He obſerved in anſwer, that if you had not powers to make new treaties, he wiſhed to ſee by what powers you broke that made by Colonel Upton, by the aid given to Ragoba, and deſired an explicit anſwer, whether or not it was by virtue of any direct authority from the Governor General and Council, that if it was he deſired to ſee that authority, in order that he might look to them about it. I told him, this was foreign to the buſineſs, and that I requeſted the explicit anſwer mentioned in your letter; but ſtill he inſiſts firſt knowing by what authority you acted, becauſe, if you acted on your own authority you muſt anſwer it, and make a new agreement. A true tranſlation of your letter was demanded, and I was given to underſtand, that if I did not give one, there were people in the camp who underſtood Engliſh. I am rather ſorry for it, becauſe your own declarations ſeem to preclude all peaceable arrangements. After much talk, I brought the matter to this point, that in reſpect to what was paſt, we expected every thing to be forgot in conſequence of our returning back; that Dada Sahab had coſt us many lacks of rupees; that all we had now left of him was his perſon; that I deſired to know, whether on the delivery of his perſon, our army ſhould be permitted to proceed quietly to Bombay without further diſpute, and whether ſecurities would be given for that purpoſe? The anſwer I received is plainly this, That Dada Saheb may be ſurrendered, or not, as we pleaſe; but till a new treaty is made between the Engliſh and the Maratta State, our army muſt remain where it is, whatever may be the conſequence.

I am,
Gentlemen,
Your moſt obedient,
Maratta Camp, humble ſervant,
15th January 1779. W. G. Farmer.

This night about 10 o'clock Mr. Holmes returned from the Maratta camp, and adviſes us, that he has ſettled matters with Mhadjee Scindia, and the reſt of the Durbar, for the peaceable return of the army to Bombay on the only conditions they would hear of, and which are ſuch as cannot fail to fill us with the deepeſt concern, being humiliating in the higheſt degree, and which nothing but the avowed opinion and declaration of the principal officers, as to the impracticability of effecting our retreat, could juſtify our acceding to. We muſt however, obſerve, that Madajee Scindia and the whole Durbar cannot plead ignorance of our want of powers to conclude ſuch a treaty as they have now preſcribed to us; they having demanded both a true explanation and tranſlation of our letter of yeſterday to Mr. Farmer, wherein we expreſsly direct him to acquaint them, that we have no powers to enter into any treaty whatever; that were we to pretend ſuch powers, we ſhould be only deceiving them, ſo they have evidently compelled us to enter into a treaty, they were apprized we had no powers to agree to.

Appendix, No. 130.

Wurgaon, Saturday 26th.

Mr. Holmes returned this morning to Scindia's encampment, in order to finiſh the agreement, of which a rough ſketch was yeſterday drawn out.

This evening Meſſrs. Farmer and Holmes returned from the Maratta camp, with Scindia's Vackeels; in order for their having an interview with us, and to ſee the treaty entered into duly executed; of which a tranſlate is hereafter entered, as alſo of a ſeparate article in favour of Mhadajee Scindia, which Meſſrs. Farmer and Holmes adviſe us they were obliged to conſent to.

Tranſlation of the Articles of Agreement between Seremunt Mhaderow Narrain, Pundit Purdhan, on one part, and the Engliſh Company on the other part.

In the time of the late Seremunt Pundit Purdhan Mhadoo Row Bullol, matters went on peaceably: ſince then, the Engliſh obtained poſſeſſion of ſeveral places belonging to the Sircar, ſuch as the iſlands of Salſette and Ouram, Jamboſeer, and the Mahaals and Pergunnahs of Broach, both belonging to the Sircar and the Guicawar; and the Engliſh gave their aid to Ragonath Row Dada Saheb. Upon which, war having commenced, Colonel John Upton came from Calcutta with full powers, and made an agreement; and according to that agreement matters were to go on between the Company and the Maratta Sircar. But on the ſide of the Engliſh this agreement was not adhered to; they having given aid to Ragonath Row, and making preparations for war, mounted the Gauts, invaded the diſtricts of the Maratta Sircar, and began to make hoſtilities; upon which the Sircar alſo prepared for war. At the diſtrict of Wurgaon, near Indonny Tulligarn, Mr. John Carnac and Colonel Charles Egerton, of the Select Committee of Bombay, being fully empowered, did depute Mr. Thomas Holmes and Mr. Farmer. Further, from the beginning there was a friendſhip between the Sircar and the Engliſh; which being interrupted, Colonel John Upton made an agreement, according to which treaty matters did not proceed, and therefore that treaty is annihilated; and in the ſame manner, and on the ſame footing, as the Engliſh and the Sircar were in the time of the late Mhadoo Row, in that manner are they now to remain, the aid and cauſe of Ragoba to be given up, no protection to be afforded him, nor any aid to be afforded to the enemies of the Maratta Sircar. The iſlands of Salſette and Ouram, and the other iſlands and places, as Jamboſeer and the Mahaals of Broach, formerly belonging to the Maratta Sircar and the Guicawar, ſuch as Chickly, Veriow, &c. were taken poſſeſſion of: theſe we give up, and agree to go on and remain as we were in the time of the late Peiſhwa Mhadoo Row Bullol. Upon which this agreement is made with the Sircar. That in the time of the late Mhadoo Row Bullol Pundit Purdhan, matters went on peaceably; and ſince then different places belonging to the Sircar, ſuch as the iſlands of Salſette and Ouram, and other iſlands, and further Jamboſeer and other Mahaals, and the Aumils of Broach belonging to the Sircar and to the Guicawar, the Engliſh got poſſeſſion of; theſe muſt be delivered back to the Sircar, and no aid or protection muſt in future be afforded to Ragonath Row, or to any of the enemies of the Sircar. In this manner do we faithfully promiſe to perform; and on the part of the Sircar good faith is alſo to be obſerved. Ragonath Row Dada Saheb was with us: he by his own free conſent committed himſelf, with all his effects, to the care of Tookajee Holcar and Madjee Scindy. The Engliſh army with us is now at Wurgaon: it muſt be permitted to proceed, with all its effects and appurtenances to Bombay; and as ſecurity for this on the part of the Sircar, two perſons will proceed, belonging to each of the Sirdars, by name Nazo Gunciſh, and Wiſſajee Sameſh, Ballanow Govind and Rana Cawn, to conduct the army to Bombay; and for this purpoſe troops ſhall be ſent with you, or not, as you pleaſe. The Engliſh army that is with us ſhall not offer any moleſtation to any perſon on the road. The Antrewede and Bundlecund provinces, and their Sardars, being always under the Sircar, no damage is to be done to them; and the Engliſh army from Calcutta having croſſed the Nerbuddah, is now at Huſſengabad. It is not to be permitted to proceed forwards, but is to be ſent back to Calcutta, and on the road no moleſtation is to be given to any one. The before-mentioned agreement is formed by the mediation of Tookajee Holkar, and Madjee Scindy, and according to it matters are in future to proceed, without any kind of failure. This we pledge the Engliſh faith to obſerve, and the Sircar is alſo to obſerve it. No aid or protection is to be afforded to the French.

Signed in the Maratta Camp, by Thomas Holmes, and W. G. Farmer. } D° in the Engliſh D° by Jn° Carnac, and Ch. Egerton.

Agreement of John Carnac, Eſquire, Counſellor, and Colonel Egerton, an Engliſh Committee of Bombay, with Madjee Scindia.

That after falling out with the Sircar of Mhaderow Narrain Pundit Pradhan, we with an army came upon the Gaut, and remained at Tullegaon; on which you ordered a fighting, and we both parties did fight, in which we were defeated; returned back, and encamped at Wurgaon, with Dada Saheb. We could hardly reach Bombay with our army and ſtores; conſidering which we ſent Meſſrs. Farmer and Holmes to you, deſiring you would come between us, and get the Sircars and our treaty ſettled as before, and conduct us and the army to Bombay. You came between us, and got the Sircars and Engliſh treaty ſettled, and you promiſed to conduct us and the army to Bombay, without moleſtation from any body. You made our eſcape entirely; all which we took into our conſideration, and were very glad. You are a principal officer and well-wiſher to this Government, which has induced us to to keep a friendſhip with you; this came into our mind, and we were ſatisfied: That you made us free from the Sircar's, and every body's moleſtation, and got the treaty ſettled as before, without any diſpute from the Sircar; therefore we thought we ſhould ſerve you, and for which reaſon have of our free will and accord agreed, under the King's and Company's ſeal, to deliver up to you the fort of Broach, with its Government, in the ſame manner the Mogul did hold it; which fort is now in our poſſeſſion, and which we have given you. We further agree, that we will on our arrival at Bombay, obtain the Governor's Duſtuck under the King's ſeal to the Killedar of Broach, and deliver the fort and its country in the manner the Mogul did hold it, up to you. Under oath no diſpute ſhall ariſe in this: this we promiſe ſolemnly; and we have left Mr. Farmer and Mr. Charles Stewart with you as hoſtages for the performance of this agreement; we will let no diſpute ariſe. This we agree to in writing.

N. B.—The above was tranſlated by a native Linguiſt, and is an exact copy thereof.

This morning Mr. Farmer returned to the Maratta camp with Madjee Scindia's Vackeel, with the papers executed, and by whom we ſent Madjee Scindia a preſent of a horſe. He came back to our camp about noon, with a party of horſemen who are to accompany the army to Panwell; and acquaints us we may march immediately, and that the hoſtages mentioned in the treaty will overtake us before we reach the village of Korta. Sunday, 17th.

The army marched this afternoon at one o'clock, and reached Khamſetta about ſix in the evening.

At five this morning the army marched from Khamſetta, and arrived at Condolah about one o'clock. Monday 18th.

This morning diſpatched the following letter to Colonel Goddard:— Tueſday 19th

To

To Colonel Goddard.

Sir,

We diſpatched you on the 16th a letter, containing orders which, upon recollection, we do not think ourſelves authorized to give you; you are therefore to pay no regard thereunto.

We are, Sir,
Your obedient humble ſervants,
Jno Carnac,
Ch. Egerton.

Campoly,
19th January 1779.

The letter which we mention in the foregoing to have written Colonel Goddard under the 16th inſtant, is not entered upon our diary, as Mr. Farmer carried the original letter with him to the Maratta camp, and it eſcaped him to leave a copy. The purport, however, was to adviſe Colonel Goddard that the face of things was ſo materially altered ſince writing to him laſt, as to occaſion our marching back to Bombay, and that in conſequence of an agreement entered into by us with the Maratta State, we now directed him to march back with the army under his command to Bengal.

Wedneſday, 20th. This morning the army moved down the Gaut to Campoly.

This evening arrived a pair of Hircarrahs, with the following letter from the Honourable the Select Committee:

To John Carnac, Eſq. and Colonel Charles Egerton.

Gentlemen,

We have received your letter of the 6th inſtant, and having fully conſidered your repreſentation of the ſtate of affairs, we are of opinion, that the beſt and moſt effectual way to improve your own ſituation, and to induce Ragoba's friends to declare openly in his favour, will be for our army to advance with vigour and expedition towards Poonah: and we accordingly now ſend inſtructions to that effect to Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, to whom we find Colonel Egerton has delivered over the command. Colonel Egerton's bad ſtate of health, and the death of Mr. Moſtyn, rendering it neceſſary to make a new arrangement in the Poonah committee, we have reſolved to appoint Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn and Mr. James Sibbald to ſupply the places of the aforeſaid gentlemen in that committee, with the ſame powers and inſtructions as given to the former committee, by our commiſſion and general letter, bearing date the 5th of laſt month; and hereby appoint John Carnac, Eſquire, Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, and Mr. James Sibbald to be a committee accordingly, for the uſes and purpoſes mentioned in our ſaid commiſſion and letter of inſtructions; obſerving nevertheleſs, that this appointment is not to take place unleſs Colonel Egerton's bad ſtate of health ſhould ſtill continue to diſqualify him for public buſineſs, or oblige him to return to Bombay; in either of which caſes Mr. Carnac is to act jointly with the above-named gentlemen in manner aforeſaid, and this letter will be to them a ſufficient warrant. Our appointment of Major Dagon to the rank of Lieutenant Colonel, has anticipated your application on that ſubject; but we cannot conſent to ſend to the army the other officers you mention. The Preſident has written very plainly to Ragoba our ſentiments reſpecting the circumſtances mentioned in your letter; and we think a very good method to bring the matter to a proof would be for you to deſire Ragoba to deliver to Morabah Furneeze's Vackeel an order to the Killedar Ahmadoraſut for his releaſe, and to open the communication through the Conkan, by affording relief to the port at the head of the Gauts, which we are much ſurprized has been left deſtitute of all kinds of ſupplies. We have determined on ſending a detachment of a company of Europeans, three of Sepoys, with two field-pieces, and a party of artillery men, under the command of Captain Richard Eames, to clear the roads between Panwell and Campoly of the Maratta horſe, which we learn are hovering in thoſe parts, and to convoy a ſupply of proviſions to that port. The party is to be a ſeparate command, and not to be conſidered as belonging to the army now above the Gauts. Appendix, No. 130.

We have juſt received a letter from the Governor General and Council, of which we ſhall ſend you a copy when the roads are open. The contents in ſhort are, That they have given Colonel Goddard full powers to conclude a treaty with Moodajee-Bouncello; for which reaſon they think it neceſſary to revoke the controul they had given us over that detachment, though they obſerve their intention is not to withdraw the ſervices of the detachment entirely from the ſupport of any meaſures we might have formed in reliance of ſuch ſupport, if thoſe meaſures ſhall not prove incompatible with the inſtructions given to Colonel Goddard, and with the engagements he may form in conſequence. We ſhall however immediately deſcribe our preſent ſituation to Colonel Goddard, who on the 22d ultimo was ſtill at Huſſengabad, and preſs him to march towards Poonah.

The Pattamars diſpatched with this letter having returned, it is neceſſary to acquaint you, that Lieutenant Fraſer has abandoned his poſt at Condolah, and which it is reported is now in poſſeſſion of the enemy.

The following letter to Colonel Cockburn was encloſed in the foregoing one to the committee:

To Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn.

Sir,

As we find Colonel Egerton has been obliged by bad health to reſign to you the chief command of the army, we judge it proper to obſerve to you, that from the repreſentation we have received of the ſtate of affairs, it appears very neceſſary the army ſhould advance with the utmoſt vigour and expedition towards Poonah, in order to give ſpirits to Ragoba's friends, and ſecure proviſions for our own troops; we ſhall therefore truſt to your activity and zeal for the ſervice, that no time be loſt in moving forwards, or meaſure neglected to diſtreſs and fruſtrate the attempts of the enemy.

We are,
Your loving friends,

Chowke, 21ſt January 1779.

Tueſday, 21ſt. At half paſt five this morning, the army marched from Campoly, and came to their ground at Chowke at one o'clock.

Received on the road the following letter from Mr. Farmer:

To John Carnac, Eſquire, and Colonel Charles Egerton:

Gentlemen,

The Durbar have appointed on their part Gunneiſh Hurry, and Tookajee Holcar and Mhadjee Scindia on their part Apajee Savajee, to ſee the different articles in the late agreement performed; they bring with them the requiſite letters from your Durbar and from theſe Sudars; and they farther deſire one from me to introduce them to you, and ſignify their being the perſons ſo appointed.

In the articles of Durbar expences, which formed part of the late ſtipulation for the unmoleſted march of the army to Bombay, it was ſettled, that a thouſand rupees ſhould be paid to Chubdars, &c. belonging to the Durbar of Mhadjee Scindia, and the like ſum to the Durbar ſervants of Nanah Furneeze; you will pleaſe to pay the whole amount immediately to Apajee Savajee, who is reſponſible to them; and for the other ſums ſettled for ſuch ſervice, I could wiſh the notes ſhould if poſſible be returned to me.

Madjee Scindia ſent yeſterday to acquaint me that as he was ſecurity to the Durbar for the due performance of the late ſtipulations, he deſired that Mr. Stewart and I would accompany him wherever he went. The change is very agreeable to me in every ſhape, as he treats us with great civility and attention; and the cultivating a proper connexion with him ſeems to me the only mode to retrieve the ſad ſacrifices we have been compelled to make in capitulating for the ſafe and unmoleſted return of our army to Bombay. Whatever he may have to propoſe I believe will be through Appajee Savajee, who ſeems to poſſeſs much of his confidence, and to whom I would therefore venture to propoſe a particular attention ſhould be ſhewn, keeping every thing that he may propoſe or mention a ſecret from the agent of the Durbar.

I could wiſh that a p^{r} of Pattamars ſhould be ſent me as ſoon as poſſible to diſpatch with any advices I may have to ſend. I am, with reſpect,

Gentlemen,

Your moſt obedient humble ſervant,

Camp near Tullegaon, 19th January 1779. W. G. Farmer.

Friday, 22d. This morning Mr. Carnac and Colonel Egerton took their leave of the army, and ſet out for Panwell, where they arrived about noon, and reached Bombay the ſame evening.

It eſcaped us to notice under the 16th inſtant, that we found the prevailing cuſtom of giving preſents amongſt the officers and others of the Durbar, was not to be diſpenſed with, and that their expectations were very conſiderable; we however ſettled this charge by means of Appajee Savajee, for the ſum of 41,000 rupees to be paid to him on his arrival at Bombay; and he made himſelf anſwerable to the dependents of the Durbar for this amount.

Report from Lieutenant Richardſon to Colonel Egerton, as noticed in Committee under 11th inſtant.

Sir,

Agreeable to your deſire I ſend you the information that I received laſt night on examining two men that Ragoba had ſent to Tookajee Holcar. They told me there was no hope of his joining us till we had beat the miniſterial army; that Holcar declared himſelf thoroughly acquainted with our ſituation: that our force did not exceed four battalions, and with that number we could never expect to reduce the Maratta empire; that his force added to ours would give us very little more weight; that by joining Ragoba he riſked every thing, without the ſmalleſt proſpect of advantage to himſelf: therefore all that he could promiſe was to be neutral; and though he might be obliged to bring his troops into the field, yet he engaged that they ſhould not fight againſt Ragoba. I have further to inform you, that in a private converſation with Ragoba, two days ago, he told me he had deceived the Governor, in the hopes he had given of people joining him; but that he had been deceived himſelf, and that he was aſhamed of it, as he now found he had been led into an error by falſe promiſes.

I am, Sir,

Your moſt obedient humble Servant,

Tullagaon, 11th January 1779. William Richardſon.

These Minutes were omitted in the proper place, through the miſapprehenſion of the Committee's Secretary, and without the knowledge of Mr. Carnac.

Bombay, 22d January 1779.

Minutes of the Conſultation held by the Poonah Committee at Wurgaon, the 15th January, which Colonel Egerton diſavows and proteſts againſt; and to authenticate which Mr. Carnac has brought the Evidence of Mr. Sibbald the Secretary, Colonel Hartley, and Mr. Holmes, as per their Letters forwarded in the Packet.

Camp at Wurgaon, 15th January 1779.

At a Committee; PRESENT,

John Carnac, Eſquire,
Colonel Charles Egerton.

The committee now meet to take into their ſerious conſideration the meaſures neceſſary to be immediately purſued to extricate the army from its preſent very critical ſituation, ſurrounded as it is by the whole ſtrength of the empire, and with only about ten days proviſions in camp.

It is judged neceſſary to have the opinion of Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, now in command of the army, as to the practicability of effecting our retreat to Bombay; who is accordingly called in.

Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn delivers in his written opinion as entered hereafter.

Colonel Egerton's opinion being alſo required, declares his ſentiments are the ſame as thoſe of Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn; that a retreat in our preſent ſituation is impracticable; and if attempted, the conſequences muſt be the loſs of the whole army.

Mr. Carnac is ſo confident the army is ſufficiently numerous, and ſo well provided with artillery, as to be able to force their way back againſt all oppoſition, if the officers and men will do their duty; that there is no doubt with him, the attempt ought to be made at all events, rather than ſubmit to the terms preſcribed by the enemy, by which we have no authority to bind our employers; and for his own part, he declares he would much ſooner run his ſhare of the riſk than that they ſhould be complied with: however, as Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn have given it as their poſitive opinions that the troops will not ſtand, and conſequently muſt be cut to pieces, Mr. Carnac dares not take upon himſelf ſingly to preſs a retreat, which it is pronounced will be inevitably attended with conſequences that cannot fail endangering the preſervation of the ſettlement; he, therefore, however reluctantly and contrary to his own ſentiments, finds himſelf obliged to concur in the acceptance of whatever conditions can be obtained. Allowing therefore that the opinions of Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn to be well-founded (in which we are given to underſtand many officers of the army concur) there ſeems to be no other reſource left, but to accept of ſuch conditions as can be obtained from the enemy.

Adjourned.

For Colonel Cockburn's opinion, vide before.

Edw^{d} Ravenſcroft, Sec^{y}.

Letter from the Preſidency of Bombay to the Court of Directors; dated 27th March 1779.

To the Honourable the Secret Committee, &c. &c.

Gentlemen,

1. We had the honour to addreſs you the 29th December, by the way of Buſſorah; and on the 8th of laſt month Colonel Capper arrived by that route with your commands dated 31ſt Auguſt.

2. It gave us infinite ſatisfaction to find by your ſaid commands, that our vigilance reſpecting the tranſactions of the French has met with your approbation; and we flatter ourſelves that you will do equal juſtice to the motives on which we undertook the late expedition in favour of Ragonaut Row, which we are deeply concerned to acquaint you, has been brought to a moſt unſucceſsful concluſion.

3. This diſpatch is intended to convey to you, in the quickeſt manner poſſible, an account, ſufficiently circumſtantial, of the unfortunate affair, accompanied with every neceſſary paper, to enable you to form a judgment of the conduct conduct of the concerned in this expedition, and of our preſent ſituation.

4. The letters from the Board in their Secret Department, dated the 17th of June and 8th of July, and our letter of the 31ſt of that month, tranſcripts of all which are in this packet, will inform you of the ſteps which more immediately led to the reſolution we formed on the 21ſt of July, to purſue all practicable meaſures, with the utmoſt expedition, for placing Ragoba in the Regency at Poonah; and under No. 1 we now tranſmit a copy at length of our proceedings on that day, in order the more fully to explain the grounds upon which we acted.

5. Subjoined to the minutes of the 21ſt July, is a copy of the anſwer delivered by the Poonah Durbar, upon Nanah Furneze being reinſtated in the adminiſtration, to the paper of demands preſented by Mr. Moſtyn, as mentioned in the letter above referred to, dated 17th June.

6. The firſt letter we received from Mr. Lewis at Poonah, after we had taken our reſolutions, adviſed us that Moraba had been ſeized by Madjee Scindia, and that Tookajee Holcar had been obliged to deliver up his Duan, and two of his officers, to Nannah, who together with Scindia had appointed another Duan for Holcar, and that every one, whether Bramin or officer, who had joined Moraba, had alſo been ſeized, and amongſt the reſt Bucheba Pronder; Scindia was ſoon after induced, by a preſent of three lacks of rupees from Nannah, to deliver Moraba into his charge, who immediately ſent him priſoner into the fort of Aſhmednagur; and Buchebah was likewiſe confined in another fort belonging to Nannah

7. On the 1ſt of July Monſr St. Lubin left Poonah, and proceeded to Damain, where it was given out he intended to remain, until Nannah diſcovered whether he was able to fulfil his engagements, and where we underſtand he now is.

8. Our advices from Poonah at this juncture tended to perſuade us that Nannah Furneze and Madjee Scindia had the chief direction of the Government, and that Saccaram Bappoo was not conſulted, but even kept under a degree of confinement. Scindia's influence appeared the moſt predominant; and it was ſurmiſed that he had views to the enlargement of his own power at Poonah, independent of Nannah, or of Saccaram Bappoo.

9. We were ſoon after given to underſtand, that the Poonah Durbar had not only refuſed to grant Duſtucks for the paſſage of the Bengal detachment, but ſent orders to the different officers through whoſe diſtricts Colonel Leſlie would be obliged to paſs, to uſe every endeavour to moleſt and haraſs him in his march; and the army at Poonah was then ſaid to conſiſt of about 12,000 men, which was to be diſmiſſed in a few days, with orders to aſſemble again at Deura, or about the beginning of October, as they could not procure provender for their cattle at that ſeaſon of the year.

10. Colonel Leſlie appearing to make but a ſlow progreſs in his march, we wrote to him in the moſt preſſing manner to advance as quick as poſſible, aſſuring him that the early arrival of the army under his command would be of the utmoſt importance to the Honourable Company's affairs.

11. At this time Madjee Scindia acquainted Mr. Lewis, that the Miniſters had given him full powers to ſettle affairs with the Engliſh, and promiſed to ſend a perſon to Bombay for that purpoſe, who accordingly did arrive ſome time afterwards; but, as the Preſident lately acquainted us, he did not open himſelf on the buſineſs for which he was ſaid to be deputed, thinking perhaps that our connection with Ragoba did not ſuit his maſter's views.

12. Mr. Lewis alſo adviſed, that the Durbar, in order to amuſe us, intended ſending a perſon of conſequence with propoſals to Ragoba; and the Preſident, at our meeting on the 15th Auguſt, reported that propoſals had been made to him verbally, by an agent for Nannah Furneze, to bring Ragoba into the Government nearly on the ſame terms as propoſed by Moraba and his party, which will appear by the papers annexed to our proceedings of the 21ſt of July; but as we had reaſon to ſuſpect that every propoſal from that quarter was inſidious, and only meant to amuſe us, we returned for anſwer to the agent, that we could not give his propoſals any conſideration, unleſs they came before us authenticated under the Sicca of Nannah himſelf; after which we had no farther overtures on the part of Nannah Furneze. Appendix. No. 130.

13. On the 16th of Auguſt we received advice from Mr. Lewis, that he was informed from very good authority, that it had been determined by Nannah and Scindia to ſend two principal officers to oppoſe Colonel Leſlie's march; and that Nannah had ſent to recall Monſr St. Lubin from Damaun, where he had reſided ſince the beginning of July, giving out that he intended employing him againſt Hyder. We immediately ſent this intelligence to Colonel Leſlie, that he might be prepared to take his meaſures with the proper caution and vigour: and the Chief of Surat adviſed us, under the 9th of September, that Chokeys had been placed on the Brampore and Ugien roads, in order to intercept all letters.

14. Under the 8th September Mr. Lewis adviſed the Preſident, that he had been informed by the Nabob of Arcot's Vackeel, that the Killedar of Ahmednagur fort, in which Moraba was confined, had not only refuſed complying with an order from Nannah for delivering that fort to Scindia, but had ſeized ſome treaſure to a great amount belonging to Nannah, and declared he acted in behalf of Ragoba. The Vackeel further added, that though Moraba was not abſolutely maſter of the Killa, yet he and the Killedar underſtood one another perfectly; and that it was entirely by the advice of the former the latter had acted. Mr. Lewis cloſes his letter with theſe words: "Not a man is yet come in, and the "few who remained here belonging to Hurry Punt's "army are ſo very importunate for their arrears of pay, "that the poor man is afraid of ſtirring out of houſe." In a letter to us, dated 24th September, he ſays, "Purſo "Ram Boſe is ſtill here, not being able to raiſe a man "for want of money, which the Government is either "unable or unwilling to advance him."

15. In the laſt mentioned letter, Mr. Lewis acquaints us, that on the 20th September, a Frenchman arrived at Poonah, with letters for Nannah, but notwithſtanding his utmoſt endeavours, he could not learn until the night before the date of his letter, who the Frenchman was, or from whence he came; when he was informed it was Monſieur Le Roy from Surat. This was one of the gentlemen mentioned in the Secret Letter of the 15th January 1778, to have been landed on Choul from Pondicherry, and he now brought letters to Nannah from Monſieur St. Lubin, with whom he had a meeting at Damaun, and from Monſieur Briencourt, the French Conſul at Surat; the contents of which Mr. Lewis learnt were to deſire Nannah not to liſten to any terms of accommodation with the Engliſh, at leaſt for one month, as he made no doubt the aſſiſtance promiſed by Monſieur St. Lubin would arrive by that time.

16. On the 27th Auguſt we received the firſt advice from the Governor General and Council, of their having deputed Mr. Elliot to the court of Moodajee Boojla, the Rajah of Berar, with full inſtructions to negociate and conclude a treaty with that Chief, acquainting us no farther with the object of their intended treaty, than expreſſing their opinion in general terms, that an alliance with him might be attended with the greateſt utility, in providing for the defence of the Honourable Company's Poſſeſſions in the preſent war. They deſired us to correſpond with Mr. Elliot, and to adviſe him of any occurrences that may affect the general political intereſts of the Company's ſettlements and of our own in particular, telling us, that the ſucceſs of the meaſures entruſted to Mr. Elliot, muſt in a great meaſure depend upon their preſent ſecrecy; that he would however ſend us ſuch articles articles as he might agree to with the Rajah, and in the mean time, to prevent any ſtep of a contrary tendency on our part, they requeſt we would refrain from forming any engagement of a nature hoſtile to the Government at Poonah, except ſuch as might appear abſolutely neceſſary for the defence of our own poſſeſſions.

17. From the very general information the Governor General and Council gave us of their projected alliance with Moodajee Booſla, we could not form any judgment in what manner this Preſidency might be affected thereby, nor did it ſtrike us that we could receive either injury or benefit from the Rajah of Berar, unleſs he ſhould aſſert his claim to the Rajahſhip of the Maratta empire, to which he has ſome pretenſions, and reſtore the ancient form of the Maratta Government. We did not pretend to judge what advantage a connection with him might afford to your Bengal provinces, to which his country is contiguous, but ſo far as we might venture an opinion, we conceived them ſo little liable to danger, that an alliance with Moodajee Booſla merely for their ſecurity, ſo far as he could contribute to it, which appeared by their letter to be the object of Mr. Ellict's deputation, did not ſeem to be a conſideration equivalent to the injury your general intereſt would ſuſtain, were we to forego the proſecution of the plan reſolved on the 21ſt July.

18. Theſe were the ſentiments we expreſſed on the 31ſt Auguſt, when this letter came under conſideration; and as we were then every day in expectation of advices from Europe by the way of Suez, which would place us at a certainty with reſpect to the war with France, we did not think it proper to take any deciſive reſolution for the proſecution of the intended meaſures, though the neceſſity thereof ſtill continued to ſtrike us in the moſt forcible manner.

19. On the 9th September Mr. William Moore arrived from Suez, having left London 16th June, and Marſeilles the 2d July. By him we received intelligence next to a certainty, that the Count D'Eſtaing's ſquadron was gone to America, and that Admiral Byron had ſailed in purſuit of him, nor had we any reaſon to apprehend the French intended ſending any armament to India this ſeaſon.

20. On the 27th following we received a letter from the Governor General and Council, dated 17th Auguſt, in which they acquainted us, that they had approved our reſolution of the 21ſt July, and authorized us to aſſiſt Ragoba with a military force to conduct him to Poonah, and to eſtabliſh him in the Regency there, on the following expreſs proviſions:

Firſt, That it do not interfere with any engagement formed with Moodajee Booſla by Mr. Elliot, and previous notice to us given.

Second, That our lateſt advices from Europe ſhall be equal to an aſſurance that the force required for this ſervice may be ſpared without endangering the ſafety of Bombay, in the event of a French invaſion.

Third, That the engagement we might form with Ragoba himſelf or Moraba, and his aſſociates, be not contrary to thoſe concluded with Moodajee by Mr. Elliot, and noticed to us, nor of a hoſtile tendency to the Government of Berar.

21. On the 30th, we received advice from Colonel Leſlie, that he had on the 15th Auguſt left Chatterpore, or Chunderpore as it is called in the maps, where he had remained on account of the heavy rains ſince 3d July, in order to proceed on his march to the Nerbuddah, and after two days march had arrived at Raje Gur, from whence he dated his letter the 25th Auguſt. By this letter it appeared he had a ſlight ſkirmiſh with the troops of one of the Bundella Chiefs, but was in treaty for a pacification, and at the ſame time taking meaſures for croſſing a river between him and the enemy, that if drawn to that extremity, he might by diſperſing them ſecure his march from further moleſtation.

22. We have now brought our detail down to the 12th October, and matters were circumſtanced as ſtated in the foregoing ſheets, when Mr. Carnac delivered in a minute, urging the danger of loſing any further time, and preſſing us immediately to undertake the meaſures reſolved on under the 21ſt July.

23. Before we came to any reſolution on Mr. Carnac's minute, we thought it neceſſary to take the advice of Mr. Moſtyn in ſome points; and that gentleman being accordingly conſulted, gave it ſtrongly as his opinion, that if we did intend to take any meaſures in favour of Ragoba, the ſooner they were undertaken the better, the leſs oppoſition we ſhould meet with, and therefore the greater certainty of ſucceſs; of which indeed, he ſaid, he had not in his own mind the leaſt doubt; and upon the whole, he ſaid, he did not conceive there could offer a more favourable criſis than the preſent; for which he fully explained his reaſons, as will appear by our proceedings on that day.

24. After full conſideration of all circumſtances, it was reſolved by the majority of the Committee, Mr. Draper only diſſenting thereto, forthwith to carry into execution the plan agreed to under the 21ſt July, for conducting Ragoba to Poonah, and placing him in the Regency there, during the minority of the young Peiſhwa; and that the neceſſary meaſures for that purpoſe be undertaken as ſoon as poſſible.

25. That you may have our whole proceedings on this ſubject before you in as ſmall a compaſs as poſſible, we now ſend in the packet a copy of our minutes from the 12th October to the time the army left Bombay, and the treaty as executed by Ragoba, collected in one paper, under No. 2.

26. Mr. Draper's reaſons for not concurring in the reſolution for immediately putting our plan into execution, will appear at length in the paper mentioned in the preceding paragraph.

27. Our whole proceedings previous to the army's leaving Bombay being comprized in that paper, it appears unneceſſary to repeat them here; and we chearfully ſubmit them to your candour and judgment.

28. For our future guidance we muſt requeſt your opinion and inſtructions on the point debated at our meeting of the 7th November, whether two members of the Committee can be detached from the Preſidency at the ſame time, upon any temporary ſervice; and whether the two remaining members are in their abſence competent to form a Select Committee.

29. Every argument that was advanced on either ſide of the queſtion is contained in the extract from our proceedings.

30. Under No. 3, we tranſmit a copy of the treaty as executed by Ragoba.

31. To avoid ſwelling the extract of our proceedings; we ſend in a ſeparate number, copy of a letter from the executors of the late Mr. William Shaw, on the ſubject of the loan to Ragoba, with our minutes thereon; and we are perſuaded, that when you reflect how we were circumſtanced with Ragoba at the time, and the flattering proſpect then opening to the Company, you will approve our determination to diſcharge the debt, and not to ſuffer him to be embarraſſed with demands from the executors at ſuch a juncture.

32. Ragoba having afterwards ſtated his account with Mr. Shaw's eſtate in a different manner from the executors, we ſent his ſtatement to them, and demanded them to refund the overplus according thereto. In reply to which we received another letter from them, controverting Ragoba's ſtatement, and ſupporting their own. A copy thereof is annexed to the other letter. And Ragoba departing a few days afterwards to join the army, we had not time to obtain from him the neceſſary proofs, even if he had any to produce, which we much doubt.

33. We hope and truſt likewiſe that, conſidering how affairs were then ſituated, you will approve the loan of four lacks of rupees, which it was abſolutely neceſſary to make to Ragoba, to enable him to make the neceſſary preparations for the expedition. We alſo thought thought it for the good of the ſervice to make a further loan of rupees 15,000 to two principal officers of Ragoba's, to whom we acquainted you, in our addreſs by the York, we made a loan of the like ſum when the reſolution in March 1778 took place.

34. We beg leave to mention that Ragoba's jewels depoſited on executing the treaty of Surat, are ſtill in our poſſeſſion at Bombay.

35. Our addreſs, 29th December, of which a triplicate is now encloſed, informed you briefly of the progreſs of the army to that time; however, to bring their operations before you in one point of view, we will begin our account from the day the forces left Bombay.

36. Captain James Stuart, who had been previouſly ſent to Poonah to make himſelf acquainted with the roads and paſſes, embarked from this place the 22d November, with a detachment of grenadier Sepoys and ſome light artillery, as mentioned in the extract of our proceedings, and proceeding up Apta river by a route different from what was taken by the remainder of the army, ſecured the paſſage of the Ghauts, and took poſt on the ſummit of Condella the 25th following, the 3d day from his leaving Bombay, where he was to remain till joined by the army.

37. The remainder of the forces left Bombay the 23d, and were followed the next day by Colonel Egerton, who took on him the chief command. After ſecuring the fort of Bellapore, which commands the entrance of Panwell river, the army proceeded to Panwell, where it arrived the 25th.

38. To prevent, as far as we could any diminution from the ſtrength of the army, the fort of Bellapore was ſoon afterwards garriſoned from Bombay.

39. The army remained at Panwell the 25th November to the 4th December, waiting the arrival of their ſtores, proviſion, oxen, &c. and employed in clearing the road in front for their advance. On the 4th they began their march, and on the 13th arrived at Campoly, at the foot of the Ghauts. Here they were joined by Meſſrs. Carnac and Moſtyn, who, with Colonel Egerton, formed a Committee for the general conduct of the expedition, and the ſettlement of the government at Poonah. Their commiſſion and inſtructions are entered at length in their diary now tranſmitted.

40. Mr. Moſtyn only remained a few days at Campoly, when he was obliged to return to Bombay by a violent diſorder, which put an end to his life on the 1ſt of January. In him you loſt a very faithful, valuable ſervant; but it was an inexpreſſible misfortune to be deprived of his ſervices juſt at the very time when they were ſo particularly requiſite for the accompliſhment of a plan which he had been ſo very inſtrumental in bringing to bear.

41. At a meeting of the Poonah committee held at Campoly on the 26th December, Mr. Carnac delivered in a minute, remarking on the ſlow progreſs hitherto made by the army, and the time loſt by making a carriage road up the Gauts, inſtead of carrying up the ſtores by hand. This minute will appear under its proper date in the Poonah diary; and with the other papers hereafter mentioned, we tranſmit a copy of Colonel Egerton's reply, delivered ſince his return, and of a letter from the Commandant of artillery, and the other papers on the ſame ſubject, which we beg leave to ſubmit to your judgment.

42. At length, on 23d December, the troops and artillery were got up to Condilla, at the top of the Gaut, but ſome further time was employed in bringing up the Commiſſary's ſtores, and compleating the proviſions to a ſtock for twenty-five days.

43. Till this time there had been no appearance of an enemy, but on the 24d they made a trifling and unſucceſsful attack on a ſmall party of Ragoba's Sepoys, which with three of his guns had been poſted in front of Captain Stewart's detachment. They were, however, beat off by Ragoba's people, with the aſſiſtance only of two of our artillery officers to point their guns. Captain Stewart judged that the number of the enemy exceeded ten thouſand horſe and foot. Appendix, No. 130.

44. From this time the enemy daily cannonaded our camp at a diſtance, with a very trifling effect till the 31ſt, when, after they had withdrawn their guns, a ſmall party concealed in a gully threw ſome rockets, one of which mortally wounded Lieutenant Colonel Cdy, who died at Bombay the 14th January.

45. After ſeveral ſmall movements towards the edge of the plain, the army, equipped with a ſtock of proviſions for 25 days, began the march for Poonah on the 4th January, having left a fortified poſt at the head of the Gauts to ſecure the paſs, under the command of Lieutenant Frazer. On the ſame day they met with a very heavy loſs by the death of Captain Stuart, who was a moſt active, gallant, and judicious officer, and poſſeſſed of the true military ſpirit.

46. On the 5th the army halted.

47. On the 6th the army reſumed its march, and in the proſecution thereof the guns of the enemy opened on the line from a wood in front, and a large party of horſe ſeemed inclined either to take them in flank or rear; they were however prevented from both, driven from the wood into the plain, and afterwards from an eminence which our troops took poſſeſſion of.

This party ſent to haraſs them the committee were informed was commanded by Bhim Row Ponſia, and might conſiſt of 5,000 horſe, with ſeven guns.

48. On the ſame day Colonel Egerton repreſented in committee, that having borne up as long he could againſt an illneſs with which he had been for ſome time paſt afflicted, he found himſelf under the neceſſity of acquainting them, that the Surgeon-Major was of opinion, that the fatigues of a campaign co-operating with his indiſpoſition would certainly endanger his life, and that at any rate he could not ſoon hope to have the requiſite ſtrength to attend properly to the many avocations of a Commander in Chief in the field; for which reaſons he requeſted permiſſion to reſign the command of the army to Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, and to proceed immediately to Bombay. He accordingly did ſet off, but was obliged to return upon the receipt of intelligence that a large party of the enemy's horſe were in the Conkan; the temporary command of the army however remained with Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, though Colonel Egerton continued to act as a Member of the Poonah committee.

49. It was at this time judged neceſſary to promote Major Dagon of the artillery, to the rank of Lieutenant Colonel, in order to provide a fit officer to hold the ſecond command of the army, or to ſucceed to the chief command, in caſe of accidents to Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn.

50. The Poonah committee at the ſame meeting expreſſed their diſappointments on the difference between the expectations they were flattered with on their arrival at the top of the Gauts, and the actual ſtate of affairs. Inſtead of Holkar and many other Chiefs of rank and reſpect, who it was hoped would have joined them with a numerous body of horſe immediately on the appearance there of the ſtandard of Ragoba, none but a few mercenaries had yet come in, and Ragoba in a meſſage to the committee gave them plainly to underſtand that he had been deceived, that unleſs they could convince his friends of their ſafety in joining him by the ſpeedy defeat of his enemies, he had no hope of being joined by any one, and that their ſituation would rather prove worſe than better as they advanced towards Poonah, by being cut off from all communication with the Conkan, from whence they could then be ſupplied with proviſions and ſtores.

51. Though the mode adopted by the enemy of retiring before our army, and laying waſte the country, ſeemed to render Ragoba's reaſoning apparently juſt, the committee ſtill hoped that as they advanced towards

Poonah, Holkar, on whoſe junction there might be ſome dependance, would be enabled and encouraged to keep firm to the promiſes he had made through the late Mr. Moſtyn; and they further obſerved, there was too much reaſon to apprehend that Ragoba, truſting to ſubdue every one by our arms, had not only neglected the fit means to conciliate the reſpectable Chiefs to his cauſe, but had acted in ſuch a manner as would naturally tend to unite them againſt him; in proof of which they adduced an information given by the agent of Moraba then in our camp, that Ragoba had ſecretly ſent directions to the Killedar of Ahmednagur, not to releaſe Moraba till he got further poſitive orders from him on his arrival at Poonah.

52. The army continued to advance till the 9th January, when it arrived at Pellagom, a conſiderable town about 18 miles from the ſummit of the Gauts, and 16 miles from Poonah. Tellagon was burnt and abandoned before our troops arrived; and here they found a very numerous army aſſembled to oppoſe them, under the orders of the Miniſters Saccaram and Nannah, Madjee Scindia, Tookajee Holkar, and other principal officers.

53. The committee finding ſo general an oppoſition to Ragoba, and no hopes of being joined by any conſiderable Chief, were of opinion that the plan of eſtabliſhing Ragoba in the Regency of the Maratta empire would be impracticable, without the immediate cooperation of a reſpectable party in that State; and conſidering likewiſe the total improbability of procuring any further ſupply of proviſions, or even of ſecuring their own ſtock as they advanced, came to the reſolution to fall back with the army ſo far as might be requiſite to ſecure their communication with the Conkan, or the country below the Gauts. The meaſure taken by the committee, previous to and in conſequence of this reſolution and ſituation of the army at the time, are fully deſcribed in their proceedings under the 9th, 10th, and 11th January, to which we beg leave to refer.

54. At this place the committee received information that a body of horſe belonging to Moraba had marched into the Conkan to join Ragoba.

55. The army accordingly began to fall back on the night of the 11th; and the enemy having by ſome means got intelligence of their moving, attacked them on the march before day-light, which they continued with great vigour until four o'clock in the afternoon, before our troops could make their retreat good to Burragom or Wargaum, which they effected at laſt with much difficulty and danger. The committee's account of the action is entered on their diary under the 13th January; and Colonel Cockburn's is tranſmitted with the copies of his other letters during the ſervice under No. 9. Both accounts agree that a part of the baggage fell into the enemy's hands, and that the troops during the whole attack behaved with the greateſt intrepidity. The particulars of the loſs ſuſtained in the action will appear by the return annexed to Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn's letter; and in killed, wounded, and miſſing, of artillery, infantry, and Sepoys, and artillery Laſcars, amounted to 362.

56. Some ſtraggling Sepoys and Laſcars having eſcaped from the action to the head of the Gauts, brought the moſt dreadful accounts of the entire deſtruction of the whole army; upon which Lieutenant Fraſer immediately abandoned his poſt. We had the ſame alarming accounts, which filled us for ſome days with great apprehenſions.

57. On the 13th, the day after the action, the following minute appears in the committee's diary:

"At a committee held to deliberate relative to "overtures for the peaceable return of the army to "Bombay;—no minutes taken, being in a ſevere "cannonade, and a number of perſons ſtanding "round.

"Letter to the Peiſhwa, ſent by Ram Sing.
"D° from D°, in reply.
"D° to D°, at night."

58. Theſe imperfect entries the committee afterwards explained were owing to their ſeparation from their Secretary, Mr Farmer.

59. On the 14th Mr. Farmer was ſent to the Maratta camp to propoſe an accommodation, which the committee judged might be brought about by Ragoba's going over to Scindia, which he ſeemed determined to do, rather than run the riſk of another day's march.—The meſſage ſent to the Durbar by Mr. Farmer will appear at length on the Poonah committee's diary.

60. The anſwer given by the Durbar to Mr. Farmer's meſſage was ſimply this: "That if we wiſhed to remain "at peace with them, Ragonaut Row muſt be delivered "up, and then we may return quietly, otherwiſe we "might do as we pleaſe."

61. The committee wrote to Mr. Farmer in reply, that all difficulty of accommodation was removed by Ragoba's deſign of going over to Madjee Scindia, and that they expected in conſequence proper ſecurities from the Durbar for proceeding unmoleſted on their march.

62. On the 15th appears a letter from Mr. Farmer, containing the reſult of his conference with the Durbar, on his making known Ragoba's determination of going over to Madjee Scindia: their language then was, that excluſive of this, a new treaty muſt be made on the ſpot between the Engliſh and the Maratta State, the one made by Colonel Upton being entirely broke by the invaſion of their country. Mr. Farmer in a few words conveys a very expreſſive idea of the ſenſe entertained by the Durbar of the advantage at which they held our army. "They ſeem to feel themſelves (he ſays) in "that ſituation with reſpect to us, which the Turkiſh "Vizier felt himſelf in with reſpect to Peter the 1ſt, at "the time the Empreſs Catherine ſent in her jewels to "the Vizier."

63. On the ſame day is entered an opinion, ſubſcribed by Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn then in command of the army, with reſpect to the practicability of making good their retreat, which he deſcribes as utterly impoſſible. He concludes with theſe words, "I therefore "cannot charge myſelf to conduct the army under theſe "circumſtances to Bombay, and humanity muſt prompt "ſome other method than an attempt to retire in the "face of the whole ſtrength of the Maratta empire, with "ſuch an handful of men, who muſt in ſuch caſe be "ſacrificed."

64. The committee directed Mr. Farmer to acquaint the Durbar, in anſwer to the further condition they inſiſted on, that they demanded what the committee had no powers to agree to, the entering into, and concluding treaties being ſolely confined to the Governor General and Council; that the only power left them was to give up the cauſe and perſon of Ragoba, which done, muſt certainly put an end to all diſputes between the Engliſh and Maratta State. The committee further deſired Mr. Farmer to inform the Durbar, that ſhould they enter into any treaty they ſhould only deceive them, having no ſuch powers.

65. All their applications having been hitherto directed to the Durbar in general, it appeared to the committee that a gentleman being ſent to Madjee Scindia would be more likely to produce an accommodation, and Mr. Holmes the Commiſſary was accordingly deputed with full powers to ſettle for the peaceable return of the army to Bombay.

66. In the mean time the committee's letter was delivered to Mr. Farmer in the Durbar, by Ajee Phow, on the part of Madjee Scindia: as repreſenting the Durbar, he deſired to be informed of the contents; when Mr. Farmer explained what the committee had ſaid relative lative to want of powers, and deſired an anſwer to the ſingle propoſition, whether on the delivery of Ragoba, ſecurities would be given for the ſafe and unmoleſted return of the army to Bombay. After further argument on the ſubject, the Durbar ſtill inſiſted that a new treaty ſhould be made, and demanded a true tranſlation of the committee's letter, at the ſame time giving Mr. Farmer to underſtand, that if he did not comply, there were people in the camp who underſtood Engliſh. Mr. Farmer appeared concerned at this, becauſe the committee's declaration ſeemed to preclude all peaceable arrangements; but however the Durbar ſtill continue to inſiſt that till a new treaty was made the Engliſh army muſt remain where it was.

67. Late in the evening of the 15th, Mr. Holmes returned from the Maratta camp, and reported, that he had ſettled matters with Madjee Scindia and the reſt of the Durbar, for the peaceable return of the army to Bombay, on the only terms they would hear of, which in ſhort were the ſurrender of all the poſſeſſions under this Preſidency, acquired ſince the reign of Madarow; and the retrogreſſion of the Bengal army. The committee however, remarked in their diary, that Madjee Scindia and the whole Durbar could not plead ignorance of their want of powers to conclude ſuch a treaty, they having demanded both a true explanation and tranſlation of their letter to Mr. Farmer, in which they ſo ſtrongly diſclaimed all ſuch power.

68. Under the 16th is entered a tranſlation of the treaty, as alſo of a ſeparate article in favour of Madjee Scindia, which Meſſrs. Farmer and Holmes adviſed the committee they were obliged to conſent to. A copy of the treaty, and of the ſeparate article, is alſo tranſmitted in the packet, under No. 42.

69. Mr. Carnac, has minuted on our proceedings, that having ſince his return peruſed the tranſlation of the treaty and ſeparate article, he finds them conceived in ſuch terms, that he ſhould certainly have objected thereto at the time of ſignature, had they been literally explained to him; but that he only underſtood the contents in general terms, and indeed was the more indifferent as to the particular wording of them, as he always bore in his mind the idea that they were of no validity, and would never be ratified by our ſuperiors.

70. Mr. Farmer and Lieutenant Charles Stewart were left with Madjee Scindia as hoſtages for the performance of the agreement with him.

71. The committee delivered to Madjee Scindia's Vackeel, a letter addreſſed to Colonel Goddard, which does not appear in the diary, Mr. Farmer not having kept a copy: the purport however was to adviſe him, that the face of things was ſo materially altered ſince their writing to him laſt, as to occaſion their marching back to Bombay; and that in conſequence of an agreement entered into by them with the Marattas, they directed him to march back with the army under his command to Bengal. This letter was dated the 16th January. On the 19th the committee adviſed Colonel Goddard, that upon recollection not thinking themſelves authorized to give the order contained in their letter of the 16th, he was to pay no regard thereto.

72. On the 17th Mr. Farmer returned to the Maratta camp with the papers executed, and a preſent of a horſe for Madjee Scindia. He came back to our camp about noon with a party of horſe, who were to accompany the army to Panwell. The army accordingly began their march on the 17th in the afternoon, and in ſeven days reached Panwell, from whence they were tranſported to Bombay.

73. The Select Committee then at Bombay, beg to take notice in this place, that the reſolution for retreating, the difficulties the army was brought into, and the negociation commenced in conſequence, were tranſacted and concluded before we had any knowledge thereof, the communication with the army being ſtopt by the enemy.

74. The Poonah committee on making the agreement found themſelves under a neceſſity, in compliance with the cuſtom of the eaſt, to make preſents amongſt the officers of the Durbar, to the amount of rupees 41,000, for which notes were given. Appendix. No. 130.

75. Under the 20th January are entered on the Poonah committee's diary the orders we gave under the 11th, on being apprized of their ſituation and proſpects when they arrived at Mondhurna plain, as deſcribed therein under the 6th; which orders, owing to the ſtoppage of the roads, did not reach them till the army was on its return.

76. Before the committee arrived at Panwell, they received a letter from Mr. Farmer, adviſing that Madjee Scindia had acquainted him, that as he (Madjee Scindia) was ſecurity to the Durbar for the due performance of the late ſtipulations, he deſired that Mr. Farmer and Lieutenant Stewart would accompany him wherever he went; and Mr. Farmer added, the charge was very agreeable in every reſpect, as he treated them with great civility and attention.

77. We have now brought the account of this expedition to a concluſion; in which we have confined ourſelves to a mere narrative of facts, as ſtated in the committee's diary and Colonel Egerton's letters to the Preſident, avoiding an opinion, or entering into particulars more than neceſſary to connect our account, and give you a general idea of the matters repreſented. Any judgment offered by us might be imputed to the feelings naturally ariſing from the diſappointment of a ſcheme which we had promoted with ſo much zeal, and by the event of which we, Mr. Draper excepted on account of his diſſent, are ourſelves liable to be affected; and it has for theſe reaſons appeared the moſt equitable and impartial method to ſend only a general ſtatement to you and to the Governor General and Council, accompanied with every voucher that can tend to illuſtrate the ſubject, and make your information as complete as poſſible, leaving to you to form your own judgment from the materials before you, to what cauſes the failure of the expedition is to be attributed, and on whom cenſure ought to fall.

78. In purſuance of this plan we ſhall lay before you in order, the ſeveral letters and papers that have been delivered in relative to this expedition, the particulars of which will be mentioned in the ſequel of this addreſs, as many of them are connected with matters not yet mentioned, which have taken place ſince the expedition.

79. In the 21ſt paragraph our advices, brought down to the 30th September, left Colonel Leſlie at Rajegur the 25th Auguſt, and, as we then thought, preparing to continue his march. We had no further accounts of the Bengal army till the 28th October, when we received a letter from Colonel Goddard, dated the 4th of that month; by which we obſerved with concern that the army ſtill remained at Rajegur. Colonel Goddard therein adviſed, that Colonel Leſlie had died on the preceding day; and that the command having thereby devolved on him, he ſhould march from that place in three or four days. In our reply to this letter, dated the 13th Nov. we repeated the directions before given to Colonel Leſlie, for the army to march towards Poonah with all poſſible expedition; at the ſame time giving to underſtand that his early arrival might be very eſſential to the ſucceſs of the important ſcheme we had then in agitation. By his next letter, dated the 31ſt Oct. and received the 30th November, we found him advanced to Kemlaſſy, on the road to the Nerbudda; and after the treaty had been concluded, and our forces had actually landed on the Continent, we then more fully explained our plan, and again urged him to purſue his march with all poſſible expedition.

80. On the 18th December, whilſt our army lay at the foot of the Ghauts, we received advices from Lieutenant Colonel Goddard in twenty-two days, dated at Bopaul,

Bopaul, within 18 coſs of the Nerbudda, which he hoped to croſs in five or ſix days, and in two days more to enter the territories of the Berar Rajah.

81. The ſame day we received a letter from the Governor General and Council, dated the 15th October, adviſing us of their having removed Colonel Leſlie from the command, on account of the little progreſs the detachment had made under him, and of his manifeſt diſobedience of their poſitive order, in concluding a treaty with two Chiefs of the Bundelcund country; that they had appointed Colonel Goddard to the chief command, and ordered him to proſecute his march without further loſs of time into Berar, where, on his arrival, he was to apply to Moodajee Booſla, and if that Chief ſhould agree to join him with a ſufficient body of forces for the purpoſe, he was to continue his route in conjunction with them, and to obey all orders he might receive from us; but if he ſhould not have received any freſh directions for his march, and if the Rajah ſhould decline or refuſe to grant his aſſiſtance, they had then veſted in Colonel Goddard a diſcretionary power to ſuſpend his proceedings.

82. The Governor General and Council to our great ſatisfaction added, that if the plan we had reſolved in July to carry into execution in September, for the reſtoration of Ragoba, ſtill ſubſiſted, or if we ſhould have formed any other for the ſame end, conſiſtently with the terms which they had preſcribed for their aſſent to that meaſure; or if we ſhould judge a ſtrong reinforcement immediately and indiſpenſably neceſſary to inſure the ſafety of Bombay againſt a French invaſion; and ſhould deem it requiſite and adviſable in either of thoſe caſes to command the detachment at all hazards to proceed further towards Bombay, even without a junction of the troops of any Power in alliance with the Company; they gave us the power in ſuch caſes, and in ſuch only, to require Colonel Goddard to advance, but in all others, to give him notice of our intentions, and to leave him to act under their directions.

83. They likewiſe acquainted us of the death of Mr. Elliot, and that as the Rajah had expreſſed great ſatisfaction at the overtures made for a connection with him, by that deputation they concluded he would take an active part in proſecuting the intended negociation, either by deputing a proper Miniſter to them on his part, or by ſoliciting an alliance on ſuch terms as might prove a general advantage to the Company's poſſeſſions; for theſe reaſons, they did not mean to appoint any perſon to ſucceed Mr. Elliot, until their advices from the Rajah ſhould enable them to determine on the expediency of the meaſure.

84. Upon receipt of this letter, though we concluded that Colonel Goddard having by that time received freſh inſtructions from us, would according to the clauſe in his orders from Bengal continue to advance to this coaſt, yet, to prevent all diſappointment, and that he might be at no loſs in his proceedings, we immediately acquainted him in the terms of the letter from Bengal, that we deemed it requiſite and adviſable the detachment under his command ſhould move forwards towards Bombay; and therefore directed him to advance according to his former orders, even without a junction of the troops of any Power in alliance with the Honourable Company; hoping, that the movement of our forces would facilitate his march in the ſame degree that the advance of his detachment would leſſen the oppoſition to our forces.

85. On the 28th December we had the pleaſure to receive a letter from Colonel Goddard, dated the 6th, adviſing of his having croſſed the Nerbudda, and his being encamped at Huſſengabad on the ſouth bank of that river. He acquainted us, that he ſhould halt there a few days to determine his future route, and that in the intervening time, he hoped to be able to prevail on Moodajee Booſla to join him with a body of troops, by which means the inconveniences he might otherwiſe expect, reſpecting his ſupplies of proviſions, would be obviated.

86. In theſe letters, Colonel Goddard further urged the expediency of immediately taking ſome vigorous meaſures to counteract the oppoſition of the Miniſters to his march, and to cauſe a diverſion in order to prevent their employing their whole force againſt him, which he was apt to believe would be ſtrengthened with that of the Nizam.

87. The march of our forces had already anticipated his wiſhes in that reſpect; and on reference to our proceedings of the 12th October you will pleaſe to obſerve, that the facilitating the march of the Bengal detachment was a ſtrong conſideration with us for immediately undertaking the expedition. Matters now wore rather a pleaſing aſpect; our troops had juſt aſcended the Ghauts, and we had reaſon to expect that Colonel Goddard would ſoon make good his march, and that every ſtep both armies advanced, would be a mutual advantage to both, by dividing the efforts of the enemy.

88. We have already acquainted you how fatally we have been diſappointed in the hopes we entertained from the advance of our troops; and Colonel Goddard received advice of the miſcarriage of our army a ſhort time before we had been put under ſuch reſtrictions, that we began to be apprehenſive he would loſe the advantage of the exertion we had made, and that we ſhould even be entirely deprived of the ſervices of his detachment, at leaſt for this ſeaſon; for on the 10th January we received a letter from the Governor General and Council, dated the 23d November, referring to a letter of the 16th of that month, which we have never yet received, wherein they had informed us of their having veſted Colonel Goddard with full powers to conclude a treaty with Moodajee Booſla, the Rajah of Berar, on the grounds of their inſtructions to the late Mr. Elliot; a copy of which was ſaid to be encloſed, but which has likewiſe never come to hand, ſo that we are to this moment totally uninformed as to the particular points of the intended alliance with that Chief. But the Governor General and Council acquainted us, that the event of that negociation was likely to cauſe a very ſpeedy and eſſential change in the deſigns and operations of the detachment; and as the plan which they had choſen to ſupply the place of that originally recommended by us, rendered it neceſſary that they ſhould retain in their own hands the means of effecting it, they therefore revoked the power which they had given us in their letter of the 15th October, and ſhould direct the commanding officer of the detachment to obey only ſuch orders as he might hereafter receive from them. This letter was tranſmitted by Colonel Goddard, who adviſed that he ſhould regulate his conduct accordingly.

89. They further acquainted us, that although the circumſtances into which they had been thrown by the failure of the plan for which the detachment was originally formed, had rendered it neceſſary to make that alteration in the controul and direction of it, their intention was not entirely to withdraw the ſervices of the detachment from the ſupport of any meaſures we might have formed in reliance on them, if ſuch meaſures ſhould not prove incompatible with the inſtructions given to Colonel Goddard, and with the engagements which he might conclude in conſequence of them; that they ſhould therefore leave him ſtill ſubject to our inſtructions under thoſe proviſions; and they requeſted we would communicate to them ſuch points as we might judge proper to be included in the operations to be concerted with the Rajah of Berar.

90. We have recited at length the letter from the Governor General in Council, and when our ſituation at the time is conſidered, you may eaſily conceive the perplexity we were thrown into by the intelligence it conveyed to us; we had then juſt received the advices from the army entered in the Poonah committee's diary under the 6th January, when affairs above the Ghauts ſeemed not to wear an appearance as we had expected, and the aſſiſtance of the Bengal detachment, on which we had always depended, appeared abſolutely neceſſary on that account; excluſive of this conſideration, we reflected that there was only an interval of little more than four months left him to perform his march before the monſoon would ſet in, and that it was highly proper he ſhould reach this coaſt before that time, in order to ſecure Bombay in caſe of an attack by the French at the opening of the ſeaſon, which it might be out of his power to perform if any conſiderable time was employed in the negociations. Uninformed as we were as to the object thereof or of the plan ſaid to be ſubſtituted in lieu of ours, we could not judge what points it might be neceſſary to include reſpecting this Preſidency in the alliance to be concluded with Moodajee Booſla; all we could do in ſuch a ſituation was to explain to Colonel Goddard our views in the engagement we had formed with Ragoba, and to ſend him a copy of the treaty, that he might judge how far our meaſures were compatible with his inſtructions from Bengal: and we at the ſame time ſtrongly urged to him the neceſſity of his advancing to this coaſt as ſoon as poſſible, explaining the difficulties we ſhould be under in caſe he ſhould not think himſelf at liberty to comply with our requiſition.

91. We think it proper to tranſmit copies of the letters we wrote on this occaſion to Colonel Goddard and to the Governor General and Council, which wait on you under No. 5; and leſt we ſhould be diſappointed in the arrival of the Bengal detachment, we deſired the gentlemen at Madras in ſuch caſe to give us a latitude to detain a part of the forces deſtined for the expedition againſt Mahé, after that ſervice ſhould be brought to an iſſue.

92. On the 21ſt January we again found this detachment returning to its former deſtination, Colonel Goddard informing us, under the 3d, from his camp at Huſſengabad, that the Rajah of Berar wiſhed at preſent to delay the buſineſs that was to have been concluded with him, urging, that our forces having taken the field obliged him to wait for anſwers from the Governor General and Council to letters he had wrote them, before he could take any further ſteps; that in this ſituation he had reſolved to march with all expedition towards Zenor, by the way of Brampore; but that it would be a week before he could commence his march, as he was waiting for the arrival of ſome money from Naigpore to pay his army, then two months in arrears.

93. At this time we knew no more of the ſituation of affairs above the Ghauts, than that there had been an action, in which we had ſuffered ſome loſs; and that the army was on the return to Bombay, after ſome very diſagreeable compromiſe; and as in ſuch circumſtances it might be improper and dangerous for Colonel Goddard to proceed to Zenor, and we concluded from his letter he was then actually on the march, we reſolved to ſend him immediate orders to direct his courſe to Surat; which order we repeated on the 3d February. By Colonel Goddard's ſubſequent letters, we learnt that he had left the Nerbudda the 17th January, and after a march of eleven days, excluſive of three he had halted, two of which were on account of the illneſs and death of Lieutenant Colonel Fortnom, arrived in the neighbourhood of Brampore the 30th January, on which day he received the letter from the Poonah committee dated the 19th, revoking their orders of the 16th; which letter, though delivered to Madjee Scindia, had not then reached Colonel Goddard, which is a remarkable circumſtance, conſidering that Madjee Scindia, if he had been anxious for the quick diſpatch, could have conveyed the letter to the army in leſs than half the time employed by our Putamars. Colonel Goddard left Brampore on the 6th February, and on the 8th received the letter from the Poonah committee, dated the 16th January, with one from the Durbar to the ſame effect; and proceeding without interruption or intermiſſion, arrived at Surat the 25th February, after a march performed with wonderful rapidity from the time of his leaving the Nerbudda, through a tract of country almoſt unknown, and not leſs in extent that 500 miles; and for which much merit is due to Colonel Goddard.

94. We truſt to your candour and attentive conſideration of all circumſtances relative to this detachment, that you will not, drawing your concluſion from the event, impute error or temerity to us in undertaking the expedition before its arrival. We had beheld its ſlow progreſs, and the obſtructions it met with under Colonel Leſlie, and could foreſee the increaſed dangers and difficulties it would have to encounter in the paſſage through the Maratta dominions, which, conſidering the temper of the Durbar, might be termed a hoſtile country. We therefore judged, and we conceive with good reaſon, that by ſending our forces into the field, we ſhould facilitate the approach of Colonel Goddard. We hope it will ſtill be allowed, that this meaſure did at leaſt produce that good effect; and that by drawing off the enemy's forces to another quarter, we ſecured an unmoleſted march to the Bengal army, whoſe arrival has inſured ſafety to our poſſeſſions, and put us in a condition to act as circumſtances may render neceſſary. At the ſame time, in juſtice to Colonel Goddard, we muſt obſerve, that he made the proper uſe of the advantage given him, and by his ſingular activity, did not allow the enemy time to take meaſures for giving him any material interruption, even if ſuch had been their intention, after the convention of Worgaum.

95. If our army had been found unequal ſingle to the accompliſhment of the undertaking we had engaged in, and not ſufficiently formidable, whether with reſpect to numbers or the vigour of its operations, to give confidence to the partizans of Ragoba to declare openly in his favour, we never could entertain a doubt but that it would be able to keep the field againſt any country enemy; in which opinion, we are perſuaded, we ſhall have the ſuffrage of all perſons converſant in India ſervice; and a ſpace leſs than a month from the concluſion of their operations would have brought Colonel Goddard ſo near that the enemy muſt have divided their force, Poonah being nearly the ſame diſtance from Brampore as Surat; and a junction once effected, the expedition might have been brought to a happy iſſue.

96. It is impoſſible to ſay whether Colonel Goddard could have made his way through ſo large a tract of country adverſe to his march, had it not been for the diverſion made by our troops, who took up the whole attention of the enemy; but this being a matter not decided by experiment, we ſhall ſubmit to your judgment.

97. Had we been apprized in time that the negociation with Moodajee was to affect the operations of the Bengal detachment, or that in the intended alliance with him was comprehended a plan to ſupply the place of the one originally recommended by us, and to anſwer the ſame purpoſes; we certainly ſhould not have proſecuted our plan for the reſtoration of Ragoba, and thereby have avoided the confuſion inſeparable from a complicate ſcheme, when ſo great a diſtance lays between the parties. But we appeal to you, whether from the letters from Bengal of the 17th of Auguſt and 15th October, we had any reaſon to entertain ſuch an idea of the negociation with Moodajee? on the contrary, in the laſt of theſe letters the Governor General and Council, after they knew of the reſtraint laid on Moraba, and the members of his party, gave us reaſon to conclude, that they ſtill depended on us for the accompliſhment of thoſe grand objects we both had in view, by their giving us the controul over Colonel Goddard's detachment, whether the plan formed in July exiſted, or "whether we had formed "any other for the ſame end, conſiſtently with terms "they had preſcribed for their aſſent."

98. We never viewed the negociation with the Rajah of Berar in a light ſo intimately affecting this Preſidency, till the receipt of the letter from Bengal on the 10th January, and then it was too late for us to retract; and as we could not conceive it to be very material to the Company, whether the ſame purpoſe was effected by an alliance with Moodajee Booſla, or by a connection with Ragonath Row, we immediately urged Colonel Goddard to advance to the ſupport of our meaſures in favour of Ragoba, which he ſaw the propriety of complying with; Moodajee having made a plea therefrom to protract the intended negociation with him. With reſpect to the political ſentiments of Moodajee, Colonel Goddard obſerved, that he did not think him partial to the cauſe of Ragonaut Row, but he was convinced he was amicably inclined to the Engliſh.

99. We ſhall now proceed to a detail of our proceedings after the return of the troops from the expedition.

100. At our firſt meeting, held on the 29th January, when Meſſrs. Carnac and Egerton reſumed their ſeats, the diary of the Poonah committee was laid before us, and read through with attention; in the courſe of which Colonel Egerton made ſundry remarks, as noticed in the copy of our proceedings on that day, and in particular proteſted againſt and diſavowed the minutes of a meeting noticed in the diary to have been held by the Poonah committee on the 15th January, alledging, that to the beſt of his knowledge no meeting was held on that day. The ſeveral papers delivered in reſpecting this point are in the packet; and when the peruſal of the diary was finiſhed, the Preſident laid before us a minute, ſtating generally, that the cauſes of the failure of the expedition might be matter of future conſideration, but that no time ought to be loſt in determining on the means neceſſary for ſupporting and retrieving our affairs; for which purpoſe he meant ſoon to deſire another meeting, when he hoped to be able to propoſe ſome plan of conduct for extricating us from the difficulties of our preſent ſituation. In this minute, after giving due praiſe to the bravery and merit of our troops on the late ſervice, who he doubted not, under proper conduct, would be fully ſufficient to ſecure your poſſeſſions under this Preſidency againſt all attempts of the moſt formidable country enemy. He proceeded to ſhew the neceſſity of keeping up the gallant ſpirit of the army, which could not be done without diſtinguiſhing thoſe whoſe behaviour had done them honour, and marking the men who had been wanting in their duty, and whoſe example could not fail of corrupting our military eſtabliſhment in all its branches. He noticed the miſbehaviour of three ſubaltern officers who were to be tried by a general court martial; but obſerved he did not think an example made of them ſufficient, and that he had accordingly intimated to Colonel Egerton on his arrival, that his conduct, as well as Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn's, as officers, appeared to him ſo far impeached, that he judged it would be proper for them both to decline acting in any military character. That Colonel Egerton having thought proper to inſiſt on taking the command of the garriſon, unleſs a formal charge was delivered againſt him; the Preſident did then deliver in a formal charge againſt him, and againſt Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, for refuſing to charge themſelves with conducting the army from Worgaum to Bombay; grounding the accuſation on the written opinion ſubſcribed by Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, in which Colonel Egerton did on the ſame day declare (and again at this meeting) he entirely concurred.

101. The Preſident then giving it as his fixed opinion, that nothing could juſtify officers in their ſtation for giving in ſuch an opinion of the troops under their command but an open mutiny in the army, declared he would not conſent to their continuing in the command. That their own orders of thanks to the troops for their behaviour on the 12th, ſufficiently ſhewed how totally void of foundation the opinion was, "That our troops "would not ſtand a ſingle attack;" yet that the fatal influence and infection of ſuch opinions, when adopted and avowed by the ſuperiors in command, were well known, and would not ſuffer us to wonder if ſentiments of the like kind did gain ſome ground under ſuch a ſanction. That this however could not be admitted as an extenuation, much leſs as a juſtification of the conduct of Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, and was beſides a circumſtance ſo big with danger, that they could not be allowed to ſupport their extraordinary and unſoldier-like way of thinking, by the authority of the inferior officers. Thus circumſtanced, the Preſident obſerves he ſhould think himſelf juſtified in moving for ſuſpending both thoſe officers from the ſervice; but that they might prevent that extremity, if they choſe to decline all military duty, till their conduct, together with the reſt of the late tranſactions, had been ſtated to Bengal, and the opinion and advice of the Governor General and Council with regard to them were received. The Preſident acquainted us his intention was to be guided by the ſentiments they might expreſs as to the propriety of continuing Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn in the ſervice, or the expediency of diſmiſſing them from it.

102. If they did not chuſe to accept this propoſal, the Preſident moved, that they might both be immediately ſuſpended the ſervice.

103. It was agreed this minute ſhould lie on the table; and at our next meeting on the 1ſt of February, the Preſident acquainted us, that Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn had declined all military duty till our further orders; and he then deſired the ſenſe of the Committee might be taken, whether according to your commands, Colonel Egerton was entitled to hold his ſeat in the Select Committee, ſince he had relinquiſhed all military command?

104. It was voted by the majority and reſolved accordingly, that Colonel Egerton had no right, and was not to be conſidered as a member of the Select Committee, until he might reſume the exerciſe of his office as Commander in Chief; and he in conſequence was ſuperſeded.

105. A copy of our proceedings on that day is tranſmitted in the packet, wherein is ſtated at length the opinion of each member on the queſtion of Colonel Egerton's right to his ſeat in the Committee; and we alſo tranſmit a copy at length, of the Governor's minute, and of the correſpondence between him and Colonel Egerton, in the interval between our meetings of the 29th of January and the 1ſt of February, and of the general order given out in conſequence; which it is neceſſary to recommend to your attention, as Colonel Egerton has ſince denied his having accepted the alternative offered him by the Preſident.

106. Colonel Egerton has wrote us ſeveral letters on the ſubject, and inſiſting upon reſuming the command of the army; but we continued in our reſolution not to admit of his retracting, or of his taking the command, until he received the ſentiments of the Governor General and Council on his conduct.

107. A copy of his letters, and of our anſwers in their proper order, is tranſmitted in the packet, alſo of a proteſt he thought proper to deliver, and a minute made by the Preſident, in conſequence, with an addreſs from the Colonel to you, and a copy of his addreſs to the Governor General and Council; all of which, agreeable to our before-mentioned reſolution, we beg leave to ſubmit to your judgment.

108. Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn having delivered in a letter relative to his own conduct on the late ſervice, a copy thereof is tranſmitted in the packet with the other papers, the particulars of which will be mentioned in the ſequel.

109. The predicament in which Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn now ſtand, and the death of Lieutenant Colonel Cay, rendered it a caſe of indiſpenſable neceſſity to make ſome immediate arrangement for the command of the army; Lieutenant Colonel Nelſon, the chief engineer, as the ſenior officer on the eſtabliſhment, received the command of the garriſon, when Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn declined all military duty, and Lieutenant Colonel Dagon held the command of the artillery, but we had no field officer for the command of the infantry eſtabliſhment, in whoſe abilities or experience we had ſufficient confidence to intruſt ſo important a charge at a time like this. We had before, whilſt the army was in the field, when Colonel Egerton gave up the command to Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, been under the neceſſity of appointing Major Dagon of the artillery a Lieutenant Colonel, in order to ſecure a fit officer for the ſecond command, or to ſucceed to the chief command in caſe of accidents to Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn: our reaſons for which are fully ſtated in our proceedings of the 5th of January, a copy of which waits on you under No. 17.

110. At this time Major Emanuel Henney was the ſenior officer, and in command of the infantry; who, on his firſt appointment as a field officer, was barred from further promotion, and was the officer whom we judged it our duty to ſuperſede in the field, by the promotion of Lieutenant Colonel Dagon as above mentioned. We deemed it, therefore, in no ſhape proper to continue Major Henney in command of our infantry eſtabliſhment.

111. Major Charles Frederick was the next officer in ſtanding. He had been but lately arrived from England, and, as we underſtand, had borne a commiſſion in the guards, but had never ſeen actual ſervice before the late expedition. When you ſent him out as the youngeſt Brevet Major, we preſume you did not expect he would ſo early arrive at the ſucceſſion to an advanced rank, and a poſt of the firſt military charge: and as by an unforeſeen chain of circumſtances, it had devolved to us to make the appointment of an officer for the command of the infantry, we conſidered ourſelves as reſponſible for the choice we made, and on that principle we did not think we ſhould do juſtice to the charge repoſed in us by promoting Major Frederick.

112. However it was abſolutely neceſſary that we ſhould have an officer at the head of the infantry, on whoſe conduct we could ſafely rely, and it was at the ſame time highly incumbent on us, conſidering the ſtate of the army, to confer the moſt honourable marks of notice on thoſe officers who had particularly diſtinguiſhed themſelves on the late unfortunate expedition; both theſe conſiderations ſtrongly united in pointing out Captain James Hartley, who of all the officers on our military liſt appeared the moſt fit for this command: his behaviour in a courſe of fourteen years ſervice has been unexceptionable, and his conduct and intrepidity in the action of the 12th of January, when he commanded the rear diviſion, merited every reward in our power to beſtow, and, as far as we can judge, proved the preſervation of the whole army. His merit, and the judgment he ſhewed on that occaſion, are acknowledged in the general orders given out by Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn and Colonel Egerton immediately after the action, wherein Captain Hartley is the only officer particularly commended, except Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn himſelf.

113. Under theſe circumſtances, we reſolved to appoint Captain Hartley a Lieutenant Colonel of infantry, and we do moſt earneſtly ſolicit you to confirm this appointment, to convince the army that we ſhall meet with your ſupport when the good of the ſervice makes it requiſite that we ſhould diſtinguiſh particular officers. We are very ſorry that we have been obliged to act contrary to your orders reſpecting the promotion of field officers, but we truſt the neceſſity will plead our excuſe. On the terms we are with the Marattas, and in a time of actual war with France, it would have been highly unjuſtifiable in us to have ſuffered our military to remain for any length of time without an officer to command them, qualified either to preſerve them in proper diſcipline, or lead them into the field; and we hope that the reluctance we muſt naturally feel to all kinds of ſuperceſſion, and the complaints we foreſaw we ſhould expoſe ourſelves to from individuals, will be a conviction to you of the ground and neceſſity for the promotion of Lieutenant Colonel Hartley. Appendix. No. 130.

114. Captain John Weſtphall, the ſenior Captain of artillery, having alſo particularly diſtinguiſhed himſelf on the late ſervice, we reſolved unſolicited to appoint him a Major of artillery, to which he had a title by ſeniority; and the promotion of Lieutenant Colonel Dagon was a reward due to his ability and merit.

115. We alſo conferred marks of our attention on Captain Bellas, of the artillery, Captain Cadger, of the infantry, and Lieutenants Dawſon, Bowles, Jackſon, Thomas, Waddington, Bannatyne, Macpherſon, and Burchall, and the ſix companies of grenadier Sepoys, who compoſed the rear diviſion under Captain Hartley; the particulars of all which are mentioned in the copy of our minutes under the 1ſt ultimo, tranſmitted under No. 17.

116. Lieutenant John Rattray of the Bengal eſtabliſhment, who arrived from England in the Royal Henry, and went a volunteer on the expedition, where he gave ſtrong proofs of his ſkill and conduct as an officer, we returned him our public thanks for his ſervices; and as we were glad of the opportunity of adding ſuch a valuable officer to our eſtabliſhment, we offered him a commiſſion as youngeſt Captain, which we doubt not you will approve.

117. As in India ſervice in general, and particularly in our ſmall army, the charge and reſponſibility of each Captain is very great, and the moſt dangerous conſequences may ariſe from improper perſons being promoted to that rank, we judged it for the good of the ſervice to make it a rule, and ſignified accordingly to the army, that the Lieutenants will not in future be promoted in rotation to the rank of Captains, either in the infantry or artillery, unleſs they ſhall be judged fully qualified for that ſtation.

118. Agreeable to this rule, we have ſet aſide Captain John Holebrook from the command of a company of artillery, to which he was next in ſucceſſion; the Commandant of the corps having repreſented him ſo much addicted to liquor, as to be unfit for that charge. Lieutenant Coldbatch of the infantry, and Lieutenant Layton of the artillery, have alſo been paſſed over in a late promotion; but we ſhall re-conſider the caſe of the latter, if we diſcover proper ſigns of amendment.

119. We have received repreſentations on the ſubject from ſeveral of the officers who were ſuperſeded by the promotion of Lieutenant Colonel Hartley: and Major Frederick has reſigned his commiſſion, and ſet out for England by the way of Suez. In his letter he aſſumes to himſelf the chief part of the merit attributed to Captain Hartley, in the action of the 12th; and we therefore think it neceſſary to mention, that although Major Frederick was ſent to reinforce Captain Hartley, he has made a great miſtake in reſpect to the time when he was ſent, which is confirmed by the evidence of Captain Rattray and other circumſtances; it muſt be obſerved, though not taken notice of by Major Frederick, but which is confirmed by Captain Rattray, and in part allowed by Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn himſelf in his letter to us, that when Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn ſent him down to ſupport the rear diviſion, he was ordered, though the ſuperior officer, to act in concert with Captain Hartley, and not to make any movement without his advice. This is a very particular circumſtance, and ſtrongly expreſſive of the commanding officer's confidence in Captain Hartley, to which we may add the general orders given out at the time, when no other impreſſion prevailed but the ſenſe of Captain Hartley's diſtinguiſhed ſervices. In theſe orders not a word is mentioned of Major Frederick; but ſince the promotion of Lieutenant Colonel Hartley we have received commendations of Major Frederick.

120. In the packet we ſend copies of the letters we have received received from Majors Frederick and Hopkins, and Captains Jackson, Fewtrell, Campbell, and Turner, and of our anſwers. The laſt-mentioned officer is in the engineer corps, and is not ſuperſeded by Colonel Hartley, but thought himſelf reflected on in the general orders. This point we cleared up and did him juſtice.

121. It is a plea much inſiſted upon by our officers, that if we have any fault to find with their conduct, and think it neceſſary to ſuperſede them, they ought to have a trial by a general court martial. To this we anſwer, that many officers may paſs through the ſervice without laying themſelves open to the military law, and yet may be very unqualified to riſe to the higheſt ſtations in their line. The times required an officer who had ſomething more to plead than merely not having committed a fault: we wanted an officer of active and approved merit, and on whoſe ability and conduct we could depend for the execution of any ſervice committed to him.

122. It is ſcarce poſſible to give you an adequate idea of the deficiency of our military eſtabliſhment in point of officers. In the artillery and engineer corps indeed we are ſo fortunate as to have a number of well-formed, active, deſerving officers; but in the infantry we ſee a very ſmall proportion of our long liſt of Captains, from whom we can flatter ourſelves with any extraordinary expectations, in caſe of their ever riſing to a ſuperior command, and even of this ſmall number we muſt look for the greater part amongſt the junior Captains. You will ſee on reference to the correſpondence between the Preſident and Mr. Carnac during the late ſervice, and by the Preſident's letter to Colonel Cockburn upon his taking the command, how much was thought to depend on the abilities of Captain Hartley and Captain Stewart, and how eſſential a point to fix them in Colonel Cockburn's particular confidence. The very ſtrong, natural, and acquired qualifications of Captain Stewart as an officer, had giving us the moſt flattering hopes of ſeeing him in the liſt of thoſe names that have done the greateſt honour to your military ſervice, and his loſs is one of thoſe circumſtances which in our preſent ſituation we moſt ſenſibly feel. The unhappy termination of the expedition, on which he was cut off, together with the general opinion entertained of the different ſucceſs that would have attended our army had Captain Stewart's rank been ſuch as to have enabled us to have given him the command, are circumſtances that juſtly augment our regret.

123. Captain Hartley's merits cannot be ſeen in a more favourable point of view than in the choice that was made of him to ſucceed Captain Stewart in the command of the advanced diviſion of the army, and his conduct in that charge was in every inſtance ſuch as did him honour, and will we hope juſtify the diſtinction to which we have thought it entitled him. On the day of the 12th there is reaſon to think, that had his ſpirited and judicious counſels been followed, of moving up the line to ſupport him, inſtead of his retreating to the line, the fortune of that day might have been ſuch as to have ſecured our honour, if not our ſucceſs; and as it was, his keeping his ground with his diviſion till his repreſentation of the inevitable bad conſequences of ſuch a meaſure induced Colonel Cockburn to revoke his orders for retreating, was probably the chief circumſtance to which the preſervation of our divided forces was due.

124. Many particulars will appear in the papers to which we have referred in this letter, to ſupport and confirm the opinion we have given with regard to the merit of Captain Hartley, and to juſtify our motives in advancing him to his preſent rank. Yet we are ſenſible we muſt ſtill truſt much to your favourable interpretation of our conduct, and to your confidence in the motives by which we were governed in taking this ſtep.

125. At a time when the two chief officers on our eſtabliſhment are under cenſure for a conduct totally oppoſite to that we think ourſelves bound to promote, and to that ſpirit which it is our duty to encourage among your troops; when ſo great a number of perſons find an intereſt in maintaining, by any means, the claim of ſeniority to promotion, in preference to diſtinguiſhed merit and ſervices; it is impoſſible for us to produce thoſe general and deciſive teſtimonies of our aſſertions and opinions which we always wiſh ſhould accompany. There is a tenderneſs due to moderate talents and exertions of perſons of ordinary merit, which does not allow us even to point out to themſelves, the inſtances in which we judge them deficient, or in which we think their junior far ſurpaſſes them. Our anſwers therefore to the ſeveral complaints of ſuperceſſion have been of a general kind; but we would not therefore have you to ſuppoſe that we have not particular reaſons, founded on the perſonal knowledge of characters, for preferring Captain Hartley to every one of thoſe gentlemen. It would be to no purpoſe to enter into them here, ſince however minute we might be, the whole weight of what we might urge would depend on the authority you might be willing to allow to our capacity and integrity in forming our judgments of the men, and in the faithful communication of our real ſentiments; we will therefore only beg leave to remind you, that in the preſent critical circumſtances our own intereſt is too much complicated with that of the public to ſuffer us to be ſwayed by motives of partial or private regard. The opportunities we likewiſe have of acquiring an intimate knowledge of the characters of your ſervants, we hope will entitle our opinions of them to ſome conſideration; and we will only obſerve further, that the abilities, integrity, temper, and the general eſtimation each perſon ſtands in in his reſpective branch of ſervice, are commonly well underſtood on the ſpot, and that while we are conſcious of being guided by ſuch qualities, we feel that we have paid that attention to your intereſt which our duty exacts from us, and ſhall rely on that ſupport from you which the performance of it requires, and warrants us to hope for.

126. There are two circumſtances which in this place we cannot paſs over, both as they are material for your information, and are inſtances of the neceſſity of the meaſure we have adopted in the military line, and of the occaſion we have for your ſupport and confidence. The firſt relates to the ſeveral complaints of the perſons ſuperſeded by Colonel Hartley's promotion; the ſecond to the caſe of Major Frederick, who would have it thought that he was particularly injured by it.

127. You will ſee by Colonel Cockburn's letter to us of the 16th February, in what manner he endeavours to exculpate himſelf, and juſtify that written opinion of his, on which the Governor has formed his charge againſt him, in his minute of the 29th January. This you will find he attempts, by referring to the reports of deſertion amongſt the Sepoys, and panic amongſt the Europeans, brought to him by ſeveral unnamed officers; and we have reaſon to think that much of this ſpirit had ſpread through the army; and it is no ſmall occaſion of the diſſatisfaction we expreſs at the conduct of Colonel Cockburn, that he does not ſeem to have at all exerted himſelf to repreſs that deſpondency, or to revive and ſupport the ſpirits and courage of his troops. Had he ſhewn the firmneſs, vigour, and example ſo eſſentially requiſite in a commander on ſuch an emergency, we have no reaſon to ſuppoſe but that a retreat might have been effected; for neither the loſs on our ſide in the action of the 12th, nor any advantage gained by the enemy on that day, were ſuch as can be termed deciſive. At any rate, the trial ſhould have been made, and a few marches would have put it out of the power of the enemy materially to annoy them.

128. The bad conſequences of a contrary conduct have been too ſeverely felt in their effect to need further deſcription; but we are aſſured that Captain Hartley, in that trying ſituation, notwithſtanding the contagion of bad example, diſtinguiſhed himſelf more honourably, becauſe in a manner more uncommon, than he had before done in action. He inſiſted he could depend on the men he had commanded; and ſome deſertion having appeared in his own battalion, from which he had been removed to command the advanced diviſion of the army, he joined that diviſion to his battalion, whilſt the army remained at Worgaum, and at once put a ſtop to the evil, ſo far as the limits of his command extended. When he was conſulted on the occaſion, he urged every argument to attempt the forcing a retreat, rather than ſubmit to the humiliating terms preſcribed by the enemy; he even formed a diſpoſition, and preſented it to Colonel Cockburn, for conducting the retreat, and avoiding the inconveniencies reſulting from a night march, and the diviſion of the troops. Theſe are circumſtances we have every reaſon to believe; and yet you will plainly perceive, that in the preſent ſituation of affairs, we cannot expect to have them vouched for by thoſe from whom any formal teſtimony could with moſt propriety have been received; and indeed they imply a compariſon ſo unfavourable for the generality of our officers, that prudence requires us in ſome degree not to promulgate them.

129. With regard to Major Frederick, we muſt take the liberty, in addition to what we have already ſaid of his military talents, to advance, that we conſider his reſignation, not only in that, but in every other reſpect, as a very fortunate event for the ſervice. He came out recommended very powerfully, and the reſpect entertained for the friends who had intereſted themſelves in his favour, ſecured him every attention that could be ſhewn him; but we are ſorry to ſay, that he has waſted and exhauſted the good offices of his friends, in ſcreening him from the bad conſequences to which the violence of his temper, and other qualities, muſt have ſubjected him; ſo that there is hardly a magiſtrate in the place who has not in turn had cognizance of his exceſſes. The idea of his intereſt in England being uſeful to thoſe who now make a common cauſe with him in the complaint of ſuperceſſion, has ſince the promotion of Lieutenant Colonel Hartley united more perſons to him than before; and we believe he is now gone to England as a general ſolicitor for the ſuperceded officers. But our opinion of Major Frederick was ſo little in his favour, that when his pretenſions in the ſervice became ſuch as could not be allowed, without ſacrificing the intereſts of the Company and of the ſettlement, we ſhould have thought ourſelves highly culpable had we not rejected them.—We have, notwithſtanding, in our reply to his letters, confined ourſelves to thoſe general anſwers, which we apprehend are fully ſufficient in the public line of buſineſs; but to you, to whom we owe a more circumſtantial explanation of our conduct, and ſuch information as may ſerve to guard you againſt miſapprehenſions and miſrepreſentations, we find it neceſſary to open ourſelves without reſerve, even on the tender point of perſonal character; a ſubject which, if poſſible we ſhould avoid, but cannot in this caſe, without making ourſelves anſwerable for the errors into which you might be naturally led by the ſpecious and bold plea of irreproachable ſervice, unleſs furniſhed by us with a knowledge of circumſtances and character, which have been the ground of our proceedings, and will, we truſt, influence yours. This communication we think at leaſt our duty, and ſuch a taſk as we can expect no perſon to take on himſelf, who is not called on by the ſame principle; and therefore, however neceſſary, it muſt have been left undone, unleſs performed by us.

130. From the above repreſentation, we truſt you will be convinced of what importance it is, and what diſagreeable meaſures it will relieve us from, that the gentlemen ſent out for field officers, ſhould be officers of ſervice and experience, and of known merit and character; and we make it our earneſt requeſt that you will attend to thoſe qualifications, in any you may think proper to ſend to Bombay in future.

131. On the promotion of Lieutenant Colonel Dagon, a doubt occurred to us, whether, according to the tenor of your orders, we are abſolutely prohibited from promoting a field officer from one degree to another, when there is an actual vacancy, and the firſt appointment has been approved and confirmed by you; both of which were the caſe with reſpect to Lieutenant Colonel Dagon. We requeſt an explanation of your intentions, to ſerve us for a guide in future. Appendix. No. 130.

132. At our meeting on the firſt February, it was agreed to diſpatch a veſſel to Bengal, with copies of all neceſſary papers, and a full account of the late tranſactions and our preſent ſituation, and that in the mean time a ſhort addreſs ſhould be diſpatched over land, to adviſe the Governor General and Council, in abſtract, of the unfortunate iſſue of the expedition, and to requeſt them to ſuſpend their judgment and determination till the promiſed detail was laid before them. A letter on that plan was accordingly diſpatched, ſubſcribed by the preſent members of the Committee: But Mr. Draper having, at our next meeting, expreſſed his diſſent and diſapprobation of that letter, and of one of the ſame date to Colonel Goddard, terming them partial and fallacious; this proceeding drew minutes from the Preſident and Mr. Carnac, and replies from Mr. Draper; all of which, with the letters objected to, are collected in one paper, and tranſmitted under N° 18.

133. Shortly after the return of the army, a Vackeel from the Poonah Durbar, and a ſeparate Vackeel on the part of Madajee Scindia, demanded in form the poſſeſſion of the ſeveral places ſtipulated to be ſurrendered by the agreement at Worgaum. The anſwer we reſolved to give them, was in effect as follows:—That Meſſrs. Carnac and Egerton had no authority whatever to form any treaty or engagement binding on the Honourable Company, which their Principals were given clearly to underſtand before the paper upon which they ground their demands was ſubſcribed by thoſe gentlemen, and that we likewiſe had no authority to take any ſteps in conſequence until we received the ſentiments of the Governor General and Council, to whom we ſhould diſpatch a veſſel expreſs with a full account of the whole tranſaction, and wait their determination.

134. The Preſident was deſired in the delivery of this anſwer, to make uſe of ſuch terms as would leave an opening for further negociation or overtures from Madajee Scindia; which we ſurmiſed from ſome part of his conduct might be expected, and that he had even views to a connection with us upon principles of mutual intereſt.

135. According to the intimation given us by the Preſident in his minute of the 29th of January, of his intention of ſhortly propoſing ſome Plan of conduct for extricating us from our preſent difficulties, he on the 19th ultimo laid before us a minute of review of Maratta affairs, and containing ſundry reſolutions propoſed by him in conſequence. A copy thereof is tranſmitted in the packet, with the remarks made by Mr. Draper and our deciſions on the propoſal, and will exhibit ſo extenſive a view of our political ſituation as leaves us little to add on the ſubject. He therein ſtrongly ſet before us the great probability that Nanab's determination on our anſwer to the demand made by the Durbar for the ſurrender of our poſſeſſions, would be hoſtile to us, if he could prevail on the Chiefs who had acted with him againſt Ragoba to ſupport him in a war againſt us; that we had therefore no time to loſe in guarding againſt ſuch an union, and that it would be expected from us, that we ſhould exert ourſelves in extricating our affairs from their preſent embarraſſment according to the powers already given us by the Governor General and Council, and not ſupinely to throw on them difficulties which it was our duty to meet, and if poſſible to overcome. The ſeveral meaſures propoſed for this purpoſe will appear by the reſolutions; and after full conſideration of the advantages of a connection with Madjee Scindia, and the grounds we had to hope that overtures

tures from us would be well received, determined to take the ſtep recommended by the Preſident for putting his diſpoſition in our favour, to the teſt, by writing to him in terms mentioned in his minute. But we are ſorry to add, he does not ſeem to meet our advances in the manner we hoped for. Whether it may be his idea, that he ſhall find his advantage in keeping us in our preſent ſituation, and that we cannot extricate ourſelves without his aſſiſtance, or whether he may think himſelf able to effect his own purpoſes at Poonah without our aid, we cannot determine; but, however, we ſtill think it will be good policy to obſerve ſuch a conduct towards him as if we did not conſider him connected with Nannah in any deſigns againſt the Engliſh, and as having ſeparate and diſtinct views; which appears to be really the caſe; and we hope we ſhall derive advantage from his conduct in any meaſures we may find it neceſſary to purſue at the Poonah Durbar.

136. The Reſident at Fort Victoria having ſent intelligence that the Marattas at Sevendroog were making preparations for the attack of that fort, and requeſted a reinforcement, we ſent down a company of Sepoys in a bomb ketch, and in the interim, on the 13th inſtant, an attack was made, the particulars of which we are not yet acquainted with, the Reſident's letter having been intercepted; but in a ſubſequent letter referring thereto, he deſired the reinforcement might be ſent without a moment's delay.

137 We had before received ſeveral letters from the Durbar, demanding a compliance with the terms of the convention of Wirgaum, and complaining of the reference to Bengal; and we had alſo received intelligence of an attack being intended againſt Salſette and Caranja at the ſame time; but we conclude the meaſures immediately taken for the ſecurity of thoſe iſlands, prevented the Marattas from making any attempts in that quarter. But by this open act of hoſtility committed at Fort Victoria, it appeared the Durbar were reſolved not to keep terms with us; and we therefore reſolved, on the 19th inſtant, to meet on ſome early day, that after due conſideration we might determine what conduct to purſue with the Marattas, and in what manner to diſpoſe of the Bengal detachment, and to provide funds for its ſupport, as well as our other charges; an eſtimate of which, and of our reſources, we directed to be laid before us, and in the mean time we deſired the Preſident to write a ſuitable letter to the Durbar on this open act of hoſtility.

138. We ſhall communicate the reſult of our deliberations on this important ſubject, and the meaſures we ſhall fix upon, in the moſt expeditious manner we can; but as the ſeaſon draws late, we cannot detain this veſſel any longer without defeating the intent of her diſpatches, and hazarding her ſpeedy arrival in England.

139. That we might obtain a full account of the ſtate and objects of the negociation with Moodajee Bouncello, and alſo of the condition and wants of the Bengal detachment, we deſired Colonel Goddard to come down to Bombay to give us information on theſe particulars; and alſo that we might have the benefit of his advice in our proceedings at this criſis. By a return he preſented on his arrival, we find his force conſiſts of upwards of 4,000 Sepoys rank and file; about 300 horſe, being part of a regiment of your cavalry; 500 of the Vizier's cavalry, which accompanied him on the march; and a company of native artillery, with proper eſtabliſhments of Laſcars, artificers, and labourers, attached to the artillery and other branches of the army.

140. As the expence of this detachment on its preſent footing muſt be very conſiderable, we thought proper to conſult Colonel Goddard on that head; and whether it might not be poſſible to make ſome conſiderable reduction therein; and upon his meeting us in Committee for that purpoſe, he acquainted us that the monthly iſſues for his detachment amounted to two lacks and ten or twenty thouſand rupees; and that this ſum might be reduced ſo far as twenty-five or thirty thouſand rupees a month, by ſending back the cavalry, and cutting off ſome of the eſtabliſhment for the ſtaff: but ſubmitted to us how far any meaſure of that kind might be proper, in caſe we had any near proſpect of employment for the troops, and eſpecially how far it might be prudent to part with the cavalry, whoſe ſervices would be of the utmoſt importance in caſe of any operations againſt a country power, which he obſerved we muſt be ſenſible of from the great difficulties our army lately experienced from the want of ſuch aſſiſtance.

141. He informed us, that he had authority from the Governor General and Council, to draw on them for the expences of the army, and ſeemed to think that for ſome time at leaſt he might be able to ſupply his wants without aſſiſtance from us, by means of the Surat Shroffs; but this does not appear to us a reſource on which he can long depend.

142. He gave us an account of the ſtate in which he left his negociation with the Rajah of Berar, which appears to be ſtill in a train; and as we had a few days before received from the Governor General and Council a copy of their inſtructions to the late Mr. Elliot, dated the 18th July, we are now poſſeſſed of full information with reſpect to their views and deſigns in the propoſed alliance with that Chief, which will be a grand advantage to us in our councils, and enable us to frame our meaſures correſpondent with their plan of politics; an advantage we regret was not ſooner given to us. We preſume you muſt long ago have received Mr. Elliot's inſtructions; but we now tranſmit in the packet a copy of Colonel Goddard's letter above-mentioned.

143. Colonel Goddard has had the materials put into his hands to inform him fully of the late tranſactions; and as we ſhall entruſt to him the execution of whatever meaſures may be adopted, we deſired him to attend at our future meetings, in order that he might obtain a proper inſight into our political proceedings.

144. We ſhall conclude our letter with ſome general matters of detail not immediately connected with our proceedings above related.

145. Upon the firſt notice of an approaching war with France, which was received in June laſt, orders were given for our fortifications being carried on with all poſſible vigour; and we have the pleaſure to inform you, that our works towards the ſea are in great forwardneſs. The Royal Admiral, now under diſpatch, the plans and eſtimates ordered by the Honourable Court in their commands of the 19th March, will be tranſmitted, and a full reply ſent thereto by the Governor and Council.

146. Conſidering the importance of Tellicherry, and its vicinity to Mahee, we thought it highly incumbent on us to take meaſures for its ſecurity, and accordingly permitted of ſome ſmall additions to the fortifications, and formed an independent corps, conſiſting of three companies of regular Sepoys drafted from the other battalions, to compoſe the garriſon. The drafts were replaced by the recruits, ſo that by this plan our own force was not diminiſhed; and we gave ſtrict orders to the factors of Tellicherry to attend only to the defence of their own ſettlement, and not to engage in offenſive operations.

147. Colonel Egerton having frequently preſſed this Government to make trial of a corps of native Portugueze infantry, with their own officers, on the footing of a Sepoy battalion, and urging our great deficiency in Europeans, we, on 15th Auguſt, conſented to raiſe a ſmall body, conſiſting of 400 privates, to be divided into five companies, with Portugueze officers anſwerable to the black officers of the Sepoys, an European commiſſioned officer to each company, and the whole to be commanded by one European Captain. If it is poſſible to make good ſoldiers of theſe people, this plan gives them all poſſible encouragement, which they never received before; and this poſſibly may be the reaſon why they they have not hitherto been in much repute; and it was upon that principle Mr. Carnac gave his aſſent to the meaſure. In our proceedings, which will be ſent home by the Royal Admiral, you will find under the above date the particulars of the eſtabliſhment of this corps; which, however, we may perhaps find it neceſſary to retain, when our European battalions are completed, even if it ſhould be found to anſwer the expectations formed from it, which we begin to doubt 148. A general return of the troops on this eſtabliſhment is forwarded under No. 43.

149. Agreeable to your directions, a ſheer hulk has been fitted up for the uſe of his Majeſty's ſhips; and under No. 39 we tranſmit copy of a report from the committee appointed to ſurvey our docks, and of the liſt therein referred to, the purport of which was mentioned in our addreſs of the 29th of December.

150. We have not come to any determination on the propoſal for building additional docks, capable of admitting 74 gun ſhips.

151. In our addreſs of the 29th of December, we adviſed of our having taken poſſeſſion of the French factory at Surat, and ſeized the perſons of the Conſul, and of every other Frenchman in that city. This ſtep, we doubt not, from your commands of the 31ſt Auguſt, will be approved; and we removed all the French gentlemen to Bombay, except the Conſul and his family, whom we permitted to remain at Surat upon his parole. Amongſt the priſoners removed to Bombay was a prieſt, who ſome time after his arrival ſent to inform the Preſident that he had intelligence of an important nature to communicate; and being accordingly examined, gave information, and which was confirmed by another of the priſoners, that a plan had been concerted between Monſieur Briancourt, the French Conſul, and Monſieur St. Lubin, for bringing down a body of Maratta troops to ſeize and plunder the city of Surat, whilſt our troops were employed on the expedition: in which ſcheme they had engaged ſome of the Nabob's officers. A copy of the narrative of what was declared by the prieſt and the other priſoner Monſieur Charleval, now wait on you under No. 40; and the Preſident preſerving the moſt profound ſecrecy, immediately ſent up the latter to Surat, in hopes of his being able to find the box of papers mentioned in the narrative, which contained the particulars of the conſpiracy. He, however, did not ſucceed, and no farther diſcovery has yet been made, though we have offered a reward of ten thouſand rupees, and directed Mr. Boddam to trace this matter with all poſſible diligence; but as it appeared very improper under ſuch a ſuſpicion to permit the Conſul to remain any longer at Surat, we have removed him with his family to the Fort at Tannah, where we propoſe to keep them till they are ſent to Europe.

152. In our diary, which will be ſent by the Royal Admiral, is entered under the 18th Auguſt a letter we received from Sir Edward Vernon, in anſwer to our requiſition for his bringing round the ſquadron to Bombay by the ſouthern paſſage, which we mentioned in our addreſs of the 31ſt July: and under the 8th September you will find our reply to the reaſons urged by the Commodore in ſupport of his reſolution for remaining on the coaſt; and circumſtanced as affairs then were, we flatter ourſelves you will think our reaſoning well founded. We alſo, upon an application from the merchants of the place, made a requeſt to Sir Edward Vernon to ſend a convoy into the Straits of Malacca, to ſecure the returning ſhips from China; which the ſtrength of his ſquadron would not admit of his complying with; but the Governor General and Council diſpatched your ſhip the Reſolution on that ſervice, and ſhe has ſince arrived on this coaſt with ſome of the China ſhips, and is now under the orders of Sir Edward Vernon, on the expedition againſt Mahé.

153. We have long thought it would be for your intereſt to have a Reſident at the Durbar of Hyder Ally, to endeavour to counteract and penetrate into the ſchemes of the French, and to bring him into a diſpoſition more favourable to the Honourable Company; and in the beginning of May laſt we propoſed this meaſure to the Governor General and Council, who ſeemed to have ſome doubts how far it might be agreeable to the Nabob of Arcot, and accordingly wrote to the Preſident and Council of Madras, deſiring them to acquaint us with the Nabob's ſentiments on the ſubject, leaving us nevertheleſs in a great meaſure to act in this point according to our own judgment. Not hearing from the gentlemen at Madras for a conſiderable time, we on the 4th November, upon receipt of advices from the Reſident at Tellicherry, of ſome particular inſtances of the Nabob's attention to the French, in affording liberal ſupplies of proviſions, and even money, to their ſettlement at Mahé, and exciting ſome of the petty Rajahs dependent on him to aſſiſt them with their forces, we came to the reſolution of deputing Mr. James Sibbald to his Durbar, to make the proper remonſtrances on that head, and to endeavour to detach him from the French intereſt; judging that the reduction of Pondicherry, which we daily expected to be informed of, would be a favourable opportunity for effecting our point. Being afterwards informed that the Nabob had given the Governor of Mahé permiſſion to hoiſt his colours in caſe of the place being attacked by the Engliſh, and that he intended ſending his fleet with ſupplies of grain to the French iſlands, we have judged it beſt, as theſe will be ſuch decided inſtances of his attachment to them, not to diſpatch Mr. Sibbald till we are at a certainty with reſpect to the part the Nabob will take when Mahé is attacked, which we hope you will approve; and we took care to give notice to the Preſidency of Madras and Sir Edward Vernon, of the intelligence we had received of the Nabob's intentions, that they might be prepared to regulate their conduct accordingly, in caſe the Nabob ſhould openly aſſiſt the French.

154. We have actual advice that a veſſel of the Nabob's, formerly the Salamander bomb ketch, ſailed for Mauritius the 16th ultimo, with ſome French gentlemen, and a few articles of merchandize, and 40,000 pagodas in money.

155. On the 18th December we received a letter from the Select Committee at Madras, dated the 8th November, acquainting us that they deemed it ſo important to acquire poſſeſſion of Mahé before the arrival of any French armament from Europe or Mauritius, that they then wrote purpoſely to concert with us the neceſſary meaſures for the attainment of that object; and they deſired to know what aſſiſtance we could afford in troops or ſtores; acquainting us likewiſe, that as their loſs before Pondicherry in Europeans, and particularly in the artillery corps, had weakened them very conſiderably, any aſſiſtance we could give in theſe would be very acceptable, and that if we could ſupply any part of the heavy cannon, mortar, and ſtores, it would be a great relief to them.

156. They alſo deſired us to take the neceſſary meaſures for ſecuring proviſions for the troops, and engaging in our intereſt the country powers adjoining to Mahé, and ſignified their intention that the troops ſhould leave Madras in December, if nothing ſhould happen to preſent it.

157. We did not loſe a moment in acquainting the gentlemen at Madras that we ſhould immediately ſend down to Tellicherry a train of battering cannon and mortars, with all their apparatus and appurtenances complete, ſpare carriages, and a proper quantity of ſhot, ſhells, and gunpowder; which we accordingly diſpatched the 25th of December in the Revenge and Bombay Grab; and at the ſame time ſent the neceſſary orders to your ſervants at Tellicherry on the other points, and alſo the Reſident at Anjengo, to take all neceſſary meaſures for facilitating the tranſportation of the troops from thence to Tellicherry, if the ſquadron under Sir from Edward Vernon, which we learnt was to come round, ſhould not be found ſufficient.

158. Our troops were at that time in the field with Ragoba, and it was not in our power to promiſe to ſpare a man for the ſiege of Mahé.

159. Whilſt we were anxiouſly expecting to hear of the arrival of the Madras troops on the coaſt, we received on the 11th February another letter from the Committee at Madras, dated the 7th January, acquainting us of their troops having marched, but that it was out of their power, (even had they conveyances) to ſend more than half of the ſtores neceſſary for the expedition, ſo great had been their iſſues for the ſiege of Pondicherry, they therefore ſent us a liſt of the ſtores they could not furniſh, and requeſted we would immediately diſpatch them to Tellicherry, as the expedition could not otherwiſe go on. Though the demand made upon us was very heavy, we inſtantly reſolved to comply with it, and being unprovided with any other conveyance, we made application to the Commander of his Majeſty's ſhip Aſia, then under orders to join the Commodore, to receive them on board, which he readily agreed to, and arrived with them at Tellicherry the 2d of this month.

160. The force deſtined for this ſervice conſiſts of under the command of Colonel Braithwaite; who is inſtructed, in caſe of ſucceſs againſt Mahé, to avoid if poſſible entering into any agreement for preſerving the fortifications.

161. Sir Edward Vernon, with the Rippon and Sartine, arrived at Tellicherry the 9th of February, having left at Anjengo the Seahorſe and Coventry with your ſhips the Revenge, Bombay Grab, Royal Charlotte, and Reſolution, and the Ravenſworth country ſhip taken up at Anjengo for that purpoſe, to tranſport the troops from thence to Tellicherry. He acquainted us he ſhould endeavour to prevent any reinforcement being thrown into Mahé, and give every aſſiſtance in his power towards the reduction of that fortreſs; after the performance of which ſervice, he ſhould proceed to Bombay to clean and refit the ſquadron. In the mean time he deſired we would afford all poſſible aſſiſtance in refitting the Aſia and Sartine, by which we conclude he had revoked his orders for the Aſia's joining him; and the Sartine arrived here the 18th inſtant, and will ſhortly come into dock.

162. By our lateſt advices from Tellicherry, dated 9th inſtant, we learn that two of the battalions of Sepoys were arrived there with Major Kelly, who acts as principal Engineer; and that the remainder of the forces with Colonel Braithwaite, were expected to arrive at Anjengo, in the month of February. As the ſeaſon begins to grow late, it will give us great pleaſure to hear of their having commenced their operations.

163. The Kings of Cotidee and Cartinaddee, and the Samorine, are now in arms to recover their dominions, of which they were diſpoſſeſſed by the Nabob Hyder Ally, and have made conſiderable progreſs. It was thought the latter will ſoon be in poſſeſſion of Callicut, having already expelled the Nabob's people from ſeveral of his forts. They have made offers of granting to the Honourable Company any privileges of trade in their different countries, provided we will take them under our protection, or aſſiſt them with ammunition. The Samorine's Miniſter informed Mr. Church, that his Maſter had been ſecretly ſupplied with powder and balls by the Dutch, who have been for ſome time in a ſtate of hoſtility with the Nabob; but he hoped the Company would in future ſupply him, as being his old ally, and whoſe friendſhip he ſhould prefer to that of the Dutch.

164. The King of Cotidee has promiſed to give the pepper of his country to the Company as formerly, which, whilſt it was in the hands of the Princes of Chinka, to whom the Nabob had made it over, was given to the French.

165. Theſe inſurrections will be very favourable to the operations againſt Mahé, and we hope put it out of the power of the Prince of Cherika to impede them, for which purpoſe we underſtand he had aſſembled a conſiderable number of men by the Nabob's order. A party of his people had ſtopped a party from the poſt at Mount Dilly, who were making faſcines for the ſiege, and fired upon them; but upon the poſt being reinforced, the Prince's people retired.

166. The Prince of Cherika had juſt before ſent to acquaint the Reſident, that he was well diſpoſed to be upon the beſt terms with the Honourable Company, but that being tributary to Hyder Ally was under the neceſſity of obeying his orders, and that in conſequence thereof he was then at Chinibra, to give every aſſiſtance to the French whenever our army ſhould proceed to the attack of Mahé. That he wiſhed the Company to defer the attack till they heard the reſult of a negociation then on foot between Hyder and the gentlemen at Madras, to whom Hyder had promiſed a neutrality between the French and Engliſh in India, to be guaranteed by him; and that in caſe the negociation failed, Hyder was determined to fall upon the Carnatic, and at the ſame time to ſend effectual ſupport to Mahé. The Reſident returned a ſuitable anſwer to this meſſage, but we cannot take upon ourſelves to ſay whether there is any foundation for the Prince's aſſertion of a negociation being on the carpet between Hyder and the gentlemen at Madras, not having heard a ſyllable from them on the ſubject.

167. In the beginning of laſt month we were informed by the Chief of Surat, that the famous Vizier Ghaziáy Cawn, had been diſcovered in the diſguiſe of a Fakier, near that city, and had been ſecured by the Nabob. He had reſided at a moſque, and ſaid he intended proceeding on a pilgrimage to Mecca. This perſon is the ſon of Gazie ul Dien, eldeſt ſon of Nizam ul Mulk, formerly Subah of the Decan, and at an early age was made Buxey to the Emperor Ahmed Shaw, in the year 1751. He afterwards became remarkable by his abilities and crimes, and the murder of one Mogul Emperor, and depriving another of his ſight; after which he fled to the Jauts, in the year 1761, and has ever ſince been wandering from one power to another, as he could find ſecurity.

168. When we firſt received this intelligence we were of opinion, that as ſo diſtinguiſhed a perſon had been thus thrown within our power, it was proper to detain him until we could receive inſtructions from the Governor General and Council, whom we apprized of this event; and that, as he could not be entirely ſafe at Surat, and as his remaining there would be attended with other inconvenience, we thought Bombay would be a more eligible place for his reſidence; with which both he and the Nabob afterwards expreſſed their ſatisfaction, and he accordingly arrived here the 5th inſtant.

169. Whilſt the Vizier remained at Surat we received a letter from him, containing very ſplendid accounts of the powerful aſſiſtance he had intended bringing to Ragobah's cauſe, by his connections with different Rajahs, and the moſt profuſe expreſſions of regard to the Engliſh. In the concluſion, he acquainted us his intentions were to go to Mecca, but having no neceſſaries for that expedition, he deſired we would conduct him thither.

170. On making enquiry from Colonel Goddard reſpecting this perſon, we learn he had ſome time ago been in the Bengal provinces, and that the Government had not thought it material to detain him; therefore, as he was very earneſt to be permitted to proceed on his pilgrimage, and his reſidence here would be attended with conſiderable expence, we did not judge, from Colonel Goddard's information, that it would anſwer any adequate purpoſe to detain him here, contrary to his conſent; conſent; and we reflected likewiſe, that if the Governor General and Council choſe to have him ſent round to Bengal, he would probably return from Mecca ſufficiently early for that voyage the following ſeaſon: we therefore ſent him up again to Surat in one of your cruizers, to take paſſage from thence in a country ſhip bound to Juddah; which we hope will be approved.

171. Mr. William Lewis, late aſſiſtant to the Reſident at the Durbar, having acquitted himſelf with great merit, and very much to our ſatisfaction, in remaining at Poonah to the very laſt moment, with apparent danger to his perſon, till our forces were actually embarked, and we had ordered him to retire, by which we had the advantage of the lateſt intelligence of the proceedings of the Miniſters; and Mr. Moſtyn having likewiſe warmly recommended him for his diligence and attention in the diſcharge of his duty; we reſolved, on the 3d December, as a mark of our particular approbation, to augment his ſalary to R' 500 per month; but as our intentions in his favour have been defeated by the unhappy iſſue of the expedition, we think it a juſtice due to Mr. Lewis to give this teſtimony to you of the ſatisfaction received from his behaviour.

172. Since the arrival of Colonel Goddard, Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn has made application to us to have a General Court Martial for his trial, upon the charge given in againſt him by the Preſident. Copy of his letter is tranſmitted under No. 15; and before we gave him an anſwer Colonel Goddard was conſulted, who being of opinion, that as the reference to the Governor General and Council had been accepted by Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, there would be an impropriety in withdrawing the deciſion on his conduct for their cognizance; we returned him an anſwer to that effect, and at his deſire mention this application to you.

173. Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn having juſt ſent in a letter, addreſſed to you, and one for the Governor General and Council, the former is encloſed, and a copy of the latter.

174. This veſſel, the Betſey Snow, will proceed direct to England with this packet; and in order to multiply the chances of our advices getting ſafe and early to your hands, a duplicate of this addreſs is put on board the Betſey, to be delivered to the Commander of any of your homeward-bound ſhips ſhe may fall in with at the Cape, or St. Helena. Our diary from ſhip to ſhip will be ſent home by the Royal Admiral, and the annual one by the Morſe; and in the mean time we hope the extracts now forwarded will furniſh you with every neceſſary information.

175. We ſhall, as ſoon as poſſible after the departure of this veſſel, diſpatch the Panther to Bengal, with copies of the ſame papers we now tranſmit to you; and we ſhall then, according to the reſolution propoſed by the Preſident after his review of Maratta affairs, depute Mr. George Horſley to ſupply the Governor General and Council with ſuch information and details of local knowledge as they may require.

176. Agreeable to what was mentioned in a former part of this addreſs, we now ſet down in order the papers forwarded by the preſent diſpatch, which we ſubmit to your candour, with a firm reliance of receiving an impartial and diſpaſſionate judgment.

23d March 1780.

At a Committee of Correſpondence;

PRESENT,

The Committee having met very often to read the papers tranſmitted from Bombay, relative to the expedition undertaken in favour of Ragoba in November 1778, and having alſo duly conſidered the ſaid papers, do now, upon the moſt mature deliberation, ſubmit to the Court the following opinions on that ſubject. Appendix. No. 130.

1780. Report on Bombay Affairs.

The Committee find, by a letter from the Governor General and Council of Bengal, dated 23d March 1778, and received at Bombay the 3d of May following, that the Select Committee of Bombay were therein expreſsly authorized, under certain circumſtances, to form a new alliance with Ragoba, and to engage with him in any ſcheme which they ſhould deem expedient and ſafe, for retrieving his affairs.

That on the 21ſt of July the ſaid Select Committee reſolved unanimouſly, that they were then at full liberty to take meaſures for ſubverting a party in the Poonah Government, which was connected with the French in ſchemes hoſtile to the Engliſh Company; and that in order to accompliſh the meaſure, the moſt practicable means to be uſed for placing Ragoba in the Regency at Poonah, during the minority of the infant Peiſhwa.

And the Committee find, that the Governor General and Council, by letter dated the 17th of Auguſt, approved the reſolution of the Select Committee at Bombay, and authorized them to aſſiſt Ragoba with a military force, to conduct him to Poonah, under the following expreſs proviſions; viz.

Firſt, That it do not interfere with any engagement formed with Moodajee Bouncello by Mr. Elliot, and previous notice to the Select Committee of Bombay by him.

Second, That the lateſt advices from Europe ſhall be equal to an aſſurance that the force required for this ſervice may be ſpared without endangering the ſafety of Bombay, in the event of a French invaſion.

Third, That the engagements which the Select Committee may form with Ragoba himſelf, or Moraba and his aſſociates, be not contrary to thoſe concluded with Moodajee by Mr. Elliot, and noticed to the Committee at Bombay, nor of a hoſtile tendency to Berar.

And the Committee find, that the above letter was received at Bombay, the 27th of September 1778: and that no ſtep had been taken by the Select Committee of Bombay, in proſecution of the meaſures reſolved upon the 21ſt of July preceding.

The Committee alſo find, by letters from Mr. Lewis, the Company's Reſident at Poonah, entered on the Select Committee's proceedings of the 26th and 30th of July, that ſeveral Maratta Chiefs, ſuppoſed to have been in the intereſt of Ragoba, and capable of aſſiſting him with a large body of horſe, had been ſuddenly impriſoned, or laid under reſtraint by Madjee Scindia, another Chief, who was in the oppoſite intereſt.

And it appears, that on the 12th of October following, the Select Committee of Bombay reſolved forthwith to carry into execution the plan agreed to the 21ſt of July; to which reſolution Mr. Draper diſſented.

The Committee find, that when the Governor General and Council approved the reſolution of the 21ſt of July, they could not have been informed of the confinement of thoſe Maratta Chiefs, who were ſuppoſed to be well inclined to Ragoba, and capable of affording him the aſſiſtance above-mentioned.

And the Committee having duly attended to the whole of the proceedings previous to the expedition under conſideration, are of opinion, that the reſolution of the Select Committee of Bombay, of the 21ſt of July, for placing Ragoba in the Regency at Poonah, was not improper, under the favourable circumſtances ſet forth on their proceedings at that period.

The Committee are of opinion, that the change which happened ſoon afterwards, reſpecting the ſituation of Ragoba's friends, and the lapſe of time from the 21ſt of July to the 22d of November, rendered it extremely imprudent to undertake the expedition at that period.

Appendix. No. 130.

Sel. Conf. 16th Nov. 1778.

And the Committee find the force allotted for the Poonah expedition conſiſted of Artillery,

Rank and File	-	-	143
Laſcars	-	-	500
	Infantry,
Sepoys	-	-	2,278

that, officers included, the whole are ſtated at 3,900 men; and upwards of 400 rank and file, with officers in proportion, were afterwards ordered on this ſervice; and that a conſiderable part of the additional force conſiſted of Europeans.

And the Committee are of opinion, that the ſtate of the garriſon of Bombay, as repreſented to Sir Edward Vernon by the Select Committee the 8th of September 1778, did not warrant the ſending of ſo large a force on foreign ſervice at the commencement of a European war, more eſpecially as ſpeedy ſuccour was rendered precarious, and conſequently ſucceſs very doubtful, by the diſagreeable ſituation of the ſuppoſed friends and partizans of Ragoba.

The Committee are therefore clearly of opinion, that in November 1778, the expedition, under all circumſtances, was evidently very hazardous, and not to be juſtified; that the reaſons ſtated by Mr. Draper for diſſenting thereto at that period, were ſolid and judicious; and that the Select Committee of Bombay ought to have waited the arrival or nearer approach of the Bengal detachment under the command of Colonel Goddard, before they attempted to reinſtate Ragoba at Poonah.

But as the majority of the Select Committee of Bombay ſeemed convinced that delay would render the execution of the enterprize much more difficult, if not altogether impracticable; that the French might thereby acquire ſuch influence at the Poonah Durbar as would occaſion perpetual war with the Marattas, and render the Company's poſſeſſions on the weſtern ſide of India inſecure and unprofitable; that they conſidered themſelves bound in duty to the Company to endeavour to prevent meaſures ſo ruinous to their intereſt, by taking advantage of diviſions then ſuppoſed to be ſubſiſting among the Bramin miniſters, and by attempting to eſtabliſh Ragoba at that critical juncture, and therefore perſiſted in the reſolutions to aſſiſt him with forces for that purpoſe. Under the above conſiderations, though this Committee cannot concur in the reaſons offered by the Select Committee of Bombay, ſo far as to approve their conduct, they are nevertheleſs of opinion that the ſaid Select Committee appear to have acted according to the beſt of their judgment, in undertaking to place Ragoba in the Regency at Poonah, in November 1778.

Your Committee find, that the amount due from Ragoba to the Company, the 30th day of April 1777, was rupees 24,72,775.

Sel. Conf. 16th Nov. 1778.

And your Committee find, that in November 1778, the Governor and Select Committee of Bombay paid to the executors of the late Mr. William Shaw, 80,000 rupees, on account of Ragoba; alſo that in the ſame month they lent 4 lacks of rupees to Ragoba, beſides 15,000 rupees lent to two of his ſervants, amounting in the whole to rupees 4,95,000; and excluſive of 1,500 ſtand of arms, four or five guns and their carriages, 30 candies of gunpowder, 10,000 flints, and 2,000 cannon ſhot, agreed by the Select Committee to be delivered to him the 16th day of November 1778.

Sel. Conf. 23d Nov. 1778.

And your Committee are clearly of opinion, that the late loan to Ragoba was unjuſtifiable, more eſpecially as ſo large a ſum as 1,50,000 rupees was ſent with the troops, and authority granted to the Commiſſary and Paymaſter to paſs drafts on the Select Committee for the neceſſary diſburſements during the expedition: And the Committee find that bills have been accepted on that account to the amount of rupees 2,28,529.

And your Committee ſubmit it to the Court as their opinion, that unleſs the Select Committee give better reaſons than have yet appeared for lending the ſum of 4,95,000 rupees in the manner above-mentioned to Ragoba and his ſervants, that the Court take into conſideration the propriety of rendering the ſaid Select Committee reſponſible for that amount to the Company.

John Woodhouſe, John Purling, George Cuming, Henry Fletcher, John Manſhip, John Michie, Wm James, W. Devaynes, L. Sulivan, John Harriſon, Henry Savage.

Your Committee find that the Select Committee of Bombay appointed Mr. Carnac, Colonel Egerton, and Mr. Moſtyn, to be a ſeparate committee for carrying their plan into execution, and directed them to accompany Ragoba to Poonah: That the Commander in Chief proteſted againſt the meaſure: That of courſe there remained no more than two Members of the Select Committee at Bombay: That the Preſident, by having a caſting vote, became, in the abſence of the Poonah committee, poſſeſſed of abſolute power for tranſacting all political, military, and naval affairs, and ſuch as might require ſecrecy at Bombay. And as this tranſaction militated againſt the letter and ſpirit of the Court's orders of the 10th April 1778, the Committee are clearly of opinion, that the appointment of a member of the Select Committee at Bombay, to accompany the Commander in Chief to Poonah, was altogether improper, and that the majority of the ſaid Committee are very reprehenſible for their conduct in that reſpect; but the Committee exempt Mr. Draper from this cenſure, becauſe he juſtly ſuppoſed it to be the intent of the Company, that none of the civil members of the Committee ſhould be detached from the Preſidency, if the Commander in Chief were to be abſent alſo, and delivered his opinion in the Select Committee accordingly.

Wm Devaynes, John Harriſon, Henry Fletcher, John Manſhip, John Michie, George Cuming, Wm James, John Woodhouſe, John Purling, Laur. Sulivan, Henry Savage.

The Committee find the firſt detachment of the army embarked for the Continent the 22d of November 1778, and Colonel Egerton two days afterwards:

That the army was at Panwell the 25th of November, and remained there till the 4th day of December following.

That the 30th of November, the Quarter Maſter General proceeded with a company of Sepoys to Bara, to mark out an encampment for a detachment under Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, who however was not able to proceed as was intended, for want of bearers.

And by letters from Colonel Egerton and Mr. Carnac to Governor Hornby, it appears, that there was an almoſt immediate and total want of harmony in their proceedings during the expedition; that the diſtinct powers veſted in the Poonah committee and in the Commander in Chief of the army, the propriety of the commiſſion granted to the committee, the military honours to be paid to Colonel Egerton and Mr. Carnac reſpectively, and the propriety of keeping ſeparate tables for them, were objects of much diſcuſſion and contention.

The Committee find, that Mr. Moſtyn was compelled by a ſevere indiſpoſition, to return to Bombay, where he died the 1ſt of January; and that Mr. Carnac thereupon claimed the right of a caſting vote, whenever Colonel Egerton only ſhould meet him in Committee; which was decreed and ordered accordingly by the Select Committee at * Bombay.

* Sel. Conſ. 24th Dec. 1778.

The Committee find it ſtated by Mr. Carnac, on the 20th day of December 1778, that the troops had, in 25 days from their debarkation at Panwell, marched little more than the ſame number of miles: that it appeared to him, that much labour, time, and money, were unneceſſarily waſted in making a carriage road for the artillery and ſtores up the Ghauts: that with the number of people employed, every thing intended to be carted might have been carried up by hand, with more eaſe, ſecurity, and diſpatch: that from converſation he believed this to be the general opinion; and that the Commandant of artillery had actually paſſed ſome of the guns by a different route wide of the new road then making by the engineer, which proved it to be needleſs.

Colonel Egerton deferred replying to Mr. Carnac's minute until his return to Bombay; when he appealed to his diary, and to the Commiſſary of the army, to prove the propriety of his remaining ſo long at Panwell; he denied there having been any languor in the motions of the army; he ſaid, the Commander in Chief could not take the ſtores and proviſions under his arm at Panwell, and walk away with them to Poonah: that no guns, expect two, had been paſſed by any route wide of the road made by the Engineer; and he produced ſeveral vouchers in ſupport of his aſſertions.

Sel. Conſ. 10 March 1779.

The Committee find the repreſentation and vouchers produced by Colonel Egerton, relative to the guns, was partial and defective; for although no more than two guns as mentioned by Colonel Egerton, were actually paſſed by Major Dagon up the Ghauts, in the manner ſtated by Mr. Carnac, it appears that the meaſure was practicable, and that the Colonel was highly diſpleaſed with Major Dagon's activity in attempting to move the guns up the Ghauts, before the road was made; that he poſitively forbad it, and threatened to poſt centinels to prevent it. That this conduct of Colonel Egerton diſpirited Major Dagon, who has ſince declared, that if Colonel Egerton would have allowed him the number of hands employed in making the road, he had not the leaſt doubt but the whole of the artillery, with the ſtores and ammunition, might have been carried up the Ghauts in two days and a half to the poſt occupied by Captain Stewart.

The Committee find, that the two guns before mentioned were ſent by Major Dagon up the Ghauts the 14th day of December; that the road was began by the engineer the ſame day; that it was the next day when Colonel Egerton expreſſed his diſpleaſure at Major Dagon, for attempting to carry up the guns and ſtores; that the roads were not finiſhed till the 23d December; and that the troops had halted the 9th and 11th of December for the roads.

And the Committee are clearly of opinion, that the ſlow progreſs of the army was inexcuſable, and very prejudicial to the undertaking; that the conduct of the Commander in Chief was extremely defective; that it gave the enemy the fulleſt opportunity of collecting their ſtrength; and muſt have had a direct tendency to diſcourage ſuch Maratta Chiefs as might have been friendly to Ragoba from appearing active on his behalf; and that the moſt ſpirited exertions on our part were abſolutely neceſſary, in order to afford them proper encouragement for that purpoſe.

Select Letter, 27th March 1779.

The Committee do not find, that the troops experienced any obſtruction from the enemy till the 22d of December: from that day to the 4th of January they were at times cannonaded, with trifling effect; except the loſs of Lieutenant Colonel Cay, by a rocket, the 31ſt December, and of Captain Stewart, by a ſpent ſhot, the 4th of January; by which accidents the Company were deprived of two very gallant and meritorious officers.

Mr. Carnac in a letter to the Select Committee, dated the 11th of February 1779, has delivered his ſentiments as follows:

" For the ſpace of near five weeks the army did not " meet with the ſmalleſt moleſtation; and it can never " be ſufficiently regretted, that more advantage was not " taken of that interval, when the enemy by their conduct appeared to be wholly unprepared. However " they at laſt puſhed a party forwards near to Condola, " where they began their oppoſition. As our troops advanced they conſtantly gave way; or if they attempted " to make a ſtand were diſlodged; yet ſo ſoon as we had " taken up our ground, and fixed our encampment, " they never failed bringing up cannon near enough to " annoy us; and we were I believe more than fifteen " days ſucceſſively cannonaded in our camps; to which " the enemy were encouraged to perſiſt in, by finding " they could do it with impunity; as our line nor " any part of it was ever moved out, to endeavour by a " vigorous effort to get poſſeſſion of ſome of their " guns."

Appendix No. 130.

To the above remarks of Mr. Carnac Colonel Egerton has made the following reply:

" I ſhall ſay no more on his remark of our line, nor " any part, having never moved out, to endeavour by a " vigorous effort to get poſſeſſion of ſome of their (the " enemy's) guns, except that the commanding officer " knew the duties of his profeſſion too well to give ſo " unjuſtifiable an order, for which he would have been " highly reprehenſible by all military judges."

The 5th of January Colonel Egerton wrote as follows to the Governor:

" We have had the uſual cannonade to-day, but rather " faint, and without any loſs; and I intend trying to-mor- " row morning, about 4 or 5 o'clock, if we can catch " them in their encampment."

But the Committee find, that Colonel Egerton, the next day, inſtead of perſevering in his deſign of ſeeking the enemy in their camp, declared to the Poonah committee, that having borne up as long as he could againſt an illneſs, with which he had been for ſome time paſt afflicted, he was then under the neceſſity of acquainting them, that the Surgeon Major thought the fatigues of a campaign, co-operating with his indiſpoſition, endangered his life; that he could not hope to have ſtrength ſufficient to attend to the avocations of a Commander in Chief; and therefore he requeſted permiſſion of Mr. Carnac and himſelf, to reſign the command of the troops to Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, and to proceed immediately to Bombay; which being granted, he ſet out accordingly; and having obtained intelligence of a party of horſe being in the Conkan, he afterwards thought proper to return back to the army, but did not attempt to reſume the command.

As Colonel Egerton's want of health did not prevent him from reſuming his ſeat at the Poonah committee, it will be neceſſary hereafter to ſtate the part which he took in the ſubſequent proceedings of that committee; but your Committee nevertheleſs think proper in this place to expreſs their unanimous opinion, that the conduct of the late Colonel, now Brigadier General Charles Egerton, during the late diſgraceful expedition towards Poonah, was ſuch as renders it highly improper that he ſhould be continued in the command of the Company's forces at Bombay; and that he be therefore diſmiſſed from the Company's ſervice.

And the Committee find a minute entered on the Poonah diary of the 6th of January, ſtating the difference between their former expectations and the real ſtate of affairs. They had been given to hope, that on the appearance of Ragoba's ſtandard above the Ghauts, Holkar and many other reputable Maratta Chiefs would join them; that however none but a few mercenaries had done ſo; that Ragoba acknowledged, unleſs we could convince his friends of their ſafety, by ſpeedily beating his enemies, he had no hope of being joined by any one; and that our ſituation would be rather worſe than better, as we advanced towards Poonah, becauſe the army would be cut off from communication with the Conkan, from whence proviſion and ſtores would be ſupplied.

The Committee allowed that the conduct of the enemy, in ravaging the country and retiring before our army, ſeemed to warrant Ragoba's reaſoning, but they hoped as they advanced towards Poonah, Holcar, on whoſe junction they ſtill placed ſome dependance, would be enabled and encouraged to fulfil the promiſes heretofore made by him to Mr. Moſtyn in favour of Ragoba.

The ſame morning, the 6th of January, the army marched, and the guns of the enemy opened from a wood on the line. A large party of horſe ſeemed inclined to take the army in flank, or to enter the rear, but were prevented, and driven from their high ground by our troops, who behaved on this and on all occaſions with the greateſt intrepidity and cheerfulneſs.

And the Committee find, that on the three ſucceeding days the army marched from Mondburna to Tullagoan, 18 miles from the ſummit of the Ghauts, and 16 miles from Poonah, without moleſtation from the enemy.

The 9th of January 1779, Meſſieurs Carnac and Egerton deputed Mr. Sibbald to Ragoba, to repreſent the diſtreſs occaſioned by relying on his promiſe for a ſupply of proviſions above the Ghauts; and on his aſſurance that Holkar would join the troops in eight days from the 22d ultimo; and alſo to inform him, that having only proviſions ſufficient to ſubſiſt the army back again to the Conkan, and the country being laid waſte, the only probable mode of removing their diſtreſs was to make overtures of accommodation to Scindia, Holkar, and Saccaram. That the power of negociating muſt be left to the committee; and that they ſaw no alternative but the inſtant retreat of the army, to prevent a total diſtreſs from the utter want of proviſions.

The next day the Commiſſary reported, that from the ſtock of proviſions on hand he was able, barring accidents, to ſupply the army with proviſions for 18 days; but Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn thought it would be impoſſible, without a body of horſe, to ſecure the baggage from the enemy's numerous cavalry, as the troops advanced further into the country, and that the proviſions were equally expoſed with the baggage.

The ſame day information was received that a body of horſe belonging to Moraba had marched into the Conkan to join Ragoba; but Meſſieurs Carnac and Egerton obſerved, that however uſeful thoſe troops might be, it did not appear that they could effectually relieve the main difficulty of the army, which was the total impoſſibility of receiving any further ſupply of proviſions, except through the Conkan; it was therefore reſolved to preſerve the army by falling back ſo far as might be neceſſary to ſecure their communication with the Conkan, unleſs Holkar's army ſhould join them, conformably to the aſſurances of Ragoba.

And your Committee find, that Lieutenant Frazer was not to ſuffer Moraba's troops to aſcend through the paſs where he was poſted, till further orders.

In the evening of the ſaid 10th of January Mr. Sibbald reported that Ragoba had earneſtly requeſted the committee to defer their application to any of the Maratta Chiefs, except Holcar, for one day, leſt Scindia, from whom he expected a Vackeel, ſhould infer that they began to deſpair of ſucceſs, which would of courſe encourage the miniſterial party to hold out; that the care of ſupplying the army with proviſions reſted with him; that he would furniſh the Commiſſary from this town (Tullagoan) with a ſufficient quantity for ſome days, and that we ſhould get more at the next village.

Ragoba alſo informed the Poonah committee, that he had wrote to Scindia to endeavour to engage him in his intereſt; but the ſaid committee not being able to place any dependance on Ragoba's promiſe for a ſupply of proviſions, nor deeming the gaining of Scindia an object of ſufficient importance to warrant a departure from their preceding reſolution; and believing it certain, that though Holcar did not act againſt them, he could not act for them; iſſued orders to Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, the 11th of January, to march back the army towards the paſs at Condolah as expeditiouſly as poſſible; and the 12th of January the army fell back to Wargaon.

And the Committee find that the order to Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, as entered on the Poonah diary, is ſigned,

"John Carnac,"
"Charles Egerton."

But in a letter from Colonel Egerton to the Select Committee of Bombay, dated the 8th of March 1779, he ſays he never ſaw or ſigned the letter to Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn; and in a letter of the 16th of February Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn ſays he received orders from Mr. Carnac, in preſence of Lieutenant Richardſon, to retreat; that he deſired a written order, which was promiſed to be ſent him, though it never was.

And the Committee find it reported by Meſſieurs Carnac and Egerton, that the enemy having obtained intelligence of their moving, attacked them on their march before day-light, and continued the attack with great vigour till two in the afternoon; that the numerous bodies of horſe rendered it impoſſible to protect the baggage, and that part of it fell into the enemy's hands; that ſome loſs was ſuffered; that in juſtice to the troops, both Europeans and Sepoys, they with pleaſure declare that they behaved with the utmoſt intrepidity and alacrity during the whole attack. That they ſhall continue their march to Condolah, and expect to be much haraſſed; but the army will be rendered as compact as circumſtances will admit, and every part of the baggage not abſolutely neceſſary will be reduced by the commanding officer. Vide Sel. Letter from, 27th March 1779, Par. 55.

As Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn was in command of the army, the Committee will ſtate his account of the action of the 12th of January, as tranſmitted in the following letter to Governor Hornby, dated the 13th of January:

"To the Honourable William Hornby, Eſquire.

"Honourable Sir,

"I did myſelf the honour of informing you of our arrival at Tellagon on the 9th inſtant. We halted here the 10th and 11th; and it being determined by the committee that the army could not proceed any further, but was under the neceſſity of retreating immediately, I accordingly gave out orders for the march at eleven o'clock at night, in hopes, by leaving our ground at that hour, to gain a day's march of the enemy, before they could know of this ſtep; but in this I was diſappointed, for I found they had got intelligence of it before we moved, which muſt have been conveyed to them by ſome treacherous perſons about Ragoba. About two o'clock a large party of horſe firſt attacked our advanced guard, which had got on ſome diſtance from the main body. On account of the confuſion occaſioned by the vaſt quantity of baggage, and the badneſs of ſome part of the road, they unfortunately took a great deal of our baggage and camp equipage in this attack; however, the advanced guard reached this village about day-light, with a great deal of the proviſions and ammunition ſafe.

"Our main body was attacked about four o'clock on the rear and both flanks; and as we were frequently obliged to halt and fire ſome guns at them, it retarded our march, and gave them time to bring up their cannon, which obliged us to form in the beſt manner we could to oppoſe them. It was ſhortly after day light when the attack became general, but the weight of it fell principally on Captain Hartley's diviſion, which I ſupported with Europeans and Sepoys at different times. From the ſituation of the ground I found it impracticable ticable to join the whole line to Captain Hartley's diviſion, as there were large bodies of horſe ready to charge us, when they found us in ſuch a ſituation that we could not uſe our guns. The attack continued till four o'clock in the afternoon before we could retire, which was effected at laſt with much danger. The troops during the whole time behaved with the greateſt bravery. I am truly ſorry to convey ſuch diſagreeable news to you; the laſt time I wrote I had no thoughts of any thing of this kind happening. I now encloſe you a return of the killed, wounded, and miſſing. They have engaged us all this day with ſmall arms from their Arabs, &c. and a very heavy cannonade; fortunately we have not ſuffered much, and we obliged the Arabs to give way at laſt. It is not determined when the army marches, I wait the committee's orders. Appendix. No. 130.

"I have the honour to be, with great reſpect,
Honourable Sir,
Your moſt obedient and moſt humble Servant,
William Cockburn."

And the Committee find the following general orders iſſued by the Commander in Chief, the 12th of January:

"Tueſday, 12th January 1779.

"The commanding officer is ſo extremely ſatisfied "with the gallant behaviour of the troops in general, "that he orders that a week's pay be given to "the Europeans and Sepoys; and returns the officers "his public thanks for their cool and ſpirited conduct, "and in a particular manner to Captain Hartley, not "only on that account, but his judgment as an officer.

"Colonel Egerton having by accident been an eye "witneſs of Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn's conduct this "day, cannot help expreſſing his higheſt approbation "thereof; and is willing to hope, that this will be a "ſtrong recommendation of him to the Board.

(Signed) *Rich*d Campbell,
Adj. General."

And the Committee find, on the Poonah diary the 13th of January, the following particulars:

"A committee held to deliberate relative to overtures "for the peaceable return of the army to Bombay. No "minutes taken, being in a ſevere cannonade, and a "number of perſons ſtanding round.

"Letter to the Peiſhwa, ſent by Ramſing.

"D° from D°, in anſwer.

"D° to D°, at night."

But the Committee find no copy of the letters ſaid to have been ſent to the Peiſhwa on the 13th of January, nor of his anſwer, in any proceedings tranſmitted from Bombay.

And the Committee find, that Mr. Farmer, Secretary to the Poona committee, was ſent to the Maratta camp to propoſe an accommodation, which they judged might be effected by Ragoba going over to Scindia; and which they obſerve he ſeemed determined to do, rather than riſque another day's march with the army.

The meſſage ſent to the Marattas was as follows:

"That having had aſſurances given us, that the "eſtabliſhment of Ragoba in the Regency of the Ma-"ratta empire was a meaſure much wiſhed for by many "of the Sirdars of the Maratta Sircar, as well as by the "country in general, we had conſented to conduct him "with an Engliſh army for that purpoſe; but contrary "to our hopes and expectations we found his eſtabliſh-"ment oppoſed by the whole empire: That we had "ſeen with infinite concern, the country laid waſte "and deſtroyed at our approach; which being ſo very "contrary to our intentions by eſpouſing the cauſe of "Ragoba, that we were determined to be the occaſion "of no farther deſolation, and were therefore reſolved "to march back with the army to Bombay: That after "this declaration, we expected all hoſtilities would ceaſe; "and, by ſo doing, peace and friendſhip would be eſta-"bliſhed between the Engliſh and the Maratta State. "If, on the other hand, we ſhould experience the leaſt "act of hoſtility on our march, we ſhould conſider it as "a declaration of war againſt the Engliſh nation."

The anſwer of the Durbar to Mr. Farmer was, "That if we wiſhed to remain at peace with them, "Ragonath Row muſt be delivered up, and then we "may return quietly; otherwiſe we may do as we "pleaſe." Letter from, 27th March 1779, Par. 60.

The committee wrote to Mr. Farmer in reply; "That all difficulty of accommodation was removed, "by Ragoba's deſign of going over to Mhadjee Scindia; "and that they expected, in conſequence, proper ſe-"curities from the Durbar for proceeding unmoleſted "on their march." 61

On the diary of the 15th of January, there appears a letter from Mr. Farmer, ſtating the reſult of his conference with the Durbar. He reports that having informed 62 formed them of the difficulty being removed by the determination of Ragoba to deliver himſelf up to Scindia, and that he ſuppoſed the army would therefore be ſuffered to return quietly to Bombay, Nannah obſerved in reply, that as we had broken the treaty concluded by Colonel Upton, we muſt agree, before the army moved, to abide by the treaty concluded with the late Peiſhwa Nannah.

On preſſing the queſtion, whether, if Ragoba ſurrendered himſelf to Scindia, hoſtages would be given for our proceeding unmoleſted to Bombay, it was anſwered, that the ſurrender of Ragoba was of little conſequence; that a new treaty muſt be made on the ſpot with the Maratta State, becauſe the treaty made by Colonel Upton had been broken by the invaſion of their country. Mr Farmer conveys his ideas of the advantage obtained over our army by the Marattas in the following words: "They ſeem to me to feel themſelves "in that ſituation, with reſpect to us, which the Turkiſh "Vizier felt himſelf in with reſpect to Peter the Firſt, "at the time when the Empreſs Catherine ſent in her "jewels to the Vizier."

It appears that Scindia preſided at the Durbar on that occaſion; who finally told Mr. Farmer, that whether there be peace or war, it was equal to him; but that having broken the treaty made with Colonel Upton, we muſt on the ſpot ſet about forming a new treaty, to ſerve as a future guide between the Maratta State and the Engliſh.

At this juncture Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn was called upon by the committee to give his opinion in writing relative to the practicability of marching back the army to Bombay; which was done in the following words; viz.

"Being called upon for my opinion on the poſſibi-
"lity of making a retreat to Bombay, I muſt declare,
"that I think the ſame utterly impracticable. Our "troops are already much haraſſed and diſpirited, from
"the neceſſity we were under of retiring from Tullegaon;
"and were we to ſuſtain another attack from the Ma-
"ratta army, I am of opinion the troops would not
"ſtand it; and that conſequently the whole army, with "its numerous followers, would be cut to pieces.
"But the diſtance from Panwell being about forty-five "miles, it is not the attack of one day we ſhould have
"to ſuſtain; as I think, were it poſſible to move from
"hence, that we could not gain that place in twenty "days; and it is therefore chimerical to the laſt degree,
"to ſuppoſe that our ſmall army could ſupport them-
"ſelves from the daily attacks they would be certain of
"for ſo long a period. I therefore cannot charge my-"ſelf to conduct the army, under ſuch circumſtances, to
"Bombay; and humanity muſt prompt ſome other me"thod than an attempt to retire in the face of the whole
"ſtrength of the Maratta empire, with ſuch a handful of "men, who muſt in ſuch caſe be ſacrificed.

(Signed) William Cockburn."

"15th January 1779."

At the cloſe of the Poonah diary, immediately after the proceedings of the 22d of January, it ſtands recorded, that the committee met the 15th at Wurgaon, to take into conſideration the meaſures neceſſary to be immediately adopted for extricating the army from its very critical ſituation, ſurrounded by the whole ſtrength of the Maratta empire, and with only about ten days proviſions in camp:

That Colonel Egerton's opinion was alſo required, and that his declared ſentiments were the ſame with thoſe of Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, that a retreat in their then ſituation was impracticable, and if attempted, the conſequence muſt be the loſs of the whole army.

Mr. Carnac's opinion is then recorded as follows, viz.

"Mr. Carnac is ſo confident the army is ſufficiently numerous, and ſo well provided with artillery, as to be able to force their way back againſt all oppoſition, if the officers and men will do their duty: that there is no doubt with him the attempt ought to be made at all events, rather than ſubmit to the terms preſcribed by the enemy, to which we have no authority to bind our employers. And for his own part, he declares, he would much ſooner run his ſhare of the riſk, than that they ſhould be complied with. However, as Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn have given it as their poſitive opinions, that the troops will not ſtand, and conſequently muſt be cut to pieces, Mr. Carnac dares not take upon himſelf ſingly to preſs a retreat, which it is pronounced will be inevitably attended with conſequences that cannot fail of endangering the preſervation of the ſettlement. He therefore, however reluctantly and contrary to his own ſentiments, finds himſelf obliged to concur in the acceptance of whatever conditions can be obtained. Allowing, therefore, that the opinions of Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn be well founded (in which we are given to underſtand many officers in the army alſo concur) there ſeems to be no other reſource left, but to accept of ſuch conditions as can be obtained from the enemy.

(Signed) John Carnac."

In the margin of the diary of the 22d of January it is noted, that the above minutes were omitted in the proper place, through the miſapprehenſion of the Committee's Secretary, and without the knowledge of Mr. Carnac.

Colonel Egerton has diſavowed and proteſted againſt the ſaid minutes; and in regard to the written opinion of Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, he has declared, in his letter to the Governor General and Council of Bengal, that he never ſaw it till it was read at the Board at Bombay; but he there allows it to have been founded on ſolid reaſons and uncontrovertible facts. The Colonel adds, that he is much at a loſs to conceive how he could be ſaid to have concurred in Colonel Cockburn's opinion at a committee which was never held, and in a written opinion which he never ſaw, till produced at Bombay; and he has alſo declared, that the greateſt part of the diary was ſpurious and inadmiſſible.

Mr. Farmer, the Secretary to the Poonah committee, was on ſervice at the Maratta Durbar, on the 15th of January; Mr. Carnac has therefore appealed to other perſons to authenticate ſuch proceedings of that day as have been diſavowed by Colonel Egerton; and the following letters on the ſubject ſtand recorded on the proceedings of the Select Committee of the 10th March 1779:

Letter from Mr. Sibbald to the Secretary.

To Mr. Edward Ravenſcroft, Secretary.

Sir,

I have received your letter of yeſterday's date, acquainting me that the Honourable the Select Committee require of me a clear and full ſtatement of the circumſtances relative to a meeting of the Poonah committee at Worgaum on the 15th January: in anſwer to which I have to acquaint them,

That being deſired on that morning to attend at Colonel Egerton's tent, in conſequence of a letter juſt received from Mr. Farmer of the 14th, I concluded that the meeting was a committee, and prepared to take minutes accordingly, by beginning the uſual preamble; but the immediate diſpatch of the anſwer to Mr. Farmer's letter being required, I did no more while in the tent that morning, than writing the letter to Mr. Farmer, and taking a tranſcript of it for the diary: but ſoon after as I got a place to write in, which I believe was the next day, I took minutes of what paſſed in argument on the 15th, to the beſt of my recollection, which I ſhewed to Mr. Carnac, and he thought them nearly expreſſive of his own ſentiments; but not deeming them ſufficiently full, he then delivered me his opinion more at large, when a fair copy was made of the minutes, and ſigned by him, and afterwards preſented by me to Colonel Egerton.

I am, Sir,
Your moſt obedient,
humble Servant,
James Sibbald.

Bombay,
2d March 1779.

Letter from Lieutenant Colonel Hartley to Mr. Carnac.

Sel. Conf. 10th March 1779.

Sir,

In anſwer to your letter of yeſterday, where you deſire to know if I recollect what paſſed at Colonel Egerton's tent at Worgaum on the 15th January laſt; I have to inform you, that I perfectly remember you there declared, (where Colonel Egerton, Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, Mr. Sibbald, Mr. Holmes, and myſelf were preſent) that you were decidedly of opinion, that the army ought at all events to attempt a retreat, and not ſubmit to the mortifying terms propoſed by the enemy; but that as Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn declared their opinion, that the army could not make good their retreat, and that the troops would not ſtand another attack, you could not take upon you, under ſuch circumſtances, to preſs a retreat.

I have the honour to be,
Sir,
Your moſt obedient,
humble ſervant,
James Hartley.

Bombay,
5th March 1779.

Letter from Mr. Holmes to Mr. Carnac.

Sel. Conf. 10th March 1779.

Sir,

I have a perfect recollection of the opinion delivered at the meeting held in Colonel Egerton's tent at Worgaum the 15th January laſt, where yourſelf, Colonel Egerton, Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, Captain Hartley, Mr. Sibbald, and myſelf, were preſent; and I well remember you declared, in preſence of us all, that you were decidedly of opinion the army ought at all events to attempt a retreat, rather than ſubmit to the extravagant terms propoſed by the enemy; but that as the principal officers, Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, had declared it as their opinion the army could not make good a retreat, and that the troops would not ſtand another attack, you could not, under ſuch circumſtances, take upon you ſingly to preſs a retreat.

I am, with regard, Sir,
Your moſt obedient
humble ſervant,
Thomas Holmes.

Bombay,
9th March 1779.

And the Committee find the following anſwer, dated the 15th of January, returned by Meſſieurs Carnac and Egerton to Mr. Farmer's repreſentation of the Durbar's demands:

To Mr. William Gamul Farmer.

Sir,

We received your letter of laſt night only an hour ago, the Hircarrahs having been detained by ſome accident: in anſwer to which you muſt acquaint the Durbar, that they demand what we have no power to agree to; the entering into and concluding treaties being ſolely confined to the Governor General and Council of Calcutta; to whom therefore they muſt ſend their Vakeels. The only power left to us, is, the giving up the cauſe and perſon of Ragonaut Row; which done, muſt certainly put an end to all diſputes between the Engliſh and the Maratta State; and there is no doubt that peace and friendſhip will then ſubſiſt between us from henceforwards.

You muſt inform them, ſhould we enter into any treaty, we ſhould only deceive them, having no ſuch powers: we therefore deſire they will immediately acquaint us, whether, upon our abiding by the conditions firſt propoſed, of delivering up Ragoba, they will comply on their parts, by ſuffering us to march unmoleſted to Bombay, and for which purpoſe, to give us the neceſſary ſecurities.

We are, Sir,
Your obedient ſervants,
J. Carnac,
C. Egerton.

Wurgaon,
15th January 1779

Appendix No. 130.

And after writing the above letter to Mr. Farmer, it was reſolved immediately to diſpatch Mr. Thomas Holmes to Scindia, with full powers to ſettle with the Durbar for the peaceable return of the army to Bombay, on ſuch conditions as he might be able to obtain, ſince it was the opinion of the Commander in Chief, that a retreat was impracticable.

In anſwer to the Poonah committee's letter, ſtating their want of powers to make treaties, Mr. Farmer replies, that Madjee Scindia deſires to be informed, by what authority they had broken that made by Colonel Upton? If the Governor General and Council had authorized the meaſure, he deſired to ſee the authority; otherwiſe, if the committee had acted on their own authority, they muſt anſwer it, and make a new agreement: that Ragoba might be ſurrendered, or otherwiſe, as we pleaſed; but till a new treaty were made between the Engliſh and the Maratta State, our army muſt remain where it was, whatever might be the conſequence.

At 10 o'clock in the evening of the 15th of January, Mr. Holmes arrived with terms for the peaceable return of the army to Bombay; to which, the committee declare, nothing but the avowed opinion of the principal officers, relative to the impracticability of effecting a retreat, would juſtify their acceding. They alſo declared, that the Durbar could not be ignorant of the want of power in the committee to conclude ſuch a treaty as the Durbar then preſcribed, and evidently compelled them to enter into, becauſe they were already informed, that the committee had no powers to conclude any treaty whatever.

In the morning of the 16th of January, Mr. Holmes was diſpatched to the Maratta camp, to finiſh the agreement; of which a rough ſketch had been prepared the preceding day. In the evening Meſſieurs Farmer and Holmes returned with Scindia's Vakeels, to ſee the treaty duly executed by the committee; and alſo with a ſeparate article in favour of Madjee Scindia, to which Meſſieurs Farmer and Holmes had been obliged to conſent.

By the treaty with the Durbar on the one part, and the Engliſh Company on the other, it is ſtipulated,

That the Engliſh ſhall remain on the ſame footing as they were in the time of Madarow.

That the iſlands of Salſette, Ouran, and other iſlands and places, ſhall be given up:

Alſo Jamboſeer, and the diſtricts of Broach:

Alſo Chickly, Veriow, &c.

And the Bengal detachment ordered back to Calcutta: which Meſſieurs Carnac and Egerton promiſe faithfully to perform; and for which performance they pledge the Engliſh faith.

And concerning the above agreement, it is ſtated, that Mr. John Carnac and Colonel Charles Egerton, of the Select Committee of Bombay, being fully empowered, did depute Mr. Thomas Holmes and Mr. Farmer.

The ſeparate article is ſtiled an agreement between John Carnac, Eſquire, Counſellor, and Colonel Charles Egerton, an Engliſh committee of Bombay, with Madjee Scindia.

And the terms of that agreement being more extraordinary and degrading than the public treaty, the Committee have thought it right to inſert the ſame in this place without any abridgment.

Agreement of John Carnac, Eſquire, Counſellor, and Colonel Egerton, an Engliſh Committee of Bombay, with Madjee Scindia.

That after falling out with the Circar of Mhaderow Narrain Pundit Purdhan, we * with an army came upon the

the Gaut, and remained at Tullagaun; on which you † ordered a fighting, and we, both parties did fight, in which we were defeated, returned back, and encamped at Worgaon with Dada ‡ Saheb. We ‖ could hardly reach Bombay with our army and ſtores; conſidering which, we ſent Meſſrs. Farmer and Holmes to you, deſiring you § would come between us, and get the Circars and our treaty ſettled as before, and conduct us and the army to Bombay. On which you did ſuſpend the war; you came between us, and got the Circar's and the Engliſh treaty ſettled; and you promiſed to conduct us and the army to Bombay without moleſtation from any body; you made our eſcape entirely; all which we took into our conſideration, and were very glad. You are a principal officer and well-wiſher to this Government, which has induced us to keep a friendſhip with you: this came into our mind; and we were ſatisfied that you made us free from the Circar's and every body's moleſtation, and got the treaty ſettled as before, without any diſpute from the Circar; therefore we thought we ſhould ſerve you; and for which reaſon have, of our free will and accord, agreed, under the King's and Company's ſeal, to deliver up to you the fort of Broach, with its Government, in the ſame manner the Mogul did hold it; which fort is now in our poſſeſſion, and which we have given you. We further agree that we will, on our arrival at Bombay, obtain the Governor's Duſtuck, under the King's ſeal, to the Killedar of Broach, and deliver the fort and its country, in the manner the Mogul did hold it, up to you. Under oath, no diſput ſhall ariſe in this. This we promiſe ſolemnly; and we have left Mr. Farmer and Mr. Charles Stewart with you, as hoſtages for the performance of this agreement. We will let no diſpute ariſe. This we agree to in writing.

Letter from, 27th March 1779, Par. 74.

And your Committee find, that on concluding the above treaties, preſents were made by the Poonah committee to officers of the Durbar, to the amount of 41,000 rupees, for which notes were given.

And your Committee find it minuted by Mr. Carnac on the proceedings of the Select Committee at Bombay, the 16th of March 1779, "That having, ſince his return from the expedition, peruſed the tranſlation of the treaty and ſeparate article, he finds them conceived in ſuch terms, that he ſhould certainly have objected thereto at the time of ſignature, had they been literally explained to him; but that he only underſtood the contents in general terms; and indeed was the more indifferent as to the particular wording of them, as he always bore in his mind the idea that they were of no validity, and would never be ratified by their ſuperiors."

Letter from, Par. 70.

And your Committee find, that Mr. William Gamul Farmer, late Secretary to the Poonah committee, and Lieutenant Charles Stewart, were left as hoſtages for the performances of the treaties concluded by the Poonah committee.

Letter from, 27 March 1779, Par. 73.

And your Committee likewiſe find, that the whole of the above tranſactions were completed before the Select Committee of Bombay could be informed thereof.

After the concluſion of the treaty, Mr. Carnac addreſſed Governor Hornby as follows:

Sir,

It is with the deepeſt grief and indignation I have to inform you, the army is returning very diſgracefully to Bombay. Indeed, the Commander in Chief, the ſecond in command, and I fear too many more of the officers are unfortunately ſo forcibly impreſſed with the idea that the troops would throw down their arms, and ſuffer themſelves to be cut to pieces if attacked on the march by the enemy, that I am confident they would, rather than have made the attempt, ſubmitted to any conditions, even to the whole of the forces ſurrendering themſelves priſoners of war, and remaining as hoſtages till Bombay was delivered up, if this had been inſiſted on. I moſt certainly recommend your keeping a profound ſecret what I now communicate, except that the army is on its way back, until I ſee you; and you may depend upon my coming forwards with Mr. Holmes, ſo ſoon as it can be done with ſafety.

You will be pleaſed to order boats immediately to Bellapore for the reception of the troops; and will endeavour to get a letter conveyed to Mr. Carnegie, directing him to ſend thither what boats can be collected at Carranjah.

Letter from, 27th March 1779, Par. 71.

And your Committee find that Meſſrs. Carnac and Egerton, the 16th of January 1779, directed Colonel Goddard to march back with the army under his command to Bengal; and that two days afterwards countermanded that order.

That on the 17th of January the Bombay troops began their march back to Bombay, and were eſcorted by a party of Maratta horſe to Panwell, which they reached in ſeven days, and from whence they were tranſported to Bombay.

Notwithſtanding the general character given of the troops by Mr. Carnac, your Committee find that he afterwards ſubſcribed to an exception, which, in the opinion of this Committee, would have fully juſtified his iſſuing the moſt poſitive orders for the army to attempt to force a retreat to Bombay.

In the letter of the Select Committee, dated the 27th of March 1779, par. 128, which is ſigned by Mr. Carnac, it is ſtated, that Captain Hartley, on that trying occaſion, notwithſtanding the contagion of bad example, inſiſted upon it, that he could depend on the men which he had commanded; that he actually put a ſtop at once to deſertion, ſo far as the limits of his command extended; that when conſulted, he urged every argument to attempt the forcing of a retreat, rather than ſubmit to the humiliating terms preſcribed by the enemy; that he even formed, and preſented to Colonel Cockburn, the neceſſary diſpoſition for conducting the retreat, and avoiding inconveniencies reſulting from a night march, and the diviſion of the troops.

Having ſtated the above particulars, your Committee remark, that the army was only 18 miles, or about two days march, from the ſummit of the Ghauts, and about 16 miles, or two days march from Poonah, on the 11th of January, when orders were given to march back towards Condolah; that advice had juſt been received of Moraba's horſe being in the Conkan to act in favour of Ragoba; that the Commiſſary had 18 days proviſions in ſtore; and that Ragoba had promiſed a further ſupply; that in every preceding ſkirmiſh, the enemy had been worſted, and compelled to retreat; that the troops were in ſpirits, and intrepid; that no council of war was called at Tullagaon to take the ſenſe of the officers of the army on the neceſſity of retreating; that although the order for the retreat of the army on the 11th of January was the joint act of Mr. Carnac and Colonel Egerton, yet as Mr. Carnac had a caſting vote in the Poonah committee, and poſſeſſed in fact ſupreme authority in camp at the time, he was more particularly reſponſible for that meaſure.

Sel. Letter from 27th March 1779 Par. 52.

And it appears by the return of the commanding officer, that our loſs of men in the action of the 12th of January, was not very great; the general orders of the day expreſs his extreme ſatisfaction with their gallant behaviour in general; the officers were publicly thanked for their cool and ſpirited conduct; and Captain Hartley was particularly diſtinguiſhed for his judgment as an officer: it is allowed that there were ten days proviſions in camp after the action; it is aſſerted by the Select Committee, that the officer laſt mentioned declared he could rely upon the men he commanded, and urged every argument in favour of forcing a retreat rather than ſubmit to the terms preſcribed by the enemy: it cannot be doubted, that Mr. Carnac continued in poſſeſſion of authority without controul, except to make treaties; he was confident, if the officers and men did their duty that the army was ſufficiently numerous, and ſo well provided vided with artillery as to be able to force their way back againſt all oppoſition; he had no doubt but the attempt ought to have been made; his words are, "at all events "rather than ſubmit to the terms preſcribed by the "enemy;" —yet, under all circumſtances, rather than preſs a retreat, he ventured to pledge the Engliſh faith, in the moſt ſolemn and ſacred manner, for the obſervance of treaties, of which he owns he did not at the time expect the confirmation. He ſtipulated to obtain the Governor's Duſtuck for delivering up the Company's poſſeſſions to the Marattas, and gave hoſtages for the due performance of extraordinary agreements, under mental reſervations and pre-conceived ideas that they were of no validity, and would never be ratified by his ſuperiors.

And your Committee do not find that any cenſure has been paſſed on Mr. John Carnac at Bombay; nor that any enquiry has been made by the Select Committee into his conduct and behaviour during the late expedition.

And upon the moſt impartial review of the whole conduct of Mr. Carnac during the late expedition towards Poonah, and after duly conſidering all the circumſtances relative thereto, the Committee are unanimouſly of opinion that Mr. John Carnac be diſmiſſed from his office, as one of the Council and Select Committee of Bombay.

Letter from, 27 March 1779, Par. 100. Alſo, Sel. Conf. 29 Jan. 1773.

And your Committee find, that on the 29th of January 1779, Governor Hornby delivered in a formal charge againſt Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, for refuſing to charge themſelves with conducting the army from Burgaum to Bombay; and that the ſaid charge was grounded on the written opinion of Colonel Cockburn, concurred in by Colonel Egerton, above mentioned.

In ſupport of this charge, the Governor remarked, that the general order of thanks to the troops, for their behaviour on the 12th of January, ſufficiently demonſtrated that the ſaid opinion was totally void of foundation: that the fatal influence and infection of ſuch opinions, when adopted by officers in ſuperior command, was well known: that it was not a matter of wonder if, under ſuch ſanction, ſimilar ſentiments had gained ſome ground: that this however could not be admitted in extenuation; and ſuppoſing it true, the commanding officers could not be allowed to ſupport their unſoldierly ſentiments by the authority of their inferior officers.

Your Committee do not find that any circumſtance reſpecting the different ſentiments and opinion expreſſed by Captain Hartley, relative to the propriety of attempting to force a retreat, as ſtated in the Select Letter of the 27th March, par. 128, was mentioned by Governor Hornby (or by any member of the Select Committee) when the Governor delivered in his charge againſt Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn; nor at any time before the date of the ſaid letter.

And your Committee find, that Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn has acknowledged, in his letter of the 16th of February 1779, that he gave the written opinion already ſtated: that it contained his real ſentiments of the army's ſituation: that having remained at Burgaum the 13th of January, without any thing being determined, cannonaded as uſual by the enemy; an European officer of Sepoys informed him at 8 in the evening, that he could not get his company to do their duty on the rear guard; that the black officers would not aſſiſt him: that it was apprehended they intended to deſert in the night:—That upon this information, he ordered Captain Samper to join the rear guard, with a view to look after the Sepoys: that another European officer, from the 6th battalion, brought him reports equally diſagreeable; that Ragoba informed him that 300 Sepoys intended to deſert that night; and that Mr. Sibbald, at midnight, communicated the ſame intelligence; that the language of the Europeans proved them to have been greatly alarmed, dejected, and diſpirited; that it was by no means correſpondent with their former ſteadineſs; that in ſpite of all precautions 11 black officers and 155 men, Europeans, Sepoys, and Laſcars, did deſert; that both Europeans and Sepoys continued ſo to do till after they left Burgaum; that ſuch another attack as that of the 12th of January, would nearly have exhauſted their ammunition; that the army was reduced 2,138 rank and file; that 300 ſick and wounded were to be taken care of; that the very exiſtence of the army neceſſitated him to give the opinion he delivered; and that Colonel Egerton was convinced of the propriety thereof.

Appendix. No. 130.

And your Committee find, that Colonel Cockburn has denied having abſolutely refuſed to charge himſelf with the conducting of the troops to Bombay; and declared, that all he meant was, that as he did not think it poſſible to effect a retreat, he could not be anſwerable for the bad conſequences which he foreſaw would follow: that if Mr. Carnac had ordered it to be attempted, he ſhould not have diſobeyed him, whatever conſequences might have enſued; that Mr. Carnac was all-powerful; that the only reſponſibility reſting with the commanding officer was, for the mode of executing any military meaſure, but not for the meaſure itſelf.

That Major Dagon had alſo wrote and ſigned an opinion, which agreed with that of Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, as to the impoſſibility of a retreat; that ſuch opinion was ready to have been delivered, but not demanded by Mr. Carnac.

That he had on former occaſions hazarded his life in the ſervice, and repeatedly led the Company's troops in attacks which have been attended with honour, and produced great advantages to the Company; and that Mr. Carnac himſelf had paſſed encomiums on his mode of conducting the troops, both in advancing and retreating, during the late ſervice; though now, for an opinion only given to the beſt of his judgment, he was to be ſtigmatized, and in a manner excluded the ſervice.

Letter from, 27th Mar. 1779, Par. 101.

And your Committee find, that when Governor Hornby preferred the charge againſt Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn and Colonel Egerton, he would have thought himſelf juſtified in moving for their ſuſpenſion from the ſervice, if they had not agreed to decline all military duty until their conduct and the late tranſactions ſhould have been ſtated to the Governor General and Council, and their opinion reſpecting the propriety of continuing the ſaid officers in, or of diſmiſſing them from the Company's ſervice, ſhould be received; by which opinion he declared it his intention to be guided. And your Committee find, that the caſe of Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, as well as that of Colonel Egerton, together with all proceedings relative to the late expedition, have been tranſmitted for the conſideration of the Governor General and Council accordingly.

Your Committee do not find that the Select Committee of Bombay have informed Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, of their being in poſſeſſion of the facts ſtated in their letter of the 27th of March, concerning Captain Hartley's opinion for attempting to force a retreat.

And your Committee find, that Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn entertained the higheſt opinion of Captain Hartley's abilities, previous to the action of the 12th of January, as appears by the following extracts of private correſpondence during the expedition.

Extract of a Letter from Governor Hornby to Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, dated the 5th January 1779.

"There is one other point on which I muſt deſire to be no leſs preſſing; which is, my recommendation of Captains Hartley and Stewart to you. I can aſſure you, that that in this I do not mean any perſonal mark of favour to either of them; but that the general good of the ſervice is my only object."

Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn's anſwer, dated the 8th of January 1779.

"You cannot have a higher opinion of Captain Hartley than I have; and I am ſo well convinced of his great abilities as an officer, and exceeding zeal to promote the ſervice, that he juſtly merits every attention and confidence from me. He was appointed by Colonel Egerton to take the command of the grenadier corps, when it became vacant a few days ago, by the moſt lamentable and unfortunate accident of the death of Captain Stewart."

Select Conſ. 16 Mar.

And your Committee find, that on the 13th day of March 1779, Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn entreated that a court martial might be ordered, to try him upon the charge delivered in againſt him by the Governor: that he was acquainted in anſwer, that as a reference to the Governor General and Council had been agreed upon, and accepted by him, and the neceſſary papers prepared for their information, there would be an impropriety in withdrawing the deciſion from their cognizance; for which reaſon, Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn's requeſt for a court martial was not granted. And your Committee remark, that the date of the requeſt for a court martial, is ſix weeks after the charge had been preferred againſt him by Governor Hornby.

And your Committee having maturely and deliberately conſidered the conduct of Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn during the late expedition, are unanimouſly of opinion, that he be diſmiſſed the ſervice of the Company.

Promotion of Captain James Hartley.

And your Committee find the following obſervations and reſolutions entered by the Select Committee of Bombay, on their proceedings of the 1ſt of February 1779; viz.

"The great importance in our preſent critical ſituation, of having an officer at the head of our infantry, on whoſe conduct we may ſafely rely; and the juſtice we owe to the ſervice, of diſtinguiſhing thoſe who eminently ſignalized themſelves on the late unfortunate expedition, unite in pointing out Captain James Hartley; who, on both conſiderations, is intitled to our firſt notice in the arrangements now indiſpenſably neceſſary to be made amongſt the field officers. Since Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn have choſe to decline all military duty and command, and the death of Lieutenant Colonel Cay, the chief command of the infantry has devolved by ſeniority to Major Emanuel Hanney, who, on his firſt appointment as a field officer, was barred from further promotion, and whom, on the 5th of laſt month, we found it neceſſary to ſuperſede in the field, by giving a Lieutenant Colonel's commiſſion to Major Dagon of the artillery: it is therefore deemed in no reſpect proper to advance him to a higher rank, or to continue him in command of our infantry; neither do we judge that Major Frederick, the next officer ſtanding, poſſeſſes ſufficient experience to qualify him for ſo important a charge, in theſe very critical times.

"In looking over our whole military liſt, no officer appears ſo fit for this command as Captain Hartley; his behaviour in a courſe of fourteen years ſervice has been unexceptionable, and to his conduct and intrepidity are we principally indebted for the preſervation of our whole army in the action of the 12th ultimo. His merit as an officer on the late ſervice is particularly acknowledged in the general orders given out by Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn and Colonel Egerton, immediately after the action, as entered hereafter. To which Mr. Carnac adds his teſtimony, in a manner much to Captain Hartley's honour.

"In theſe circumſtances, and prompted by our deſire to reward ſuch diſtinguiſhed merit, we do unanimouſly reſolve to appoint Captain James Hartley a Lieutenant Colonel of infantry, and ſtrongly ſolicit the Honourable Company to confirm this appointment; truſting that the uncommonneſs of the ſtep, and the reluctance we muſt naturally feel to all ſuperceſſion, will be a conviction to them of the grounds and neceſſity for this meaſure.

"We alſo conſider it equally incumbent on us to confer marks of our notice on the other officers, who particularly diſtinguiſhed themſelves on the late ſervice; and on this principle it is unanimouſly reſolved to confer, unſolicited, a Major's commiſſion on Captain Jno Weſtphall, the ſenior Captain of artillery, to which he has a right by ſeniority, and the late promotion of Lieutenant Colonel Dagon, and which he amply merits by his ability and ſignal good behaviour.

"Captain John Bellas, of the artillery, having likewiſe deſervedly attracted our notice, it is unanimouſly reſolved to appoint him Director of the Laboratory, for which he is well qualified, and which will be vacated by the promotion of Lieutenant Colonel Dagon, and the neceſſity of his attending to his other avocations as Commandant of artillery.

"Captain Alexander Cadger, of the infantry, having alſo behaved in a diſtinguiſhed manner, reſolved unanimouſly, that he be confirmed in command of the 5th battalion of Sepoys, vacant by the death of Captain James Stewart.

"Lieutenant Thomas Dawſon having proved himſelf a brave and active officer on this and every other ſervice on which he has been employed, it is unanimouſly reſolved, in order to convince the army that we will ſpare no effort to reward merit, to give Captains Brevets to three ſenior officers, that the promotion may reach Lieutenant Dawſon, who is alſo to have a Captain's Brevet. The three officers ſo to be promoted are, Lieutenants Lendrum, Bowles, and Peche; and we are glad to mention, that Lieutenant Bowles, who was on the late ſervice, has by his behaviour merited ſome mark of our notice.

"Lieutenant John Colbach, who is a ſenior officer to Lieutenant Dawſon, not being eſteemed properly qualified for a Captain's commiſſion, is not included in this promotion.

"Lieutenant John Rattray, of the Bengal eſtabliſhment, who arrived from England in the Royal Henry, and went a volunteer on the expedition, where, in the moſt trying ſituations, he gave eminent proofs of his ſkill and conduct as an officer, reſolved unanimouſly, that our thanks be given him in general orders; and as we ſhall be very glad to add ſuch a valuable officer to this eſtabliſhment, it is further unanimouſly reſolved to offer him a Captain's commiſſion, to rank next below Captain Dawſon.

"Lieutenants James Jackſon, and S^t Lo Thomas, of the artillery, having alſo merited particular notice, the former is appointed Aſſiſtant to the Director of the Laboratory, and the latter confirmed in his poſt of Adjutant, to which he was appointed on the expedition.

"Lieutenants Waddington, Bannatyne, Macpharſon, and Burchall, having alſo diſtinguiſhed themſelves in the action of the 12th, we ſhall be glad to give thoſe officers further proofs of our ſenſe of their good behaviour when opportunities offer; and it is now unanimouſly reſolved to give our particular thanks in the public orders of this garriſon.

"Reſolved unanimouſly, that our thanks in general be given to the whole of the officers whoſe behaviour has been commended in the above reſolutions; and if any inſtance of particular good behaviour has eſcaped our notice, we will with great pleaſure rectify the omiſſion.

"Reſolved

" Reſolved unanimouſly, That our thanks be given to the ſix companies of grenadier Sepoys that compoſed the rear diviſion under Captain Hartley, for their gallant behaviour on the 12th ultimo; and that badges be given them to commemorate the honour they gained on that occaſion.

" As in India ſervice in general, and particularly in our ſmall army, the charge and reſponſibility of each Captain is very great, and moſt dangerous conſequences may ariſe from improper perſons being promoted to that rank, Reſolved unanimouſly, and it muſt accordingly be ſignified to the army, that the Lieutenants will not in future be promoted in rotation to the rank of Captains, either in the infantry or artillery, unleſs they ſhall be judged fully qualified for that ſtation."

Bombay Gen. Conſ. 17th Feb. 1779.

And your Committee find, that on the 17th of February 1779, the Select Committee preſented to the Governor and Council the military commiſſions which they had deemed it for the good of the ſervice to grant to particular officers; but the Select Committee did not think it proper to explain their reaſons for having granted the ſaid commiſſions, when it was recommended to the Board to ſign them.

And your Committee find the following minutes entered by two members of the Board, who were not members of the Select Committee.

" Meſſrs. Ramſay and Moore deliver in the following minutes on the occaſion; and the other members declare, that by ſigning the commiſſions they do not mean to take any ſhare of reſponſibility for theſe appointments.

" Mr. Ramſay ſigns the commiſſions now preſented to the Board, becauſe the Select Committee recommend it as neceſſary for the good of the ſervice, and becauſe he thinks it will be agreeable to the Honourable Company, that the Board ſhould co-operate with the Committee in every meaſure which may be thought conducive to their intereſt; but as theſe commiſſions appear to Mr. Ramſay to be a deviation from the eſtabliſhed rules of the ſervice, and contrary to the expreſs orders of the Company, and as the Committee have not been pleaſed to communicate to the Board the motives which have induced them to grant them, Mr. Ramſay cannot poſſibly be a judge of the propriety or neceſſity of the meaſures, and therefore diſclaims every degree of reſponſibility for the ſame, more eſpecially as he is clearly of opinion, from the 48th paragraph of the Company's inſtructions to the Governor General and Council at Bengal, to which the other Preſidencies are directed to conform, that no Board in India have a power to grant a field officer's commiſſion.

" On this occaſion Mr. Ramſay begs leave to remark the very diſagreeable predicament he and the other members of the Board may be ſubjected to, by the Select Committee determining on meaſures to which, as in the inſtance now before us, it is neceſſary to have the ſanction of the Board's ſignature, though the members are deprived of the means of judging of the propriety of ſuch meaſures. Mr. Ramſay, for his own part, has not a doubt that the power of granting commiſſions alone reſts with the Governor and Council; and conſequently that all appointments ſhould originate with them, except in particular inſtances, where, in the courſe of military operations under the immediate direction of the Committee, it may become neceſſary to diſtinguiſh merit. This Mr. Ramſay ſuppoſes to be the caſe at preſent; but then he is of opinion the neceſſity of it ſhould be explained to the Board, and they become the judges; for it ſeems abſurd to ſuppoſe a member of the Board can be obliged to give his ſanction to a meaſure on which he has not been conſulted.

" The orders for the inſtitution of the Select Committee are certainly in ſuch general terms as may admit of their being conſtrued in the very extenſive ſenſe the members ſeem to have taken them. They are to tranſact all political, military, and naval affairs, and likewiſe all ſuch as may require ſecrecy. Theſe are, no doubt, very indefinite orders; but Mr. Ramſay, taking the ſpirit, and not the letter of the inſtitution, conceives they are meant to extend only to ſuch military and naval affairs as may depend on political meaſures, which the Honourable Company very wiſely think it proper to confine to a few, and by no means intended to throw the whole military detail of the eſtabliſhment into the Committee's department. To effect this, the mutiny act muſt neceſſarily be repealed, or at leaſt amended; and the Court of Directors muſt have ſeen the neceſſity of revoking former orders, whereby the ſupreme military power is expreſsly veſted in the Governor and Council, and they required to ſign all commiſſions. Had they meant to tranſfer theſe powers to the Committee, they moſt certainly would have ſaid ſo in expreſs terms, and not have taken it for granted, that the appointment of the Committee would ſet aſide all former orders on the ſubject. Mr. Ramſay requeſts this his opinion may ſtand recorded; at the ſame time declaring, that he will at all times, when called upon, co-operate in carrying into execution all meaſures which the Committee may deem for the Company's intereſt."

Appendix, No. 130.

" Mr. Moore begs it may be minuted, that he ſigns the commiſſions now preſented to the Board by the members of the Select Committee for ſigning, from the following principles:

" 1ſt. Becauſe he has not a doubt but the members of the Select Committee, by giving the commiſſions they now give to Colonel Hartley, Captain Dawſon, and Captain Rattray, are convinced that it is neceſſary for the good of the ſervice that ſuch commiſſions ſhould be given, and that they are given as rewards of diſtinguiſhed merit.

" 2d. Becauſe the Honourable the Court of Directors, in their commands of the 10th April 1778, to the Board at large, expreſs themſelves, after appointing the preſent Select Committee for tranſacting all political, military, and naval affairs, as follows:

" We direct that all orders and inſtructions which " ſhall be iſſued by our ſaid Select Committee, be iſſued " in the name of the Preſident and Select Committee; " and that all ſuch orders be implicitly obeyed by every " perſon in our ſervice, or enjoying our protection, civil " or military, on pain of ſuſpenſion, or of forfeiting our " licenſe and protection."

" Mr. Moore further begs it may be minuted, that from the cloſeſt conſideration of the power veſted in the Select Committee, as above recited, he is of opinion that the Select Committee are alone authorized to grant all military commiſſions whatever, they alone being reſponſible for granting them. The commiſſions now before the Board are, to Mr. Moore, proofs that the Select Committee think themſelves ſo authoriſed. Mr. Moore therefore, his ſigning commiſſions, without being conſulted as to the propriety of granting them, Mr. Moore not only thinks unneceſſary, but abſurd, becauſe it fixes his name to a meaſure which conſequently carries with it the appearance of approbation.

" When Mr. Draper preſented Lieutenant Colonel Dagon's commiſſion to the Board for ſigning, which commiſſion was given by the Select Committee, Mr. Moore then mentioned to Mr. Draper, that as the Select Committee had granted the commiſſion, he thought the Select Committee alone ſhould ſign it. Mr. Moore ſigned it, however, to avoid the appearance of ſingularity, becauſe he thought the occaſion an urgent one, and becauſe he never wiſhes to enter a minute, whether of diſſent or obſervation, unleſs compelled to it from the duty which he owes to the Company, to the public, and to himſelf.

" The commiſſions were then ſigned."

And the Select Committee of Bombay have moſt earneſtly ſolicited the Court's confirmation of the appointment of Captain

Appendix. No. 130.

Captain Hartley as Lieutenant Colonel of infantry, in order to convince the army, that ſupport will be given to the Select Committee when the good of the ſervice makes it requiſite to diſtinguiſh particular officers. The Select Committee are ſorry to have acted contrary to the Court's orders in the promotion of field officers, but hope the neceſſity of the caſe will plead their excuſe: that on the terms they are on with the Marattas, and at a time of actual war with France, it would have been highly unjuſtifiable to have ſuffered their military to remain for any length of time, without a commanding officer qualified to preſerve proper diſcipline, or to lead them into the field.

Par 121. That the times required an officer who had more to plead than merely not having committed faults; they wanted an officer of active and approved merit, on whoſe ability and conduct they could depend for the execution of any ſervice committed to him.

123. That the loſs of Captain Stewart had been ſeverely felt. That the conduct of Captain Hartley, who on the death of Captain Stewart ſucceeded to the command of the advanced diviſion of the army, did him honour; that if his judicious and ſpirited counſel had been purſued, and the army moved up the line to ſupport him, inſtead of ordering him to retreat to the line, there is reaſon to believe that the fortune of the day might have ſecured our honour, if not our ſucceſs; and that keeping his ground till the inevitable conſequence of the meaſure induced Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn to revoke his order for retreating, was probably the chief circumſtance to which our troops owed their preſervation.

125. That when two chief officers were under cenſure for conduct oppoſite to that which the Select Committee are bound to ſupport, and to that ſpirit which it is their duty to encourage; when ſeniority, maintained by any means, is pleaded by ſo many perſons, and claims promotion in preference to diſtinguiſhed merit and ſervices, it is impoſſible for the Select Committee to produce thoſe general and deciſive teſtimonies in favour of their aſſertions and opinions which they always wiſh to accompany them: that in the preſent critical circumſtances their own intereſt is too much complicated with that of the public, to ſuffer them to be ſwayed by motives of partial or private regard; and while they are conſcious of having been guided by the abilities, integrity, temper, and general eſtimation of the perſon, they believe they have paid ſuch attention to the Company's intereſt as their duty exacted; and they rely on that ſupport which the performance of duty requires, and warrants them to hope for on the occaſion.

Extract of Letter from the Court of Directors to the Select Committee of Bombay, dated 12th April 1780.

Par. 1. Having duly attended to your proceedings previous to the late expedition towards Poonah, we allow that your reſolution of the 21ſt of July was not improper, under the favourable circumſtances ſtated by you at that period; but the change which happened ſoon afterwards in the ſituation of Ragoba's friends, and the laps of time, from the 21ſt of July to the 22d of November, rendered it extremely imprudent to undertake the expedition at that time.

2. The ſtate of your garriſon, as repreſented by yourſelves to Sir Edward Vernon in your letter of the 8th of September 1778, could not warrant your ſending ſo large a force on foreign ſervice at the commencement of an European war, more eſpecially when ſpeedy ſuccour was rendered precarious, and conſequently ſucceſs very doubtful by the diſagreeable alteration which had happened in the ſituation of Ragoba's friends.

3. Under the above circumſtances the undertaking was evidently become hazardous, and not to be juſtified; the reaſons urged by Mr. Draper againſt it were ſolid and judicious; and you ought certainly to have waited the arrival or near approach of the Bengal detachment, before you attempted to reinſtate Ragoba at Poonah.

4. And although we are willing to hope, for the reaſons offered by the majority in anſwer to Mr. Draper's diſſent, that you acted according to the beſt of your judgment in undertaking to place Ragoba in the Regency at Poonah in November 1778, we nevertheleſs conſider you as having proceeded with great indiſcretion on that occaſion.

5. Your appointment of a member of the Select Committee, to accompany the Commander in Chief to Poonah, was highly improper. By the departure of the Commander in Chief and Mr. Carnac, the Governor having a caſting vote, became poſſeſſed in fact of abſolute authority, for tranſacting all political, military, and naval affairs, and ſuch as require ſecrecy at Bombay. And as this tranſaction militated againſt the letter and ſpirit of the Court's orders of the 10th of April 1778, the appointment of a member of the Select Committee at Bombay, to accompany the Commander in Chief to Poonah, muſt have our diſapprobation; and we declare the majority of the ſaid Committee very reprehenſible for their conduct in that reſpect. We find the Commander in Chief proteſted againſt the meaſure; and we exempt Mr. Draper from this cenſure, becauſe, juſtly ſuppoſing it to be the intent of the Company that none of the civil members of the Committee ſhould be detached from the Preſidency, if the Commander in Chief were to be abſent alſo, Mr. Draper very properly delivered his opinion in the Select Committee accordingly.

6. We find the amount of money due from Ragoba to the Company, is ſtated on your quick ſtock the 30th day of April 1777, at rupees 24,72,775.

7. Your payment of 80,000 rupees to Mr. Shaw's executors, and your loan of four lacks to Ragoba, and 15,000 rupees to his ſervants, beſides arms and military ſtores furniſhed for his uſe, were unjuſtifiable meaſures; more eſpecially as ſo large a ſum as 1,50,000 rupees was ſent with the troops, and as authority was alſo granted to the Commiſſary and Paymaſter to paſs drafts on the Select Committee for their neceſſary diſburſements during the expedition; and we find that bills have actually been accepted on that account, to the amount of rupees, 2,28,529. Unleſs, therefore, you ſhall be able to produce better reaſons for having made the above loans, and payment, amounting to 4,95,000 rupees, than appear to us at preſent, you muſt expect to be made reſponſible to the Company for the ſaid amount.

8. As a Select Committee, your granting of military commiſſions was unwarrantable; your preſenting them to the Council for ſigning, without ſtating your reaſons for having granted them, was an indignity to the Board; and the Council are very blameable for not rejecting every commiſſion ſo preſented by you as aforeſaid.

9. Having noticed the above particulars, we proceed to examine the behaviour of ſuch perſons as were immediately concerned in conducting the late expedition towards Poonah.

10. The firſt object that ſtrikes us, is the ſlow progreſs of the army. This we deem an irreparable injury to the ſervice; and in this reſpect the conduct of the Commander in Chief appears extremely defective. The conſequence was obvious: the enemy had full opportunity to collect their ſtrength: the friends of Ragoba, inſtead of being encouraged by the ſpirited exertion of our force to join his ſtandard, muſt, as we conceive, have been deterred from declaring in his favour, by the languor of our own military proceedings.

11. And upon the moſt impartial review of the conduct of the late Colonel, now Brigadier General Egerton, during the late diſgraceful expedition towards Poonah, we are of opinion, that it was ſuch as rendered it highly improper for him to be continued in the command of the Company's forces at Bombay; we have therefore reſolved,

That

That he be diſmiſſed from the Company's ſervice, and he is hereby diſmiſſed accordingly.

12. In regard to Mr. Carnac, we are very ſorry to find his conduct not leſs exceptionable than that of Colonel Egerton.

13. We remark, that the army was only eighteen miles, or about two days march from the ſummit of the Gauts, and about ſixteen miles, or two days march from Poonah, on the 11th January, when orders were given to march back towards Condolah: That advice had juſt been received, of Moraba's horſe being in the Conkan, to act in favour of Ragoba: that the commiſſary had eighteen days proviſions in ſtore, and that Ragoba had promiſed a further ſupply: That in the preceding ſkirmiſh, the enemy had been worſted, and compelled to retreat: That the troops were in ſpirits, and intrepid: That no council of war was called at Tullagoan, to take the ſenſe of the officers of the army on the neceſſity of retreating: That although the order for the retreat of the army, on the 11th of January, was the joint act of Mr. Carnac and Colonel Egerton, yet as Mr. Carnac had a caſting vote in the Poonah committee, and poſſeſſed in fact ſupreme authority in camp at the time, he was particularly reſponſible for that meaſure.

14. It appears, by the return of the commanding officer, that our loſs of men in the action of the 12th January, was not very great. The general orders of the day expreſs his extreme ſatisfaction with their gallant behaviour in general. The officers were publicly thanked for their cool and ſpirited conduct; and Captain Hartley was particularly diſtinguiſhed for his judgment as an officer. It is allowed, that there were ten days proviſion in camp after the action. It is aſſerted, by the Select Committee, that the officer laſt mentioned, declared, he could rely upon the men he commanded; and urged every argument in favour of forcing a retreat, rather than to ſubmit to the humiliating terms preſcribed by the enemy. It cannot be doubted that Mr. Carnac, continued in poſſeſſion of authority without controul, except to make treaties. He was confident, if the officers and men did their duty, that the army was ſufficiently numerous, and ſo well provided with artillery, as to be able to force their way back againſt all oppoſition. He had no doubt but the attempt ought to be made. His words are, "At all events, rather than ſubmit to the "terms preſcribed by the enemy;" yet under all circumſtances rather than preſs a retreat, he ventured to pledge the Engliſh faith in the moſt ſolemn and ſacred manner, for the obſervance of treaties, of which he owns he did not at the time expect a confirmation. He ſtipulated to obtain the Governor's Duſtuck for delivering up the Company's poſſeſſions to the Marattas; and gave hoſtages for the due performance of extraordinary agreements, under mental reſervations and preconceived ideas that they were of no validity, and would never be ratified by his ſuperiors.

15. Notwithſtanding the deſpicable character given of the troops by Mr. Carnac, in his letter to Governor Hornby, when the army was on its return to Bombay, we find that he afterwards ſubſcribed to an exception, which in our opinion would have fully juſtified his iſſuing the moſt poſitive orders for the army to attempt to force a retreat from Wurgaon to Bombay, rather than ſubmit to the diſgraceful conditions preſcribed by the enemy.

16. In your letter of the 27th of March, 1779, par. 128, which is ſigned by Mr. Carnac, it is ſtated, that Captain Hartley on that trying occaſion, notwithſtanding the contagion of bad example, inſiſted upon it, that he could depend on the men which he had commanded. That he actually put a ſtop at once to deſertion ſo far as the limits of his command extended; that when conſulted, he urged every argument to attempt the forcing of a retreat, rather than ſubmit to the humiliating terms preſcribed by the enemy; that he even formed and preſented Colonel Cockburn the neceſſary diſpoſition for conducting the retreat, and for avoiding inconveniences reſulting from a night march, and the diviſion of the troops.

Appendix. No. 130.

17. And we do not find that any cenſure has been paſſed on Mr. Carnac at Bombay; nor that any enquiry has been made by the Select Committee into his conduct and behaviour during the late expedition.

18. And upon the moſt impartial review of the whole conduct of Mr. Carnac during the late expedition towards Poonah, and after duly conſidering all the circumſtances relative thereto, we have reſolved that John Carnac, Eſquire, be diſmiſſed from his office, as one of the Council and Select Committee of Bombay; and he is hereby diſmiſſed accordingly.

19. The charge brought by Governor Hornby againſt Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn was very proper; but we do not find it noticed on your proceedings on that occaſion that Captain Hartley had given a different opinion, concerning the propriety of attempting to force a retreat from Wurgoan; nor that you have, in any ſtage of the buſineſs, informed Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn of your being in poſſeſſion of that fact; which certainly you ought to have done. We find Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn has acknowledged that he gave the written opinion contained in the Governor's charge againſt him; and upon the moſt mature conſideration of his conduct, we have reſolved to diſmiſs Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn from the ſervice of the Company, and he is hereby diſmiſſed accordingly.

20. We are ſorry to obſerve, that in appointing Captain James Hartley to be a Lieutenant Colonel of infantry on the Bombay eſtabliſhment, you have concurred unanimouſly in a direct breach of the Company's orders; but as you have repreſented the merit and ſervices of Lieutenant Colonel Hartley in a light ſo very favourable for that officer, we have reſolved, rather than degrade an officer whoſe ability and merit ſeems univerſally acknowledged, that Lieutenant Colonel Hartley ſhall remain the youngeſt of that rank at Bombay; but that he ſhall, from the receipt of this letter at Bombay, receive the pay and allowances of Captain of infantry only, until ſuch meritorious officers as have been ſuperſeded by his promotion, ſhall have riſen in regular ſucceſſion above him, to the rank of Lieutenant Colonel.

21. Having taken into our particular and moſt ſerious conſideration the ſtate of the Company's military force at your ſettlement, we have reſolved to appoint an able officer to the command of the troops at Bombay.

22. And having the higheſt opinion of the zeal, experience, and military abilities of Colonel Thomas Goddard, we have thought fit to appoint Colonel Goddard Commander in Chief of the Company's forces at Bombay, and granted him a commiſſion of Brigadier General in our ſervice.

23. We have alſo requeſted his Majeſty to grant a commiſſion of Brigadier General, with local rank, to Colonel Thomas Goddard, which we doubt not will be granted accordingly.

24. We feel the moſt ſenſible concern for the ſituation of Mr. William Gamul Farmer and Lieutenant Stewart, as hoſtages for the performance of the convention of Wurgaon; but as we have no doubt, but that meaſures will have been taken, either by you or by our Governor General and Council, to procure their liberty before this letter can reach you, we for the preſent only add, that early information of their enlargement will afford us very great ſatisfaction.

25. We direct that no additional pay or emolument be allowed to Lieutenants Dawſon, Lindrum, Bowles, and Piché, in conſequence of brevets granted to thoſe officers. By a future opportunity we ſhall conſider the propriety of revoking or of finally confirming the ſaid brevets.

26. It is our pleaſure that Mr. Daniel Draper be ſecond of Council, and of the Select Committee at Bombay. And as a further teſtimony of our approbation of the conduct of Mr. Draper, it is also our pleasure that Mr. Draper do succeed, and we hereby expressly appoint him to succeed to the office of President and Governor of Bombay, upon the death, removal, or resignation of Governor Hornby.

27. It is our order that Brigadier General Goddard, have a constant seat as third in our said Council and Select Committee. We likewise direct, that Mr. Henry Moore be the fourth member of our Select Committee at Bombay.

28. As a further mark of our approbation of the conduct of Brigadier General Goddard, we have directed, that the pay and allowances received by him from Bengal, as Commander in Chief of the detachment sent from that settlement, be continued to him, and paid by our Governor General and Council, so long as those troops shall remain under General Goddard's command on the western side of India; he must also receive the pay and allowances of third of our Council and Select Committee at Bombay: but if our Governor General and Council shall recal the Bengal detachment, the pay and allowances received by General Goddard on that account must be discontinued, and cease immediately upon the return of the said detachment, as it will then be no longer under his authority or command; and after that period, General Goddard must receive the pay and allowances of our Commander in Chief of our troops at Bombay.

APPENDIX, No. 131.

At a Committee of Secrecy of the East India Company, Friday 31st July 1778,

PRESENT,

Sir George Wombwell, Baronet, Chairman,
Sir William James, Baronet, Deputy,
John Purling, and William Devaynes, } Esquires.

RESOLVED, That in addition to the military force promised by Administration, a further supply of troops is necessary for the protection of the Company's settlements, and that the Chairman and Deputy Chairman do attend his Majesty's Ministers, to request that such additional supply of troops may be granted for that purpose as to His Majesty in his great wisdom shall seem fit.

Ordered, That draft of instructions to Bombay be prepared relative to Ragoba, to the views of the French, and to the situation of affairs in that part of India.

Thursday 13th August 1778.

At a Committee of Secrecy;—present, Sir George Wombwell, Baronet, Chairman; Sir William James, Baronet, Deputy; Mr. Sulivan, Mr. Devaynes, Mr. Purling, Mr. Roberts, Mr. Booth.

Read the following draft of instructions to Bombay.—(See page 300 of the Sixth Report.)

N. B.—The above was dated the 31st of August, and signed

G. Wombwell,
Wm James,
Will. Devaynes.

Ordered, That the foregoing instructions to Bombay, be transmitted to Lord Weymouth, with the following letter:—

My Lord,

In addition to the orders and instructions sent over land to our settlements in India, a draft whereof we had the honour of transmitting to your Lordship with our letter of the 11th of April last, we now beg leave to lay before you the draft of a further letter to be written to our President and Council of Bombay, if it shall be honoured with His Majesty's approbation.

The advices of our servants respecting the proceedings of the French in India, are already before your Lordship; and therefore we have to request, that you will be pleased to communicate to us His Majesty's pleasure on the enclosed orders and instructions immediately, a messenger being ready to proceed over land to Bombay, by the way of Bussorah, as we conceive it essentially necessary that no time be lost, if the measure be adopted.

We have the honour to be,
My Lord,
Your Lordship's most obedient,
most humble servants,
G. Wombwell,
East India House, Wm James,
13th August 1778. W. Devaynes.

Read, and approved unanimously, the following draft of a letter to Lord Weymouth:—

My Lord,

The Secret Committee of the Court of Directors of the East India Company having on the 31st ultimo resolved,

"That in addition to the military force promised by "Administration, a further supply of troops is necessary "for the protection of the Company's settlements; and "that the Chairman and Deputy Chairman do attend "His Majesty's Ministers, to request that such addi- "tional supply of troops may be granted for that pur- "pose, as to His Majesty in his great wisdom shall seem "fit."

And the Deputy Chairman having, on the 1st instant, in consequence of the said resolution, laid the Committee's humble request before your Lordship, you will permit us farther to entreat that the King's pleasure may be speedily communicated thereon, in order that proper dispositions may be made for the reception and accommodation on board our ships, of such troops as His Majesty shall be graciously pleased to grant, for the protection of the Company's settlements.

We have the honour to be,
My Lord,
Your Lordship's most obedient,
and most faithful humble servants,
G. Wombwell,
East India House, Wm James,
13th August 1778. Wm Devaynes.

Ordered, That the above letter be wrote fair, and transmitted to Lord Weymouth immediately.

Wednesday, 26th August 1778.—At a Committee of Secrecy;—present, Sir William James, Baronet, Chairman; Mr. Devaynes, Mr. Roberts, and Mr. Sulivan.

Read the following letter from Lord Weymouth, dated the 22d instant:

"St. James's 22d August 1778.

"Gentlemen,

"Your letters of the 13th instant were duly received, "and laid before the King.

"The draft of your secret letter to Bombay has been "taken into consideration. It is extremely expedient "that every means should be used to prevent the French "from extending their influence at Poonah, and getting "any footing in that part of India; but whether the "taking Ragoba by the hand is the most proper means "must be left to your determination.

"With respect to your application for an additional "military force, I have in command to acquaint you, "that in case the Company will pay the expence of "raising and maintaining a new battalion, His Majesty

" will have no objection that ſuch means may be pro-
" poſed for that purpoſe, as you ſhall ſee likely to have " effect.

" I am, Gentlemen,
" Your moſt obedient
" humble Servant,
" Weymouth."

" Chairman and Deputy Chairman
" of the Eaſt India Company."

The Committee having taken his Lordſhip's letter into their ſerious conſideration, it is upon a queſtion reſolved unanimouſly, That it is not neceſſary, in conſequence thereof, to make any alteration in the ſecret letter propoſed to be ſent to Bombay.

Ordered, That the letter to Bombay be forthwith put in cypher, and prepared for ſigning.

Ordered, That letters be prepared in cypher to the Governor General and Council at Fort William, and to the Select Committee at Fort Saint George, tranſmitting copies of the Committee's orders to Bombay, and enjoining the ſtricteſt attention thereto.

27th Auguſt 1778.

Wrote the following letter to Sir George Wombwell, by order of the Deputy Chairman:

Sir,

The Committee of Secrecy, aſſiſted by Mr. Sulivan, have reſolved that no alteration ſhall be made in the letter propoſed to be ſent to Bombay, and directed that it be put in cyper immediately.

As the powers of the Committee of Secrecy had expired, and are now revived, a ſhort letter on that ſubject has been propoſed and ſigned by the Court; copy whereof I beg leave to encloſe for your peruſal.

Sir William James has this morning had an interview with Lord North, on the ſubject of that part of Lord Weymouth's letter which ſtates the conditions on which an additional battalion of men may be raiſed for the ſervice of the Company. Extracts of proceedings have been ſelected, in order to aſcertain the ſpecific allowance heretofore made, when his Majeſty's troops ſerved in India. Theſe extracts have juſt been tranſmitted to Lord North by the Deputy Chairman, and a copy is preparing for your inſpection.

As the Select Committee at Bombay have not been informed from hence of the orders ſent by the Committee of Secrecy to Fort Saint George and Bengal, the 15th of April laſt, a copy of thoſe orders is now prepared in cypher, in order to be tranſmitted by the intended conveyance to Bombay. You will alſo receive herewith draft of ſhort letter to Bengal and to Fort Saint George, covering the preſent orders wrote in cypher to Bombay, and enjoining attention thereto. This draft waits your approbation, and if approved will be ſigned by the Committee of Secrecy only.

The encloſed letter to your addreſs was received this afternoon by the Hawke from Bombay.

The ſubſtance of the papers ſent to Lord North is, that the Company have allowed levy money, £. 3 per head; alſo a ſum of money to the Colonels of marching regiments, to enable them to replace the cloathing and accoutrements of non-commiſſioned officers and private men taken from their reſpective regiments; alſo an allowance for the paſſage of ſuch officers and men as went on board the Company's own ſhips; alſo an allowance to the field officers for a table, &c. in India; and finally, ſuch additional pay to both officers and privates as rendered their whole allowance equal to the pay and batta to the Company's troops in India.

I have the honour to be, with the moſt perfect conſideration,

Sir,
Your moſt obedient and faithful humble ſervant,
Sam. Wilks.

Eaſt India Houſe,

Downing Street, Monday 31ſt Auguſt 1778.—At a Committee of Secrecy;—preſent, Sir George Wombwell, Baronet, Chairman; Sir William James, Baronet, Deputy; William Devaynes, Eſquire. Appendix. No. 131.

The Committee being met to ſign inſtructions to the ſeveral Preſidencies in India, the following were ſigned accordingly:

Letter from the Committee of Secrecy to the Preſident and Select Committee at Bombay, dated this day; alſo,

Letter to the Governor General and Council at Fort William, dated the ſame day; alſo, Letter to the Preſident and Select Committee at Fort Saint George, dated the ſame day.

Our Preſident and Select Committee at Fort Saint George.

Encloſed we tranſmit you copy of a letter wrote in cypher to the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, dated this day, to which we enjoin your ſtrict attention. The like copy has been ſent to our Governor General and Council at Fort William in Bengal, with the ſame injunction. And as we muſt ſuppoſe that our orders of the 15th April laſt will have been duly executed before this comes to hand, we can have no doubt of your ability and readineſs ſo to co-operate with our ſaid Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, as ſhall enable them to accompliſh effectually the meaſures recommended to their immediate conſideration.

We tranſmit for your information extract of a letter from our Governor and Deputy Governor of Saint Helena, dated the 20th of May 1778; alſo one from Captain Douglas, dated the 10th of June 1778; and from our Secretary, of this day's date, to the Agent and Council at Buſſorah.

We are
Your loving friends,
G. Wombwell,
Wm James,
Wm Davaynes.

London,
31ſt Auguſt 1778.

The letter to Bengal is ſimilar to the above, except the following addition:

Poſtſcript. As hoſtilities have actually commenced between Great Britain and France, and as we think it probable that our ſervants on the coaſt of Coromandel may ſtand in need of aſſiſtance from you, we direct that you fail not, upon their application, to afford them ſuch aſſiſtance, in money or otherwiſe, as the exigence of the caſe may require.

G. Wombwell,
Wm James,
W. Davaynes.

Ordered, That the above diſpatches be delivered to Lieutenant Colonel James Capper.

Sir William James deſires, that the following extracts may be entered upon the minutes of the Committee:

Extract of a Letter from John Purling, Eſquire, to Sir William James, dated Weymouth, 29th Auguſt 1778.

" I am glad you perſevere in ſending your diſpatches
" over land.

" Your orders relative to Ragoba are ſo guarded that,
" truſted to the execution of prudence, I think no harm
" can come of them; and I muſt ſay the conduct of the " Governor and Council of Bombay, in all matters
" concerning the Marattas, has been extremely prudent
" and ſenſible."

Extract of a Letter from Robert Gregory, Eſquire, to Sir William James; dated Cool Lodge, near Gort, Ireland, 12th Auguſt 1778.

" I wiſh we could bring about an alliance with Hyder
" Ally, and place Ragoba on the Muſnud of Poonah; we " ſhould then have little to fear from the French on the " continent of India."

A general liſt of ſhips entertained to this time for the Company's ſervice is ſent under this cover; that you communicate copies thereof in the ſpeedieſt manner to their ſeveral ſettlements, by ſuch conveyances as ſhall offer from your port.

The ſituation of public affairs, ſince you was laſt adviſed thereof, renders a rupture between the Britiſh and French crown inevitable.

His Majeſty's fleet, under the command of Admiral Keppel, has actually had a ſmart engagement with the French, on the 27th July laſt; and though the latter were compelled to retreat into Breſt, you are nevertheleſs to make the cautions given by the Court's orders, in my letter of the 15th of April laſt, the rule for exerting yourſelves, in order to ſecure the property and concerns of the Company committed to your care.

The Court having received intelligence of ſome cruizers ſaid to have been lately on their way to the Eaſt Indies, copy thereof is encloſed for your notice; and that you may immediately make the ſame known to all our Preſidencies, in order that the Company's ſhipping and the country trade may be put well on their guard againſt the deſigns and operations of thoſe cruizers.

APPENDIX, No. 132.

Letter from the Governor General and Council, 15th October 1778.

Received at Bombay 18 Dec. 1778. Sel. Conſ.

To the Honourable William Hornby, Eſquire, Preſident and Gentlemen of the Select Committee, Bombay.

Gentlemen,

WE have not received any letters from you ſince the date of your diſpatches by the Terrible of the 25th July laſt; but we have been informed, by letters received from Mr. Lewis, dated the 6th Auguſt, that Nanna Furneſe had effected the impriſonment of Morabah and Buchaba, by means of a preſent of three lacks of rupees given to Madjee Scindia; that Nannah, Succaram, Scindia, Holkar, Hurry Punt, &c. had aſſembled their forces on a plain near Poonah; and that the Durbar were concerting ſchemes to oppoſe and diſtreſs the detachment; and that they had actually circulated orders to the different Rajahs, to practiſe every ſecret and underhand means in their power to effect this purpoſe.

We adviſed you in our laſt of the appointment of Mr. Elliot to proceed to the Court of Moodajee Booſla, the Rajah of Berar, with inſtructions to negociate and conclude a treaty of alliance with that Chief: but we are now concerned to inform you of the demiſe of Mr. Elliot on his way to Naguepore, at a place called Sarungar. The Rajah having expreſſed great ſatisfaction at the overtures which we made for a connection with him by this deputation; and being, as we have every reaſon to believe, firm in his attachment to the Engliſh, we conclude, as ſoon as he hears of the unfortunate event of Mr. Elliot's death, that he will take an active part in proſecuting the intended negociation either by deputing a proper miniſter to us, on his part, or by ſoliciting our alliance on ſuch terms as may prove a general advantage to the Company's poſſeſſions. For theſe reaſons, we do not mean to appoint any perſon to ſucceed Mr. Elliot, until our advices from the Rajah ſhall enable us to determine on the expediency of that meaſure.

We have thought it incumbent on us to remove Colonel Leſlie from the command of the detachment of forces, which was ordered to march for the ſupport and aſſiſtance of your Preſidency, on account of the little progreſs it had made under him; as we underſtand that he was advanced no further than Rajigur on the 25th ultimo; and of his manifeſt diſobedience alſo of our poſitive orders, in forming and concluding a treaty of perpetual peace and friendſhip, in the name of the Company, with the Rajahs Gomaun and Comaun Sing, Chiefs of a part of the Bundlecund diſtrict.

Colonel Thomas Goddard is now appointed to the chief command of theſe troops, and we have ordered him to proſecute his march without loſs of time into Berar; where on his arrival he will apply to Moodajee Booſla, and if that Chief ſhall agree to join him with a ſufficient body of forces for the purpoſe, he is to continue his route in conjunction with them, and to obey all orders which he may receive from you; but if he ſhall not have received any freſh directions for his march, and if the Rajah ſhall decline or refuſe to grant his aſſiſtance, we have then veſted in him a diſcretionary power to ſuſpend his proceedings.

If the plan which you had reſolved to adopt, and to carry into execution in September, for the reſtoration of Ragoba, and which you notified to us in your letter of the 25th July, ſtill ſubſiſts; or if you ſhall have formed any other for the ſame end, conſiſtently with the terms which we have already preſcribed for our aſſent to that meaſure; or if you ſhall judge a ſtrong reinforcement immediately and indiſpenſably neceſſary to enſure the ſafety of Bombay againſt a French invaſion, and ſhall deem it requiſite and adviſable, in either of theſe caſes, to command the detachment at all hazards to proceed further towards Bombay, even without a junction of the troops of any Power in alliance with us; you will in ſuch caſes, and ſuch only, require Colonel Goddard to advance with it; but in all others you will give him notice of your intentions, and leave him to act under our directions. Appendix. Nos. 132 to 134.

We diſpatched the Morning Star in the beginning of laſt month to Fort Saint George, in conſequence of the requeſt of the Preſident and Council there; and we take the firſt opportunity of the favourable ſeaſon for ordering the Terrible, which ought to have ſailed in company with the Morning Star, but was prevented by the want of men, to return to your port.

Your moſt obedient humble ſervants,

APPENDIX, No. 133.

Letter from Governor General and Council to Bombay, 23d November 1778.

Gentlemen,

IN our letter of the 16th inſtant we informed you, that we had thought it proper to inveſt Colonel Goddard with full powers to conclude a treaty with Moodajee Booſla, Rajah of Berar, on the grounds of our inſtructions to the late Mr. Elliot; of which we encloſe a copy for your information. As the event of his negociation is likely to cauſe a very ſpeedy and eſſential change in the deſigns and operations of the detachment; and as the plan which we have choſen to ſupply the place of that originally recommended by you, has rendered it neceſſary that we ſhould retain in our hands the means of effecting it; we hereby revoke the power which we gave you in our letter of the 15th ultimo, and ſhall direct the commanding officer of the detachment to obey only ſuch orders as he ſhall hereafter receive from us.

Although the circumſtances into which we have been thrown, by the failure of the plan for which the detachment was originally formed, have rendered it neceſſary to make this alteration in the controul and direction of it, our intention is not to withdraw the ſervices of the detachment entirely from the ſupport of any meaſures which you may have formed in reliance on them, if theſe meaſures ſhall not prove incompatible with the inſtructions given to Colonel Goddard, and with the engagements which he may conclude in conſequence of them: we ſhall therefore leave him ſtill ſubject to your inſtructions, under theſe proviſions; and requeſt that you will communicate to him ſuch points as you may judge proper to be included in the operations concerted with the Rajah of Berar.

We are, Gentlemen,
Your moſt obedient humble Servants,
Warren Haſtings,
Richard Barwell,

APPENDIX, No 134.

Bombay Select Conſultations, 19th February 1779.

The Preſident's Review of Maratta affairs, and Reſolutions propoſed by him in conſequence.

SINCE the firſt advice of the unfortunate iſſue of our late expedition, my whole time and attention has been employed in a careful review of our paſt tranſactions with reſpect to Maratta politics, in the conſideration of the circumſtances of our preſent ſituation, and in forming ſuch a plan of conduct as ſeems beſt adapted to meet the many difficulties and dangers that we may have to expect, and muſt guard againſt.

Appendix. No. 134.

This laſt is ſo much my object, that I neither intend to go into any enquiry of the cauſes of the failure of our hopes from the late expedition, nor into any juſtification of the firſt undertaking. The motives on which we determined on it were certainly no weak ones: they have been felt, acknowledged, and even preſſed on us, both by the Governor General and Council; and within theſe few days by the Honourable the Secret Committee, in their diſpatch of the 31ſt Auguſt. I am however well aware, that the judgment that is to be given on enterprizes of great moment, muſt be expected to be formed from the event; that objections will hardly ever be wanting againſt meaſures which have proved unſucceſsful; and that hardly any anſwer can be found that will ſatisfy objections ſo ſupported. I think it beſt therefore for every member, according to the ſhare he has had in this buſineſs, to leave the public proceedings and records to juſtify or condemn his opinions and conduct, with a general reference to the candour of thoſe who are to be our judges, as to our attention to the public intereſt with which we are charged; the ſteps we have taken for the ſecurity of it; and the cauſe to which our late miſcarriage is to be attributed; the remedy of which is the only point I can now think of moment, how much ſoever we may be concerned individually in the approbation or cenſure of our paſt conduct.

Since the removal of Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn from the command of the army, we have made ſome promotions, and otherwiſe diſtinguiſhed thoſe officers whoſe merit is acknowledged to have been moſt conſpicuous on the late ſervice. I hope this will produce a ſpirit of emulation, that will be of the greateſt advantage to the army; and I truſt we have now at the head of the infantry and Sepoys, a gentleman who will diſtinguiſh himſelf in garriſon no leſs than he has done in the field, by the ſtricteſt attention to the diſcipline and general improvement of our troops. I now propoſe further, that we apply to the Governor General and Council for a tried, experienced, and active officer, of the rank of Colonel, to take the command of the troops on this eſtabliſhment; that it be repreſented to them how very material the choice of ſuch an officer is; and that we rather wiſh them to promote to the above-mentioned rank an officer whoſe merit they entertain an high opinion of, than to be guided in their appointment by any other rule. It would likewiſe be a conſiderable advantage and improvement to the ſervice, if they would furniſh us with a Major and five or ſix Captains of infantry, all choice and experienced officers, whom we might replace with officers of the ſame rank, whoſe want of experience is the only objection to them. Our troops would then, I think, be on a footing equal to any ſervice that might be required of them; which I fear has not for ſome time paſt been the caſe. Whatever is to follow from the doubtful ſtate we are now in with the Marattas, I think we ſhould thus, even with our preſent force alone, be well prepared for a defenſive war with them; and prepared it is neceſſary we ſhould be, as ſoon as poſſible.

The firſt and moſt important object of our attention abroad is to endeavour to ſecure Colonel Goddard and his army from accidents: by a letter I have had from him, dated the 26th January, I find he was then within four days march of Barampore, where he intended to ſtop ſome days for further advices from us, and to determine on his route. I have ſince had certain intelligence of his arrival on the 29th at Barampore, where I flatter myſelf he will be ſecure from all hoſtile attempts: I preſume that having ſo conſiderable a city at his command, he will be able to furniſh his troops with every thing they may ſtand in need of for a long time, and that no enemy therefore will be able to diſlodge him, while he remains there. He ſhould I think be adviſed immediately of the preſent ſtate of affairs, as far as we are acquainted with them, among the Maratta Chiefs, who certainly do not ſeem united enough at preſent to concur in ſo diſtant a march as to Barampore, and each of whom has probably too important concerns to manage near Poonah to accept a command at ſo great a diſtance, and which they all may think too dangerous for any one to undertake alone. But however this may be, I would leave it to himſelf to take his own opportunity for coming on to Surat or Broach; informing him at the ſame time of the urgent occaſion this Preſidency has for his army, and how much we think our ſafety may depend on its ſafe and ſpeedy arrival, together with the meaſures we are taking to facilitate this important purpoſe.

The conſideration of the conduct to be purſued with the Maratta Chiefs opens a wider field, through which, however perplexed it may be, we are now to find our way—nor is there any time for procraſtination: the Marattas are aiming at this very moment to ſtrip us of every thing we are in poſſeſſion of, to the very edge of our iſland: they are aſſembling troops in the neighbourhood of Caranja and Salſette, and are ſaid to meditate an immediate invaſion of thoſe iſlands, if they are not peaceably yielded up to them, together with all the ceſſions ſtipulated for in the convention of Woorgom. I have already given Gunnis Punt, the agent of Nannah (or of the Durbar as he is called) a general anſwer: that his maſter muſt have known at the time the convention was made, that it was not valid: that Mr. Carnac and Colonel Egerton had previouſly declared ſo to him: that he had beſides been long before informed of, and knew by his own experience, the controlling power of the Governor General and Council in matters of this kind: that I had informed that Board of the convention, and would do nothing further in it without their orders.

What may be the reſolution of Nannah in conſequence of this anſwer, I do not know, but have no doubt of its being hoſtile to us, if he can but prevail on the Chiefs, who have been acting with him againſt Ragoba to ſupport him in a war againſt us: we have therefore no time to loſe to guard againſt ſuch an union; nor do I think that in ſuch an emergency as this, we can defer coming to the neceſſary reſolutions, under colour of waiting for orders from the Governor General and Council, without being wanting to the duty we owe to the Company and to ourſelves; nor do I think it would be a fair and conſiſtent conduct towards the Governor General and Council themſelves, who have certainly furniſhed us in their letters of the 23d March and 17th Auguſt, with ample powers for the war we have begun, and may juſtly expect from us that we exert ourſelves in extricating our affairs from their preſent embarraſſments, and not ſupinely throw on them difficulties which it is our duty to meet and if poſſible overcome.

The war was undertaken with the moſt flattering expectations of aſſiſtance from ſome of the moſt powerful Maratta Chiefs; of theſe, after our troops had been near two months in the field, and had advanced almoſt to the capital, not one eſpouſed our cauſe; it was thought deſperate; and indeed, ſeems to have been ſo; but had our troops after all been brought back to Bombay in ſpite of all oppoſition, as I make no doubt they might have been, the reſpect with which every Maratta in the enemy's army muſt have felt himſelf impreſſed at the inſtance of our forces unaided by any ally, would have been an advantage equal almoſt to victory; and might ſhortly perhaps been uſed to ſuch an effect, as to leave us little to regret in our preſent diſappointment.—Humiliating as the terms are, to which our troops ſubmitted, I am happy to ſay, I can ſtill perceive we are not fallen wholly into contempt. Left as we now are, to wage war alone, the credit we yet preſerve muſt be employed, and trial made what new friends it will procure us, and what enemies it may detach from the confederacy we have drawn on us as the allies of Ragoba.

Before I enter into particulars with regard to theſe objects, I muſt deſire the purpoſe for which our laſt treaty with Ragoba was calculated; the principal conſideration on which the Governor General and Council approved our plan; and the evident motive of the orders now before us, from the Honourable the Select Committee, may be kept in view. I hardly need ſay, I allude to the dangerous connections forming or formed between Nannah and the French; and the abſolute neceſſity we were under on the principle of ſelf-preſervation to attempt to remove from the chief adminiſtration of the Maratta empire a miniſter whoſe pernicious deſigns if ever ripened into action, might end in an expulſion from all our valuable poſſeſſions in this part of the world. This neceſſity appears to me ſtill the ſame, and ought ſtill to be the leading principles of our conduct. The means we have to effect our purpoſe are indeed at preſent inadequate, but they are not perhaps unattainable; and while the poſſibility of accompliſhing ſo important a point exiſts, I think no exertion is to be omitted to effect or facilitate it.

When the refuſal of the principal officer to charge himſelf with the conduct of our army to Bombay, and the countenance given to this refuſal by the Commander in Chief of our forces, made it neceſſary to enter into ſome ſort of treaty with the enemy for the ſafe return of the troops, the firſt application was made to Nannah, as the oſtenſible miniſter. The ſurrender of Ragoba's perſon at firſt was the only condition demanded of us; but on finding that he had already made terms with Scindia, Nannah inſiſted on articles ſtill more humiliating, and at laſt ſeemed determined to accept of none but the moſt rigorous of all; viz. the detention of the whole army as hoſtages for the performance of the terms on which their lives were ſpared. On this preſſing occaſion, it was thought of applying to Madjee Scindia, whoſe influence in the Maratta Durbar was reported conſiderable, and whoſe connections now formed with Ragoba, it is to be hoped, would diſpoſe him to ſhew ſome ſort of regard to ſo faithful an ally as the Engliſh had proved themſelves to Ragoba.

Mr. Holmes was accordingly ſent out to him: every thing immediately ſhewed how ſenſibly Madjee Scindia was flattered with this acknowledgment of his conſequence and authority, which was at once diſcovered to be ſupreme. Mr. Holmes, in his way to Scindia's tent, was ſtopped by a picket guard of Nannah's troops, who would have perſuaded, and even forced him, to go to Nannah inſtead of Scindia. Mr. Holmes declared poſitively that he would and muſt go immediately to the latter. The diſpute laſted till Scindia ſent down a party of his own, who diſperſed Nannah's people, and brought Mr. Holmes to him: he received Mr. Holmes with every demonſtration of kindneſs and civility; and on his repreſentation of the treatment Mr. Farmer met with from Nannah, to whom he had before been ſent, and by whom he had been kept the whole day, expoſed in the open Bazar, with no other covering than his palanquin, from whence he had been obliged to write the particulars of his converſation with Nannah, and to wait the anſwers of the committee; Madjee Scindia immediately ſent and conducted Mr. Farmer to his own quarters; and deſired that he, as well as Mr. Holmes, would regard himſelf as his gueſt.

The terms to which we muſt ſubmit were ſo far known, that tolerable ones could no longer be demanded for us; but we were however obliged to Madjee Scindia for making them as eaſy as he could now attempt to do, without he had abſolutely declared againſt the reſt of the Maratta Chiefs, and joined us. It was owing to him that the point of detaining the whole army as hoſtages was given up, and by that means that we have it in our power to diſavow the convention: this, together with articles for the ſurrender of the caſtle of Surat and Fort Victoria, and for the payment of the expences of the war, were actually ſent by Nannah to Scindia, to be added to the conditions impoſed on us: Madjee Scindia replied, that he had already ſettled the conditions, and could not now in honour think of adding more. It is true that a private promiſe had been made to Scindia, of ceding to him Broach, and the ſhare of its pergunnahs conquered from the Nabob; yet he could not but well know that the performance of this article could be no way effectually ſecured by him, but by the very means he rejected, the detention of our army as hoſtages. Appendix. No. 134.

In the little while Mr. Holmes was at Scindia's Durbar, he had an opportunity of obſerving, that Scindia concerted and determined on all affairs of importance; which were only referred to Nannah for the neceſſary forms of office, the Sicca being affixed of courſe to every paper or diſpatch that Scindia had once paſſed; and that Holcar, though treated with all external marks of reſpect by Scindia, as the head Subedar of the empire, was entirely at his diſpoſal. The buſineſs of the treaty being concluded, Madjee Scindia took advantage of the ſtipulation we made for hoſtages to be delivered us in exchange for thoſe we put into his hands, to ſend a perſon hither, whom he has deſired me to conſider as a confidential miniſter: he even offered to ſend Rona Cawn, his chief confidant and favourite, whom he treats as a brother, and is reſpected next to himſelf in his (Scindia's) Durbar. In converſing concerning the diſcipline and manœuvres of our troops, he whiſpered Mr. Sibbald, that he hoped one day to ſee them and our forces acting together. Underſtanding that Mr. Holmes was one of my family, he charged him with the moſt friendly aſſurances, and ſeemed ſtudious to give him every mark of his confidence. Mr. Farmer is ſtill kept with Madjee Scindia, who behaves perfectly well to him; and does not allow Nannah to have any intercourſe with Mr. Farmer, but through him. I muſt not omit to mention too, as the moſt convincing inſtance of Madjee Scindia's good diſpoſition towards us, that on the firſt propoſal on our part, for inſerting in the convention an article to exclude the French from all protection and countenance in the Maratta empire, he admitted it, and ſupported it againſt Nannah.

Theſe are circumſtances well known to Mr. Carnac, and perhaps to Mr. Draper too: I have however been at the pains to collect them, as they have been communicated to me in converſation, and as they do not appear on any public record; owing to the confuſion which naturally attended ſuch a ſtate of things as our army was in while the treaty laſted, and to the ſudden departure of Mr. Farmer, the committee's ſecretary.

The lead that Scindia has taken in the adminiſtration, and the condition to which he has reduced Nannah to be no more than a creature of his, were never thoroughly known, till the facts diſcovered themſelves on this occaſion; yet they are to be traced in Mr. Moſtyn's and Mr. Lewis's advices, ever ſince the revolution effected by Madjee Scindia's means in June laſt, when Nannah fled to him.

It was only a few days after that event, that Holcar obliged Moraba to deliver to him the inſignia of office, which he ſent to Scindia, who conſtituted Nannah miniſter, by delivering them to him. It was Scindia who ſeized Moraba and Butcheba Prondar, and afterwards confined them: it was he who confined Holcar's Duan, and appointed him another, by whoſe means Holcar has ever ſince been a mere puppet, at Madjee Scindia's diſpoſal: he too removed Saccaram Bappoo from the adminiſtration of affairs, and made him priſoner in his own houſe: Hurry Punt's reſignation of the command of the troops, ſeems to have been in compliance with Madjee Scindia's pretenſions to the office of Suray Putty, which he demanded at the ſame time as he inſiſted on the ceſſion of Ahmednagur and Aſhur. Whether that important office has been ever conferred on him in form, I do not learn; but being at the head of his own and Holcar's forces (the beſt in the empire,) he has in fact the command of the whole army: he accordingly treats Hurry Punt quite in the ſtyle of a dependant; and ridiculed him to his face, before Mr. Holmes, for his ill ſucceſs in his campaign againſt Colonel Keating in Guzerat.

The ſeveral propoſals for a ſettlement of the Government among the Chiefs at Tellowgaum, ſince the return of our army, confirm this repreſentation of the uncontrouled power of Scindia. In every change, ſtill Madjee Scindia has appeared ſupreme; and I have advice under the 11th inſtant, that the arrangements are actually made at laſt in the following manner:

Appendix. No. 134.

Madarow Narrain, Peiſhwa.

Sewajee Badjerow, Ragoba's ſon, Naib.

Scindia and Holcar to act in the name of Sewajee Badjerow.

Ragoba relinquiſhes the Government, and is to have a Jaghire, and reſide at Jaſſi. This he is to ſignify in writing to all the Powers in India.

Nannah and Saccaram to conduct the Government as miniſters, and derive their authority from Scindia and Holcar.

The above ſettlement was paſſed in writing. All the Maratta officers were aſſembled, and informed, that this muſt be regarded as a concluſive ſettlement; and any attempt to oppoſe it would be conſidered as treachery againſt the State. The uſual rejoicings on ſuch occaſions were obſerved.

Madjee Scindia's diſpoſition towards us, and averſion to the French, have in like manner appeared in various inſtances, ſince the period of the June revolution; and I cannot help feeling reſpect for the abilities of a man, who has thus perſiſted in a point, which he has, no doubt, thought it good policy to endeavour to attain—a connection and alliance with our nation, in ſpite of all the diſappointments he muſt have met with, from the circumſtance of our not underſtanding his advances.

Upon Mr. Moſtyn's firſt application for Madjee Scindia's paſſports for the Bengal troops, he ſent them without heſitation, and forwarded duplicates from himſelf to his officers. Only two days after, upon receipt of my letters on the ſame ſubject, he forwarded to me another copy of theſe paſſports, and orders to his officers; and it is remarkable, that at this very time Mr. Moſtyn was in vain ſoliciting the ſame mark of confidence from Moraba, then at the head of adminiſtration. Theſe paſſports ſeem to have been given with ſincerity, and to have had their effect; ſince, by Colonel Goddard's letter of the 26th November, it appears, that in conſequence of them he had paſſed peaceably through a province of Madjee Scindia's. At that time (26th November) Madjee Scindia's officer had indeed joined Ballajee to obſtruct his (Colonel Goddard's) march; but the mere date of Colonel Goddard's letter ſufficiently accounts for this. A few days after the grant of Madjee Scindia's paſſports the revolution was brought about; and the very day following Tookajee Holcar ſent Mr. Moſtyn his paſſports likewiſe. On the 1ſt July, Lubin left Poonah, and has never ſince returned. This was a point Mr. Moſtyn had been ineffectually labouring to carry in both the preceding adminiſtrations of Nannah and Moraba. Nannah, together with Scindia, ſent early invitations to Mr. Moſtyn to come to the Durbar; and Mr. Moſtyn was told by Madarow Jadarow, in anſwer to his enquiries concerning the buſineſs Nannah wanted to ſpeak to him on, that it was for the increaſe of our friendſhip. Theſe overtures having failed, Madjee Scindia made two to Mr. Moſtyn, directly and ſeparately from himſelf; offering to ſettle our diſputes with the Durbar before Mr. Moſtyn left Poonah in Auguſt laſt: theſe were both rejected; and Madjee Scindia, in alluſion to theſe, told Mr. Holmes in camp, that he was the man to whom Mr. Moſtyn ſhould have applied; that he had twice made advances, but had as often been ſlighted. After Mr. Moſtyn's departure, Madjee Scindia made the ſame offers to Mr. Lewis; and then, on Mr. Lewis's declining to viſit him, he determined on ſending an agent to Bombay. He did accordingly ſend this very Appajee Sabajee, his preſent agent; who, I ſuppoſe, finding reaſon to think that our meaſures were already taken with Ragoba, too much beyond his maſter's views, confined himſelf to general profeſſions of friendſhip, on the part of Madjee Scindia, without opening himſelf further.

Since his return hither with an army, ſuch general profeſſions have been his chief topic; but he has at the ſame time given me to underſtand, that Gunnis Hurry and he are by no means employed on the ſame errand; and has even deſired to be ſeparated from him, in order that his intercourſe with me may not be ſubject to the enquiries and obſervations of Nannah's agent. He has even intimated, in pretty direct terms, that his maſter intereſts himſelf but little in the anſwer that may be given to Gunnis Hurry, with regard to the ceſſions ſtipulated for the Poonah Circar; and that he (Appajee) had the particular intereſts of Madjee Scindia only in his charge. He has talked looſely of alliances between Madjee Scindia and the Company, for reducing the power of the Nizam and Hyder; ſtill demands the ceſſion of Broach, ſtipulated for Madjee Scindia, but is by no means preſſing on the ſubject; and in ſhort, plainly indicates his views on the part of his maſter, which however (as in the preſent circumſtances we ſeem to have more immediate occaſion for him than he for us) he does not ſeem diſpoſed to explain particularly, without ſome further opening on our part. Madjee Scindia's own letters, which I now lay before you, are written in a ſtrain entirely conformable to this language of his Miniſter: in the firſt of them it is obſervable, that he takes no notice of the return of the Bengal troops; and in the laſt, though this is demanded, yet it appears from Colonel Goddard's laſt letter, that he had not then received the order of the Poonah committee, directing him to return, notwithſtanding the ſame had been delivered to Madjee Scindia himſelf to be forwarded to him, three days before a letter of their own, which Colonel Goddard acknowledged the receipt of.

From this ſtate of paſt and preſent circumſtances, I think I am warranted in the following concluſions:

1ſt. That the actual adminiſtration of the affairs of the Maratta empire is at Madjee Scindia's diſpoſal, and that Nannah, the great enemy of the Engliſh, is reduced, for the preſent at leaſt, to be no more than the tool of Madjee Scindia's power.

2d. That Madjee Scindia is not only well inclined to us, preferable to the French, but is earneſt for ſome cloſer connection and alliance with us.

3d. That the accompliſhment of the terms of the convention, as far as they concern the Poonah Circar, is not at all the object of his views, ſince he has in fact made it optionable with us, whether to comply with them or not.

4th. That the performance even of the private article in his (Madjee Scindia's) favour, is not the firſt object of his conſideration; but that this, as well as the ceſſions ſtipulated for by the Poonah Circar, is chiefly intended by him as a fund to pay us from, in any alliance he may enter into with us, without any real expence to himſelf.

5th. That independent of his views to an alliance with us, he has ſome motives of policy, which render him unwilling that our power and poſſeſſions on this coaſt ſhould be very materially reduced.

6th. That it is for the intereſt of the Company, and neceſſary to their purpoſe at this ſettlement, to inform ourſelves forthwith what Madjee Scindia's real intentions are; and to take ſuch meaſures as we conſiſtently can, in concert with him, for the excluſion of Nannah from all real and effectual power in the adminiſtration of the Maratta empire.

I have ſaid that independent of Madjee Scindia's views to an alliance with us, I conclude he has ſome motives of policy, which render him unwilling that our power and poſſeſſions on this coaſt ſhould be very materially reduced. I ground this opinion on that very ſtriking circumſtance, his obtaining for our army permiſſion to depart, without any adequate ſecurity for the promiſed ceſſions to the Poonah Circar, or to himſelf. This was too obvious to have eſcaped his notice; and leſt it ſhould be ſuppoſed to have paſſed through negligence, the propoſal for detaining the whole army as hoſtages, together with the further ceſſions of Surat and Fort Victoria, was actually made to Madjee Scindia by Nannah. Whatever theſe views of Madjee Scindia may be, they cannot yet be penetrated with certainty, and can be only known by his future intimation or conduct. I will however venture to give my preſent ideas of what may be probably the motives for the great attention he has paid to us and our intereſt.

The inteſtine diviſions among the Maratta Chiefs has effected what civil diſſenſions long continued have never failed to bring about in every age and country—the overthrow of all power and dominion but that of the ſword: of this Madjee Scindia is now in poſſeſſion, and we may be aſſured, does not mean to part with it; his great object therefore muſt be to ſecure it, and ours not to let ſlip the preſent criſis, while our alliance is ſought, and worth his purchaſe. His intention muſt be either to remove the ſeat of his Government to Poonah, or to eſtabliſh ſome kind of power there ſubordinate to his own.

The firſt he muſt find very dangerous; the Chiefs, whoſe Jaghires lie neareſt Poonah, will be naturally alarmed at the thought of ſeeing the Peiſhwa domains united to the other poſſeſſions of a Power already ſo formidable as Madjee Scindia; who by his acceſſion will be able to cruſh the independence they have been aiming at in common with the other Jaghirdars of the empire. The Nizam and Hyder, whoſe dominions bound the Peiſhwa domains to the ſouthward and eaſtward, Madjee Scindia knows, will be always ready to ſupport the diſcontented Chiefs in the ſouthern part of the empire; where the Bramins muſt ſtill likewiſe be of conſequence and weight, from their riches, their intrigues, their experience in the revenues, and all other departments of Government, and in a word, from that ſacred character which protects them at all times from open violence, better than any other ſet of men. Theſe difficulties are not relieved by the ſtate of things in Scindia's own Jaghire. The King taking the advantage of the abſence of him and Holcar, is I find ſtill making ſome progreſs, and I am informed has lately reduced ſome of the Holcars to his obedience. Moodajee Bouncello is ſaid to have views to the Rajahſhip, and there are conjectures abroad of his being encouraged in them by an alliance with the Governor General and Council. Both the King and the Bouncello, who are already formidable to Madjee Scindia, from the ſituation of their dominions with reſpect to his, muſt be conſidered by him as the moſt dangerous enemies he can ever have, if they are aided by us, and undertake to oppoſe him in the purſuits of his ambition.

The eſtabliſhment of ſome kind of power ſubordinate to his own, ſeems a policy more ſuitable to Scindia's circumſtances, and more agreeable to the conduct he has hitherto obſerved. The difficulty in this caſe lies in the choice he ſhall make, and on the means to be employed whenever he may chuſe to ſecure his dependence. Nannah has been choſen, and hitherto employed by Madjee Scindia in the character of Duan: his abilities, long experience in buſineſs, and above all, the appearance of moderation diſplayed in the continuance of a Bramin miniſter, who has ſo long filled the firſt civil department of the ſtate, juſtify this choice. But the ſame qualifications added to Nannah's riches, will doubtleſs render him dangerous to Scindia, whenever he ſhall be obliged to retire for any time to his own dominions. Tookajee Holcar has been long deſirous of returning to Madjee Scindia has no leſs urgent inducements to re-viſit Eugene; and the diſtance they will be at when there, and the power Nannah, if he continues in the management of the Peiſhwa domains, muſt have in their abſence, will ſoon put him in a condition to aſſert again his independence. Madjee Scindia is certainly not ignorant of Nannah's connections with Lubin, and the promiſes of aſſiſtance he has received from that quarter: it was one of the firſt meaſures of Scindia's Government to ſend away this man, no leſs dangerous perhaps in his eſtimation to him than to us: he muſt know that a very ſhort time may now bring Nannah the ſuccours that have been promiſed him; and that ſhould they arrive in his (Scindia's) abſence, his hopes of retaining this aſpiring rival in his dependance is at an end. He may perhaps, in caſe of ſuch an event, foreſee the probability of the reſtoration of the Peiſhwa power in the perſon of Nannah; and fancy the Jagheirdars of Eugene and again reduced to the ſtate of ſubmiſſion in which they were held by Badjerow.

Thus circumſtanced, what may we ſuppoſe Madjee Scindia's views with regard to us, and what the principles on which he acts in his endeavours to conciliate our friendſhip, and ſecure to us our poſſeſſions on this coaſt.

Madjee muſt have obſerved in our conduct with regard to Ragoba, ſince our firſt alliance with him, marks of the moſt hearty and honourable attachment to his cauſe. He will no doubt have remarked, that though Ragoba's affairs when in a proſperous courſe were ſuddenly ruined by ſome diſagreement among ourſelves, which perhaps he cannot very eaſily explain; though the engagements of this ſettlement were given up and departed from by the Governor General and Council, and the moſt declared partiality ſhewn to Ragoba's avowed enemies, ſo far as to proceed even to orders for the ſurrender of his perſon into their hands: he will, I ſay, no doubt have remarked, that the good faith and honour of an Engliſhman is ſuch, that under all difficulties, he cannot determine to withdraw protection from the man to whom it has been once ſolemnly promiſed: he will have ſeen that this principle of good faith has at laſt prevailed over all temporary oppoſition; that we have again taken Ragoba by the hand; conducted him with our own forces alone almoſt to Poonah; and have at laſt only quitted him, when it was evident that there was not one Chief in the empire who would draw a ſword for him; and after he had concluded terms for himſelf with this very Madjee Scindia.

He finds that throughout the whole period in which we have been actors in the Maratta ſcene, our objects in point of acquiſition have been the ſame—a territory on the ſea coaſt and in the neighbourhood of Bombay, nearly equal to our expences. He has ſeen this ſcheme of acquiſition abided by under all changes, with little variation; and this muſt ſtrike him the more forcibly, as he muſt be well informed, that at the time of the concluſion of the treaty of Poorunder, the plan might have been conſiderably enlarged, if that had ever been the intention: our preſent line of territory, which we have never thought of extending beyond the Ghauts, cannot be an object of jealouſy to Madjee Scindia; on the contrary, it may be highly uſeful to him, and that whether we are engaged to him by alliance or not.

On account of the well-founded jealouſy he knows we entertain of Nannah and his connections with the French he may be aſſured, that an union can never take place between us and Nannah: whilſt our poſſeſſions and forces continue ſuch as they now are, we are both conſiderable and near enough to keep Nannah in conſtant apprehenſion; and yet the barrier of the Ghauts, between us and him will always be ſufficient to reſtrain us, unleſs we act in conjunction with ſome Power above the Ghauts, who can ſecure us the paſſes, and ſubſiſtence. Madjee Scindia knows too, that while we continue able to reſiſt the attempts of the French to throw a body of troops into the Maratta empire, we can never ſit ſtill and ſuffer it. The ſupport of our power therefore on the coaſt is his greateſt ſecurity againſt Nannah's attempts for independence; the ſucceſs of which would be almoſt inſured, if ſupported by a reſpectable body of European forces: Scindia has the more reaſon to turn his thoughts to this point, (the excluſion of the French) ſince a connection with them appears to have been ſo far the plan of policy adopted by the Bramins, that Moraba when in power actually proceeded on it, no leſs than Nunnah, by whom it ſeems to have been firſt formed: and it is remarkable, that much of the intelligence Mr. Moſtyn received received on this ſubject, which was found very exact, was conveyed to him through perſons cloſely connected with Scindia.

Should Madjee Scindia turn his thoughts to an alliance with us (as I have no doubt he has done already) he has advantages in ſuch a connection, far beyond any other Indian Power, to induce him to court it. The ceſſion of a territory of no conſequence or value to him is the eaſy price he will have to pay for our friendſhip; which territory will ſerve him as a frontier againſt the introduction of an European force, engaged to other intereſts than to his; be a curb upon his delegate of the Peiſhwa domains to ſecure his dependance; and will thus enable him to give his attention and preſence to his northern dominions, in the proportion they demand. The Rajah of Berar and the Shaw Alium, ſituated between our Bengal poſſeſſions and Madjee Scindia's country, will be content to leave him in tranquillity, if they find us ſeriouſly bent to prevent its being diſturbed. As Madjee Scindia's poſſeſſions border no where on ours, he has leſs to fear from our encroachments than any Prince of Hindoſtan with whom we are at preſent connected. Or if the Peiſhwa domains are already to be conſidered as his, the mountains form a ſeparation between us and him, that we never can be ſuppoſed to carry our ſchemes of territorial poſſeſſion beyond them.

Thus the opinion he may juſtly have formed of the good faith of our nation; the moderation of our views in point of territory; his own cauſes of jealouſy of the ſchemes of Nannah, for rendering himſelf independent, and of his connection with the French for this purpoſe; our mutual intereſt to guard againſt both, and, above all, to prevent the introduction of French troops into the Maratta empire: the ſupport our poſſeſſions on this coaſt will afford to his authority at the Poonah Durbar; the little value to him of the countries we ſeek to acquire; the ſecurity an alliance with us will afford him from his moſt formidable neighbours; the obſtacles that muſt for ever prevent us from encroaching on his dominions or ſovereignty; theſe all ſeem juſt and concurring arguments to diſpoſe him to an alliance with the Company, advantageous to both parties.

The motives on our ſide are for the moſt part ſo connected with his, that they ſeem to be almoſt the ſame; yet they are further enforced on us by the particular ſituation we are placed in by the convention of Worgaum; a convention forced on thoſe who had no authority to accept of the terms inſiſted on, and who declared ſo in the moſt poſitive expreſſions, which were explained verbatim from Meſſieurs Carnac and Egerton's own letter before Nannah, in open Durbar. There can be no heſitation in declaring ſuch a convention invalid; yet we are not to forget (as I have before remarked) that we are indebted to Madjee Scindia for our having this ſtill left in our power. He, the whole Maratta army, and we, muſt be equally ſtruck with this fact. I do therefore think our national honour concerned in finding ſome way of acquitting ourſelves to him. 'Tis impoſſible to proceed on ſuch rotten grounds as that of renouncing both the engagements with the Durbar and with him, who enabled us to reject them: it would be breaking faith with the whole world at once, with our friends, and with our enemies. The perſons who promiſed Madjee Scindia the ceſſion of Broach, and engaged for thoſe to the Poonah Circar, were the ſame, and their powers in both caſes equally incompetent: but a great diſtinction ought to be made between the obligation we are under to Nannah and to Scindia: the firſt could and would have ſtripped us of every thing; the latter, by relieving us from the hard terms of the former, did in fact, give a valuable conſideration for what was promiſed to him. I flatter myſelf it will not be impoſſible to ſatisfy him, without parting with any of our preſent poſſeſſions; but at any rate, I think we muſt ſhew a real deſire of giving him ſatisfaction: for this purpoſe, and to try further what the real extent of his views in relation to us is, it will be neceſſary to enter into negociation with him, and to open ourſelves to him in ſome degree confidentially.

I cannot think that any new powers are wanting for proceeding in this immediately, as the neceſſity and emergency of the occaſion demands. When the Governor General and Council gave their ſanction for our treaty with Ragoba, and for our ſupporting his cauſe by arms, in that ſanction was neceſſarily included every power which the cauſe of events might call for. The Governor General and Council have a right, as I ſaid before, to expect every exertion on our part, and would juſtly reproach us were we timidly to withdraw ourſelves from the reſponſibility that belongs to our ſtation at the preſent criſis.

There is a paſſage in the Governor General and Council's letter, which though deſigned for another occaſion, ſeems perfectly applicable to the preſent circumſtances. They tell us that they do not mean to preclude us from gaining any advantages we can by negociation; that a change in the Adminiſtration at Poonah will probably afford opportunity for obtaining ſuch advantages; and they conclude in theſe remarkable words: "And we "leave it to you to purſue ſuch a policy as circumſtances "require, independent of any particular intereſts of "Ragoba, whom you muſt regard, in the great political "objects of our Government, as ſimply meriting our "conſideration, and not as neceſſarily connected or "blended with it."

We find a change of Adminiſtration, or at leaſt of the power on which the Adminiſtration depends, has actually taken place at Poonah, which gives very favourable hopes of our being able to attain at leaſt one, and that the firſt object of our policy, the excluſion of the French from the connections they were forming by Nanah's means in the Maratta Court. Ragoba has already relieved us from the care of his intereſts, and left us nothing to attend to but our own, which require the exertion of our beſt talents, but depend no leſs on ſeizing the preſent moment. With ſuch proſpects before us, and ſuch a general inſtruction for our conduct, can we doubt whether to take an active part in the very line that inſtruction has marked out to us?

The Governor General and Council, in their letter of the 17th Auguſt, lay us under one reſtraint, which I make no doubt we ſhall agree in thinking it no leſs to be obſerved in our preſent circumſtances, than in thoſe for which it was originally deſigned: I mean, that in any engagement or treaty of alliance we may enter into with Madjee Scindia, or any other Power, we are to avoid all ſtipulations of a tendency hoſtile to the Rajah of Berar. I mention this now for this reaſon only, that the Governor and Council may obſerve the caution with which we determine to act in every caſe wherein their deſigns can be foreſeen. Our object is to make what new friends we can, and to avoid all enmities that are not unavoidable.

Madjee Scindia is undoubtedly the perſon from whoſe friendſhip we have the moſt to hope, and whoſe enmity is moſt to be apprehended. Could he therefore be determined to an alliance with us, that would anſwer the purpoſes of the Company, and the nation on this ſide of India, by excluding the French effectually and permanently by providing againſt their chief abettor Nannah's recovering his former power; by ſecuring to us the territory we are deficient in to defray the expences of this ſettlement, or at leaſt preſerving that we at preſent hold: could theſe purpoſes be effected, I ſhall not ſcruple, if there be any riſk of loſing the opportunity by waiting to refer the matter to Bengal, to give my hearty concurrence to the neceſſary meaſures, without delaying further time in expectation of other powers than we are now furniſhed with. But I do not mean by this, that I wiſh any thing to be concluded precipitately; all I propoſe to do at preſent is, to give Madjee Scindia an opportunity of explaining himſelf further, and put his diſpoſition in our favour to one more teſt; which I think will be ſo deciſive, that if he comply with our wiſhes in this reſpect we may be ſatisfied that I have not gone too far in any hopes I have entertained from him.

In the firſt place, however, as an inſtance of the different light in which we regard the ſtipulations made in behalf of the Poonah Circar, and the return to be made for Madjee Scindia's friendly offices, I would propoſe, that the notes given among Madjee Scindia's officers, as Durbar charges, ſhould be immediately taken up and diſcharged; which amount I find to be R^{s} 41,000. This is abſolutely neceſſary, not only as a mark of our regard to Scindia himſelf, but as a failure in this article would make every man of his Durbar our enemy, at a time when the leaſt important of them might be able to do us ſome injury.

I next propoſe to write to Madjee Scindia, to acknowledge the inſtances we have received of his friendſhip; to make him very frank offers of a return on our part; to hint generally to him, that we wiſh much to fall on ſome expedient to ſatisfy his expectations from us; to explain to him that our army, when it paſſed the Ghauts, had no deſigns inimical to him; that on the contrary, we had reaſon to think, that he wiſhed us to undertake Ragoba's cauſe; that we are therefore well pleaſed to have left Ragoba in his (Madjee Scindia's) hands, as our common friend, though we never could have conſented to put him into thoſe of Nanah, whatever benefit we might have derived from ſuch a bargain with him; to acquaint him, that Nanah's views with regard to the French, and the preference ſhewn by him of them to us (the ancient allies of the Maratta State) had given us much juſt cauſe of alarm; that his (Madjee Scindia's) profeſſions on this ſubject have afforded us much ſatisfaction; and that we particularly confide in his authority over Nanah which, we are now informed of, and heartily rejoice at: to inform him of the arrival of our Bengal army at Brampore; to remind him that he long ago granted his Duſtucks for their friendly paſſage through his territories; and that his credit as well as ours is now concerned that they ſhould not turn back, after coming ſo far; that they are coming hither for the protection of our ſettlement againſt the French; and that on the terms we would have him eſteem himſelf to be with us, we hope he will conſider that they may be ſerviceable to him, as well as to us; to deſire he will therefore now grant his Duſtucks and letters to Futty Sing, and the other friends he may have between Brampore and Surat, to permit our army to paſs as friends through their countries; ſupplying them with proviſions and other neceſſaries on their march, for which they will punctually pay. I think it may be proper too to propoſe to him to ſend one thouſand of his horſe to meet our army, and accompany them to Surat; adviſing him; that the object of this requeſt is, that the world may be witneſſes of the friendſhip that ſubſiſts between us, which, after ſuch an inſtance, can never afterwards be departed from on our ſide. I ſhall at the ſame time congratulate him on the grant of Brampore, which has lately been added to his Jaghire; and inform him, that I have written to the Commander of the Bengal army, to acquaint him of our hopes from his (Madjee Scindia's) friendſhip, and ordering him to conſider the friends of Madjee Scindia as ours. With this letter, if approved by the Committee, I ſhall ſend back his own agent, whom I flatter myſelf I can make uſeful to us, in our tranſactions with his maſter.

While we are waiting for his anſwer, I think it will be abſolutely neceſſary, in order to be prepared for every event, that we direct the field train and equipage of the troops to be completed, and held in readineſs for ſervice at the ſhorteſt notice: for ſhould Madjee Scindia refuſe his concurrence to the march of the Bengal army to Surat, I am of opinion that we muſt ſend a ſtrong detachment into the field, near Surat or Broach, to act in concert with Colonel Goddard, and to favour his march towards one or other of thoſe places; on the ſucceſs of which every thing now depends, and all muſt be riſked to enſure it. Appendix. No. 134.

A connection with the Guicawars offers another reſource, which in the preſent poſture of our affairs is by no means to be neglected. My ſentiments with regard to this family appear at large on our proceedings under the 10th October 1777: their near neighbourhood to our northern poſſeſſions, their diſcontents at the treatment they have received from the Poonah Government, the very advantageous offers formerly made by Futty Sing for an alliance with the Company, the command of the country through which Colonel Goddard's march lies, their actual force, and the diſtance from the centre of the empire, which in theſe times muſt render them proportionably more independent, point them out to us as allies of the firſt conſequence; yet it muſt be acknowledged that the diviſions in their family render it leſs conſiderable, and our dependance on it therefore muſt be leſs than it otherwiſe might be. It is well known that Futty Sing is the party favoured by the Poonah Miniſters, as Govind Row has been that which has been hitherto moſt ſtrictly attached to Ragoba's intereſt: Madjee Scindia is ſaid too to favour Futty Sing: our ground therefore in this quarter ſhould be tried with caution: a paſſage for Colonel Goddard's army may however be demanded from both, and both may be ſounded with regard to their diſpoſition towards an alliance with the Company. Govind Row, on our late motions in favour of Ragoba, made ſome overtures to me; but, conſidering Futty Sing's ſuppoſed connection with Scindia, to whom our preſent views muſt be principally turned, as well as from a political regard to his greater authority at this moment in the territories dependant on his family, his ſhould certainly be the party to which we ſhould at preſent rather incline.

I have only one or two reflections more to make on the preſent ſtate of affairs with the Marattas.

The ſchemes of the Governor General and Council with regard to the Rajah of Berar being yet unknown to us, it is impoſſible for us to found any meaſures on them: yet I cannot help now obſerving, that if, as has been conjectured, the gentlemen of that Preſidency have entertained thoughts of reſtoring in his perſon the ancient Rajah Government, the attempt ſeems likely to be attended with no ſmall difficulty. The Powers who are now in poſſeſſion of the Peiſhwa domains, together with all the Jaghierdars, however diſunited among themſelves, would probably concur in oppoſing Moodajee Bouncello, who, from every thing I have been able to learn, has for ſome time taken no part in theſe weſtern broils, nor appears to have any party among the leading men of this part of the empire. And I would wiſh to ſubmit to the Governor General and Council, whether we might not better anſwer our views by ſupporting a formidable Chief like Madjee Scindia, who has already acquired the actual poſſeſſion of the Peiſhwa's domains, with all the authority of the office, who is backed with the reſources of his own Jaghire, and has the perſon of Ragoba at his diſpoſal to give a colour of lawful authority to that he has aſſumed, than by attempting to model the whole State anew, and to place the rule of it in hands of our own chuſing; a labour that is perhaps too arduous, and the ſucceſs certainly dubious.

The ſame objection lies againſt our acting upon the orders of the Honourable Secret Committee for the reſtoration of Ragoba to the Peiſhwaſhip. However favourite an object this was with me in 1775, circumſtances are now entirely changed; and councils muſt be changed with them: at that time the Jaghierdars kept aloof from the quarrel. Madjee Scindia who is now the ſupreme head of the Poonah Government was making tenders of his ſervices from Eugene to Ragoba, then at the head of a formidable army; and would have been content with ſome acceſſions of Jagheer, and ſome honorary diſtinctions.

Appendix. No. 134.

diſtinctions. Even the officers in whom the miniſters were forced to put their greateſt confidence, were wavering, and thinking more of ſecuring themſelves than of ſupporting the party they were ſtill engaged in. Since that time, while Ragoba has been kept inactive, a new ſtate of things has taken place. Even the forms of the Government are now hardly left, and the command of the army is the only real title to the empire. He who might then have called out at leaſt half the forces of the State, has not found five hundred horſe to aſſiſt him in the late attempt we have made in his favour. He has been undeceived, as well as we; and has found all, to which the ſplendor of his former fortune and the glory of his name can entitle him, is no more than to become the penſioner of Madjee Scindia, and the cloak of his ambition.

After ſtating thus fully my ſentiments on the preſent poſture of affairs, it only remains for me to propoſe to the Committee that we come to the following reſolutions:

1ſt. That the aſſiſtance of military officers (mentioned in the firſt part of this minute) be requeſted from Bengal.

On this, however, it is proper to remark, that in caſe of Colonel Goddard's making good his way to Surat, our wants on this reſpect will moſt probably be ſupplied.

2dly. That Colonel Goddard be written to in terms propoſed above.

3dly. That the convention concluded by Meſſieurs Carnac and Egerton at Worgom was invalid; and that the public faith cannot be conſidered as pledged, after their expreſs declaration to the Maratta Durbar, that they had no powers to accéde to the terms inſiſted on from them. That the general anſwer however given to Nanah's agent, is all that is neceſſary to be communicated on this ſubject, for the preſent to him.

4thly. That Madjee Scindia's good offices were of the greateſt ſervice in the negotiation of the terms of the convention, and particularly in procuring permiſſion for the immediate return of the army: that he is in conſequence entitled to every mark of regard we can conſiſtently ſhew him; and that it will be neceſſary to find ſome means of expreſſing the ſenſe we entertain of his attention to the intereſt of the Company, in ſome degree equivalent to the ceſſion of the Mogul ſhare of the Broach Pergunnah.

5thly. That the notes paſſed at Worgom to the ſeveral officers of Madjee Scindia's Durbar as gratification to them, amounting to rupees 41,000, out of reſpect to Madjee Scindia, as well as out of motives of good policy, ought to be forthwith taken up and diſcharged.'

6thly. That we have good ground to hope, that Madjee Scindia is well diſpoſed towards the Company, and will be willing to enter into a connection with us, advantageous to the Company.

7thly. That the grand objects to be kept in view in forming of ſuch a connection, are,

1ſt. To exclude the French effectually and permanently from all connection, whether commercial or political, in the affairs of the Maratta empire, and with all perſons concerned in the adminiſtration thereof.

2d. To exclude Nanah Furneze, if poſſible, from the adminiſtration of the Poonah Government; or if this cannot be, to unite with Madjee Scindia, for the purpoſe of guarding againſt Nanah Furneze's acquiring any ſort of independent authority in the Poonah Government; and to obtain the beſt ſecurity for the Company againſt ſuch an event.

3d. To endeavour to obtain for the Company ſuch a territory as may be ſufficient for defraying the expences of this ſettlement, or at leaſt to preſerve that we at preſent hold.

8thly. That it is abſolutely neceſſary to loſe no time in the meaſures to be taken, as well to inform ourſelves of Madjee Scindia's intentions with regard to an alliance with the Company, as to guard againſt the pernicious deſigns of Nanah Furneze, and thoſe of the French.

9thly. That in any connection to be formed with Madjee Scindia, every engagement that may have a tendency hoſtile to the Rajah of Berar be avoided.

10thly. That nothing be finally and concluſively ſettled in way of alliance with Madjee Scindia, until we receive the concurrence of the Governor General and Council; unleſs the ſeveral points ſpecified in the 7th reſolution can be ſatisfactorily provided for.

11thly. That the Preſident write to Madjee Scindia to the purpoſe propoſed in the foregoing.

12thly. That the Chief of Broach be ordered to apply to Futty Sing Guicawar, alſo likewiſe to Govind Row Guicawar, for their paſſports and Duſtucks, for the paſſage of the Bengal troops through their country; and for their being ſupplied on their march with proviſions; for which the Commander will take care that the inhabitants are punctually paid. That the Chief of Broach make the ſame profeſſions of peace and amity to the Guicawars as thoſe directed in the inſtructions from the Governor General and Council to Colonel Leſlie. And that he adviſe this Committee and Colonel Goddard without delay of his ſucceſs.

13thly. That the Chief of Broach be likewiſe directed to ſound with proper caution, the diſpoſition of the Guicawars towards an alliance with the Company of mutual defence; and adviſe us of the ſucceſs we might expect, ſhould we judge it expedient to make any overtures for that purpoſe.

14thly. That the field train and equipage be completed, and held in readineſs for ſervice at the ſhorteſt notice.

15thly. That a gentleman well informed in the ſtate of the Company's affairs under this Preſidency, and particularly inſtructed for this occaſion in the preſent political circumſtances of the ſettlement, and in the deſigns of this Government, be immediately diſpatched with our advices to Bengal, in order to ſupply the Governor General and Council with ſuch information and details of local knowledge as they may require, or the ſupport of our preſent plan may render neceſſary.

Extracts from the Conſultations of the Select Committee of Bombay, relative to the Preſident's Review of Maratta Affairs.

Friday, 19th February 1779.—At a Committee;—preſent, the Honourable William Hornby, Eſquire, Preſident and Governor; John Carnac and Daniel Draper, Eſquires.

The Preſident now lays before us, a minute containing a review of Maratta affairs, and ſundry reſolutions propoſed by him in conſequence.

This minute having been attentively peruſed, the Preſident, in conformity to the 15th of his propoſed reſolutions, acquaints us, that he thinks Mr. George Horſley a perſon every way qualified to be ſent to Bengal on the intended ſervice, and therefore nominates him for this commiſſion.

Mr. Draper thinks it is very unneceſſary to ſend any perſon to Bengal, with regard to the paſt tranſactions to this time, excluſive of the Preſident's minute, and therefore diſapproves of it, both on account of the expences that will be incurred by ſuch a meaſure, and the probability he thinks there is that the Governor General and Council will order an enquiry to be made here into the late tranſactions.

Mr. Carnac entirely concurs with the Preſident, not only in the propriety and neceſſity of the meaſure, but alſo in his nomination of Mr. Horſley, whom he thinks perfectly qualified for ſo important a commiſſion.

Mr.

Mr. Horſley is therefore appointed accordingly, and muſt hold himſelf in readineſs to proceed with the utmoſt expedition, after our diſpatches and the inſtructions to him are prepared, which the Secretary is ordered to get ready with all ſpeed.

Mr. Thomas Shotbolt is appointed to accompany Mr. Horſley to Bengal as his aſſiſtant.

The further conſideration of the other propoſed reſolutions is deferred.

Tueſday, 23d February 1779.—At a Committee;—preſent, as in the preceding one.

The Preſident's review of the Maratta affairs being now re-peruſed, Mr. Draper, in the courſe of reading, makes the following obſervations:

With reſpect to what is advanced of the motives for the late expedition being preſſed on us by the Governor General and Council and the Secret Committee, he perſiſts in thinking that the letter from the former of the 17th Auguſt, was conditional; and the letter's depending on the co-operation of the other Preſidencies, which leaves us only to lament that it has been ſo prematurely undertaken.

With reſpect to the requiſition for a Colonel from Bengal, inſtead of Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn removed, Mr. Draper has no objection, provided they are thought by the Governor General and Council unworthy of being continued; though he remarks, we have no reaſon to expect Colonel Goddard ſoon.

With regard to the Major and five or ſix Captains, he could wiſh to conſult the commanding officer, either in the Committee or in council. The great difference in emoluments ought to be conſidered, and likewiſe the Board conſulted.

He entirely concurs in the propoſed meaſures for facilitating the march of Colonel Goddard's army; but thoſe now appear unneceſſary by his near approach.

He approves the Governor's anſwer in general about a reference to the Governor General and Council reſpecting the convention of Worgaum, though he makes a reſerve, in conſequence of the Poonah committee having deputed Mr. Farmer, and afterwards made a declaration alſo about Mr. Holmes's being ſent with full powers, or carte blanche, as declared by Colonels Egerton and Cockburn.

The meaſures propoſed for defending ourſelves againſt the Marattas he approves.

The reaſons why a proper retreat ſhould have been made to or attempted from Worgaum to Bombay he conceives are juſt.

Several inſtances of Scindia's good diſpoſition towards us are quoted, but Mr. Draper declares he knows nothing regarding the excluſion of the French but from the ſequel of the treaty, except from private converſation, ſince the return of the expedition.

Mr. Draper cannot enough lament that we have ſo lately become fully acquainted with Scindia's being the principal perſon in power, notwithſtanding the reſidence of Meſſrs. Moſtyn and Lewis at Poonah; and does not recollect hearing any thing of his agent's being ſent here till ſince the return of the expedition.

The ſix concluſions appear plauſible; but he does not approve the 4th, which appears to him to claſh with the 5th.

He thinks the conjectures about Scindia's motives of action ſhould be ſubmitted to the Governor General and Council, and that the determination, as well reſpecting the convention as the point, whether we are indebted to Madjee Scindia or not? for the power of deciding on it ſhould alſo be referred to the Governor General and Council.

He remarks on the argument about the Poonah committee having no authority to treat. Why did they then inveſt Mr. Holmes with full powers, and ſend Mr. Farmer making a ſubſequent declaration to the letter?

He thinks the negociation with Madjee Scindia may be commenced, provided nothing concluſive is done without the Governor General and Council's approbation, and that it is put on that footing on the commencement, that they may not pretend we deceive them. Appendix. No. 134.

With reſpect to the notes for rupees 41,000 to Scindia's Durbar officers, though he highly diſapproves them, as exorbitant, and never heard of them till the laſt meeting of the Committee, he is ſorry to ſay, that in our preſent ſituation it ſeems neceſſary to diſcharge them.

The propoſals for the letter to be written by the Preſident to Madjee Scindia, appears in general proper; but he thinks that the circumſtance of 1,000 horſe accompanying the Bengal army had better be declined, and ſeems now to be totally unneceſſary.

The propoſals for the field train and equipage here being got in readineſs, Mr. Draper approves, but thinks that a detachment being ſent out to join the Bengal army now, ſeems totally unneceſſary.

He thinks the Guicawars may be ſounded, but with caution, leſt Scindia's jealouſy might be excited; and that the remarks on the Governor General's ſuppoſed ſcheme concerning Moodajee Bouncello, ought to be ſubmitted to them.

He concurs in opinion with the Preſident, that the Select Committee's late orders regarding Ragoba, received the 8th inſtant, cannot now prove uſeful.

The queſtion being then put on the ſeveral reſolutions propoſed by the Preſident, in the order they ſtand in his minute;

1ſt Reſolution. Mr. Draper cannot concur in the firſt reſolution, becauſe of Colonel Egerton's and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn's preſent ſituation; becauſe Colonel Goddard may be ſoon expected; becauſe of Lieutenant Colonel Hartley's late promotion; and becauſe he concludes, that in caſe of emergency, we can more eaſily get a field officer from the Madras troops, intended to be employed againſt Mahé.

Mr. Carnac and the Preſident think the neceſſity of this reſolution in a great meaſure ſuperſeded by the rapid approach of Lieutenant Colonel Goddard.

2d Reſolution. Approved by Mr. Draper. Mr. Carnac and the Preſident being of the ſame opinion as on the foregoing.

3d Reſolution. Mr. Draper is of opinion the late convention at Worgaum, concluded by Meſſrs. Carnac and Egerton, ſhould be referred to the Governor General and Council.

Voted in the affirmative by Mr. Carnac and the Preſident.

4th Reſolution. Mr. Draper is of opinion appears proper; and agreed to by Mr. Carnac and the Preſident.

5th Reſolution. Mr. Draper acquieſces therein conſidering the reaſons above given; and agreed to by Mr. Carnac and the Preſident.

6th Reſolution. Mr. Draper is of opinion, that we have ſome ground to hope that Madjee Scindia is well diſpoſed towards the Company, in conſequence of the late tranſactions, and that he may be willing to enter into a connection with us on advantageous terms.

Agreed to by Mr. Carnac and the Preſident.

7th Reſolution. Mr. Draper concurs with Mr. Carnac and the Preſident, in thinking the objects mentioned under this article the grand ones to be kept in view.

8th Reſolution. Mr. Draper concurs in, provided nothing definitive be done without the ſanction of the Governor General and Council, and that no great expence be incurred by ſo doing, after the immenſe ſum already diſburſed in ſupport of Ragoba, and with the reſerve before expreſſed reſpecting the previous declaration upon the commencement of the negociation;—concurred in by Mr. Carnac and the Preſident.

9th Reſolution. Mr. Draper entirely concurs in this, as do Mr. Carnac and the Preſident.

10th Reſolution. Mr. Draper in his remarks had already declared his opinion regarding the former part of this reſolution, and he thinks it will be time enough to decide on the latter, when we find the ſeveral points therein attended to can be obtained, and in the mean time to apprize the Governor General and Council of them.

Appendix. No. 135.

Agreed to by Mr. Carnac and the Preſident.

11th Reſolution. Mr. Draper agrees thereto, with the reſerve above noticed, regarding the 1,000 horſe.

Agreed to by Mr. Carnac and the Preſident, except what regards Colonel Goddard's army, which is now become unneceſſary by his near approach, in which Mr. Draper concurs.

12th Reſolution. Mr. Draper agrees thereto, provided it can be done in ſuch a manner as not to give offence to Scindia, though not ſo neceſſary on account of Colonel Goddard's approach.

Mr. Carnac and the Preſident are of opinion the meaſure therein propoſed is not now neceſſary; in which Mr. Draper alſo concurs.

13th Reſolution. Approved by Mr. Draper as matters ſtood before, but now unneceſſary.

Mr. Carnac and the Preſident think the meaſure ſhould be ſuſpended for the preſent.

14th Reſolution. Unanimouſly agreed to.

15th Reſolution. Not thought neceſſary by Mr. Draper, being of opinion we ought to be very explicit in our repreſentations to the Governor General and Council by letter, in conſequence of the Preſident's minute of review.

Mr. Carnac and the Preſident continue in the opinion and reſolution as they ſtand on the minutes of our laſt meeting.

APPENDIX, No. 135.

Letter from Governor Hornby to the Committee of Secrecy, dated 28th March 1779; enclosing Conſiderations on the State of Affairs at Bombay.

Honourable Sirs,

OUR advices conveyed by this veſſel will inform you at large of all occurrences of moment up to this time; but as we have come to no reſolutions with regard to the meaſures neceſſary to be taken at this critical juncture, the letters from the Committee will ſtill leave you unſatisfied on this ſubject; which of all others I preſume will be that you will be moſt ſolicitous about. My thoughts have been much employed on it, and I now do myſelf the honour of encloſing for your information a paper which is the reſult of them. The form is that in which I have prepared to bring the matter before the Committee as ſoon as the Betſey is diſpatched.

I have in that paper given my ſentiments ſo fully, as well on the preſent poſture of affairs, as on the proſpect before us, between this time and the end of next October, that I have nothing to add here on thoſe ſubjects, and muſt beg leave to refer you entirely to it. I flatter myſelf you will eſteem the meaſures I propoſe, ſuch as are beſt adapted to remedy our preſent and future difficulties, to provide for the ſecurity and proſperity of your affairs under this Preſidency, and to enable us to take the part which may be hereafter aſſigned us by the Governor General and Council in their general plan, with the greateſt proſpect of affording effectual aid in the execution of it.

The Royal Admiral, which will ſail about the 15th or 20th of next month, will bring you advice of the reſolutions of the Committee on my propoſed plan of operations. As I have but juſt completed it, I thought it beſt not to detain the Betſey, that we might be relieved from all other buſineſs before we took this into conſideration; for as it requires diſpatch, ſo the importance of it renders it the more neceſſary that our whole attention ſhould be confined to it.

On the other hand, I was unwilling you ſhould be left to ſuppoſe that no plan had yet been thought of, and our future reſolutions bear an appearance of precipitation for want of your receiving by this opportunity ſome intelligence regarding them.

Thinking it a duty I owe to my honourable employers to ſtay in India until anſwers are received to this letter, and being confident it will be pleaſing to you, I intend doing it, though I was fully bent on leaving it this ſeaſon had the ſhips arrived early; but now it is abſolutely neceſſary that I ſhould ſtay till anſwers are received, for ſeveral reaſons; and I hope we ſhall be favoured with your commands by the way of Aleppo and Buſſorah, for the conveyance of which I ſhall keep a veſſel at Buſſorah purpoſely to receive and bring them hither in November, ſo that I hope to receive them all in December next.

Lieutenant Brice Hardie has been advanced four hundred German crowns ſhould he have occaſion for them, of which he will render you an account; he is a very truſty and good officer.

I have the honour to be,
Honourable Sirs,
Your moſt faithful and obedient humble ſervant,
William Hornby.

Bombay, the 28th March 1779.

Select Conſultations, 30th March 1779.

We have now before us that information of the views of the Governor General and Council in their projected alliance with Moodajee Bouncello; and in the ſtate of which Colonel Goddard has left the negociation with him, the want of which has hitherto rendered it impoſſible for us to come to any final reſolution, either with reſpect to the ſteps neceſſary to be taken here, or with regard to the future meaſures proper to be recommended and ſubmitted to the Governor General and Council for their approbation and ſanction.

It appears that the firſt object of Mr. Elliott's embaſſy to Nigapoor, was a defenſive alliance between the Company and Moodajee Bouncello, for the mutual ſecurity of their reſpective poſſeſſions. The Governor General and Council charged with the care of all the wide extended territory of the Company have with great judgment at the commencement of a French war, turned their thoughts thus early to the cultivation of a friendſhip with a Power, whoſe dominions, ſituated between the Company's provinces in Bengal, and on the coaſt of Coromandel on one ſide, and the country under the command of the Poonah Miniſters, and the eſtates of the Nizam, on the other, render him the beſt able of any Prince in Indoſtan, to afford us aſſiſtance, and of check the deſigns of our enemies, at the ſame time that his near neighbourhood to the ſettlements where the principal force of the Company is maintained, muſt make him ſenſible of the intereſt he himſelf has in a hearty union with our nation.

The Governor General and Council proceed from this firſt meaſure planned for the general ſafety, to point out to their miniſter ſuch particular circumſtances on the affairs of the Preſidency, and in thoſe of the Poonah Miniſters and the Rajah of Berar, as relate to the more immediate ſecurity of this ſettlement, to the excluſion of the French and their faction from the direction of the Adminiſtration at Poonah, and to the eſtabliſhment of the Government there in the hands of perſons well diſpoſed to our intereſt.

Mr. Elliott was for theſe purpoſes authorized to enter into a treaty with Mpodajee Bouncello, to unite with him in a direct and open war againſt the Poonah Miniſters, and to concert with him plans for the proſecution of it, for counteracting the deſigns of the French, and for eſtabliſhing him in the dominions and authority of the Ram Rajah.

Theſe are the meaſures Mr. Elliott was to purſue, under the following expreſs limitations and proviſos, that the Preſidency of Bombay had neither entered into any new engagement with Ragoba, nor with any other party in the Maratta State, with which a connection with Moodajee Bouncello might claſh; nor had concluded a peace with the Poonah Miniſters; in either of which caſes Mr. Elliott was to ſuſpend his negociations relative to the eſtabliſhment of Moodajee Bouncello in the Ram Rajaſhip, to conform to the Bombay meaſures, and to engage in no offenſive plan contrary to that of the Preſidency of Bombay.

The intentions of the Governor General and Council with regard to a defenſive alliance with Moodajee Bouncello, were communicated to us by a letter dated on the ſame day as Mr. Elliott's inſtructions (the 18th of July) and received here the 27th of Auguſt; but with regard to the union projected between the Company and Moodajee Bouncello, for the removal of the French faction from the Poonah Durbar, and for the eſtabliſhment of Moodajee in the Rajaſhip, we have till this * time remained uninformed. On the 27th of September we received from the Governor General and Council their approbation of our reſolutions of the 21ſt July, and of the meaſures we propoſed taking in favour of Ragoba, without any intimation of the deſign in favour of Moodajee Bouncello, excepting a reſtriction from entering into any engagements of a tendency hoſtile to the Government of Berar, or contrary to ſuch as Mr. Elliott might have apprized us of his having concluded with Moodajee Bouncello.

Under theſe circumſtances our treaty with Ragoba was concluded; and we heard no more of the negociation with Moodajee Bouncello till the 18th of December, when the Governor General and Council's letter of the 15th of October adviſed us in general, that the Rajah's diſpoſitions towards the Company were favourable, but that Mr. Elliott was dead; and that the Governor General and Council propoſed to wait for advices from the Rajah, before they appointed any other perſon to ſucceed Mr. Elliott. We were at the ſame time authorized to give Colonel Goddard orders for proceeding forwards, at all events, in ſupport of our plan for reinſtating Ragoba in the Regency, if we ſhould judge this neceſſary.

On the 10th of January the Bengal letter of the 23d of November came to hand, referring to one of the 16th, which enclоſed a copy of Mr. Elliott's inſtructions; adviſing of Colonel Goddard's being inveſted with full powers to conclude a treaty with Moodajee Bouncello, on the ground of thoſe inſtructions; and informing us that Colonel Goddard was no longer under our orders, but in a very limited degree; and what the limitations might be, we remained utterly ignorant of, as the letter of the 16th of November, and M Elliott's inſtructions contained in it, had miſcarried.

That of the 23d of November was forwarded to us by Colonel Goddard, accompanied by one from himſelf, which relieved us from much of the anxiety we muſt have felt, while doubtful how far we might depend on the ſupport of the forces under his command: but the Colonel, aware of the difficulties we might be thrown into by an uncertainty with regard to this point, aſſured us that he would aſſiſt with his troops in any meaſures we might have formed in reliance on them, as far as we might deem conſiſtent with the negociation he was then engaged in. And on receipt of our letters of the 6th and 19th of December, and on Moodajee Bouncello's declining to proceed further in the treaty propoſed to him by the Governor General and Council, after he knew of the Bombay troops being in the field in favour of Ragoba, Colonel Goddard determined to march forward, without waiting to hear further from us.

I have entered into theſe particulars in order to ſhew, that no over-weening partiality for meaſures of our own, prevented us from paying the attention and deference to the views of the Governor General and Council, to which I ſhall always think them entitled. I make no doubt the Governor General and Council had good reaſon for reſerve to us, with regard to fixing Moodajee Bouncello in the Rajaſhip; which reſerve I conjecture was owing to the preference they were willing to give to the deſign formed here for the re-eſtabliſhment of Ragoba in the Regency, which is evidently the principle on which Mr. Elliot's inſtructions are framed. The Governor General and Council probably thought, that the communication of another ſcheme of theirs, while ours was under conſideration, might ſerve only to embarraſs us, and produce a difference in our councils, which ought not to allow us to purſue our own meaſures with the neceſſary degree of confidence and vigour. I cannot refuſe myſelf the acknowledging the attention ſhewn throughout Mr. Elliot's inſtructions to the intereſt of this Preſidency, and to the ſupport of that credit and influence of the Adminiſtration here, ſo neceſſary to the ſucceſsful management of the affairs under our charge. The liberal ſpirit we have experienced from the Governor General and Council, as well in their judgment of our principles and conduct, as in the aſſiſtance they have offered this ſettlement, is the beſt encouragement to us to act with that confidence in them, which, in times of difficulty, is neceſſary to ſupport us through our exertions beyond the mere line of duty.

It is impoſſible likewiſe to paſs without noticing the great merit of the gentleman who has conducted the Bengal troops with ſuch prudence and diſpatch to our aſſiſtance at this critical time. The difficulties were very great which he muſt have been under, while charged with the management of a moſt important negociation from the Government of Bengal, to which he muſt have found himſelf unable to reconcile the meaſures already taken at this Preſidency. The delays and doubts which the ſame cauſe naturally occaſioned in the reſolves of the Rajah, to whom he was deputed, rendered his ſituation ſtill more embarraſſing, as they left him without any determinate plan for his conduct, but ſuch as he himſelf might form for the occaſion. The preſſing exigency of the Company's affairs on this ſide, the united oppoſition he had reaſon to expect from the Maratta Chiefs, in the courſe of a very long march through an enemy's country, the unſucceſsful event of our expedition, the ſtipulation for his return, the inſtances made him at the ſame time, even on the part of Moodajee Bouncello, to induce him to it, and a regard to the future reſolves of the Governor General and Council, were circumſtances that all claimed a ſhare in his conſideration, and rendered the choice, whether to proceed on, to return, or to wait for further orders, no eaſy one: his ready determination of coming without delay to our aid, in my opinion does the greateſt honour to his judgment. Attention to the intereſts of the Company, prudence, deciſion, and diſintereſtedneſs, were equally conſpicuous on this occaſion; and they are ſuch as I think it becomes us to acknowledge to Colonel Goddard; and to point out, with the ſtrongeſt expreſſions of our approbation, to the Governor General and Council, who, I flatter myſelf, will eſteem Colonel Goddard's conduct deſerving the ſame degree of commendation; and permit us to requeſt from them ſome diſtinguiſhed mark of their and our ſenſe of his ſervices.

The knowledge of the ſtate of the negociation entruſted to Colonel Goddard with the Rajah of Berar, and the arrival of Bengal troops, have made a very conſiderable change in our affairs.

It appears that the diſpoſition of Moodajee Bouncello towards an alliance with the Company, on the terms propoſed by the Governor General and Council, is ſuch as to give us reaſon to expect that he will be ready to conclude the propoſed treaty, as ſoon as ever he receives the anſwers of the Governor General and Council to the letters tranſmitted to them through Colonel Goddard. Theſe, however, it is likely may not arrive near ſo ſoon as Colonel Goddard ſuppoſes they may be expected.—

* Copy of Mr. Elliott's Inſtructions was firſt received at Bombay the 17th March 1779.

Appendix. No. 135.

The impoſſibility of cloſing with the Rajah, while our engagement with Ragoba ſubſiſted, will of courſe be a cauſe of delay on the firſt receipt of them. The Governor General and Council's expectations of receiving the particulars of our unſucceſsful expedition, together with copies of the convention concluded at Worgom, information of the ſtate of our affairs ſubſequent to that period, and advice of Colonel Goddard's arrival at Surat, will probably ſtill prevent their coming to any final reſolution with regard to the alliance with Moodajee Bouncello, for ſome time longer. Yet there ſeems no reaſon to doubt of their determination to proceed with this deſign, which they have repreſented as originally planned to ſupply the place of the ſcheme entered into here, for the excluſion of the French faction from the Adminiſtration at Poonah. The alliance with Moodajee Bouncello therefore is what we muſt look to as the leading circumſtance in our political tranſactions with the Marattas in future. The ſenſe of the honourable the Secret Committee, of the Governor General and Council, and of this Committee, with regard to the neceſſity of ſettling the Maratta Government in ſuch a manner as will render us ſecure of the favourable diſpoſition of the heads of it to our intereſt, is perfectly uniform; I ſhall not therefore inſiſt further on this ſubject, on which I take it for granted we muſt be all agreed.

In my review of Maratta affairs I ſtated very particularly the reaſons I thought there were for preſuming that Madjee Scindia was favourably inclined to us, and might be diſpoſed to enter into a connection for the mutual advantage of the Company and himſelf. I took notice of the claims his conduct towards us at Worgom had eſtabliſhed on us, and the reaſons which his preſent authority in the Poonah Government, and the diſpoſition he had ſhewn to avoid taking part in the connection which the Bramins have formed with the French, together with the natural oppoſition of intereſt between him and Nannah, furniſhed for us to wiſh for ſuch a connection between us and him. To the letter which I wrote him as agreed by the Committee, I have hitherto received no anſwer. The two letters from him of the 2d and 6th inſtant are written in the name of the Poonah Durbar, claiming the ſeveral ceſſions ſtipulated for in the convention of Worgom. His agent however has ſtill continued the ſame profeſſions of friendſhip, but has at laſt taken leave without opening himſelf further as to the particular views of his maſter. Had Scindia thought proper to have met the advances I made him in my letter, and to have come at once to a ſettlement that might have fixed our affairs under this Preſidency on that footing which is neceſſary to the intereſts of the Company on this ſide of India, and for the ſecurity of the general intereſt againſt the deſigns of the French, and their dangerous connection with Nanah, I ſhould, as I before declared, have been much diſpoſed to have cloſed with him. But he has choſen to proceed in a manner leſs open, though his intentions I think may be eaſily ſeen into, and it is neceſſary for us to take our meaſures accordingly.

Madjee Scindia's idea ſeems to be, that he has already laid us under ſuch obligations by the aſſiſtance he gave in extricating our troops at Worgom; and is ſo ſecure of our jealouſy of Nanah's connection with the French, that he may depend on our ſtill courting his friendſhip. And he imagines, by preſerving his claims on us for the ceſſions ſtipulated for in the convention of Worgom, he ſhall be able to maintain ſuch an influence over us as to chuſe his own time and terms for any aſſiſtance he may expect from us. At preſent he finds his power in the Maratta Durbar ſufficiently ſecured by his preſence, and by his command of his own and Holcar's troops near the capital; and conceiving our affairs to be more urgent than his, he hopes for a more advantageous bargain, by waiting till he can draw propoſals from us. He has already taken advantage of the ground we have given him to rely on a diſpoſition in his favour, by ſeizing Succaram Bappoo, and removing his party from all truſt and power, and by keeping a ſtricter hand than before on Nanah, with whom however he has ſtill refrained from coming to extremities, probably with a view to making the moſt of him, and draining him completely of his treaſures.

Nanah's preſent ſituation is ſuch as renders his views far leſs intelligible than Scindia's; but it is thus I think they muſt be underſtood: while the latter continues at Poonah, Nanah can promiſe himſelf but a very moderate ſhare of real power in the Government; yet Scindia's troops are at preſent the chief ſecurity he has even for that little. Knowing that he muſt reckon on the Engliſh as his enemies, on account of the meaſures he has taken with the French, he ſeems to aim at maintaining himſelf by Scindia's means, till he can receive from Europe the aſſiſtance promiſed him by Lubin; and while he continues rich, he will probably preſerve influence enough with Scindia to prevent him from coming to an explanation with us. If he can manage in the mean time to puſh things to that extremity as to break altogether the connection he ſees likely to take place between us and Scindia, he may hope that the authority and actual force he will acquire by the arrival of his European allies next ſeaſon, will enable him to force Scindia into his meaſures, and to keep him in future in his dependance.

The attack on Fort Victoria by Moraba Bapoojee, the Subada of Sevendroog, who is the nephew of Hurry Punt Furkia, and, as well as his uncle, a creature of Nanah, I make no doubt has been concerted by Nanah with a deſign of obliging Scindia to declare againſt us, and involving him in one common cauſe with himſelf, as he cannot but have obſerved the diſtinction we made between them; and Scindia probably connives at the meaſure, with a view of marking to us, that all our dependance muſt be on him. Upon our application to the Durbar, I take it for granted that Scindia will oblige Nanah to diſcourage the Soubah, and order him to deſiſt; thus purſuing his ſcheme of keeping things in their preſent ſtate of uncertainty and ſuſpenſe, Nanah will probably give private orders contrary to the public ones; and we may be ſubject ſtill to repeated inſults and depredations, which will be diſavowed and renewed continually, while the fair ſeaſon will be conſumed in this ſort of trifling and diſgraceful intercourſe.

Every principle of good policy is againſt our ſuffering ourſelves to be thus amuſed, and forbids us to loſe a moment in inaction. The Poonah Durbar ſtill inſiſts on our yielding up all our territories, claiming the full execution of the convention of Worgom. Fort Victoria is actually attacked; the iſlands have been threatened for ſome time paſt: we muſt therefore either chuſe peace on the terms on which the enemy preſcribe it; or we muſt take our meaſures according to the actual ſtate of war we are now in. While we reſolve on neither, we ſubject ourſelves to inconveniencies which threaten our that affairs with total ruin; and loſe the only opportunity can preſent itſelf, for putting ourſelves in that forward and advantageous ſituation, which will enable us either to retrieve our affairs by an honourable peace, or to proſecute the war with ſucceſs.

The Bengal detachment muſt already have coſt an immenſe ſum; and its expence, while it remains here, is more than equal to the full amount of all our preſent revenues. Colonel Goddard has hitherto ſupplied himſelf with the ſums neceſſary for the payment of his troops, by the drafts on Bengal; but this is a reſource which cannot be depended on for more than eight or ten lacks at furtheſt. The Colonel has likewiſe already expreſſed his anxiety with regard to the burthen his expences may prove upon the Bengal treaſury; and indeed, if we conſider the increaſed military and naval eſtabliſhment of that Preſidency, on account of the war with France, and the demands which have probably been already made on the Governor General and Council by the gentlemen of Madras, whoſe diſtreſs for money, we have underſtood, has been the cauſe of their delaying ſo long to carry into execution the projected expedition againſt Mahé, we muſt conſider it as highly probable that our hopes of ſupplies of caſh from Bengal may fail us. In 1776, when the Governor General and Council propoſed ſupporting us in a war with the Maratta Miniſters, on a proſpect of Colonel Upton's negociation proving ineffectual, they had adviſed that they had reſolved to ſupply us with ten lacks; which ſum ſeemed all they could allow us to depend on, for they inſiſted that it ſhould be reſerved for the purpoſes of the war only, and even ordered a ſeparate account to be kept of it, that they might be ſatisfied it was applied to no other. If ſuch was the caſe at that time, how much lower muſt our expectations be at this, when their own occaſions, as well as the expences of the Preſidency of Madras, muſt be increaſed much beyond what we can venture even to gueſs at? By the moſt exact eſtimate I have been able to make, I judge that between this time and the 31ſt October next, we ſhall have occaſion for about 50 lacks; and all our reſources together do not afford a proſpect of more than 20 lacks; great part of which laſt, depending on the clearing of purchaſers goods from our warehouſe, and on revenues, a conſiderable part of which is to be received in kind, will be apt to fall ſhort of the eſtimate; while our expences are likely to exceed, rather than prove leſs than they are rated at. We might indeed, by putting a total ſtop to our inveſtments, apply about four lacks appropriated for the purchaſe of pepper, and the completion of the China ſhips' cargoes, to defray our unavoidable expences; but, beſides the inadequate proportion of this ſupply to our wants, the remedy will I believe be thought very deſperate.

Another very alarming circumſtance calls for our moſt ſerious conſideration: Colonel Goddard informs us, that one half of his Sepoys have refuſed to receive their pay for the month of January unleſs that for the month of February is at the ſame time diſcharged; and he ſeems to think that this has proceeded from a diſpoſition among the men to return home, if they could furniſh themſelves with money enough to bear their charges to their own country. It is true, Colonel Goddard is of opinion that he ſhall be able to put a ſtop to this ſpirit in his return to camp; but we have every reaſon to fear the increaſe of it, ſhould the troops remain long unengaged in ſervice, which might divert them from ſuch thoughts.

Whatever our difficulties may be, from the increaſe of our expences, and the neceſſity of providing for the punctual payment of our troops, yet the defence of the ſettlement abſolutely requires that we ſhould find means of keeping up our preſent force, while things remain in the ſtate they are now, with the Marattas, and while the war with France continues. The only way in which this can be effected, is by ſecuring ſuch a revenue under our own collection, as may be nearly anſwerable to our expences; and it is abſolutely neceſſary to think of taking meaſures for this purpoſe, before the diſtreſs we foreſee arrives at ſuch a height as to render our efforts ineffectual. By the month of October our finances will be utterly exhauſted, the full amount procurable for bills on Bengal taken up, and a large ſum ſtill due: in this ſtate, ſhould we have to ſupport an united attack from the French and Marattas; in what condition ſhall we then be to oppoſe them? Our bond debt is already increaſed near eight lacks; none of the money expected from Bengal for paying off that before contracted, is yet arrived; and to moſt people here it ſeems incredible, that the ſubſcription opened at Bengal for raiſing the ſum neceſſary, can be filled, or any dependence had on it for ſupplies.

Let any one carry his views forward to the month of October next, and imagine what our ſituation muſt then be, if we continue inactive to that time; and let him tell me whether the moſt unſucceſsful war could be attended with more ruinous conſequences than we are then to expect, without the loſs of a ſingle battle, and in poſſeſſion of every foot of land we at preſent hold. It will then be in vain to talk of waiting for orders or aſſiſtance of any ſort from abroad: when all our hopes at home fail us, and the moment for providing for our own neceſſities is paſt, the Poonah Durbar will ſoon find that the terms of the convention, which they ſtill inſiſt on, will be every day leſs in our power to refuſe; and we may depend, that with ſuch a claim on us, which they ſtill keep up, they mean to enforce it whenever the opportunity may ſeem favourable. After allowing for draft of ten lacks more on Bengal between this and next October, which is to the full as much as we ſhall find bills for, and I fear may be more than that Government can conveniently ſpare us, we muſt expect to be at leaſt 20 lacks in debt; which is ſo large a ſum, that I have doubts whether we may be able to borrow it: but granting that money is ever ſo plentiful, yet we have no funds to pay even intereſt; and if once it is ſeen that the drains of inexhauſtible wealth from Bengal are at an end, that our ſupplies from thence are ſtopped, and our expences more than double our annual revenue, our credit muſt fail, and we may fix a ſhort day for the period of our ability to raiſe money by loans. The Bengal troops, which may now give vigour to our operations, by the time I allude to, may become quite uſeleſs for want of money to pay them; or if they were to have no cauſe of diſſatisfaction on this account, there is reaſon to fear their numbers will every day diminiſh by their going off to their own country, for which they will naturally be growing more impatient, the longer they are kept without employment. We have yet between two and three months of the fair ſeaſon left; and during that time and the rains, we are ſecure from all attempts of the French, either immediately againſt us, or in ſupport of their faction at Poonah. If this time be not employed, we know not when ſuch another may occur; it is therefore of the laſt conſequence to put ourſelves in the beſt poſture againſt the opening of the next ſeaſon, for oppoſing a French armament, if any ſhould arrive, and for rendering their Maratta allies as little capable as poſſible of affording them aſſiſtance. Appendix. No. 135.

Upon the fulleſt conſideration of all circumſtances, the following are the meaſures I think we ought to adopt, and which, with the concurrence of the Committee, I propoſe to enter on immediately:

Colonel Goddard ſhould, I think, be deſired to write to Moodajee Bouncello, to notify to him his arrival at Surat; and inform him that he only waits to know the final determination of the Governor General and Council, and of him (M. B.) with regard to the ſubject of his (Colonel G.'s) negociations, to take his meaſures for co-operating with him in ſupport of our mutual intereſt. And that no doubts may be entertained of the diſpoſition of this Government in the ſame cauſe, I propoſe writing likewiſe to inform him, that our connection with Ragoba being at an end, by his having put himſelf under the protection of another power, we remain entirely at liberty to unite with him (M. B.) in any deſign the Governor General and Council may have formed in his favour; and ſhall be ready to act accordingly, as ſoon as ever we are informed of their having concluded with him the terms of their propoſed treaty.

In the mean time Madjee Scindia may be dealt with according to the ſame temporizing plan of conduct, which he purſues with us. The actual power he at preſent poſſeſſes in the Poonah Durbar, and the poſſibility that the ſcheme of a union with Moodajee Bouncello may yet fail, require that we ſhould keep on terms with Scindia as long and as far as we can, and maintain the diſtinction between him and Nanah. I propoſe, therefore, ſtill to continue to treat with him for an equivalent for the town and Pergunnah of Broach; to receive any propoſals he may have to make towards an alliance with us, or for aſſiſtance againſt the Nizam or Hyder; and to make any of theſe particulars the ſubject of negociation in ſuch a manner as to prevent him, as long as poſſible, from declaring againſt us; and to ſpin out time till we can receive the final anſwer of the Governor General and Council, both with regard to the general ſyſtem of Maratta affairs they they reſolve on, and the particular conduct they may judge moſt honourable and advantageous towards Madjee Scindia in particular; I do not think this will be difficult, as our intention of gaining time will be greatly forwarded when the rains ſet in, and before the ſeaſon opens we ſhall certainly receive directions from Bengal for our guidance.

Our proceeding with reſpect to Nannah ought to be very different. The juſt reaſon we have for eſteeming him our irreconcileable enemy, and the open abettor and head of the French faction, was the ground of our commencement of hoſtilities. The claims on us in conſequence of the convention of Worgom, as they cannot be complied with on our part, and are ſtill inſiſted on his, render the war unavoidable, till they are departed from at leaſt. Even were this point gained, no dependance could be had on any terms of accommodation we might enter into with the Poonah Government while Nanah continued to ſhare in the Adminiſtration, or had a proſpect of recovering his authority in it; ſuch accommodation is however at preſent out of the queſtion. His dependants are at this time actually attacking our poſſeſſions, and we muſt of force continue the war. It is however our buſineſs to ſhew that the quarrel is perſonal againſt him and his faction. It will be proper therefore to profeſs our friendly diſpoſition towards the Maratta State and Chiefs in general; declaring that our only view is to remove from the Adminiſtration, a party which has ſhewn an avowed enmity againſt our nation; and to procure a ſettlement of the Maratta Government, in conjunction with perſons on whoſe friendſhip to us we can depend.

The plan of operations I would propoſe for our forces, and which I would wiſh to carry into immediate execution is as follows:

Colonel Goddard, to whom the moſt conſiderable part will of courſe be committed, will in the firſt place take poſſeſſion of the Pergunnahs of Dolpuar, Hanſoot, Occlaſeer, Deſhora, and Ahmood. This will be a matter of no difficulty, the country being entirely open and unprotected, and ſituated between our garriſons of Surat, Broach, and Jambooſer; and it ſhould be recommended to him to effect this in concert with the Chiefs of thoſe ſettlements, in order that the perſons of the Maratta collectors may all be ſecured at once; by which means we ſhall be able to bring them to account for the arrears and balances in their hands, which will be a matter of great importance, as the difficulties of our affairs, from the low ſtate of our finances, form one of the principal objects to which our views muſt be directed. The above Pergunnahs yield an annual revenue of ſix or ſeven lacks of rupees, and the balances collected from them I flatter myſelf will be conſiderable.

The Chiefs of Surat and Broach muſt receive charge of theſe Pergunnahs, and endeavour to put them under the moſt advantageous and regular form of management, conformable to the mode adopted in our other northern poſſeſſions.

Colonel Goddard in like manner will proceed in the reduction of the country ſouth of the Tappi; which, with Oolpaar, Hanſoot, and Occlaſeer, comprehend the ancient domain of Surat, known under the name of the Surat Auterwuzey; obſerving the precaution before noticed, of ſecuring the collectors in the ſeveral Pergunnahs, or ſuch of them as he may be able. The ſhare of the revenues of the city of Surat, collected by the Poonah Chotea, muſt likewiſe be appropriated to the uſe of the Company. But the Guicawar Chotea and collectors in the Pergunnahs ſhould be ſuffered to remain unmoleſted in their reſpective Aumils, while Colonel Goddard ſhould give their principals notice, that he is empowered to ſettle the province of Guzerat in conjunction with them, without delay.

The revenues of the Poonah Circar in this quarter being taken into our hands, Colonel Goddard ſhould be inſtructed to bring the brothers Futty Sing and Govind Row to a ſettlement with the Company; the ground of which muſt be our ſecuring to them their preſent poſſeſſions in the province of Guzerat, independent of the Poonah Government, and their engaging to ſupport us in the ſhare now retained in that province by the Poonah Government. It will be Colonel Goddard's care to accommodate the differences between the brothers under our mediation and guarantee, obſerving that as Futty Sing's authority is at preſent that which is acknowledged in the Guicawar dominions, his meaſures muſt be taken with him as the head of the family, provided he finds both equally ready to unite with us, as he probably will.

The revenue of the Poonah Circar, north of the Mihi, from the beſt account I have been able to procure of it, amounts to about eleven lacks: the Guicawars in the ſame country is much more conſiderable, amounting to near 29 lacks: the diſtricts ſituate between the Mihi and the Tappi, will be held by us as far eaſtward as Brodria, Dubhey, Zinnore, and Verſavee, ſouth of the Tappi. The country is held jointly by the Poonah Circar, the Guicawars, Nabob of Surat, and Graſſias, and is uſually eſtimated to yield a revenue of about 20 lacks, of which a full half belongs to the Poonah Circar; the remainder is divided among the other ſhares, but the largeſt proportion to the Guicawars. The revenue collected by the Poonah Circar north of the Mihi and ſouth of the Tappi, according to this eſtimate, amounts to 21 lacks; and beſides this, the Guicawars pay a tribute for their Jaghire in Guzerat, amounting to 27 lacks, which makes up the revenue of the Poonah Circar from this province 48 lacks, excluſive of the Pergunnahs between the Tappi and the Mihi.

The Pergunnahs north of the Mihi belonging to the Poonah Circar, I would propoſe to yield to the Guicawars, in exchange for their diviſion of the country ſouth of the Tappi, for their ſhare in the revenue of the city of Surat, and ſuch other lands as might nearly make up an equivalent: The tribute of 27 lacks per annum I would propoſe to relieve them from, till ſuch time at leaſt as the Poonah Government ſhould be ſettled, and a final treaty of peace concluded between us and that Durbar.

As Govind Row has always ſhewn himſelf well diſpoſed to our intereſt, it will be proper (in our arrangements with Futty Sing) to provide for him in a ſuitable manner, and procure a Jaghire for him more conſiderable than he has ever yet been able to obtain from Futty Sing, which has never I believe exceeded three lacks per annum. This has ſtill been the ſubject of diſpute betwixt them, and is the cauſe of their preſent contention. Futty Sing might well afford his brother an increaſe, both on account of the advantageous exchange he would make with us, and of his being relieved from the heavy load of tribute he pays to the Poonah Government.

It might be proper to provide ſome gratification for the Nabob of Cambay, and procure ſome acceſſion of territory for him in the final ſettlement of the northern country. But this, with all particulars of leſs conſequence, ſhould be given in charge to Colonel Goddard; with diſcretional powers to adjuſt the ſeveral intereſts in ſuch a manner as might be moſt honourable and advantageous for this Government; obſerving always that we wiſh the general plan of arrangement to be ſuch as to conciliate the ſeveral Powers to our intereſt, and detach them from the preſent Adminiſtration at Poonah.

In order to enable Colonel Goddard to accompliſh this the more effectually, I would propoſe that all our forces to the northward ſhould be put under his command, and a general authority given him to treat and conclude with the Guicawars, the Nabobs of Surat and Cambay, the Rajahs of Radjpipley, Mandavie, Futtypore, Baunſela, and Magrom, the Cooley Chiefs, and all others who might be affected by our military operations to the northward: I ſhould however recommend to him to refer the adjuſtment of the intereſt of all but the Guicawars, either to the Chief of Surat or Chief of Broach, or to the Reſident of Jambooſeer, or Reſident of Cambay, according to their reſpective ſituations, in order that his own attention might not be diſtracted from greater objects by more minute affairs; but I would ſtill propoſe to reſerve the final regulation of the affairs of the Guzerat province in general to Colonel Goddard, guided by our inſtructions; and the ſervants of the Company to the northward ſhould be directed to give him all the aſſiſtance and information that might be required for the ſucceſsful management of this important buſineſs.

It may be proper to obſerve likewiſe, that the treaty to be concluded with the Guicawars, muſt contain a reſervation with regard to the confirmation and approval of it by the Governor General and Council; and it is with a view to this, and to the future meaſures to be taken by them with the Rajah of Berar, that I have propoſed that nothing definitive ſhould be concluded with the Guicawars relative to their tribute to the Poonah Circar, which will be a point of conſideration, whenever the general arrangements of the Maratta Government come to be thought of.

If Colonel Goddard finds it practicable, and conſiſtent with the general plan, he might endeavour to obtain from Futty Sing the ceſſion of Dubhey and Zinnore, which lie very commodiouſly for completing our line of northern territory, and yield together a revenue of about two lacks; it will be the leſs difficult, as a conſiderable ſhare in the former, and ſome part likewiſe in the latter, I believe is collected for the Poonah Government.

Our preſent poſſeſſions to the northward, with the additions above-mentioned, would complete a line of country extending from the Mihi to the borders of the Portugueſe diſtrict at Damaun; the preſent amount of its revenue may be eſtimated at about 37 * lacks of rupees, and from its productions of grain, cotton, indigo, and timber, its manufactures, compact ſituation, and near neighbourhood to the Preſidency, it ſeems capable of conſiderable improvements; out of the above ſum 24 lacks would be an acceſſion of revenue, from the ſucceſs of the plan I now propoſe.

In conſequence of the exchange propoſed to be made with the Guicawars, ſhould they requeſt the Colonel's aſſiſtance for putting them in poſſeſſion of the territories of the Poonah Circar north of the Mihi, he ſhould be authorized to afford it them; and it ſhould be recommended to him to exert himſelf to accompliſh this ſervice with all diſpatch, in order to return at the very firſt opening of the ſeaſon to the ſouthward, as well to protect our own Pergunnahs, as to be ready to afford any aid we might ſtand in need of at Bombay.

I flatter myſelf Colonel Goddard will think the force he now commands near Surat, with the addition of a detachment of 100 European artillery, would be equal to the ſervice I have above propoſed. The force we at preſent have here I ſhould wiſh to keep entire, that we might not be expoſed to inſult from the enemy at the very ſeat of Government. I am in hopes likewiſe that our troops might be applied to other uſeful purpoſes, and prevent the enemy, by a judicious diverſion, from attempting any oppoſition of conſequence to Colonel Goddard's operations.

The force remaining in garriſon here I think will be ſufficient to enable us to make a vigorous effort for poſſeſſing ourſelves of Baſſein, which if ſucceſsful will nearly complete our views in this neighbourhood; and as it will be what our enemies will hardly expect, to find themſelves preſſed both here and to the northward at the ſame time, it will ſerve above all to recover our reputation, and impreſs them with a reſpect of our force.

Here our military ſchemes might terminate, if it were not that all our meaſures at this time have ſo great a reference to the probable deſigns of the French, that they will ſtill be incomplete, unleſs we can diſconcert their views by poſſeſſing ourſelves of the port where they have propoſed to eſtabliſh themſelves; I ſhould therefore, if the ſeaſon and other circumſtances ſeemed favourable, wiſh much to attempt next the reduction of Choul. The arrival of the King's ſhips towards the cloſe of the ſeaſon may facilitate this enterprize, and the accompliſhment of it would give us ſuch advantages over our enemies, as they could hardly make head againſt. Should the French arrive, and find themſelves prevented in this grand ſcheme of theirs, on the ſucceſs of which all their projects againſt this place are probably founded, nothing could tend ſo much to the final defeat of them. They would be without a port; they muſt begin all their negociations and intrigues anew, while their force would be waſting away; or they muſt begin their operations under manifeſt diſadvantages, which they would have ſuppoſed obviated by their poſſeſſion of Choul. Appendix No. 135.

By a proper exertion of the force we now have, all theſe purpoſes may, I think, with a moderate ſhare of good fortune, be effected before the opening of the next ſeaſon; againſt which time it is neceſſary we ſhould be prepared, either to repel an attack on our ſettlement by the French, or to act in ſupport of our ally the Rajah of Berar, or ſuch other party among the Marattas as the Governor General and Council may determine to unite with. Our advantages in either caſe are apparent: our forces will be paid during the interval, without diſtreſſing ourſelves by carrying the war into the enemy's country; our actual revenue will be more than doubled; the reputation of our arms reſtored; the grand object of our politics, the ſettlement of the Poonah Government, will be the only point we ſhall have to attend to; and the reſources of our enemies reduced, by the loſs of above 50 lacks of yearly revenue.

The oppoſition we may expect is in no degree proportionate to the great advantages we have in proſpect; the union of Nanah and Scindia is evidently imperfect, their Miniſters have never acted together ſince they have been here, not even in what might ſeem a common intereſt, the demand of the ceſſions they came to receive; Scindia has plainly a view of our friendſhip, and will hardly relinquiſh it, and engage in a hazardous enterprize ſo far from Poonah as Guzerat, eſpecially while his jealouſy of the Nizam, who is known to favour Nanah, and Hyder's operations to the ſouthward, call him the direct oppoſite way; Nanah has no other chief, or any other army but Scindia's to oppoſe us, and if he had, it would take more time to collect forces from different parts, and march them to the ſcene of our action, than now remains between this and the ſetting in of the monſoons.

The objection of want of authority from the Governor General and Council can hardly, I think, be urged in this caſe; we are in an actual ſtate of war: this ſingle fact ſeems to me an anſwer to all objections of this kind, even if it were true that we had not the expreſs ſanction of the Governor General and Council for commencing hoſtilities: but when we conſider further the imminent danger to our affairs from inaction, the contrary advantages of deciſion, and the few real difficulties we have to meet in a vigorous proſecution of the war, I cannot have a doubt of the meaſures we ought to take: our powers are in my opinion expreſs and ample; but if they were not, this I am convinced is no time for delay in expectation of them; and while I have the honour of bearing a public truſt, I ſhall in all caſes of great moment chuſe rather to riſk the conſequence, which can only affect me individually, than to bear the imputation of having neglected or delayed meaſures eſſential to the common good, for no better reaſon than to ſecure myſelf from blame, if they ſhould prove unſucceſsful.

Bombay, the 28th March 1779. Wm Hornby.

* Thus: Preſent Broach revenue, 10 lacks; preſent Surat revenue, 3 lacks; Oolpaar, Hanſoot, Occlaſeer, and Deſſora and Ahmood, 6 lacks; Poonah revenue, ſouth of the Tappi, 10 lacks; Guicawar revenue, ſouth of the Tappi, 6 lacks; Dubhey Zinnore, 2 lacks.

APPENDIX, No. 136.

Letter from Fort William to Colonel Leſlie.

Sir,

WE have received your letters from the 25th July to the 9th inſtant.

The unexpected length of time which the detachment under your command has remained at Chatterpore, made it neceſſary to endeavour for our own ſatisfaction to collect the cauſes aſſigned for it in your letters from that place. We obſerve by your firſt letter, dated two days after your arrival on the 3d July, that it would be neceſſary to halt for ſome time to repair the gun carriages which had been much ſhaken in the march from Calpee. On the 25th July you informed us, that they had undergone a thorough repair, and that you waited then for nothing but to complete your complement of cattle, and to collect a ſtore of grain to carry with you in caſe of exigency, but that you ſhould march in a few days. On the 30th July you repeated, that you ſhould proceed on your march in a few days, when the heavy rains were abated; but neither of your laſt letters, dated 9th Auguſt, though ſtill written from Chatterpore, mention your intention of quitting that place in the proſecution of your march, nor do they give any reaſon for deferring it; we cannot therefore help expreſſing the greateſt ſurprize and uneaſineſs at this unexpected delay; and though we doubt not you will be able to aſſign a ſatisfactory cauſe for it, we think it neceſſary to call on you for ſuch cauſe, as we are uninformed of any ſince the 25th July.

On this occaſion we think it proper to recall to your attention the caution given you in our letter of inſtructions, "That you do not ſuffer yourſelf to be diverted "from the proſecution of your march by any new object, "however plauſible, except only for the ſubſiſtence or "ſafety of your troops indiſpenſably requiring it." And we alſo repeat the hope expreſſed in our laſt letter, that you will purſue your march to Berar with all convenient expedition, according to our orders of the 7th ultimo.

APPENDIX, Nos 137 and 138.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 2d September 1778.

PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General; Preſident.

Philip Francis, Edward Wheler, } Eſquires.

Mr. Barwell indiſpoſed.

THE Governor General lays before the Board the following letter, which he received from Colonel Leſlie laſt night; and deſires that it may be recorded, as it may ſerve to remove the doubts which are expreſſed in the minutes of the laſt conſultation, reſpecting the proſecution of the march of the detachment, and the cauſes of its detention at Chatterpore. He had letters from camp dated the 14th, the day which Colonel Leſlie had fixed on for leaving Chatterpore. The camp was ſtill there on that day; but from the terms of his letter he does not entertain the leaſt doubt that Colonel Leſlie muſt have been then on the point of leaving it; and is equally ſatisfied, as he hopes the Board will be, that no conſideration will have induced Colonel Leſlie to enter into engagements of a tendency to retard his progreſs, or to divert the ſervices of the troops under his command a moment from their deſtined courſe or preſcribed objects. 16

Camp Chatterpore,
Auguſt 11th, 1778.

Dear Sir,

My letter of the 4th inſtant will inform you of the ſituation of affairs betwixt Surnet Sing Goman and Coman Sing, from the united friendſhip of whom I thought every difficulty at an end, as they had informed me they had ſettled all their matters, and made a firm connection, which I was to become the witneſs of; but when I preſſed my ſupply, and was preparing to move, I found ſome doubts had interpoſed: I requeſted to be informed of them. Goman and Coman Sing ſuppoſed when I was gone the whole would join againſt them, and drive them out; and I then plainly ſaw my ſtay here was what they wiſhed for, to ſecure them on the ſide of Surnet Sing: but if I went away, Anrood Sing being the ſtronger party, they reſolved to accept his propoſals, and join him: both Surnet Sing, and Anrood Sing had made the ſame propoſals; but they had accepted the firſt and rejected the latter's. I preſſed them to come to an immediate ratification, as I would not ſtay a moment longer, and required their anſwer at a certain time. I had an interview with their agents the 7th at night, and all parties ſeemed ſatisfied, and promiſed to be with me in the morning; but freſh diſputes ariſing that night, they broke through every agreement with Surnet Sing. Goman and Coman Sing's men came to me on the morning of the 8th: they informed me their maſters had ſent them with the ſtrongeſt aſſurances of friendſhip to the Engliſh, and of their aid to me; and they doubted not of a reciprocal return. In ſhort, they required that I ſhould return back to Jaitpore, drive Gudd Sing from thence, and give them poſſeſſion of his fort. I told them I had often informed them, that it was out of my power, but particularly ſo now; that they did not conſider the delay and expence of ſuch an undertaking, which I could not anſwer for. They then very kindly offered me thirty thouſand rupees. I replied, thirty lack would not induce me to fire a ſhot at it; and therefore I requeſted to hear no more on the ſubject. I deſired to know what agreement they had made with Surnet Sing. As I was on the point of marching, they informed me all agreement was at an end, as they had an offer from Anrood Sing of the reſtoration of their country, taken by Hindooput, and could not be at the expence of ſupporting Surnet Sing. I deſired them to inform their maſters, I was not only ſurprized, but ſorry for this circumſtance; that I was obliged to them for the trouble they had put themſelves to, to demonſtrate their friendſhip to the Company in a viſit to me; and as their buſineſs was now at an end, I wiſhed them to return to their country as ſoon as convenient. They aſked me when they ſhould go? and I replied, the ſooner the better; to-morrow, if they choſe it, as I could have no objection: thus we parted. As the Vakeels had informed me their maſters would take their leave of me, I thought no more of it, as I was to be informed from Surnet Sing the cauſe of all this. He aſſured me, they had intended nothing from the beginning, and only acted a part to cover a treaty with Anrood Sing, which he had reaſon to believe they had concluded; that he had no farther expectation from them, and that they were better at a diſtance; that he would give me all the aid in his power to forward my march, whatever riſk he run.

On the 9th early I had a report of Goman and Coman Sing having marched in the night, and gave it out that it was by my orders they had marched away; and that they were afraid to diſobey me. They were got ſeven coſs off before I was aware of it, near to Seerangur: I ſent immediately after them, to know the meaning of ſo precipitate a departure, without taking leave: Soon after an Hircarrah arrived from Pannah, from Benny Hozoory, one of Anrood Sing's miniſters, with an intercepted letter from the Vakeels of Goman and Coman Sing, ſent by them to Anrood Sing, in which they inform their maſters of having executed their orders, had concluded a treaty with Anrood Sing, entreating them to raiſe troops at my expence, and preſcribe a mode of their joining Anrood's army: Benny Hazoory, offended at this meaſure, has quitted Anrood and the reſt; has ſecured himſelf at Pannah, and offers to join Surnet Sing whenever I ſhall deſire him. Cullock Sing has offered to quit them alſo, and join Surnet with three hundred horſe. They are ſuch a ſet of vile ſcoundrels, that in the midſt of all this I reſolve to march from this place on the 14th, by the route of Rage Gurr, to induce Anrood to move to Callinger; when I ſhall turn to the right, and purſue my route to Sagur, by which means I ſhall have nothing to offend me but Ballajee, who I think will acquieſce. The rains are leſſened, and I hope pretty fair weather till I reach Houſkenabad, which I ſhall get to with every poſſible diſpatch; and I think I have met with no diſadvantage or delay by my halt here; and I am in hopes to have the Board's ſentiments regarding Munroe's affair at Mhow, ere I quit it. Goman and Coman Sing's Vakeels are returned, and expreſs their maſters' uneaſineſs at going away without taking leave: but to convince me of their friendſhip, ſay they are going to chaſtiſe my enemies, and bring the head of Gunnaiſh Hazoory (the Kellidar of Raat) to my feet, who all agree was the perpetrator of the horrid tranſaction on Captain Munroe. I find the Board's orders for garriſoning Kalpee has reached Lieutenant Colonel Wilding and Captain Rawſtorne, and retaining it for their further inſtructions, without any reference to my agreement with Ballajee and Gunga Durr.

I ſhould therefore be glad to have the Board's inſtructions whether upon Ballajee's future conduct to me I may not promiſe the reſtitution of Calpee, according to agreement: in this caſe, I muſt requeſt the Board's inſtructions to Captain Rawſtorne, to comply with ſuch requiſition as I may make to him on that account.

I am with the higheſt regard, &c.

No. 138.

Mr. Francis—As further intelligence may naturally be expected every day of Col. Leſlie's march from Chatterpore, or of his ſubſequent proceedings, I ſhall only ſay at preſent, that the doubts which I entertain concerning the motives of Colonel Leſlie's conduct, and which appeared to have made the ſame impreſſion upon every member of the Board, at our laſt meeting, are not removed, nor can they be removed, until I ſee ſatisfactory reaſons aſſigned for his halting at Chatterpore, from the 3d July to the 14th Auguſt; how much longer he may ſtay there is uncertain. It appears by the preſent letter, that he is implicated in ſome ſhape or other, in the diſputes and intereſts of the Rajah, and other Chiefs of the Bundlecund country; but it does not appear of what nature his connections with them are, or what reaſons induced him to take part in their affairs: That the Prince of the country ſhould wiſh to detain a foreign army in the heart of his dominions, and in the poſſeſſion of his capital, and that he ſhould endeavour to prevent ſuch an army from marching out of his country, if it were their inclination to do ſo, I preſume, will be thought too unreaſonable to deſerve credit. As to the rains to which Col. Leſlie in part attributes his delay, I muſt beg leave to remind the Board that it was conſtantly and repeatedly urged in argument here, when the poſſible difficulties that might attend the march were in conſideration, that the rains would rather relieve the army, or at leaſt that they would be no impediment to their march. For theſe reaſons I muſt declare for myſelf, that the doubts I have entertained of Colonel Leſlie's halt at Chatterpore remain unremoved.

The Governor General—Of what nature the connections are which may have been formed between Colonel Leſlie and the Chiefs of Bundlecund, I know not: and I think it will ill become the juſtice or dignity of this Board to form their opinion on them from public rumours, or to prejudge his conduct, while the circumſtances and motives of it are confeſſedly unknown. I will own that I have felt the diſappointment of his continuing ſo long at Chatterpore, at leaſt equally with the other members of the Board, perhaps much more ſenſibly; and I have been as little pleaſed with the apparent connection between him and Surnaut Sing, becauſe I knew not the nature of it, nor to what it tended, and becauſe I had expected as a right the moſt unreſerved communication of it: I feared the detention of our forces for the purpoſe of effecting a revolution in the Government of Bundlecund; an event, to which he might be naturally led, if he conſulted only the influence of his paſſions by the ſtrong provocation which he has received from the Rajah, and the ſenſe of obligation ariſing from the ſeaſonable offers of ſervice made to him by Surnaut Sing, the Rajah's elder brother. It is a juſtice due to Colonel Leſlie to afford the Board ſuch information as I am in poſſeſſion o relative to his connection; and it is the more neceſſary, as the letter which I have juſt recorded refers for ſuch an explanation to one which he had before written to me: this I ſhall therefore beg leave to inſert.

Appendix. No. 138.

(Duplicate.) Camp at Chatterpore,

Sir, Auguſt 4th 1778.

Laſt night I received by expreſs Coſſids from Poonah (which they left the 22d of June) a letter from Mr. Moſtyn, a copy of which I tranſmit you, with the Maratta Governor's credentials for my free march through their territories; which with the particular ones I am already in poſſeſſion of, I am in hopes I ſhall have no further moleſtation in my march, and that I ſhall be amply ſupplied with proviſions, as I have the voluntary aſſurances of ſeveral of the leſſer Chiefs ſouth of Sagur, of giving me all the aſſiſtance in their power.

I do not know what further line Ballajee will take, as he is ſtill in arms, and lying in my way, but I apprehend he will be now ſubmiſſive, perhaps complaiſant, as Benny Ram will neceſſarily ſee him on his journey, as he lies on his road, and will have a memorandum from me. I have had no late communication with him, but I find he is anxious for the return of his fort of Kalpee, which I think from his behaviour ought to be retained, unleſs his future conduct may deſerve the ratifying the agreement made with his brother, which he acknowledges himſelf bound by. I have received a letter from Goonga Durr, requeſting the fulfilling my engagement to him, of re-delivering him Kalpee on my arrival at Chatterpore. I have anſwered him, that from his own behaviour I would comply with his requiſition of the return of Kalpee; but as I hold his brother Ballajee equally bound by that agreement (and which he acknowledges himſelf to be) his breach of it by taking up arms, and urging all the Powers around to do the like, and in conjunction with him, to oppoſe a march they had conſented to, and by committing acts of hoſtility againſt me, I did not think myſelf juſtifiable in delivering back Kalpee, until I had received the further orders of Government, whom I had informed of the circumſtances, and his further conduct deſerved ſuch acquieſcence.

I ſhould be glad to know the ſentiments of the Government on this occaſion; and whether, if the conduct of Ballajee be friendly and hoſpitable towards us, I may not promiſe the immediate delivery of it. Anrood Sing is ſtill in force, and doing all in his power, by power of money, to draw more forces together; he has made large offers to Goman and Coman Sing to join him and extirpate us: They confeſs ſo. Saurnet Sing and they are in agreement to ſupport one another; they will, I hope, finiſh it to-morrow (when I am to ſee it) and which they hope will meet with the protection of your Government, which they ardently wiſh their behaviour will merit. This over, all my ſupplies are to be amply found me, and every aid given me into Ballajee's territories lying before me, and preventing Anrood Sing from haraſſing my rear. The rains are now heavy; but I hope receſs in a few days, when my march will be continued.

I have the honour to be, &c. &c.

Appendix. No. 139.

Governor General—As motives have been aſſigned on conjecture for Colonel Leſlie's conduct, and theſe ſtrongly ſupported by the apparent inconſiſtency of the Rajah's oppoſition on any other grounds, I hope I ſhall be excuſed if I take up a ſmall portion of the time of this Board in ſuggeſting the probable grounds of both.

The Rajah is a youth, I think of fifteen years of age; his judgment of courſe pliant to every advice and information given him by thoſe who are in poſſeſſion of his confidence. It is not poſſible that his conduct can be governed by the principles of prudence, or by a real knowledge of his own intereſt. We know that Ballajee, the Maratta Chief, who oppoſed the firſt movement of our troops in the paſſage of the Jumna, and has continued his hoſtilities to them without intermiſſion from that time, notwithſtanding the accommodation concluded between him and Colonel Leſlie, very ſoon after joined the Rajah and has been the prime mover of all his actions. In effect it is Ballajee, an alien, and not the ſovereign of the country, who, to uſe the words of Mr. Francis's minute, has endeavoured to prevent our army from marching out of his country. Ballajee might have obviouſly ſuggeſted to the Rajah, that the object of this armament, though ſpeciouſly diſguiſed under the pretext of being deſtined for the protection of Bombay, a part of the world too remote for his knowledge, was ſolely to aſſiſt the pretenſions of his elder brother to the ſovereignty of his State; and the ſubſequent junction of his rival with our army, which could not but have been foreſeen by the Maratta Chief, might be eaſily made by him to appear a proof of his inſinuations, though in effect a neceſſary conſequence of his councils, and mere aſſertions would have been ſufficeint to convince a young Prince of fifteen years of age, and to induce him to regard and treat our army as his enemies. This may ſuffice for the probable motives of the Rajah's conduct. As to Colonel Leſlie, after the unprovoked enmity which had been ſhewn him by the Rajah, and the attempt made by him to diſtreſs the army in the moſt important article of proviſions, it was an obvious policy to embrace the friendſhip of any competitor, who might at the ſame time ſerve to intimidate the Rajah to peace, and inſure ſupplies of proviſions under his command. If this was his motive, it was ſo far laudable; if he had any other, or, to ſpeak more plainly, for there can be but one other, if it was his intention to diſpoſſeſs the Rajah in being, and to raiſe his brother to the ſovereignty of Bundlecund in his ſtead, he has diſobeyed the poſitive orders of the Board, and proved himſelf unworthy of the confidence which they have repoſed in him. The truth of this will hereafter appear.

I am ſorry that Colonel Leſlie ſhould have made uſe of the rains as a reaſon for his continuance at Chatterpore; it might be the cauſe of retarding his march, but certainly could be none for fixing him for forty-two days together to one ſpot; and it is as certain that his infantry could, at leaſt with equal facility, have paſſed over the ground over which the cavalry of his enemies have retreated. I ſtill affirm, not as a point of belief, but of certainty, that the ſeaſon of the rains was beyond all compariſon more favourable to the march of the troops than the dry weather which preceded it: but as Mr. Francis has quoted my former declarations upon this ſubject from memory, I believe and hope at leaſt that he has carried his recollection of my aſſertions beyond the reality. It was ſcarcely poſſible that I could have ſaid that the rains would be no impediment to the march of the army. I had made this a ſubject of very minute inquiry; and I knew that at certain times the heavy rains which fell would ſwell the little rivers of that country over which his route lay, ſo as to render them impaſſable, but that they would preſently ſubſide, as the cauſe which filled them ceaſed. They might certainly impede and delay, but they undoubtedly would not prove a total obſtruction to the march. What I ſaid, reſpected the health and ſafety of the troops, and the conveniency of ſhade and water; the hardſhips to which the troops were expoſed until the ſetting in of the rains, have verified what I foretold. The extract will be but ſhort of what I formerly dictated on this ſubject; and I beg that the Secretary may be allowed to enter it after this minute.

Governor General—It was a very early ſubject of my inquiry to know what inconveniencies our troops would be expoſed to by marching in the rains, which at the firſt occurred to me as an inſurmountable obſtacle. I have every reaſon to believe, and am confirmed in my opinion by that of Colonel Leſlie, that the rainy ſeaſon ſo far from proving an objection, will rather facilitate the march, and prove a relief to the troops, which will ſuffer more from the exceſſive heats and from drought in the elevated and open plains, through which they will probably paſs, than by the rainy ſeaſon whenever it ſhall overtake them, as it certainly will; poſſibly too they will be leſs expoſed to the attack of cavalry in the rains, and in reſpect to health, our own records afford us one inſtance, and I believe more, of our Sepoys, and even European infantry, recovering from a ſtate of ſickneſs, by a march begun in the very height of the rains, as was the caſe in the laſt campaign of Colonel Champion. Ext. Conſ. 6 Apr. 1778.

Governor General—I have in a former minute declared, that I regarded the rainy ſeaſon as favourable to the expedition conducted by Colonel Leſlie. Conſ. 21 May.

Mr. Francis—I do not mean to prejudge Colonel Leſlie's conduct, or to aſſign any motives whatever for his actions. Thoſe which the Governor General has ſtated may be well founded, but they are formed upon conjecture only: I have only ſaid that my doubts are not removed; and I ſubmit it to the judgment of the Court of Directors, taking things in the point of view in which they ſtand before us at this moment, whether ſuch doubts are warranted or not: I hope the Governor General will pardon me, if I ſay that it appears to me, that even his mind is not yet quite ſatisfied on this ſubject.

Governor General—I muſt beg leave to cloſe the debate, which I think does not require my continuation of it: the event will better prove, than any concluſions drawn by Mr. Francis or myſelf upon the preſent appearances, whether Colonel Leſlie has conducted himſelf with a ſtrict regard to his duty and attention to the ſervice on which he was entruſted.

THE proceedings of the 17th inſtant read and approved.

Read the following letters from Colonel Leſlie:

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

I did myſelf the honour of addreſſing you the 15th inſtant, encloſing copies of two letters I had received from Mr. Lewis at Poonah. The encloſed is a copy of a ſubſequent letter to the former, which reached me ſince the diſpatch of my laſt.

I encamped here this morning, and ſhall proceed tomorrow to Raje Gur, from whence I hope to be able to inform you further of the ſtate of affairs here.

To Colonel Leſlie.

Sir,

Encloſed is duplicate of my laſt letter under the 18th inſtant.

I diſpatch this purpoſely to acquaint you, that notwithſtanding the Duſtucks already granted by Madjee Scindia, for your free paſſage through his country, I yeſterday received intimation he intends ſhortly marching from hence with his whole force, amounting to about twenty thouſand men, to ſtop your march; and to put you on your guard, not only againſt his declared deſigns, but alſo againſt any ſimilar ſchemes he may have formed, in the hopes he entertains of your repoſing a confidence in his Duſtucks, and the private orders he may in conſequence have given to his officers, which in my opinion are the moſt to be apprehended; for of all the Marattas, Scindia bears the character of being the moſt deceitful. I would not adviſe you to place too much confidence in Tookajee Holcar's Duſtuck, for though he may really mean well, yet in the late change which has happened in this Government, he is ſo much reduced as to be obliged to comply with whatever orders Madjee Scindia may give him.

To the Honourable Warren Haſtings, Eſquire, Governor General, &c. Members of the Supreme Council.

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

I have the honour to acquaint you, that I arrived at this encampment in three days from Chatterpore, being the 17th, in the forenoon.

I purpoſed to have encamped on the banks of the Kaine river; but on advancing to examine the ground with the Quarter-maſter-general, the troops of Anrood Sing, who are poſted on the oppoſite banks of the river, immediately opened their batteries: I therefore withdrew, and fixed my camp about a mile diſtant, out of the range of their ſhot. As this unprovoked attack confirmed to me their hoſtile intentions, I thought it neceſſary to take a nearer view of their poſt, and as ſoon as the troops came up, I advanced a picquet of one battalion with ſome pieces of cannon to the banks of the river. The enemy began a ſmart fire upon the troops as ſoon as they came in view, but without any effect. I thought it neceſſary to exchange a few ſhot and ſhells, to ſhew my ſentiments of their behaviour; and as I did not like to withdraw the artillery immediately, without doing them ſome greater miſchief than merely the alarm of a cannonade, I ordered a few carcaſes to be thrown among their huts, which ſoon took fire, and burnt with great fury till ſunſet. As they have ſecured all the boats on the oppoſite banks, and I deem it unſafe to purſue my route along the Kaine, with ſo conſiderable an enemy in my rear, the diſlodging them is become abſolutely neceſſary, and the artificers of the army are buſy at work preparing punts and rafts to paſs the river, and I hope to be able to make the attempt in a couple of days at fartheſt.

The Rajah continues to deny that thoſe acts of hoſtilities are committed by his authority, although his troops keep up a conſtant fire on any of our people going to the river for water, both with their guns and matchlocks.

The ceſſation of the heavy rains is a very favourable circumſtance for my croſſing; the river is fallen greatly, and is leſs rapid than the firſt day I arrived, and I am anxious to take the advantage of the opportunity for diſlodging the enemy from their poſt. I am yet doubtful of the part Ballajee will take on my advance towards Saugur. It is this circumſtance that renders it more immediately neceſſary I ſhould take ſome effectual ſteps to diſperſe the army of Anrood Sing, for the force of Surnaut Sing will not be able to withſtand him, and my communication and ſupplies muſt be inevitably interrupted.

I have the honour to be, &c.
Camp Raje Gur, (Signed)

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

I do myſelf the honour to encloſe you a duplicate of my addreſs of the 20th inſtant; I alſo beg leave to forward to you an original letter, which I received on the 22d, from the Preſidency of Bombay, under the ſignature of a Select Committee, authorized by the honourable the Court of Directors, for the conducting all political and military operations in that part of Aſia; in which you will perceive I am directed to change my route, and to march by the way of Kooranpore and Juneer, through the Buglana country, inſtead of my former deſtination to Surat or Broach; which theſe gentlemen, from the preſent ſtate of affairs at Poonah, deem more liable to difficulty than a more ſouthern route.

On the 22d inſtant advances were made by the Miniſters of Anrood Sing to come to terms of pacification; and yeſterday two meſſengers came acroſs to my camp with the moſt humiliating profeſſions from the Rajah, Anrood Sing totally denying that the acts of hoſtility committed by his army were in any ſhape authorized, and declaring they were ready to receive my orders. I returned them with my requiſitions, comprized in a few words, and I am promiſed an ultimate anſwer to-day. The ſituation of the enemy's poſt, and the rapidity of the river, requires every precaution to be taken for the ſupport of any attack I may be neceſſitated to make; and the artificers of the army are buſy building boats and rafts for this ſervice, which I ſhall not heſitate to attempt the moment I am reſolved whether their propoſals are real, or meant only to deceive and protract time, as their whole conduct has hitherto ſhewn.

The readineſs with which the other brother, Surnaut Sing, complied with the application of Government, to the extent of his abilities, and the ſervices he has rendered my camp in the article of ſupplies, prompts me to ſecure his independence and property, in my agreement with Anrood Sing; and I hope you will approve of my providing againſt any jealouſy of theirs' reaching him after my departure.

The ſituation of affairs at Poonah, and the advices communicated in Mr. Lewis's letters, will, I truſt, evince to you the neceſſity of my deſtroying all poſſibility of having my communication cut off, which muſt have happened, had I purſued the more direct route to Sagur, by the way of Gool Gunge. I have now no doubt of effecting this advantage, either by a treaty of friendſhip with the Rajah Anrood Sing, or the diſperſion of his army.

I have the honour to be, &c.

To Colonel Leſlie.

Sir,

Juſt after I had diſpatched my letter of the 26th (duplicate of which is encloſed) I received your two favours of the 2d and 6th inſtant, with the packets encloſed for the Preſidency of Bombay, which were immediately forwarded.

I have this day received information, that the Durbar have ſent orders to the Rajahs of Bundella, Coneha, Dutty, and Chunderry, to uſe every endeavour to moleſt you on your march, and to avoid, if poſſible, coming to an action; but ſhould they find they are unable to ſtop your progreſs, they are to deny having any authority from this Government for oppoſing you. It is particularly recommended to them to prevent your receiving ſupplies of proviſions.

I alſo now incloſe the original of a letter from the Select Committee of Bombay to your addreſs, received this morning; its duplicate ſhall be forwarded in a day or two, or as ſoon as I can get any information of the roads between Brampore and Juneer.

Mr. Barwell indiſpoſed.

RECEIVED the following letter from Colonel Leſlie:

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

I am favoured with your letter of the 4th ultimo; and it gives me great ſatisfaction you approve of the neceſſity I was under of reducing the port of Mhow, and of inviting Surnait Sing to join me. I have with the utmoſt caution avoided interfering with the Bundellah Chiefs, either in their private or public diſputes, and I ſhall perſevere in this conduct; but in the inſtance of Surnaut Sing, I hope you will think me juſtifiable in requeſting his brother, Anrood Sing, to let him peaceably enjoy the eſtate left him by his father, and confirmed by a treaty ſince his death by the Miniſters of the young Anrood Sing; and that all animoſity ſhould ceaſe betwixt them, and no jealouſy remain for Surnaut Sing's joining me, which the young Rajah moſt readily agreed to; and the original treaty to be finally determined by their own agents. In fact, this is not near ſo much as they offered him not to join the Engliſh; but Surnaut Sing, wiſhing to be at eaſe, is willing to quit all other pretenſions to enjoy this undiſturbed; and I am induced to hope my interfering ſo far will meet with your approbation, when I aſſure you he has rendered us the moſt ſingular ſervice in our ſupplies, which have hitherto, by his induſtry, been very ample. But I do not believe the Miniſters of Anrood Sing mean to have any thing ſettled, as they have evaded ſending the proper perſons to do ſo for many days; nor will they determine what route I am to take, and give me ſupply, until the rain and rivers will give me leave to chuſe for myſelf, when I ſhall moſt certainly purſue my route, according to your orders.

I informed you in my letter of the 24th ultimo, of the proſpect I had of accommodating matters with Anrood Sing; but on the 29th the rains fell very heavy, and continued to do ſo all the 30th and 31ſt, which ſwelled the river exceedingly, and put a ſtop to Hiera Loll, the perſon Anrood Sing was to ſend me to determine finally my route and ſupply.

On the evening of the 31ſt, I received intelligence that Pudham Sing, who was ſtationed at Gool Gunge, had quitted that place with the greateſt part of his forces, and had placed himſelf betwixt me and Chatterpore, with a view to ſtop my ſupplies, which he ſo far ſucceeded in, as to carry off three or four hundred oxen load; and threatened Chatterpore with pillage, if they admitted any ſupply being ſent me. On this information, I ordered Captain Popham, with his battalion and guns, with the Candahar horſe, to march immediately towards Gool Gunje, to endeavour to drive Pudham Sing from his poſt, and recover the proviſion. He marched on the 1ſt inſtant; on the evening of which day he had intelligence of Pudham Sing's ſituation, and the next morning early he marched towards him. It was one o'clock on the 2d before he could come up: on his approach Pudham Sing's troops got under arms: Captain Popham's grenadiers being advanced, and the Candahar horſe on their flanks, the Bundellahs began a briſk fire on them; but the grenadiers advancing, with a few vollies drove them, which gave an opportunity to the Candahars to fall in amongſt them, and totally routed them, purſuing them near three coſs to Gool Gunje, where they retreated to, and near, to which Captain Popham encamped. This ſervice was performed with the very inconſiderable loſs of one Sepoy killed and three wounded, one Candahar horſeman killed and ſix wounded; nor was there a cannon ſhot fired, as the guns were not up. On the 3d, one of Captain Popham's officers, Lieutenant Tiſdall, going too near the fort, was ſhot through the ancle with a muſket ball; and on this night Pudham Sing abandoned the fort, and is gone toward Punchumnagar, to join Ballajee.

The river has roſe again very conſiderably, which evinces a heavy fall of rain to the weſtward.

My detachment is healthy; and the very moment the rains will admit, I ſhall continue my route.

I have the honour, &c. &c.

Camp at Raje Ghur, September 4th 1778. (Signed) *Matth*w Leſlie.

No. 141.

The Governor General lays before the Board the following letter from Colonel Leſlie, dated 7th September:

Sir,

Nothing has happened ſince the 4th but an inceſſant fall of rain, and Anrood Sing's people uſing every diligence to prevent my croſſing the river, notwithſtanding Hiera Loll ſays, in a letter to me, he is impatient till he can ſee me.

I have this day received a letter from Moodajee Boſſa, a copy of which I tranſmit you, which will beſt explain his ſentiments, as he has requeſted I would communicate them. It gives me ſatisfaction to find he is pleaſed at your ſending an embaſſy to him, as I ſuppoſe he has got rid of the jealouſy a report of troops marching by Cattack had given him.

I have received alſo a letter from Lollah Judd Roy, from Houſhengabad, with repeated offers of friendſhip, and expreſſing his anxiety for my coming up.

I have a letter alſo from the Nabob of Bopal, expreſſive of his friendſhip and aſſiſtance. The rains he ſays are very heavy, and roads bad; Beneram has not got near that country yet, as I expected, but I expect every hour to hear from him.

I have received letters alſo from Ballajee and Gungadar, expreſſive of their ſatisfaction at the evacuation of Kalpy, and declarations of friendſhip towards us; yet I wiſh this circumſtance had not taken place, until I had got out of Ballajee's territory, as our retaining it a little would have kept him in awe, but he will now ſuppoſe we are ſoliciting his friendſhip, and he will plume himſelf upon the condeſcenſion, and be retrograde.

Ballagee has paid no attention to the demand of the Vakeels of Ragoba for five lacks, which the Tuncaw expreſsly ſays, is for the uſe of the Engliſh army under my command, but to be paid to them on their receipt: he deſires they would come to him and confer on the ſubject, but gives not the leaſt hint of payment or refuſal. He ſays in his letter to me, he has wrote to his maſter, informing him of all circumſtances, and will ever be obedient to his will. I do not believe he means Regoba.

The inceſſant fall of very heavy rain has prevented this letter being ſent laſt night, and has poured down in torrents all this day, and gives me an opportunity of tranſmitting to you copies of the friendly engagements given me by Goman and Coman Sing, and mine on account of the Company at their requeſt, which I hope will meet with your approbation, and evince how much I have endeavoured to eſtabliſh a confidence in theſe Chiefs towards us, by every conciliatory means in my power, and baniſhing that jealouſy impreſſed on them by Ballajee and others: ſtill his influence makes Anrood Sing's Miniſters averſe to us; but I have the moſt ſolemn aſſurances his Vakeel will be with me to-morrow, and I doubt not of reconciling them to my further march.

I have juſt received an account that twelve hundred (inſtead of three hundred) Maratta cavalry had advanced near to Gool Gunge, and did not go away with Puddum Sing, but ſtill remain: Captain Popham has taken a look at them and their ſituation, and will watch them narrowly; ſo that I cannot place the leaſt ſhare of dependance on that ſubtle fellow, Ballajee, who is I am confident fident lying by, urging every difficulty to be thrown in my way, until time gives him an opportunity of diſtreſſing me effectually himſelf. But the inſtant the weather and rivers will permit, I will put him to the teſt.

I am, Sir,

Enclosures in Colonel Leſlie's Letter of the 7th of September 1778; received the 1ſt October.

No. 1.

Copy of an Engagement on the part of Maha Rajah Gomaun Sing and Rajah Comaun Sing, as follows:

We have entered into a firm and ſteady friendſhip with the Sirkar of the Engliſh company, through the channel of the Nabob Shumſh ul Dowla Mobarez ul Moulk, Colonel Matthew Leſlie Bahadre (to wit) We will ever continue ſteady and unſhaken in friendſhip and attachment to the Engliſh Company, and will never conſider ourſelves as in any manner diſtinct from them. We will regard the friends of the Engliſh Company's Sirkar as our friends, and their enemies as our enemies; and whenever the Engliſh Company's Government requires our aſſiſtance, we will certainly afford it. We have therefore written and delivered theſe few lines in the nature of a treaty and engagement, to which we have affixed our ſeal and ſignature to be made uſe of as occaſion requires. Written the 26th of Rujjub 1192, Hegira, and the 20th year of the reign, or 19th Auguſt 1778.

Copy of an Engagement on the part of Shunuſh ul Dowlah Mobarez ul Moulk, Colonel Matthew Leſlie, Bahadre Sabut Jung, as follows:

In conſequence of the engagement which Maha Rajah Gomaun Sing and Rajah Comaun Sing have executed to the Company and delivered to me, I, in the name of the Engliſh Company, have alſo executed and delivered an engagement, that whilſt the ſaid Maha Rajah is the friend of the Engliſh Company's Sirkar, we are likewiſe their friend, at all times and on all occaſions; nor will give any interruption to the country of the ſaid Maha Rajah: we deſire nothing more than friendſhip and union; and God grant that this friendſhip and union may continue to the end of time. I have therefore written and delivered theſe few lines, to which I have affixed my ſeal and ſignature, in the nature of a treaty and engagement to be employed as occaſion requires. No. 142.

Mr. Francis—I know with certainty that the detachment was ſtill at Rajegur on the 9th September, and I believe we are not in poſſeſſion of any information of a later date. Colonel Leſlie has now been at Chattepore or in the neighbourhood of that place ſince the 3d July. I think the delay is very extraordinary, and the cauſes of it ought to be inquired into. It appears further by his private letter to the Governor General of the 7th, that he has entered into certain engagements on the Company's account with the Rajahs Gomaun and Comaun Sing; and it appears by his letter to the Board of the 4th September, that he intends to interfere ſo far between the two brothers, Amrood and Surnaut Sing, as to obtain a ſecurity for the latter for the peaceable enjoyment of the eſtate left him by his father. As Colonel Leſlie had no authority from the Board to enter into treaties with the Princes of the Bundlecund country; and as he is reſtricted by his inſtructions from engaging the Company or himſelf in any negociations with them, I think that this part of his conduct ſhould alſo be inquired into. The public ſervice may be materially affected, and poſſibly the object of the expedition under his command totally defeated, while he delays his march apparently for no other purpoſe but to carry on negociations, and to make treaties with the Princes of the country.

There is another point which I think deſerves the attention of the Board, though it is not regularly before us. A difference has ariſen between Colonel Leſlie and Lieutenant Colonel Goddard the ſecond in command, in conſequence of which the latter has demanded a court martial. The Board cannot but be ſenſible of the dangerous conſequences of ſuch a difference being ſuffered to continue between theſe officers; I muſt beg leave to ſubmit my opinion to the Board, that the occaſion of it ſhould be inquired into, and our determination given thereupon as ſpeedily as poſſible.

Governor General—It is not without great reluctance that I have ſuffered another member of the Board to take the lead in a point in which I think myſelf the moſt intereſted, both on the public account and my own. I ſhall not oppoſe Mr. Francis's motion for an inquiry; on the contrary, I ſhould myſelf have been the firſt to propoſe it, if I had thought the materials with which we are at preſent furniſhed, had brought the ſubject to that ſtate of maturity which a meaſure of that kind demanded. It is not only true that Colonel Leſlie had no authority from the Board to enter into treaties with the Princes of Bundlecund; but the whole of his conduct in this inſtance appears to be in direct oppoſition to the expreſs orders of the Board. I have formerly hazarded many conjectures to account for the political conduct of Colonel Leſlie, and have waited with the moſt anxious impatience for ſuch an explanation of it, as ſhould verify my ſuppoſitions; but to this hour I am equally uninformed with the Board, of the cauſes and particulars of Colonel Leſlie's negociations. I have laid before the Board his letter to me above recorded, becauſe I could not conſider it in its nature as private, and the Board had a right to my communication of the treaty concluded by Colonel Leſlie with two of the Chiefs of Bundlecund, eſpecially as they are yet unacquainted with it by any letter from him. The irregularity with which the diſpatches have been received, and the evident miſcarriages which have attended ſome of them, induce me to believe that he has not been deficient in tranſmitting to the Board the regular advices of ſo important a tranſaction. Although it has not yet been received, the treaty itſelf which has been formed with Gomaun and Comaun Sing, appears to be of little conſequence. He has given the Board reaſon to expect that it would have been ſoon followed by a treaty with Surnaut Sing, the elder brother and competitor of the Rajah of Bundlecund. I for my own part wiſh to be in poſſeſſion of this treaty, which I muſt ſuppoſe will be accompanied with his reaſons at large for taking a part in the domeſtic contentions of that Government, and ſuſpending the courſe of his march for the purpoſe, as it appears, of involving this Government in future engagements, which he was expreſsly, and in thoſe terms warned to avoid. On the 9th September, the lateſt period of my advices from the detachment more than four months had elapſed from the commencement of its march. It had advanced 120 miles, and I fear at an expence of 12,00,000 rupees; and in this interval Colonel Leſlie has been informed of a war declared between France and Great Britain, and been urged by the Preſidency of Bombay to quicken his progreſs for the preſervation of the Company's poſſeſſions on that ſide of India, from the effects of a very formidable invaſion, which they were inſtructed by authority to expect. The importance of the various objects which are connected with the operations of the detachment, its distance, and the ambiguous appearances of the circumstances which have hitherto attended it, and have retarded, or seem to have retarded its progress, have furnished grounds for a variety of rumours and suggestions, which for the credit of Colonel Leslie he himself ought to use every endeavour to efface, which it will be the duty of this Government to scrutinize, and which for my own reputation more especially I most earnestly wish to bring to the most effectual test. For these reasons I shall not oppose the present motion, nor any other to which it must necessarily lead, if it shall be resolved to act upon it immediately: yet I must own I have many objections to a measure of such importance too precipitately undertaken; and my objections arise from an experience which I believe no member of this Board possesses in an equal degree. I shall not mention the instances, but I must express it as my opinion that this Government will hazard too much in the prosecution of an officer of such high rank, attended with a circumstance of his removal from a command of such great and public importance as that which Colonel Leslie holds. The world seldom look beyond the surface of affairs; even men of business are often prevented from entering deeper into them, and unless the proofs of misconduct are established beyond a possibility of a doubt, the charge may be resented here as a common cause, and at home be converted to the reproach of Government itself. I shall here leave the question without any further decision upon it. With respect to the difference that has arisen between Colonel Leslie and Lieutenant Colonel Goddard, the next officer in command, I have received the particulars of it in a letter from Colonel Goddard, dated 9th September, in which he mentions that he had written a letter to the Commander in Chief, of which and its enclosures he has sent me copies. As these contain all the circumstances of the dispute, and were expressly written to the General for the information of the Board, through the regular and official channel, and his original letter to the General has by some accident miscarried, I shall here lay them before the Board, and sincerely wish that the explanation of Colonel Leslie's general conduct may prove as satisfactory to the Board as it will in this trivial instance, from the perusal of the papers now delivered.

Ordered, That the letters from Lieutenant Colonel Goddard be referred to the public department.

Mr. Francis—I yield to any delay which the Governor General may think necessary, and not inconsistent with the public safety.

Mr. Wheler—I agree to the inquiry being postponed until the Governor General has received the necessary papers from Colonel Leslie.

Agreed, That this subject lie for consideration.

Read the following letter from Mr. Farquhar:

Honourable Sir, and Gentlemen,

I enclose a duplicate of my last letter; and it is now with the deepest sorrow and affliction that I am to inform you of the death of Mr. Elliott. From the time I wrote you on the 9th there was no room for hope, and last night he expired, after a severe and painful illness.

On the 8th instant he desired that your orders and instructions to him should be sealed up immediately after his death, which has already been done in the presence of Mr. Anderson. We are under the necessity of proceeding immediately to Savangur, from which place I shall again have the honour of addressing you in a few days.

I have the honour, &c. &c.

On the Banks of a Nullah, 2 cos to the eastward of Surangur, 13th September 1778.

(Signed) Robt Farquhar.

Governor General—The loss which this Government has sustained, and which I most sensibly regret in the death of Mr. Elliott, renders it necessary for me to propose the appointment of a person to succeed to the commission entrusted to him. I do therefore formally move, that a person be immediately appointed to repair to the Court of the Rajah of Berar, and furnished with the same instructions as were delivered to Mr. Elliott, for concluding a treaty with that Government.

Mr. Wheler—The same objections which were started by Mr. Francis, and acceded to by myself, still remain in force against the commission intrusted to the late Mr. Elliott; but as that measure was adopted by a majority of the Board; and as they alone are responsible for the consequences, I shall not now object to the negociation being carried on.

Mr. Francis—I adhere to my original objections to the measure. I think they are greatly strengthened by the consideration of the time that will have been lost by the unfortunate event of Mr. Elliott's death, as well as by the loss of that gentleman in whose personal qualifications the confidence of this Government was particularly reposed. I am therefore against the continuance of the commission: at all events I am of opinion that it cannot be safely intrusted to any other person with the same discretional powers which were given to Mr. Elliott.

Resolved, That the commission entrusted to Mr. Elliott be continued.

Governor General—The absence of Mr. Barwell, with whose concurrence and advice the original commission was recommended, induces me to decline the further prosecution of this subject until I can receive the benefit of his opinion and aid on the further measures which may be necessary for the execution of it; I shall therefore suspend for a day such propositions as may be necessary; and in the mean time I shall prepare to bring in a complete form before the Board.

APPENDIX, No. 144.

Extract of Bengal Secret Consultations, the 7th October 1778.

PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Hastings, Governor General, President.

Richard Barwell,
Philip Francis,
Edward Wheler,
} Esquires.

MR. Barwell—I agree to the resolutions of the Board on the propriety of this Government taking some measures on the conduct of Colonel Leslie, and to the suspension of the subject, provided it do not continue for an indefinite time.

Governor General—Having more thoroughly considered the subject of the commission lately given to Mr. Elliott, and the late season of the year, from which I very much apprehend that any renewal of it would be attended with many difficulties, and a great degree of uncertainty, I now request the permission of the Board to withdraw the motion made by me at the last consultation, for the appointment of a person to succeed Mr. Elliott as Minister to the Court of the Rajah of Berar; I cannot immediately offer any other expedient to the Board. The news of Mr. Elliott's death must have reached Naguepore within little more than a week after that unhappy event. It cannot have escaped the attention of Moodajee Boosla, that both his interest and ours, so far as they were connected with the design of that negociation, must suffer materially from the delay which will be occaſioned by the appointment of a new commiſſion; and this conſideration will probably have ſuggeſted to him the neceſſity of preventing it, by making immediate and ſpecific propoſals to this Government. His letters contain proofs of a deſire, and even a degree of impatience to enter upon the buſineſs which was to be propoſed to him by Mr. Elliott; and I can ſee the ſtrongeſt reaſons which ſhould induce him to ſolicit our alliance. As a proof that this is not a merely ſpeculative concluſion, I beg leave to inſert in this place an extract from his laſt letter.

" The deputation of Mr. Elliott, to conſult with me, " and negociate certain points, is highly proper and " expedient, and I now wait his arrival. As Rajah Ram " Pundit is well acquainted with the ſtrict ties of friend- " ſhip and union between us, he has, doubtleſs, agreeable " to your deſire, ſecured the French Chief, ſhould he have " come that way; yet I have in conſequence of your " wiſh, ſent him expreſs orders to that effect, directing " him to make ſtrict ſearch throughout the diſtrict under " his charge, for him and his followers, and having appre- " hended, to ſend them with their papers to you, which " he will without doubt comply with."

For theſe reaſons, and becauſe there is always a greater advantage in receiving ſolicitations than in making advances, I wiſh to wait for the receipt of his letters before we form any decided plan for our future tranſactions with him. The ſubſtance and complexion of theſe may ſuggeſt the beſt means of accompliſhing the ends propoſed by the late deputation; and I have the greater reaſon to hope they may, becauſe from the information and inſtructions which I have formerly given to Benaram Pundit, the Rajah's Vakeel, who is lately returned to his maſter, and was ſent back for the purpoſe of aſſiſting in the intended negociation, he will be able in a great meaſure to ſupply the place of an immediate agent from this Government, and to ſuggeſt to the Rajah ſuch propoſitions to be made to us for our alliance, as will be moſt likely to receive our concurrence. In the mean time I think it will be ſufficient to write a ſhort letter to the Rajah, mentioning the misfortune which has put a ſtop to the negociation, and deſiring only for the preſent he will afford his aſſiſtance in promoting the march of the detachment to the place of its deſtination.

Mr. Wheler—If the letter is not meant to include any thing further than a deſire to forward the march of the detachment, in caſe it ſhould hereafter be expedient for it to continue its route I have no objection to the motion.

Mr. Francis—Having oppoſed the original motion, I can have no objection to its being withdrawn. The objects of Mr. Elliott's negociation were ſuppoſed to be of ſo inſtant and preſſing a nature that he was authorized to come to an immediate concluſion with Moodajee Booſla, without waiting for further orders from this Board. If the nature of theſe objects be not ſince altered, the delay which has already happened, and the further delay which is now propoſed, muſt annihilate the whole plan of the commiſſion upon its own principles. I am therefore againſt any intimation being given to the Rajah, that ſuch plan will ever be renewed; I am againſt deſiring his aſſiſtance in promoting the march of the troops to the place of their deſtination, becauſe it is my opinion that the detachment ſhould be immediately ordered into the provinces. They cannot be of uſe in carrying into execution any object of an alliance with Moodajee Booſla, ſince that alliance, whatever were the objects of it, is now put off ſine die; they cannot be of uſe in promoting the views of the Council of Bombay for the reinſtatement of Ragoba, becauſe we have intelligence that his party is completely overſet; and I believe every member of this Board is convinced, as well as myſelf, that the Bombay Council have really relinquiſhed all views of that nature, though they have not told us ſo themſelves, as it was their duty to have done. The march of the detachment cannot, as I conceive, be of any ſervice in any other ſenſe. Suppoſe, for example, againſt the French, for that I think is the only poſſible caſe that remains to be put; they have taken above four months to march from Calpee to their preſent ſituation, that is about 120 miles, and we have yet no certain intelligence that Colonel Leſlie was making any effectual preparations to croſs the Cain river. At this rate of marching, I ſubmit it to the Board to conſider in what poſſible time the detachment is ever likely to arrive at Bombay, excluſive of any check or delay to which they may be expoſed by direct oppoſition on the part of an enemy. I have a right by fair computation to conclude that they would not arrive this twelvemonth. In the mean time the Board will conſider to what accidents they are liable in the courſe of ſuch a march, and how very poſſible it is that this part of our force may be equally loſt in every quarter to the defence of the Company's different poſſeſſions. I do not mean to make it a formal motion, becauſe I will not trouble the Board with uſeleſs debates; but I am glad to acquit myſelf of what I think is eſſentially my duty in ſtating my opinion that the detachment ſhould be recalled, and this ſhould be done even upon the new grounds which new and unexpected events have created: if, nevertheleſs, it ſhould be determined to proceed, I muſt remind the Board that the detachment is actually under orders to halt in Berar, and that we muſt now determine poſitively whether its future motions are to be regulated by the orders of the Council at Bombay, or by ours. It is a point, as I think, of very great conſideration, not to place the commanding officer between two authorities.

Appendix, No. 144.

Mr. Barwell—I agree entirely to the propoſitions made by the Governor General; and though I think it very poſſible that the untimely death of Mr. Elliott may deprive this Government of thoſe great advantages I expected from his abilities, and the plenitude of the powers with which he was entruſted, yet I cannot upon the principle of that policy that regulated my aſſent to the political meaſures planned by the Governor General, think with Mr. Francis, that becauſe I deſpair of reaping every advantage, I ſhould loſe ſight of thoſe few, which, under the preſent circumſtances, we may ſtill graſp. The Maratta power, and that of the Decan, require to be counterpoiſed by an influence in the Engliſh Government, which may operate by means of alliances, ſeparating the powers of which it is compoſed, and uniting a part of their proper ſtrength to ours. The intereſt of the Governments at Bengal and Berar lead to a natural union between the two States; but as it is not my purpoſe at preſent to enter into a long diſcuſſion of a great political queſtion, I ſhall content myſelf with obſerving, that in prudence we ought to make the beſt of the circumſtances that may preſent themſelves.

Governor General—Mr. Barwell has made it unneceſſary for me to anſwer the principal parts of Mr. Francis's defence; my reply will therefore be very ſhort.

The objects of Mr. Elliott's negociation, though inſtant and urgent, are not therefore neceſſarily annihilated; time perhaps may decide this point between us.

The march of the detachment is not unneceſſary, becauſe the alliance is put off ſine die. The reaſon for this concluſion not having been aſſigned, nor being ſelf-apparent, cannot be anſwered by other reaſons.

It is true that we have every reaſon to believe that the Preſidency of Bombay have really relinquiſhed all views to the reinſtatement of Ragoba; but the reſtoration of Ragoba was never the object of this Government, though it might have eventually proved a means. My reliance is placed on Moodajee, and on the ſtrong connection of his intereſt with ours, in the event of any operations of our detachment.

It is not fair to draw concluſions of future events from paſt errors, and the ſuppoſition of their being ſuffered ſtill to prevail. The march of the detachment from Calpee to to Rajegur might have been made with eaſe in ten days. I hope the meaſures which the Board will take for the future conduct of the detachment, will effectually prevent ſuch delays in the progreſs of it.

On the whole, whether the detachment ſhall be required to act in the proſecution of any engagements with Moodajee, or for the reſtoration of Ragoba, or in direct oppoſition to the French, or even ſhould it be found neceſſary or expedient to recall it at a future period, ſtill the preſent continuance of its march is proper, until the criſis ſhall arrive that ſhall call upon us to make our option of its ultimate deſtination: its ſituation in Berar will be central to all our ſettlements in India; it will be a check on the Poonah Government, if it only meditates deſigns againſt us; it will be at hand to oppoſe them, if they ſhall be actually formed: and that ſuch deſigns are formed, I am morally certain.

The intimation given by Mr. Francis of the preſent ſituation impoſed on the detachment, is an incroachment on a new queſtion not before the Board. So much of the time of this Board is waſted in debate, that I am obliged to procraſtinate many ſubjects, which I have wiſhed to bring before its immediate conſideration, and which have required immediate determination, becauſe the hour of buſineſs was paſt. There now remains to reſolve what orders ſhall be given to Colonel Leſlie for the future march of the detachment, and what information or inſtructions ſhall be written to the Preſident and Council of Bombay. For the firſt, I think it will be neceſſary to order Colonel Leſlie to proſecute his march, in conjunction with the troops of Moodajee Booſla, if that Chief ſhall agree to join him with a force ſufficient for that end; and to obey all orders which he ſhall receive hereafter from the Preſident and Council of Bombay for the detachment to proceed; with a diſcretionary power to ſuſpend his march after his arrival within the territories of the Rajah of Berar, if the Rajah ſhall refuſe or decline to afford his aſſiſtance, and he ſhall not have received any orders from the Preſidency of Bombay to proceed. And for the latter, to inform them of the preceding reſolutions; to deſire them, that if the plan which they adviſed us in their laſt letter of the 25th July ſtill ſubſiſts, or if they ſhall have formed any other plan or deſign for the reſtoration of Ragoba, under the conditions already preſcribed for our aſſent thereto, which ſhall require the aſſiſtance of the detachment commanded by Colonel Leſlie; or if the neceſſity of providing for the immediate ſafety of their Preſidency againſt a French invaſion, ſhall require the detachment to proceed at all hazards to their aſſiſtance, even without the junction of any power in alliance with us; they will, in either of ſuch caſes, and ſuch only, command the detachment to advance, but in all others leave it to act under our orders. Theſe are the outlines and ſubſtance of the reſolutions which I think neceſſary for concluding the buſineſs now before us; and I beg leave to ſubmit them in this looſe manner to the conſideration of the Board, that if they ſhall meet their approbation, they may be reduced into a more correct form as the reſolutions of the Board.

Ordered, That the Governor General's propoſition be ſent round for the opinions of the Members of the Board.

Letter from Governor General to Modajee Bhooſila; written 11th October.

A FEW days ſince I received advices of the death of Mr. Elliott on his way to Naigpore. This unfortunate event, which is equally a loſs to you and to myſelf, as he would have been the inſtrument of cementing a friendſhip between your Government and the Company, which would have endured for ever, has unavoidably, and to my great concern, put a ſtop to the negociations which that gentleman was to have conducted with you on the part of this Government, as the preſent ſituation of affairs will not admit of a delay which muſt attend the deputing another perſon from hence: but I have ſtill a reſource for effecting the important objects of Mr. Elliott's miſſion in your favourable diſpoſition towards the Company; your conviction that your intereſt and theirs are inſeparably connected; and in the zeal of Beneram Pundit, whom during the long period he reſided with me, I found ſo deſerving of my confidence, from his ſincere attachment to our common intereſts, that I communicated to him my ſentiments and views with reſpect to the engagement I wiſhed to form with you in the moſt full and explicit manner; he will explain to you both the conditions which I ſhould require, and thoſe to which I ſhould yield my acquieſcence: to him therefore I refer you, and requeſt that you will give him a very attentive hearing. You will perceive that it is not my intention or wiſh to gain advantages without a return: I know that no public alliance, no private friendſhip can ſubſiſt without reciprocal and equal advantages. It is on theſe principles that I have long planned an alliance with you, and the time is now come for its accompliſhment; for I conceive it to be equally for your intereſt as for ours, our countries bordering on each other, and our natural enemies the ſame. Such being my views, I have the ſtrongeſt aſſurances of your ready concurrence in my deſigns; from you I want nothing but the junction of your powers with the ſtrength of this Government; each is ſingly conſiderable, but united they will be augmented to a tenfold proportion. The detachment intended for Bombay has been impeded in its progreſs, not by the oppoſition of an enemy, but by other cauſes unneceſſary, and perhaps improper to mention; but it will now ſoon arrive in your territories, and depend on you for its ſubſequent operations. It is my deſire, that you will order a ſtrong force to join it, and accompany it to the place of its deſtination. I have given orders to the commander of the detachment to co-operate with the forces which you may think proper to unite with his: I require the aſſiſtance of the forces of your Sirkar for promoting the ends of mine, and offer you the forces of this Government to promote your wiſhes: I have acquainted you with mine; and it will reſt with you to propoſe the ends which may be attained for your advantage in this junction: I myſelf have ſuggeſted in converſation to Beneram Pundit the probable advantages which I have ſuppoſed you would require, and I could grant; and the knowledge of my ſentiments will therefore enable you to form ſuch a concluſion as ſhall be equal in its effects to a treaty already agreed on.

It is the character of my nation to adhere inviolably to its engagements, as long as faith is obſerved by others; and it has been the invariable rule of my conduct to maintain that character in all acts depending on me; and having on good and judicious grounds once formed any deſign of importance, to perſevere in it ſteadily to its execution.

Having thus explained to you my views and wiſhes, I wait only to know yours, and on the knowledge of theſe I ſhall form my ultimate reſolutions.

To Dewagur Pundit. D°.

A few days ſince, &c. (the ſame as the foregoing as far as) " the preſent ſituation of affairs will not admit of the delay which muſt attend the deputing another perſon from hence:" But I have ſtill a reſource in your wiſdom, your favourable diſpoſition towards the Company, your approved attachment to the Houſe of Bhooſila, and your conviction that your maſter's intereſts and thoſe of the Company are inſeparably connected, for effecting the important objects of Mr. Elliott's miſſion. Beneram Pundit

is

is fully acquainted with all my ſentiments and views, and will explain to you both the conditions which I require from the Maha Rajah, and thoſe to which I can yield my acquieſcence: to him therefore I requeſt you will give an attentive hearing; and that you will jointly with him clearly ſtate them to your maſter, and employ your influence to procure them a favourable reception.

You will perceive that it is not my intention, &c. (continued to the end the ſame as the foregoing letter, except where the different rank and ſituation of the perſon addreſſed requires a change in the expreſſion.)

MR. Wheler gives in the following minute, containing his ſentiments on the propoſals offered to the conſideration of the Board by the Governor General at the laſt meeting.

Fort William, the 10th October 1778.

Mr. Wheler—When the firſt propoſals were made by the Governor General, for ſupporting the Government at Bombay in their interference in the diviſions of the Maratta State, they were uniformly oppoſed by me, becauſe I thought the Bombay Government unable from their reſources either of men or money to ſupport the alliance; becauſe I doubted the ſtrength of Ragoba, and his friends; and becauſe I thought the time peculiarly improper for diſtant expeditions, and new ſchemes of alliance and conqueſt, when the nation was already involved in great difficulties from a domeſtic, and under immediate apprehenſions of a foreign war; and with reſpect to one great argument uſed, that it was neceſſary we ſhould interfere in the Maratta diſputes becauſe the French were ſuppoſed to have made alliances with them (though the fact was not ſupported by authority) I thought that ſuch interference in us was more likely to force the Marattas into terms with the French, from the neceſſity of the contending parties oppoſing one European ally to another, from finding that we are determined, although againſt ſubſiſting treaties, to interfere.

From theſe motives I judged, that in good policy we ought to leave the Marattas to ſettle their own diſputes, to endeavour to cure rather than foment their jealouſy of our former interference, and to preſerve our reſources, both of troops and money, for the defence of our own already too extenſive poſſeſſions, againſt our more natural enemies.

But theſe reaſons and arguments were then over-ruled; and it being reſolved by the majority of the Board to aſſiſt Ragoba, and to ſupply Bombay both with men and money, Colonel Leſlie, the object of the preſent diſcuſſion, was ordered to march thither; to this meaſure I likewiſe moſt particularly objected, ſtating the enormous expence, the riſque of parting with ſo large a proportion of our beſt troops, and the length, the dangers, if not the impracticability of the march; yet I was again overruled, a detachment in conſequence was ordered on the moſt expenſive eſtabliſhment ever yet formed, and directed to proceed by a route hitherto unknown and unpaſſed by our troops.

Such being the reſolutions of many months ago, I will now take a view of the effects produced by them. At Bombay, Ragoba's affairs, notwithſtanding ſome unforeſeen revolutions in his favour, are not one jot advanced; on the contrary, our laſt advices prove to us, that his hopes are entirely at an end, his friends impriſoned, his party diſperſed, and even the Governor General himſelf has formally given up his cauſe by his propoſal to ſupport the pretenſions of Moodajee Booſla, and by his anſwer to the letter to Fort St. George, under date the 14th of Auguſt. Appendix. Nos. 146 & 147.

The progreſs of Colonel Leſlie's detachment has equally juſtified my former opinions; the Governor General in his minute of the 5th of October, having acquainted the Board, that from the lateſt period of his advices from the detachment, although more than four months had elapſed from the commencement of its march, it had advanced only 120 miles, and the Governor General fears at an expence of 12,00,000 rupees; that the commanding officer had been informed of a war declared between France and Great Britain, and been urged by the Preſidency of Bombay to quicken his progreſs for the preſervation of the Company's poſſeſſions on that ſide of India, from the effects of a very formidable invaſion, which they were inſtructed by authority to expect; nevertheleſs, our laſt public advices leave him on the banks of a rapid river, oppoſed by and in actual hoſtility with a large army of the natives, through whoſe country he is to paſs, having yet near a thouſand miles to proceed to Bombay: I would therefore wiſh to be informed, how the detachment is to ſubſiſt on the reſt of their march, which will be after they have paſſed the Cane river, at leaſt for a conſiderable diſtance, through an enemy's country, before they enter Berar; whether there is not ſome danger of their being ſurrounded, and their proviſion cut off, or whether the country through which they are to paſs can ſupply proviſions for ſo large a detachment; whether the roads are paſſable, or how the detachment is to croſs the Nerbudda, ſince they have met with ſuch difficulties at the Cane river; how they are to be ſupplied with money, ſtores, and ammunition, after they ſhall have expended what they have at preſent; how diſpatches and orders are to reach them; and what aſſurances we have that Moodajee Booſla will receive them as friends, or join them as allies, or give them a paſſage through his country?

I am likewiſe at a loſs to diſcover, ſuppoſing the detachment to arrive in Berar, and ſuppoſing them to meet with every favourable reception, and that their object is to proceed to Bombay, how the Governor General can ſeriouſly believe that Colonel Leſlie will effect a long march acroſs the hoſtile part of the Maratta territory, and in the face of their numerous armies, ſo expeditiouſly as to afford any relief to Bombay, if that place ſhall actually require it, in conſequence of the invaders that threaten them.

Until theſe queſtions are reſolved to my ſatisfaction, I muſt and ſhall continue uniformly againſt the march of the detachment, and againſt any treaty or alliance to be made in conſequence, ſeeing no poſſible good that can ariſe from either, but foreſeeing dangers, difficulties, diſappointments, and enormous expences from their further attempt to proceed.

(Signed) Edward Wheler.

12th October 1778.

Mr. Francis—Having already objected to the further march of the detachment, and having ſtated my opinion that it ought to be recalled, I might have been content with voting againſt the preſent motion, if other and more particular objections to the meaſures did not, as I think, ariſe out of the motion itſelf.

1ſt. The march of the army has now no fixed and determinate object, if it ever had any; nor indeed, as far as I can diſcover, has it any object at all. It is not poſitively to act in conjunction with Moodajee Booſla upon the plan of Mr. Elliott's negociation, ſince that negociation, with the alliance and ſubſequent projects propoſed to be accompliſhed by it, is relinquiſhed.

It is not poſitively to co-operate in the reinſtatement of Ragoba, ſince caſes are put, in which it muſt either halt in Berar, (with or without the conſent of the Rajah) until further orders from Calcutta, or proceed at all hazards to Bombay "for the immediate defence of that Preſidency "againſt a French invaſion."

Laſtly, it is not even poſitively determined that it ſhall proceed to Bombay, ſince in the two other ſuppoſed caſes its march may either end in Berar, or be directed to operations unconnected with the immediate defence of Bombay againſt a French invaſion. As the future movements of the army are to depend on different contingencies, and as the inſtructions to the commanding officer muſt of conſequence be conditional (to ſay nothing of the perplexity in which ſuch inſtructions may involve him) it appears plainly that this Board has no one determinate object in view in ordering the detachment to proceed: if the contrary be true, I deſire that ſuch object may be ſtated in clear and preciſe terms.

2. If this were not, as I deem it, an objection fatal to the meaſure, and admitting that there might be no danger in leaving the courſe of an army to be determined by future contingencies, in a point ſo eſſential as the ultimate object of its operations; ſtill the ſuppoſed caſes which are eventually to guide the motions of the army, ought to be ſuch as may probably happen, not ſuch as we certainly know neither do nor can poſſibly have any exiſtence. How is it poſſible, for example, that Moodajee Booſla's troops ſhould now act in conjunction with Colonel Leſlie, who in the firſt caſe is ſuppoſed to act under orders from Bombay, when the plan of alliance, which alone could have engaged Moodajee Booſla to take ſuch a ſtep is dropped? or what motive can he now have for acting in conjunction with Colonel Leſlie, when by the terms of the motion the march of the detachment can in no ſhape promote his perſonal advantage? He has no concern in defending Bombay againſt an invaſion; much leſs is it his intereſt to aſſiſt in reinſtating Ragoba, whom he muſt conſider as his rival and competitor for the government. Such at leaſt was the principle on which Mr. Elliott's negociation was planned and founded; if it be falſe, the whole ſcheme of that negociation, with all the facts and reaſonings introduced to ſupport it, falls to the ground.—Again, it is ſuppoſed that the Bombay Council may have adhered to their firſt project for the reſtoration of Ragoba, and may be actually engaged in the execution of this project, or of ſome other of the ſame nature, and for the ſame purpoſe; and on this ſuppoſition conditional orders are given to Colonel Leſlie. This part of the motion I ſay implies a falſe fact, and which the Governor General himſelf in ſome of his former minutes admits to be ſo. It is well known that Ragoba's party is annihilated, and that the gentlemen of Bombay have dropped all thoughts of executing the plan of which they adviſed us in their letter of the 25th July, or of engaging any farther in ſimilar deſigns. But if the contrary were true, with what reaſon or conſiſtency could we reſume the cauſe of Ragoba, whom we have renounced in the moſt formal manner, and whom above two months ago, we looked upon as abandoned by the partizans of his own nation. In our letter of the 14th of Auguſt we even forbid the Preſidency of Fort St. George from taking any meaſures in concert with Hyder Ally for the ſupport of Ragoba, and declared, "that an attempt to reinſtate "him in the Government of the Maratta dominions "might be attended with endleſs difficulties." Yet now Colonel Leſlie is to be ordered to co-operate in promoting the ſucceſs of ſuch an attempt.

The third ſuppoſition, on which conditional orders are given to Colonel Leſlie, though not amounting to an abſolute impoſſibility, implies a fact as nearly approaching to impoſſible as the higheſt degree of improbability can do. The neceſſity of providing for the immediate ſafety of Bombay againſt a French invaſion, is ſtated as one of the caſes which eventually determine the march of the army. We are now at the 12th of October; where Colonel Leſlie may be when our letters reach him is very uncertain, I will ſuppoſe him however to have croſſed the Cane river, and to have reached Panna: has the diſtance from that place to Bombay been computed? Is the road known? Have allowances been made for the difficulties as well as the length of the march? Is it certain that he will not meet with conſtant hoſtilities and oppoſition from the Marattas? Or have we forgotten that he has already taken four months to march one hundred and twenty miles, through a country much better known than that through which the remainder of his march is to be proſecuted? When all theſe circumſtances are combined, and even a moderate allowance made for the delay which they muſt unavoidably create, is there a ſhadow of probability left that the detachment will reach Bombay time enough to provide for its immediate ſafety againſt a French invaſion, ſuppoſing ſuch invaſion to be attempted? But if there be no ſuch probability, we plainly reſt our meaſures upon falſe grounds, and by implication endeavour to juſtify the further march of the army, by profeſſing to have in view an object which, we know, or on every rational principle ought to believe is unattainable.

On failure of all the preceding ſuppoſitions a fourth conditional inſtruction is propoſed, that if Moodajee Booſla ſhould refuſe to join Colonel Leſlie, and if Colonel Leſlie ſhould not have received any orders from the Preſidency of Bombay to proceed, he ſhall in that caſe halt in Berar; but it is neither determined what he is to do there, or whether he is to ſtay there againſt Moodajee Booſla's conſent. It is not very likely that this Chief will be content to ſuffer a foreign army to continue long in the heart of his dominions; but whether he be or not, Colonel Leſlie, in the caſe ſuppoſed, muſt ſtay there at all events, and perhaps be obliged to maintain his ground by force, and to enter into hoſtilities with the very Prince whoſe alliance we have lately ſolicited, and whoſe pacific diſpoſition to us I deem to be eſſentially neceſſary to the preſervation of the detachment.

Colonel Leſlie's ſituation in Berar I admit will be nearly central with reſpect to the three Preſidencies; that is, he will be in the centre of Hindoſtan, and at ſuch a diſtance from all of them as to make it impoſſible that the force under his command ſhould be of the leaſt ſervice to any of them.

It is out of my power, for want of time, to put theſe obſervations in a more regular form. I ſtate them as they occur to me. The Governor General, in whoſe hands the abſolute diſpoſition of all meaſures is now veſted will conſider not only the conſequences of the meaſure itſelf, but the appearance which it is likely to carry in England; and whether it be not probable that the Court of Directors, having in their view all the events that have happened ſince the detachment was firſt ordered, its manifeſt departure from the direct and open route to the other ſide of India, the circuitous and ſlow proceeding of the army, the inſtructions now intended, and the various reaſonings which have been recorded at this Board upon the whole tranſaction, may not conclude that it never was really and ſeriouſly intended that the detachment ſhould go to Bombay?

(Signed) P. Francis.

Governor General—I hope it will not be expected from me to reply to all the objections contained in the preceding minutes, by the unprepared reflections that may occur upon them at this Board, and under an anxiety of mind which I confeſs I feel, and which I wiſh to ſhake off before I enter into the cuſtomary field of debate. I am weary of verbal contention. I feel for the ſituation of the public, and I feel too much for my own, to be ſolicitous about any concluſions that may be formed upon my conduct in the paſt meaſures of this Government, which have been ſo ſeverely canvaſſed by the preſent members of this Board. If there are in England men ſo devoid of common ſenſe as to ſuppoſe it poſſible for me to have formed a plan oſtenſively profeſſed for the aſſiſtance of Bombay, but really meant as a cover for other deſigns, let them: whoever they be, of in whatever relation they may ſtand to this Government, ſuch opinions will give me no kind of concern.

It has been the will of God to blaſt my deſigns by means which no human prudence could have foreſeen, and againſt which I had therefore provided no reſource. We were called upon by the Preſidency of Bombay to aſſiſt them in a plan which both their peace and future proſperity, the Company's orders, and the general intereſts of the Britiſh nation in India, combined to recommend. It came further juſtified to us by the evident facility of its execution, and our aſſiſtance was only required to ſupport it, and render its future conſequence permanent. I was not privy to their deſign; it came as new to me as to the other members of the Board. I inſtantly propoſed, and the Board agreed, to give our ſanction to the plan, and our aſſiſtance to its execution. A large ſupply of money (10 lacks of rupees) was immediately remitted to them, and this was ſhortly after followed by an order for forming a large military force to march to their aſſiſtance. There was no other way of ſending this force but that which I recommended; neither would the ſeaſon of the year admit of their being tranſported by ſea; and the ill treatment to which our Sepoys have been invariably expoſed, whenever they have been conveyed from this Preſidency by ſhipping, will render that mode of tranſportation impracticable, until time ſhall have effaced the memory and tradition of thoſe injuries. There remained therefore no other way, but to ſend the detachment by land. I knew it to be practicable, and I knew the officer whom I recommended for the conduct of the expedition eminently qualified to accompliſh it.

Had I had occaſion to recur to the detail of this undertaking, at a period ſomething diſtant from this, I ſhould have had a pleaſure in joining Mr. Barwell's name with my own, in mentioning the formation of the meaſure; and ſhould have been contented with that ſeparate ſhare of credit only, which was due to me from it. I am leſs ſcrupulous now on this point, as I ſee nothing left to either but a dangerous reſponſibility, which is become the more ſo from the ſyſtem which ſeems to have been lately adopted in England, of condemning every public act, which would be imputed to us. Having taken ſo decided a part in ſupport of the Preſidency of Bombay, nothing remained for us but to leave it to operate; the reſt depended on the Preſidency of Bombay: they have done nothing: they attempted nothing. The influence alone of our meaſures produced the revolution which had been projected with the Preſidency of Bombay; but they had no part in it, nor appear to have availed themſelves, or to have wiſhed to avail themſelves, either of the ſucceſſive revolutions, or of the continued anarchy which have ſince prevailed in the Maratta State. The ſupineneſs on their part, and perhaps the ſlow movement of the detachment, have afforded time to the opponents of Ragoba to recover their loſt authority, and utterly to deſtroy the influence of thoſe, on whom the Preſidency of Bombay had placed their hopes of his reſtoration. Their power, it is true, ſtill continues as weak and divided in itſelf, as it was at the time in which the firſt ſuggeſtion was made to us to aſſiſt in its ſubverſion, but without an inſtrument left for that Preſidency to employ, and without any inclination in it to ſeek for any.

Thus embarked in a ſcene of difficulties, which were rendered ſuch only by the Preſidency of Bombay, and into which we were drawn by their urgent ſolicitation, and thus abandoned by them after all that we had done for their relief, we laid hold of the reſource which next preſented itſelf, in the diſpoſition which the Chief of Berar had ſhewed, not only to co-operate with us, but to make our cauſe his own, by uniting his intereſts with it. Mr. Elliott was therefore deputed to his Court, with inſtructions to form a treaty with him, both for a plan of immediate operations in conjunction with him, and for a future and permanent alliance. Here I ſhall cloſe the narrative. Colonel Leſlie, the officer whom I had ſelected from the reſt of the army, in the fulleſt confidence both in his military ſkill, integrity, and perſonal attachment, that he would moſt effectually accompliſh the deſigns which had been committed to his charge, has been lingering with the detachment, I know not why, within the diſtance of 120 miles from the place where it was formed, and is perhaps to this hour no further advanced. This is the fifth month of his campaign; a period within which I had formed the hope that he would have reached the place of his ultimate deſtination, and in which I affirm that he might have reached it. He has had no enemy to impede him; for the very few troops who have ſtood in his way were confeſſedly inferior to his army in numbers, and have been routed and diſperſed whenever he approached them. The weather could be no impediment, ſince every inconvenience which the troops could have ſuffered from it in motion and in the field, muſt have been doubly felt by them in their encampments; and the little ſtreams, denominated rivers, which have interſected their route, have, as I believe it will appear even from Colonel Leſlie's own letters, and as I know to be fact, been fordable even in the greateſt height of the rains, ſubſiding as ſuddenly as the torrents ruſhing from the mountains have ſwelled them. It could not have been the want of proviſions that detained them, for that would have been moſt ſeverely felt while the troops were confined to one ſpot, and the enemy at leiſure to ſurround and cut off their ſupplies; beſides that I know, and it is within the compaſs of every member of this Board to obtain the ſame knowledge from inquiry, that Chatterpore and its neighbourhood, to which the detachment had been ſo long fixed, draw all their ordinary ſupplies of proviſions from the diſtricts of Benares on one hand, and from the country of Sauger, which lies in the line of march, on the other; yet they have thus long remained in that unfavourable ſituation, and have not wanted ſubſiſtence. Here my deſign therefore has moſt unexpectedly failed; and Mr. Elliott, on whoſe uncommon abilities and fidelity I had placed my greateſt aſſurance of ſucceſs, has been unfortunately cut off by death, before he could accompliſh the journey which was neceſſary for his executing the commiſſion aſſigned him.

Under theſe concurring misfortunes, I by no means admit that we are deprived of all reſource: on the contrary, I have the ſtrongeſt conviction ſtill remaining, that, under a proper conduct, the effects of the detachment will ſtill anſwer my moſt ſanguine hopes; and as for its ſafety, I would with pleaſure pledge my life for it.

If it was neceſſary to ſtrengthen the Preſidency of Bombay when the firſt idea of it was ſuggeſted, it is much more ſo now, when we had been told by the higheſt authority, that a powerful armament has been prepared in France, the firſt object of which was an attack upon Bombay; and when we know with moral certainty, that all the powers of the adjacent continent are ready to join the invaſion. The ſtrength of Berar, which not long ſince ſhewed itſelf ſuperior to the whole force of the Maratta Government, in the time of its greateſt proſperity, and reduced the city of Poonah to aſhes, is ſurely able to execute any deſign made in conjunction with ſo formidable a body of diſciplined troops as that of which our detachment conſiſts. Whether the Rajah will chuſe to engage in any ſuch deſign, muſt ſoon be known by his declarations of the receipt of the intelligence of Mr. Elliott's death: in the mean time, nothing is precipitated by the reſolutions which I have recommended to the Board; it is only propoſed that the army ſhall proceed to the country of a friend, and from that ſtation either proſecute the original deſign of marching to the aſſiſtance of the Preſidency of Bombay, or ſhould it then become neceſſary (of which I have no idea) to return, it may return by a ſafer and nearer route, than by retracing that which it hath already paſſed.

Appendix. Nos. 146 & 147.

I ſhall finiſh theſe reflections by complaining of the uncandid advantage which has been taken of the ſituation into which I have been thrown by the miſconduct of others, and particularly of Colonel Leſlie. At one time I am called upon to reſent the total ſuſpenſion of the operations he was ordered to perform, and to remedy the effects of his diſobedience; and at another, this ſuſpenſion, and the effects of his diſobedience, are quoted as proofs of the radical defects of the meaſure, confeſſedly defeated by his management of it. I know not what to gather from this oppoſition of ſentiment. Do the members of the Board judge him culpable in the little progreſs he has made, or do they attribute it to natural and inevitable cauſes? On this point I ſhall wait for an explanation, before I proceed to the diſagreeable duty which ſeemed to be laid on me in this day's meeting, by the concurrent ſentiments and wiſhes which were expreſſed at the laſt. As to the propoſitions themſelves, which I ſuppoſe to be the objects of theſe minutes, though dictated without premeditation, I have ſince given them all the attention they can require, and I now give my entire aſſent to them.

Mr. Francis—Much might be ſaid in anſwer to the preceding minute; but this is not the time for it. I only deſire it to be underſtood that propoſitions or arguments, not immediately controverted, are not therefore meant to be admitted. In general I may obſerve, that the plea of ill fortune will hardly be allowed in the extent in which it is employed, unleſs it can be proved that the events which have defeated the meaſure were ſuch as no human prudence could foreſee, and againſt which no reſource could have been provided. The validity of ſuch a plea may be examined hereafter. The Court of Directors, I am perſuaded, will find no inconſiſtency in the various opinions which I have delivered on this ſubject. I have no ground of judging of the wiſdom of meaſures in the formation of which I am not conſulted, or of the motives of ſuch meaſures, or of the execution of them, but the facts as they ariſe in ſucceſſion before me. It is far from impoſſible, that an unwiſe plan may be executed without judgment or activity. Both may be true. I have executed my duty at every ſtage of the tranſaction; firſt, by objecting to the meaſure on its own profeſſed principles, and afterwards by conſtantly obſerving and giving my opinion to the Board of the execution of it. With reſpect to the mode of ſending aſſiſtance to Bombay, ſuppoſing the meaſure neceſſary, the only courſe which in my opinion, and in that of the gentlemen of Bombay themſelves, would have been adviſable, is not ſtated by the Governor General. On this point I muſt refer the Board to our conſultation of the 29th June laſt.

But waving all conſiderations of the ſteps already taken, the queſtion before us is, what reſolution ſhall we take in the preſent circumſtances? Is Colonel Leſlie, after ſuch repeated condemnation of his conduct, to be continued in the command of this important expedition? I did underſtand that ſome propoſitions on this ſubject would ere now have come before us from the Governor General himſelf? Is the preſent motion to be decided by the votes of the members preſent? Mr. Barwell's abſence need not have prevented his giving his opinion; and I muſt deſire that the queſtion may ſtill be left open for him, becauſe I will not take upon myſelf to interrupt any connected ſyſtem of meaſures by a temporary vote, until I can be aſſured that the principle on which ſuch vote ſhall paſs, will be adhered to. For the ſame reaſon I do not propoſe the recall of Colonel Leſlie.

Admitting it to be neceſſary to ſtrengthen Bombay againſt an invaſion, it remains ſtill to be proved by fair argument (ſupported by a clear ſtate of the march which it is intended the detachment ſhall purſue, with a reaſonable allowance for the difficulties they may meet with) that the detachment will probably arrive in time at Bombay to anſwer the end propoſed. No ſuch proof has yet been offered to the Board. In my opinion a much more ſafe and even expeditious method of reinforcing Bombay may be purſued. The enterprize againſt Pondicherry, if not now decided, muſt aſſuredly have failed or ſucceeded before letters from hence can reach Madras. A detachment from General Munro's army might be ſent to Bombay. This is the courſe which the Preſidency of Bombay themſelves recommended to us as the beſt and eaſieſt. If ſuch a detachment muſt be replaced, the force now ſtationed in the Circars might move down towards Madras, and that force, if neceſſary, be replaced from hence. I throw this plan out for conſideration, becauſe it ſeems to me ſimple and eaſy of execution. I do not affirm that it may not be liable to ſome objections, but I do firmly believe that much greater will occur to any other mode of ſending a reinforcement to Bombay.

Governor General—I did not examine the mode recommended by the Preſidency of Bombay for granting them aſſiſtance, becauſe I did not think it deſerved ſo much conſideration; but as it has been propoſed by a member of the Board, it becomes me to allow it a greater degree of weight; yet I muſt beg leave to obſerve, that it is liable to every objection, and in a greater degree than has been urged againſt the preſent expedition. The diſtance from Culpee to Bombay, meaſured in a right line on the map, is exactly equal to that of Pondicherry from Bombay; but there is this difference in the two routes, the former muſt be traced along the coaſt to the ſouth, and round the country to Anjengo, and from thence, either by a dangerous navigation along the Malabar coaſt, or continued by land through the dominions of Hyder Ally Khan, the moſt powerful of all the ſovereign Chiefs of India; whereas the road from Culpee deviates but little from the right line: without purſuing this argument I ſhall refer to the map for the truth of my aſſertion, that with ſuperior difficulties the former would exceed the latter in length by one third of the diſtance, beſides the march of a body of troops from Bengal to replace thoſe detached from the Carnatic. I muſt further obſerve, that this Government cannot command the forces of the Carnatic; we made a trial of our influence, in default of authority, to attain this very point, and we have failed to accompliſh it; it is therefore wrong to impute to this Government a neglect of the means which it cannot command. I do not ſuppoſe that on a deliberate reflection it would be recommended by any body of men who ſhould ſucceed to the adminiſtration of the affairs of this Government, and ſhall find another plan in train which promiſed at leaſt equal ſucceſs, and which ought to be deſperate before it were abandoned for the choice of another.

When I ſpoke of my own diſappointments, and the misfortunes which attended the meaſures hitherto taken for the aſſiſtance of Bombay, I affixed a very different ſenſe to thoſe words from that which ſeems implied in the repetition of them by Mr. Francis. The detachment is at this time as capable of effecting the ends of its formation, and the meaſure itſelf is in my opinion as adviſable now, and more ſo, than when it was firſt adopted; it has met with no real misfortune, I regret only that it has not already attained the ends which it is ſtill equally capable of accompliſhing.

I ſhall now return to ſuch parts of Mr. Francis's minute as regard the queſtions immediately before us. Mr. Francis ſays, "Is Colonel Leſlie, after ſuch repeated "condemnation of his conduct, to be continued in the "command of this important detachment?" I anſwer, No, if it be the opinion of the Board that he has adopted a train of meaſures, which in their conſequences muſt obviouſly tend to defeat the deſign of the expedition. I obſerved in my laſt minute, that I came prepared to give my ſentiments upon this ſubject, urged to it by the repeated calls of the Board, and by the belief that every member of it had before joined in the condemnation of Colonel Leſlie's conduct, but that I heſitated to execute it, becauſe I thought I ſaw in the minutes which were brought

brought to the Board by the members preſent, opinions which neceſſarily inferred an acquittal of his conduct; and I deſired them to declare, whether they judged him culpable in the little progreſs he had made, or whether they attributed it to natural and inevitable cauſes. Mr. Francis has replied to this queſtion, though not in direct terms by thoſe of the queſtion which I have above quoted. I will conclude that Mr. Wheler's ſentiments alſo remain unchanged: and on theſe grounds I move, That the opinions of this Board be taken, whether Colonel Leſlie ſhall be continued in the command of the detachment from the 1ſt brigade, or ſhall he be removed from it? Though prepared to give my immediate vote upon this queſtion, yet I have no objection to leave it in ſuſpenſe until that of Mr. Barwell can be taken upon it, and the reſolution of the Board be; as I believe it will prove, unanimous.

For the reaſons properly urged by Mr. Francis, I alſo agree, that the queſtions propoſed by me at the laſt meeting of the Council, ſhall in like manner remain ſuſpended until Mr. Barwell ſhall have given his opinion upon them: indeed I think this neceſſary in point of regularity, as I recollect, that Mr. Barwell expreſſed himſelf prepared at that time to deliver his opinion upon them, although it was afterwards agreed, that the members of the Board ſhould deliver their minutes in writing, and his only remains to be received.

Mr. Francis—Colonel Leſlie is not at Calpee, nor is it now in his choice to proceed by the uſual route from thence to Bombay: it would certainly have been the eaſieſt, at leaſt it would have been the moſt direct: I hear there are letters from camp as late as the 17th of laſt month, and that he was ſtill at Rajegur. Whatever our influence or authority over the Preſidency of Fort Saint George may be, I cannot conceive it poſſible that they would refuſe to concur in a plan for the defence of Bombay, when ſuch plan is propoſed to be effected without any diminution of their own force; but it is in vain reaſoning on a caſe which does not exiſt. To the queſtion now propoſed, I have no difficulty in ſaying that if a propoſition had been made by the Governor General for Colonel Leſlie's removal, I ſhould have agreed to it, becauſe; waving my opinion of the ſervice committed to him, I deem it morally impoſſible that his march from Calpee to his preſent ſtation could have taken up the time it has done, if his attention had not been fixed on other objects, equally incompatible with our expreſs orders, and with the proſecution of his march. He has aſſumed a power with which the Legiſlature has not thought fit to intruſt the Preſidencies of Fort Saint George and Bombay, and from the exerciſe of which he was particularly reſtricted by our inſtructions: after this declaration, I preſume it cannot be a doubt, whether I think Colonel Leſlie culpable or not: it is certainly my opinion, that he ought to be recalled; but unleſs it concurs with that of the Governor General, I will never conſent to its deciding the reſolution of the Board: my reaſons for this caution are ſufficiently obvious, but as we are likely to be unanimous on the queſtion, it is unneceſſary to enter into them.

Governor General—This caution I think unneceſſary on the preſent occaſion. I have given ſufficient indications of the part which I ſhould take in the queſtion before the Board; but I will put it beyond a doubt, by declaring it formally to be my opinion, that Colonel Leſlie ought to be recalled.

Mr. Francis—I agree with the Governor General.

Mr. Wheler—I agree with the Governor General and Mr. Francis, that Colonel Leſlie be recalled.

Reſolved, That Colonel Leſlie be recalled from the command of the detachment made from the 1ſt brigade, and that he be ordered to deliver over the command of the ſaid detachment to the next ſenior officer.

Mr. Barwell delivers in his opinion as follows, on the Governor General's propoſitions of the 7th inſtant.

Mr. Barwell—I will not prolong a debate in a degree cloſed, by commenting on the arguments offered in ſupport of the opinions of the different members; I was prepared to have approved the propoſitions from the chair at the inſtant they were dictated, ſatisfied of the juſtneſs of the political principle on which the meaſure for giving effectual aid to Bombay, and ſecurity to our poſſeſſions, was reſolved. Men ſee through different mediums, or may act on ſyſtem. I apprehend in either caſe it is waſte of words to attempt to reaſon them out of their opinions, and while we endeavour at conviction, we frequently do no more than offer occaſion to perplex and confound the ſimpleſt propoſition, and controverſy is endleſs.

I agree with the Governor General, and think Colonel Leſlie culpable in the little progreſs he has made.

I agree to the recall of Colonel Leſlie, and to give the command of the detachment to Lieutenant Colonel Goddard.

No. 147.

Reſolved, That the following letter be written to Colonel Leſlie, and diſpatched by this night's poſt:

To Colonel Leſlie.

Sir,

We have received your letter of the 4th September; and the Governor General has laid before us your letter to him of the 7th of the ſame month, encloſing copy of the treaty which you have entered into, in the name of the Company, with the Rajahs Gomaun and Comaun Sing. And we are informed that there are private letters received, dated the 16th and 17th of the ſame month, which mention the detachment being then at Raje Ghur.

In the firſt place, we think it proper to diſavow the treaty which you have taken upon yourſelf to conclude with thoſe Rajahs, and to declare it invalid.

We conſider your attempt to pledge the name of the Company to this engagement, and your interference in the domeſtic diſſentions of the Rajah of Bundlecund and his brother, as acts committed in direct violation of our poſitive orders, by which you were forbidden, "to involve this Government in future engagements under "any pretext whatſoever, or to ſuffer yourſelf to be diverted from the proſecution of your march by any new "object, except for the ſafety or ſubſiſtence of your "troops indiſpenſably requiring it."

If you have concluded any treaty with the Rajah of Bundlecund, or with his brother Surnaut Sing, or entered into any engagements with either, contrary to the tenor of thoſe inſtructions, we hereby alſo declare ſuch treaty and ſuch engagements to be invalid.

We have ſeen with equal ſurpriſe and concern four months and an half elapſe in effecting the march from Kalpy to Raje Ghur, a diſtance of only 120 miles; in a period which, for any reaſons with which we are acquainted to the contrary, appears ſufficient to have conducted the detachment to its ultimate deſtination.

We deemed the ſervice which you were appointed to execute of ſo urgent a nature, that we directed you to commence your march at the moſt unfavourable ſeaſon of the year. You have been informed from authority, of the danger which threatened Bombay from a formidable French armament, equipped in the port Toulon for the invaſion of that iſland, and you were in conſequence of ſuch advice earneſtly required to expedite your march; yet you have remained in a ſtate of inactivity, which is to us inexplicable on the grounds either of neceſſity or expediency.

It will afford us great ſatisfaction if you ſhall be able to juſtify this conduct, which under the preſent appearances we can as little reconcile to your duty, and the clear line which you had to purſue for the ſucceſs of the enterprize committed to your charge, as to the poſitive rules and precautions which we had laid down in our inſtructions for your guidance.

But as you have engaged yourſelf in a line of politics, which obviouſly tend to defeat the important object of the expedition, we cannot, conſiſtently with our primary duty to the Company, and the ſafety of their intereſts, ſuffer you to continue longer in a command which you have given us ſuch ſtrong cauſe to apprehend will be perverted from the ends to which it was beſtowed upon you.

We therefore command you immediately on the receipt of this letter, to deliver over the charge of the detachment to Lieutenant Colonel Goddard, or to the officer who ſhall then be next to you in command thereof, and to repair with all convenient expedition, and by ſuch route as you ſhall judge moſt practicable to the Preſidency of Fort William.

You will take the firſt regiment of cavalry for your ſafe conduct into theſe provinces; and as ſoon as you have entered them or arrived within the frontier of the dominions of the Nabob of Oude, you will adviſe us thereof, and direct the commanding officer of that regiment to halt until he receives orders for his future deſtination, either from the Board or from the Commander in Chief.

We are, &c. &c.

Fort William,
the 15th October 1778.

Reſolved, That Lieutenant Colonel Goddard be immediately written to as follows:

To Lieutenant Colonel Goddard.

Sir,

Having thought it proper to recall Colonel Leſlie from the command of the detachment which was made from the firſt brigade, for the ſupport and aſſiſtance of the Preſidency of Bombay, we have ordered him to deliver charge of the ſaid command immediately to you, and himſelf to repair to Fort William, taking with him the firſt regiment of cavalry for his ſafe conduct.

We hereby direct, that you forthwith take charge of the command of the forces from Colonel Leſlie, excepting the above corps of cavalry; and we inveſt you with the powers and authority formerly delegated to him for that purpoſe.

We encloſe for your guidance in this command, copies of the inſtructions originally delivered to Colonel Leſlie, and of ſuch further orders tranſmitted to him as ſtill remain in force. Theſe are ſo ample and ſo clear, that we have only to enjoin you to adhere to them ſtrictly, as far as they may be conſiſtent with our preſent and future orders, and to effect without loſs of time ſuch parts of them as yet remain unaccompliſhed.

We further direct, that you immediately purſue the line of march preſcribed for the detachment into the province of Berar; that you give the earlieſt notice of your arrival and progreſs, in the manner directed in your inſtructions, to Moodajee Booſla, the Chief of that diſtrict, who is in amity with the Company; that you implicitly obey all ſuch orders as you may hereafter receive from the Preſident and Council at Bombay, for proceeding to that ſide of India without delay; and even before the receipt of ſuch orders, you will proſecute your march towards Bombay from Berar, if the Rajah Moodajee Booſla ſhall agree to join you with a ſufficient body of his troops to enable you, not only to ſtand your ground againſt the Maratta army, but in caſe of need to act offenſively againſt them.

If the Rajah ſhall refuſe or decline to reinforce you with a body of his troops to aſſiſt the Preſidency of Bombay, and you ſhall not have received any orders from that Preſidency ſubſequent to the date hereof, to purſue your march; we leave it to your diſcretion to continue encamped in the province of Berar, or to proceed, adviſing us immediately, in the moſt expeditious manner, of this or any other meaſure which you may reſolve upon, of your progreſs, and of every tranſaction which may be material for our information.

We think it neceſſary to direct, that you recall any detachments which may have been made from the main body of your forces; and that you be careful on all occaſions to keep them united.

We authorize you to appoint your own ſtaff officers, only recommending it to your attention not to burthen the eſtabliſhment with any poſts, which may be diſpenſed with, conſiſtently with the duty of the ſervice.

We are, &c.

READ a letter from Mr. Leſlie as follows;

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

It is with the deepeſt concern I find myſelf neceſſitated to inform you, that Colonel Leſlie was ſeized with a ſevere bilious fever on the 27th of laſt month, which has reduced his ſtrength ſo much, that the ſurgeons have very little expectation of his recovery: The encloſed letter and tranſcripts which I now do myſelf the honour to lay before you, were given to me to prepare for diſpatch the day after the fever ſeized him, and I have been waiting a favourable intermiſſion for the Colonel's ſignature. The opportunity to this moment has not offered; and as it may be ſtill longer before the Colonel may have ſtrength to attend to buſineſs, I have preſumed to forward theſe papers to you, not only that the information appears neceſſary to your ſatisfaction, but that I deem it my duty in the office I now hold as his ſecretary, to tranſmit them to you, and hope therefore to be indulged with your approbation.

I am, &c.

Camp, Rage Ghur, 2d October 1778. (Signed) Matt[w] Leſlie, Sec[y].

Read the letter encloſed in the foregoing, as follows;

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

In my letter of the 25th, I informed you of my ſituation to that period, and that of the 30th July would acquaint you of my ſituation and proſpects to that time, which were very flattering to my ſpeedy moving forward, but in this I was deceived. The demands of Goman and Coman Sing for their ſervices in ſupplies were ſo exorbitant, they could not be complied with. They demanded from Surnet Sing and Anrood Sing a conſiderable territory, ſuppoſed wreſted from them by their father Hindooput;

Hindooſtut: from me, my return to Jeetpoor, and diſpoſſeſs Gudd Sing of that fortreſs for their uſe, as it was formerly taken from them by Gudd Sing's father. This threw a difficulty on my getting ſupplies, as they had all the power to the north and eaſt, and knowing their own influence (and overtures at this time made them by Anrood Sing and Ballajee) they created a number of difficulties to raiſe their own conſequence.

The inceſſant rains which fell during this month, had ſwelled the Nullas ſo much that they were not paſſable, and the roads were ſo broken and ſloughy, it was impoſſible for carriages to travel, nor could I perſuade the Banjarrahs to follow me (if I could have got ſufficient grain) till the rains ſubſided. From this period till near the middle of Auguſt, I laboured inceſſantly to induce Goman and Coman Sing to join with Surnet Sing in procuring me the neceſſary ſupplies, and I had the greateſt aſſurances from them it ſhould be ſo; but to my great mortification, when matters came to be adjuſted, I found Anrood Sing's offers had prevailed, and they would engage in nothing without a compliance to the moſt exorbitant demands.

My indifference to treat further with them, or accept any of their propoſals, and my intended march to Raje Ghur, had a better effect than any ſoothing I could have given; for I had an immediate application by their Vackeels to come to agreement of friendſhip with me, independent of Surnet Sing; which was perfected on my arrival at this place, a copy of which I have tranſmitted to Mr. Haſtings.

The conſtant fall of rain for the firſt ten days of Auguſt rendered my moving from Chatterpore impracticable, by the route of Gool Gunge, had there been no force at Reje Ghur and the Cane: But as I could not move with ſo large a corps in my rear, without the utmoſt riſque of ſtarving my detachment, I reſolved the very firſt receſs of the rains to march to Raje Ghur, in order to remove that ſtrong force of the Bundellahs, either by croſſing the river and proceeding by the route of Panna, or by my motion this way make them quit their poſt on the Cane to cover Panna and Callinger, and leave me at liberty to purſue my route by Gool Gunge without moleſtation from them. I accordingly marched from Chatterpore, on the 15th Auguſt, as my letter of the 16th would inform you, as would my ſubſequent letters to the 24th of that month, of my ſituation down to that time.

The very heavy rains that have fallen down to this period, and the terrible condition of the weſtern roads, made it morally impoſſible for me to move, and the obſtinacy of the Bundellahs on the oppoſite ſhore of the Cane, prevented my attempting the paſſage of that river, but amply provided for the ſucceſs of the undertaking; to this end, boats were ſet on the ſtocks by Lieutenant Colonel Fortnom, and every preparation was in forwardneſs, when the Raja Anrood Sing ſent meſſages to requeſt an explanation, and propoſals of accommodation.

I thought terms of amity would be more conſonant to your deſires, and to the expediting my march than engaging in abſolute hoſtilities, and I acquieſced to the receiving any perſon he would ſend. Hiera Loll was accordingly deputed to me, and has at length adjuſted the terms of my march, together with engagements of amity now and hereafter: tranſcripts of thoſe papers I do myſelf the honour to encloſe to you, and I truſt they are ſuch as will meet with your approbation. This Miniſter is to attend my march to the boundaries of the Bundlecund territory; and I ſhall commence my march for Saguer, by the rout of Gool Gunge, to-morrow.

I have been honoured with your letters of the 31ſt Auguſt and 1ſt September. I am very much concerned that you did not deem my correſpondence with your Board from Chatterpore ſufficiently explanatory for the cauſe of my halt there; I requeſt your reference to the ſeveral addreſſes diſpatched to you from thence, and to this period I requeſt your reference to the fluctuating ſtate of the Miniſters and Chiefs at Poonah, and our intereſts in that quarter, as communicated to me by the Reſident, and the jealouſies I have been impreſſed with of the diſpoſitions of the ſeveral Chiefs, through which my route of march will be; and I do hope, on a candid conſideration of them, that you will be ſatisfied my halt at Chatterpore, and the ſubſequent delay here, has been eſſentially neceſſary to the ſafety of my troops, and that I ſhall be honoured with your approbation of my meaſures. Appendix No. 148.

The encloſed tranſcript of letters from the Vackeel of the Berar Chief (Benarum Pundit) will plainly exhibit to you the ſtate of the roads at this period: but had I made the attempt, and had I marched immediately from Chatterpore to Sagur, I do conceive I ſhould have inevitably hazarded the ſafety of my detachment. The country about Sagur does not abound with proviſions; the Chiefs Goman and Coman Sing were, it is true, neutral at the time, but I doubt much their inclination to have afforded me aid; and I was very certain the Miniſters of Anrood Sing would have taken the advantage of my advance from Chatterpore, to croſs a body of men, and retake that place, which was the only route by which my ſupplies could be drawn, and they would of courſe be intercepted. The machination of Ballagee had produced theſe difficulties; the Bundellahs declare it, and his late behaviour confirms the circumſtances.

What reception I ſhall meet with in his diſtricts I cannot ſay; he had promiſed himſelf the Bundellahs would have been able to fruſtrate my march by Panna, and by not coming to terms with me, that they would have co-operated with him in haraſſing my rear, and cutting off my ſupplies by the route of Gool Gunge; the treaty of amity with them aboliſhes this plan. My ſupplies and communication with the Vizier's dominions are ſecured, and Ballajee will, I hope, of neceſſity to his own intereſt, be induced to fulfil the terms of the treaty entered into with him in the perſon of his brother Gunga Dur. I cannot conclude this ſubject without again expreſſing my concern, if I have not been ſo explicit as you wiſhed, and can impute it only to my anxiety not to give your honourable Board any tedious details; when I was at the time affording Mr. Haſtings at his own particular deſire a particular journal of occurrences, and to whom I truſted for ſuch explanations as the honourable Board might expreſs a deſire to know, in addition to my addreſſes.

I will be more careful in future, that I do not ſuffer your diſpleaſure in this regard.

Your ſentiments contained in the letter of the 1ſt September, I have peruſed with attention, and will ſtrictly comply with your orders contained therein. I have had no repetition of the application, and I hope I ſhall not.

You may depend on my firmneſs and ſtrict diſcipline to ſuppreſs any revival of the affair, for though I was ſatisfied of the impropriety of it, yet it was my duty, ſituated as I am, and liable to the moſt malicious interpretations of every tranſaction in my camp, to communicate to you the circumſtances of it.

I have the honour to be,
Head Quarters, with the higheſt reſpect,
Raje Ghur, honourable Sir, and Sirs, September 28th 1778. Your moſt obedient humble ſervant.

A true tranſcript.
(Signed) Matthew Leſlie, Secry.

This letter, although not ſigned by Colonel Leſlie, but tranſmitted and atteſted by his ſecretary, and being in the ſame hand in which his letters have been generally written, the Board deem authentic.

Governor General—The pointed reference made by Colonel Leſlie to his correſpondence with me, and the perſonal reproach which ſeems to be implied in it, will make it neceſſary for me to lay the whole of his letters before the Board, which were written ſince his arrival at Chatterpore. I ſhall requeſt, that the members of the

Board

Board will perüse them, and if they appear either to contain the reaſons for his long ſtay at that place, or ſince that time for his halting at Raje Ghur, more explicitly detailed than they have been in his letters to the Board, or any facts or circumſtances materially neceſſary for the information of the Board, I ſhall conſent either to their being recorded entire, or ſuch extracts from them only, as ſhall be judged neceſſary: as they may be voluminous I do not propoſe to enter them all; nor ſhould I have thought it either neceſſary or proper to have quoted any part of Colonel Leſlie's private letters to me, unleſs they related to ſuch ſubjects as the Board had a right to know, and ſuch as it would in that caſe have been incumbent on me to have communicated to them. This diſtinction I have always made between official and private correſpondence; and the Board will recollect, that I expreſſed it very particularly on the laſt communication which I made of Colonel Leſlie's letter, which contained the particulars of the treaty with the Rajahs Gomaun and Comaun Sing.

I am ſorry to inform the Board, that I have ſeen a letter from Captain Cockerel to Mr. Thomas Graham, dated Raje Ghur, the 4th inſtant, which mentions, that at five o'clock on that evening Colonel Leſlie departed this life after an illneſs of ſix days.

READ a letter from Colonel Goddard as follows;

Gentlemen,

It is with the deepeſt concern I have to intimate to you the death of Colonel Leſlie, who expired this evening at ſix o'clock, after an illneſs of a few days.

The command of this detachment having devolved on me, I ſhall inform myſelf fully of the inſtructions you may have tranſmitted to my predeceſſor, and immediately proceed to execute them with the moſt implicit obſervance and expedition.

I ſhall do myſelf the honour of writing to you more fully in a ſhort time, and at preſent only beg leave to obſerve to you, that as Colonel Leſlie, on the day his indiſpoſition firſt attacked him had iſſued an order for the army to prepare for proceeding on their march, I am in hopes to be able to proſecute the expedition without further delay.

I have the honour, &c.

Camp, at Raje-Ghur, October 3d, 1778. (Signed) Thos Goddard.

Governor General.—According to the promiſe which I made at the laſt meeting in the Secret Department, I have brought with me, and now lay before the Board, all the letters which I have received from Colonel Leſlie ſince the month of April laſt, excepting one dated 25th July, from which I have already extracted and communicated to the Board ſuch parts as were anywiſe material, for their information, and a reference to them will be ſufficient to ſhew, that no part of the letter recites any account of his public tranſactions. Some of Colonel Leſlie's letters are merely of a private nature; yet I think it neceſſary for my own juſtification to lay the whole before the Board, requeſting that the members will be pleaſed to peruſe them, and to point out any parts that may contain advices which ought to be entered on our proceedings; but if it ſhould be thought proper to record the letters at large, I requeſt that the private ones may be excepted.

I beg leave alſo to remark, that I ſubmit theſe laſt only to the private and confidential knowledge of the Board.

READ a letter from Colonel Goddard, as follows:

Gentlemen,

I had the honour to write to you the 3d inſtant, informing you of the death of Colonel Leſlie, and of my expectations to proceed on my march without further delay.

Having taken a few days to receive the neceſſary reports, &c. of the ſtate of the troops, and inform myſelf fully of your intentions relative to the preſent ſervice, I left Raje Ghur on the 8th inſtant, and have the pleaſure to inform you, that I arrived at Choky this morning, I ſhall proceed to-morrow to Gool Gunjee, on the road to Sagur, through the territories of Ballajee, and hope in a ſhort time to reach the Nerbuddah river.

I beg to aſſure you that I ſhall moſt particularly comply with the inſtructions contained in your letter of the 7th July; and I hope by the prompt and ready obedience I ſhall pay to all your commands, to prove myſelf deſerving of any confidence you may think proper to honour me with.

I requeſt further to inform you, that I have been lately favoured with a letter from the honourable Select Committee at Bombay, covering a cypher to be uſed in my correſpondence with them; it alſo contained intelligence that Nannah Furneſs and Moodaje Scindia have detached two principal officers with a conſiderable force from Poonah, on the route they expect the army will march. On this ſubject permit me only to obſerve, that the preſent diſtracted ſtate of the Maratta empire, and the diviſions that reign amidſt their councils, gives ſufficient reaſon to ſuppoſe they will not be able to ſpare a body of troops of ſtrength equal to oppoſe the march of this detachment, ſhould the route of Poonah be judged neceſſary.

I have the honour, &c.

The Governor General deſires to record the following abſtract of a letter to him from Colonel Goddard:

Extract of a Letter from Colonel Goddard to the Governor General; dated 11th October 1778.

I have the pleaſure to communicate to you the progreſs the troops continue to make, which I aſſure myſelf will not meet with any future interruption. This morning after performing a march of eight coſs with the greateſt eaſe and alacrity, they reached a place called Choka, five coſs to the ſouthward of Chatterpore, on the high road to Sagur, ſo that I have the ſatisfaction to think I have fairly bid adieu to the regions of Bundlecund, at leaſt for the preſent; and to the tempting prize the diviſions and family family conteſts of its poſſeſſors offer to an invader. I have left them profeſſing amity towards each other, and reſpect and friendſhip to the Engliſh nation, whoſe powers and proweſs they have at leaſt learnt to dread. The whole country now wears a face of tranquil peace, and the army is plentifully ſupplied with every neceſſary for its ſupport and convenience. I ſhall reach Gool Gunjee to-morrow morning, as I mentioned before.

Governor General—It being no longer neceſſary to withhold the inſtructions to the late Mr. Elliott, and the ſubſequent minutes reſpecting them, from the conſultations, and it being neceſſary that the conſultations be completed for the approaching diſpatches, I propoſe that they be now ordered to be entered.

Bengal Secret Department, Perſian Correſpondence, 1778.

Letter from Modajee Bhoſila to Mr. Elliott, 1ſt November 1778.

BY repeated and ſucceſſive letters which I have lately received from the Nabob Amaud-ul-Dowlah, I learn that he has deputed you to converſe and negociate with me on many ſecret and important views; and that you will repair with all expedition to Naigpore, by the route of Cuttack, and will make me acquainted with all matters entruſted to your charge; that it is neceſſary that I regard you as poſſeſſed of complete knowledge of all matters, of his entire confidence, and inveſted with full powers; and conſidering every thing you ſhall ſay as coming immediately from himſelf, jointly with you concert ſuch meaſures as ſhall be for our common advantage; and having agreed on them, tranſmit intelligence thereof to him. Rajah Ram Pundit, the Nabob Soubader of Oriſſa, has likewiſe repreſented to me that you are arrived in the neighbourhood of Cuttack, whither two of your confidential companions arrived ſome time before, and that you will ſhortly join them there.

I hope that by this time you have arrived there, and have begun your journey forward: I have accordingly ſent expreſs orders to Ram Pundit, by ſwift Coſſids, to receive you with every right of hoſpitality, to furniſh you with every neceſſary, and to provide you with every convenience for your journey, ſuch as coolies, bearers, palanquins, &c. and to give you whatever eſcort you may deſire, and diſpatch you hither with every poſſible expedition. I have no doubt but the ſaid Pundit will literally comply with my directions, and will take every means to give you ſatisfaction, and fulfil your pleaſure. I have ſtationed people from Naigpore to Lamjee, to Chataſegur, which is in Bimbajee's country, at different places, that they may be attentive to your wants in the journey, and ſend me daily intelligence of your progreſs: on your arrival in this neighbourhood, perſons of credit ſhall be ſent to meet you. As the Nabob Amaud-ul-Dowlah has declared you his repreſentative, and deputed you on ſo important a buſineſs, I am entirely deſirous, in every inſtance, of giving you the fulleſt ſatisfaction.

The more expeditiouſly you can travel with convenience to yourſelf, the more pleaſing will it be to me: you will therefore give me daily accounts of your progreſs. I have likewiſe written to Bimbajee Bhoſila to protect you againſt the dangers of the journey. Appendix, Nos. 151 & 152.

From Modajee Bhoſila: Received 12th November 1778.

I have been favoured with three or four letters from you, by the way of Benares and Cuttack, on the ſubject of the intimate friendſhip which has been contracted between us; the delivering up of Monſieur Chevalier to the cuſtody of Mr. Elliott, by my miniſter for Oriſſa, Rajah Ram Pundit, agreeable to your deſire intimated to him; and intimating, with regard to the affair of Oadeypore Goſaien, that as you know nothing of him, I ſhould pay no regard, nor place any reliance on any negociations he propoſed to form; and that I will honour Rajah Ram Pundit with my warm favour and regard, in return for the attention which he has paid to your deputation of Mr. Elliott, to which you were induced by the warmeſt friendſhip and regard, that he might form a treaty for our mutual benefit, on ſo firm a baſis, that the advantages of it might be reaped by our lateſt poſterity. Theſe letters afforded me the greateſt pleaſure, and contributed to ſtrengthen the ties of connexion already formed.

Rajah Ram Pundit's conduct, in complying with what you wrote him, and delivering up Monſieur Chevalier, is perfectly agreeable to the directions I gave him, and highly commendable. Where ſo intimate a connexion ſubſiſts, that the friends and enemies of the one party are equally thoſe of the other, the dictates of friendſhip are to be followed; let others judge of the acts produced thereby as they will. Every degree of regard and attention ſhall be paid to him, and he ſhall meet with the reward of his good conduct. By the bleſſing of God, mine is a powerful State, where every one receives what is due to his merit; but every one cannot be made the confidant of the ſecrets of Government. This being the caſe, how ſhould I have ſuffered the Goſaien you allude to, to have interfered in matters of this nature. Be perfectly ſatisfied, that without your advice and approbation I never have permitted, nor will permit any one to have any concern in our affairs.

Poſtſcript.—The capricioufneſs of fortune has lately produced the moſt melancholy event; you will eaſily judge I mean that Mr. Elliott, after arriving at Cuttack, and getting poſſeſſion of the perſon of Mr. Chevalier, and ſetting off from thence for this quarter, and arriving in the neighbourhood of Sumbulpore; and writing to me by the Hircarrahs whom I had ſtationed at different routes, to provide them with every conveniency, that he was at that place, and ſhould ſhortly reach Naigpore; in conſequence of which I diſpatched Mahomed Ally, a truſty perſon, at the head of a ſtrong guard, to meet him, provide him with every thing neceſſary, and protecting him againſt the dangers of the journey, conduct him in ſafety hither; and that before Mahomed Ally could reach him, I ſhould receive a letter from Mr. Farquhar, one of his company, from Saranagur, that being ſeized with a malignant fever, his career had been ſtopped by the angel of death!

The concern and affliction which it gave me, that after coming ſo great a diſtance he ſhould be arreſted by death, without attaining the ends for which he undertook it, exceeds the power of language to deſcribe; and I doubt not but the news of this melancholy event equally affected you; but as there is no remedy againſt theſe unavoidable misfortunes but patience and reſignation, you will ſubmit without murmuring to the will of God.

The magnanimity and firmneſs which are the characteriſtics of exalted minds teach, that no trifling changes of circumſtance, which are in fact no more than trials, ſhould induce the Ruler of a State to relinquiſh a plan formed on mature deliberation; but that he ſhould, in ſpite of ſuch interruptions, be collected in himſelf, and continue ſteadily fixed in the purſuit of his object: ſuch conduct is truly worthy of what great minds alone are capable of. By the bleſſing of God, you, my friend, are endowed with theſe exalted ſentiments.

As the fame of our intimate connexion, the deputation of a confidential agent to form a treaty with me, and the conſtant intercourſe of letters between us, is ſpread throughout Decan; and I have received letters from Pundit Purdhaun and his Miniſters, and from the Nabob Nizam ul Dowlah, deſiring information on this head, and have candidly replied, that the ties of connexion which have ever ſubſiſted between me and the Engliſh, by reaſon of the Bengal tribute, and the vicinity of our territories, are ſo firmly bound that no circumſtance has or ſhall looſe them; and advices of the tranſactions here, both public and private, have doubtleſs been tranſmitted thither from your quarter likewiſe; in a word, as the ſtandard of friendſhip which has been erected for the promotion of our common advantage, and the ruin of our enemies, has been ſeen far and wide, and the view of it has inſpired our friends with ſtrength and confidence, and produced terror and diſmay amongſt our enemies; you will take every means to confirm our friends, by not giving way to an unavailing grief for the loſs of Mr. Elliott, but writing immediately to Mr. Farquhar to form a treaty on the inſtructions given to Mr. Elliott, of which he is acquainted; and having concluded his negociations, whatever may be concluded by our joint deliberations, to tranſmit the particulars thereof to you, and to take no meaſure which may be an hindrance to the eſtabliſhment of a friendſhip between us, on ſo ſolid a baſis as may deſcend to our lateſt poſterity, or otherwiſe ſend ſome other perſon qualified for ſo important a truſt, on the wings of expedition, by the route of Cuttack, with directions on no account to be dilatory in his journey, as the buſineſs is of the moſt delicate nature, and the opportunity to perform it in is very ſhort. You need not be reminded of this.

From Dewagur Pundit: Received 12th November 1778.

I have been honoured with your four friendly letters with Karetahs for the Maha Rajah my maſter, which afforded me the greateſt pleaſure, as I learn from them your ſteady adherence to your friendſhip for the Maha Rajah, which muſt be productive of mutual benefit, not only at preſent, but to the lateſt time; they alſo cauſed the greateſt ſatisfaction to my maſter, and ſtrengthened thoſe friendly ſentiments he has long entertained towards you. By the bleſſing of God, the baſis of your friendſhip becomes daily more extenſive. The regarding the friends and enemies of either party as common to both, and the delivery of Mr. Chevalier to Mr. Elliott by Rajah Ram Pundit, in conſequence of your deſire intimated to him, are fruits of the moſt intimate friendſhip; and Rajah Ram Pundit, for his attention to your pleaſure, is warmly regarded by the Maha Rajah. No one has been, nor will be ſuffered to interfere, in any meaſure, in the negociations and ſecret Communications between you and my maſter, except ſome few who are the confidants of the ſecrets of Government; how then ſhould Qodapooree Goſaien, and ſuch like perſons, have any thing to do with them? Of this you may be perfectly ſatisfied.

After Mr. Elliott had arrived at Cuttack, and had got Mr. Chevalier into his hands, and quitting Cuttack, advanced as far as Saranagur, we received the melancholy news of his deceaſe by a letter from Mr. Farquhar; this unfortunate event filled both the Maha Rajah and myſelf with inexpreſſible grief: as there is no remedy in ſuch caſes but patience, it is our duty to ſubmit with reſignation to the decrees of the Almighty. Since the news of Mr. Elliott's approach, and the conſtant intercourſe of letters between the two States has been univerſally acknowledged by all the Chiefs of the Decan, and the eſtabliſhment of an intimate connexion between them is known to all ranks of people, to ſuffer Mr. Elliott's death to cauſe a ſuſpenſion in the negociations with which he was entruſted; and to put a ſtop to your mutual deſigns, will bring diſcredit on both States; for to form a deſign and afterwards on a ſmall alteration of circumſtances to relinquiſh it, can neither be advantageous nor honourable to either State. Since you are in welfare, every wiſh may ſtill be accompliſhed: you will therefore write immediately to Mr. Farquhar, who accompanied Mr. Elliott, to enter on the negociations on the ſame footing as you had inſtructed Mr. Elliott, and having concluded a treaty on thoſe grounds, to communicate the ſame to you.

The objects to be attained by this negociation depend on a mutual agreement of ſentiments; you will learn further particulars from the Maha Rajah's letters; what I have written you will regard as dictated by zeal and attachment.

From Beneram Pundit: Received 12th November 1778.

I have already addreſſed ſeveral ſucceſſive Arzies to you, which I hope you have received. Agreeable to your directions, I took leave of Colonel Leſlie, and reached Naigpore on the 22d Thabaun, 14th of September, where I had the honour to caſt myſelf at the feet of my maſter, and the pleaſure of a meeting with Dewan Dewagur Pundit.

I had a long converſation with my maſter and his Dewan on the ſubject of your virtues, and your earneſt deſire to enter into the ſtricteſt ties of friendſhip and intimacy with him, on which I dwelt very largely: my maſter expreſſed the greateſt joy, and his heart entertains no ſentiment but of the warmeſt regard towards you, and deſires to cement your friendſhip, the means of which he is conſtantly contriving; may God eſtabliſh this connexion, fraught with happineſs to mankind, on a baſis equally ſtrong as the wall of Alexander, that it may remain throughout all future generations: Whilſt we were in expectation of the arrival of Mr. Elliott, the inſtability of fortune, which is conſtantly producing ſome change in the face of affairs, brought about an event ſo melancholy as to effect the hearts of all well-wiſhers in the moſt ſenſible manner: May the Almighty preſerve your auſpicious influence over us to the end of time.

The Maha Rajah was greatly grieved at this diſtreſsful circumſtance, and made much lamentation. Your Excellency will be further informed of theſe particulars, by my brother Biſſemba Pundit.

The fame of the ſtrict connexion and intimate friendſhip between you and the Maha Rajah has been every where ſpread, and has convinced Pundit Purdhaun Peiſhwa and the Nabob Nizam ul Mulk, that in contracting ſuch a friendſhip, you have the moſt extenſive views; which apprehenſion has filled them with diſmay; it is therefore expedient, that you labour to confirm this belief, which is fraught with advantages to both States. The Maha Rajah regards the friends and enemies of your Government as his own, and repeatedly is heard to declare, that whoever oppoſes your Circar is his foe, and whoever is loyal to him will promote the welfare of it; of the truth of this, your own diſpoſition will furniſh you with ſufficient proof. As the Chiefs and people of the preſent time are full of ſuſpicion, they make every circumſtance a plea for exciting commotions; thus Coſſids with letters from you to the Maha Rajah are apprehended in the way in the diſtrict of Purna by the people of the Rajah of that diſtrict, who murdered them and ſent the letters to Pundit Purdhaun Peiſhwa which has excited hoſtile deſigns in them.

The rains being now at an end, and the ſeaſon of action arrived, be pleaſed to return an immediate anſwer to the Maha Rajah's letters, which fully explain all matters, that the opportunity which now preſents itſelf may not be loſt. I have been for ſome time afflicted with a fever occaſioned by the change of climate, but by the bleſſing of God, and your Excellency's, and my maſter's favours, I ſhall ſpeedily recover.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, 16th November 1778.

Letter from Colonel Goddard to Mr. Haſtings.

Sir,

In conſequence of the arrival of Balajee's Vackeel in camp, which I informed you of in my laſt letter, I have the pleaſure to communicate to you my expectation of eſtabliſhing terms of amity with this Maratta Chief, without having recourſe to the force of arms. The ſentiments he has expreſſed are perfectly correſpondent with my preſent inclinations for peace; and the only requeſt he has made is, that I will alter the intended route of paſſing through Saajur, which from every information appears to be my direct road; and he will conduct me through his country by another route. The motives he urges for ſoliciting this are ſuch as reaſon and juſtice would in general approve, and ſeems particularly directed by policy at this time, when I am anxious of removing every obſtacle, however ſmall, to the grand object I hold conſtantly in ſight, of reaching Berar. He has repreſented to me, that Saagur is the capital of his country, and a very flouriſhing city, which will be totally deſerted upon the approach of the army; and as the route he has pointed out to me will not make a difference of more than ſix or ſeven coſs, I have conſented to march by it, as a proof of my friendly intentions of the Engliſh, and their wiſhes to preſerve the country and inhabitants from ruin and violation. I have advanced two days upon this road, and am within three ſhort days march of Maltoun, a conſiderable place belonging to Balajee, after which I hope ſhortly to be at Gunge Beſandat, where I fall in with the road that will lead me towards the Huſſienalad Gaut, upon the Nerbudda. It is with pleaſure I now aſſure you of the proſpect I have of moving briſkly forward. I have a fine open country before me, in compariſon to the mountainous broken one I have paſſed; and as the cold ſeaſon is fully ſetting in, the number of ſick in the detachment, which at this change of ſeaſon, as you well know, uſed to be very numerous, will decreaſe daily. By a letter received laſt night from Madajee, I underſtand ſome diſpatches are arrived from Calcutta, which he has promiſed to forward immediately; and I expect to receive them to-morrow or next day. This circumſtance leads me to imagine, that the Board have been miſinformed reſpecting the ſituation of the detachment, and are of opinion that it is advanced nearer the place of its deſtination than it really is. Allow me to expreſs the extreme anxiety I ſhall feel till I hear from yourſelf. I do not need any incitement to call forth my every exertion on the occaſion this ſervice may preſent me; yet I cannot but anticipate the ſuperior ſatisfaction and ſpirit your letter will infuſe into me. As I am now moving faſt to the ſouthward, it will I think, become neceſſary to eſtabliſh ſome other communication than that by Benares, which will be attended with conſiderable delay: I therefore hope you will intimate to me your intentions on this head; and from the intelligence I can obtain, I beg leave to mention it may be eaſily done by Chuta, Naugpore, and Rutterpore, to Berar.

I am, &c.

N° 153.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, 16th November 1778.

The following propoſitions from the Governor General, and the draft of a letter to the Captain General at Goa, were circulated with the above letters.

Governor General—As it appears from the preceding letters that Colonel Goddard was likely to conduct the detachment very ſpeedily to the borders of Berar, and that Moodajee Booſla was both willing, and propoſed to join his aſſiſtance in its operations, and as the ſeaſon of the year will not admit of longer delays, but require ſpeedy deciſion and action,

The Governor General moves, That Mr. Farquhar may be directed to deliver over all the public papers, which were in his charge of the late Mr. Elliott, to Colonel Goddard, and that Colonel Goddard may be directed to carry into execution the inſtructions given to Mr. Elliott, and to negociate and conclude a treaty with the Rajah of Berar, in like manner, and with the ſame powers as if thoſe inſtructions had been originally given to him in charge. Appendix. No. 153.

That letters be written to the Select Committees of Fort Saint George and Bombay, and to the Reſident at Poonah, adviſing them of this commiſſion, and requiring their conformity to it, in the terms of the letters written on the like occaſion, on the appointment of Mr. Elliott to the ſame truſt, and by the Governor General to the Rajah of Berar, to the ſame effect.

The Governor General alſo recommends, that a letter be written to the Captain General of Goa, conformable to the accompanying draft.

The Governor General, ſince writing the above, having received letters from Captain Campbell and Lieut. Anderſon, which he herewith ſubmits to the peruſal of the Board, mentioning the death of Mr Farquhar, the late Mr. Elliott's ſecretary, he recommends that the order propoſed for Mr. Farquhar be directed to Captain Campbell, in whoſe charge it appears that Mr. Elliott's effects remain; and in the caſe of his death to Mr. Anderſon.

I reſerve my opinion on the Governor General's propoſitions till the meeting of the Board.

(Signed) Philip Francis.

I agree to the Governor General's propoſitions.

Mr. Francis delivers in the following minute on this ſubject: 16th Nov.

Colonel Goddard's letter of the 22d October is a private one to Mr. Haſtings, therefore ſtrictly and regularly no authority of itſelf to this Board, to which he ought to have addreſſed himſelf on every one of the points which he has thought fit to communicate ſolely to the Governor. Suppoſing any meaſures which the Board may take in conſequence of the information contained in this letter, may hereafter fail, I much queſtion we ſhould be warranted in appealing to it againſt Colonel Goddard; for this reaſon, and becauſe the terms he makes uſe of evidently imply an opinion, that the Governor General poſſeſſes an authority independent and excluſive of the Council, I object to our receiving it as an authentic and official communication, on which the meaſures of Government can be ſafely founded; and in this place I deem it incumbent on me to declare once for all, that I object to and proteſt againſt all private correſpondence between the Governor General and commanding officer of the Company's troops, ſo far forth as ſuch correſpondence may contain orders, inſtructions, or intelligence, which ought to proceed from or be communicated to the Governor General and Council collectively, and not otherwiſe: the practiſe can anſwer no good purpoſe, and is liable to many inconveniences; it is againſt law, and in a former inſtance has been ſolemnly condemned by the Court of Directors. Suppoſing theſe objections to be over-ruled, as I conclude they will be, I proceed to conſider the letters as they ſtand, with the propoſitions founded upon them.

It appears to me, that the reaſons aſſigned by Colonel Goddard for departing from the high road to Sagier are very unſatisfactory, and I muſt own I am ſorry to ſee that almoſt the firſt ſtep he takes after the command is entruſted to him, ſhould be liable to exception. Balajee Pundit is the man to whoſe artifices and enmity almoſt all the difficulties and oppoſition which Colonel Leſlie met with have been conſtantly aſcribed; our records are filled with proofs of his perfidious and hoſtile diſpoſition towards us: yet the moment Colonel

Colonel Goddard enters his country, he finds means to perſuade him that reaſon, juſtice, and good policy, ſhould oblige him to quit the direct road to Sagier, for fear of diſtreſſing his capital. In my opinion, Balajee Pundit deſerved no ſuch lenity and compliance from the commander of our army. If the expedition itſelf is to be juſtified, I apprehend that reaſon, juſtice, and good policy, ſhould have induced Colonel Goddard to treat this man with ſome degree of ſeverity, as a warning to others; at all events, his following a route pointed out to him by ſo ſuſpicious a guide is not to be juſtified. It appears by Mr. Anderſon's letter, "that the whole of "the country, nominally ſubject to the Rajah Beembajee, "though in point of extent little inferior to that of his "brother, is yet by ruinous management ſo entirely de-"populated, that it ſcarcely yields him a revenue ſuffi-"cient for the maintenance of his forces, which do not "exceed 2,000 horſe and foot." Our information with reſpect to the internal ſtate of Berar, and the ſtrength and reſources of its ſovereign, is ſo imperfect, that excluſive of all other objections, I ſhould think it very hazardous on this account, to enter into any alliance with him: his brother, with an equal extent of country, ſeems to be little better than a beggar; and I do not know that there is any direct evidence before this Board to induce us to believe that Moodajee Booſla himſelf poſſeſſes much greater ſtrength or reſources, or that his country is much better governed than that of Beembajee.

Dewagur Pundit, in his letter received on the 12th inſtant, ſays, "that the fame of the ſtrict connexion and "intimate friendſhip between the Governor General "and Moodajee Booſla has been every where ſpread, and "has convinced Pundit Purdhaun Peiſhwa and the Nabob "Nizam ul Mulck, that in contracting ſuch a friendſhip "the Governor has the moſt extenſive views; which "apprehenſion has filled them with diſmay." In my opinion, their ideas of the views of this Government is not ill-founded; and as it muſt naturally excite in them the utmoſt alarm for their ſafety, it cannot but ſuggeſt to them the neceſſity of uniting in their mutual defence, and of engaging all the other Powers of India to join with them in oppoſing ſuch views, and to conſider the Engliſh as the common enemy of them all. A general war in India I think muſt inevitably be the conſequence; and this war muſt on our part be ſupported at an immenſe diſtance from our own frontier, at the commencement of a rupture with France, and with the apprehenſion of an invaſion hanging over us. Whatever may be the event of a war maintained under ſuch circumſtances, it deſerves to be ſeriouſly conſidered whether any degree of ſucceſs can compenſate to the Company for the immoderate expence with which it muſt be attended. We are precluded from making further acquiſitions of territory; and if we were not, I ſee nothing that victory and conqueſt can produce, but immediate and certain diſburſements, with a very uncertain proſpect of payment in reverſion.

The propoſed alliance with Moodajee Booſla, whenever it ſhall be accompliſhed, will amount to a declaration of war with the Nizam of the Decan. On what principle ſuch a ſtep can be juſtified, I do not know; much leſs how it can be reconciled with the Company's fundamental policy of ſupporting that Prince againſt the Marattas. In their letter of 30th June 1769, to the Preſidency of Fort Saint George, "they conſider the Nizam as one of "the few remaining Chiefs who are yet capable of coping "with the Marattas;" and expreſsly add, "that it is "the Company's true intereſt to preſerve a good under-"ſtanding with him." I conclude, for my own part, that as ſoon as he ſhall hear of the terms of our alliance with Moodajee Booſla, he will unite his forces with thoſe of the Poonah Government, and make an irruption into the Carnatic.

Waving all former objections to the meaſure which the Governor General now preſumes to reſume, I object to it on the ground of the ſteps which this Government itſelf has taken, ſince the intended negociation was put a ſtop to on Mr. Elliott's death. On the 7th of October we inſtructed the commanding officer to obey the orders of the Preſidency of Bombay, whom we at the ſame time informed, that if their plan of the 25th July ſtill ſubſiſted, or if they ſhould have formed any other plan or deſign for the reſtoration of Ragoba, which ſhould require the aſſiſtance of the detachment, they might command it to advance. In their letter of the 11th September, they tell us they ſhall now very ſpeedily come to ſome deciſive reſolutions, and adviſe us immediately of the reſult: it is to be preſumed therefore, that when they find the detachment ſtill under their command, and that they are ſo expreſsly authorized by us to employ it in the ſervice of Ragoba, their deciſion will ſoon follow, and their meaſures be taken accordingly. In that caſe, and ſuppoſing the treaty with Moodajee Booſla to be concluded on the principles of Mr. Elliott's inſtructions, the faith of the Company may be engaged on one ſide to Ragoba, on the other to Moodajee Booſla, to ſupport each of them in their pretenſions reſpectively to the ſovereignty of the Maratta State. The commanding officer, in the mean time, is left to chuſe between contradictory inſtructions, and to determine for himſelf what authority he ſhall ſubmit to, and what orders he ſhall obey.

If, notwithſtanding theſe conſiderations, which to me appear to deſerve the moſt ſerious attention, it ſhould be determined to reſume the negociation with Moodajee Booſla, I muſt object to our committing the conduct of it to Colonel Goddard; firſt, becauſe the buſineſs itſelf is of a moſt delicate nature, requiring peculiar talents and information, which the Governor does not repreſent Colonel Goddard to poſſeſs. On this principle at leaſt the choice of Mr. Elliott, to whoſe abilities I have been at all times ready to do juſtice, was particularly recommended: independent of the Governor's perſonal confidence in that gentleman, he was ſaid to have an intimate knowledge of the "political ſtate of this Government, "in relation to the other Powers of the country." It does not derogate from Colonel Goddard's merit to ſay that his qualifications are not of this nature.

Secondly, becauſe I preſume that Colonel Goddard's care and attention will be ingroſſed by the military duties of his ſtation; and that our loading him with an employment ſo foreign from the line of his experience and profeſſion, can only tend to embarraſs and diſtreſs him.

For theſe and other reaſons, I object to and proteſt againſt the motion.

With reſpect to the letter to the Governor of Goa, I am of opinion that the facts from which our application ariſes are purely imaginary. The ſuppoſed alliance between the Poonah Government and the French, on which ſo much ſtreſs has been laid for near a twelvemonth paſt, and from which ſo many important inferences have been deduced, has yet produced no one viſible effect whatſoever: for my own part, I do not believe that ſuch an union exiſts; but if it does, I cannot but deem it in the higheſt degree improbable, that a Governor of Goa would venture to permit a French army to land there, without expreſs orders from his Court. If he has ſuch orders, our letter to him avails nothing: if not, he muſt do it at the hazard of his head. At all events, I think, that conſidering the reſpective rank of this Government and that of Goa, the ſtyle of the propoſed letter is much too earneſt and ſuppliant. I know the Portugueſe, and can affirm with certainty, that this is not the way to treat with them. If the danger were really ſuch as the Governor General apprehends, another kind of language might produce a good effect.

(Signed) P. Francis.

Mr. Wheler delivers in the following opinion: I ſubſcribe generally to the ſentiments and opinions expreſſed in Mr. Francis's minute, and particularly to that part of it which proteſts againſt all private correſpondence between the Governor General and the commanding officer being received as authentic and official information, ſo far as ſuch correſpondence may contain orders, inſtructions, or intelligence, which ought to proceed from, or be communicated to the Governor General and Council collectively, and not otherwiſe.

(Signed) E. Wheler.

The Governor General's propoſitions being agreed to by a majority of the Board, Reſolved, That the following letters be written to Colonel Goddard, and to the Select Committee at Bombay:

Sir,

The unfortunate death of Mr. Elliott having deprived us of his ſervices in the execution of the commiſſion with which he was entruſted, and Moodajee Booſla, the Rajah of Berar, by his letters on the occaſion to this Government, having expreſſed his earneſt deſire that ſome perſon may be immediately empowered to ſettle terms on which the alliance with the Company, which he ſeems ſo anxious to form, ſhould be concluded, we have thought it expedient to purſue our intention of opening a negociation with him for that purpoſe; and we are induced, by the confidence we repoſe in your ability, integrity, and zeal for the intereſt of the Company's affairs, to charge you with the execution of it; we have therefore directed Captain William Campbell, into whoſe hands the public diſpatches and credentials of the late Mr. Elliott have fallen by the death of Mr. Farquhar his aſſiſtant, or Lieutenant Anderſon, in caſe of Captain Campbell's death, to deliver up thoſe documents to you; and we hereby direct and authorize you to carry into execution the inſtructions which we had given to Mr. Elliott; you will therefore negociate and conclude a treaty of alliance with Moodajee Booſla, in behalf of the Company, in like manner, and with the ſame powers as if thoſe inſtructions had been originally directed and given in charge to yourſelf.

We are, &c.

Gentlemen,

We have already made you acquainted with the unfortunate event of Mr. Elliott's death, and the reaſons of our delaying to take any further meaſures reſpecting his appointment, until we ſhould hear from Berar. The Rajah has now written us, expreſſing his ſincere concern for the loſs of Mr. Elliott, and earneſtly deſiring that ſome other perſon may be immediately empowered to ſettle the terms on which the alliance with the Company, which he ſeems ſo anxious to form, ſhould be concluded; we have therefore thought it expedient to purſue our intention of entering into ſuch an alliance, and have appointed Colonel Goddard, on whoſe ability and zeal we depend, to execute the negociation committed to the late Mr. Elliott; we requeſt that you will correſpond with him on any ſubject which may be material for his information therein, agreeably to our former deſire on the occaſion of Mr. Elliott's appointment.

It being no longer neceſſary to withhold the inſtructions prepared for Mr. Elliott, and now directed to Colonel Goddard, from our records, we have ordered them to be entered, and herewith encloſe a copy for your information.

We are, &c.

To Modajee Bhooſila. To be delivered by Colonel Goddard. Written 18th October.

I have already informed you of the removal of Colonel Leſlie, and the appointment of Colonel Goddard to the command of the detachment of Engliſh forces on their march to Bombay. Colonel Goddard being an officer in whoſe abilities I have the higheſt confidence, and for whom I entertain the greateſt eſteem, I hope that you will favour him with your confidence and regard. He will have the pleaſure to deliver you this letter; and I requeſt that you will freely communicate with him on the meaſures taken for our common intereſt. Knowing me, &c.

To Beneram Pundit: Written 27th October.

I have very fully communicated to Colonel Goddard, who has ſucceeded Colonel Leſlie in the command of the Engliſh detachment, my views with reſpect to the operations of the detachment, and to the connection with the Maha Rajah your maſter. On Colonel Goddard I have the moſt implicit confidence, and am ſure that his conduct will be ſuch as to merit, not only mine, but the Maha Rajah's regard. You are well acquainted with his character; that he is a gentleman of the moſt liberal ſentiments, and conciliatory diſpoſition, and will repreſent him in this light to the Maha Rajah and his Dewan Dewagur Pundit, and introduce a friendly and confidential communication between them.

As it was impoſſible for me by letters ſo fully to explain myſelf to Colonel Goddard as I could have wiſhed, I have referred him to you, who from former converſations we have had together on theſe ſubjects, are intimately acquainted with all my views in ſending the detachment, and in the cloſe connection I am deſirous of forming with your maſter, for more particular information; this I requeſt you will give him, and will conſult with him on the meaſures proper to be taken, exerting all your intereſt with your maſter and his Dewan to give them effect. On your wiſdom and ſteady attachment to your maſter, which includes in it an attachment to the Company, his intereſt being ſo cloſely united with theirs, I rely for the ſucceſsful iſſue of my deſigns, which are calculated to promote our common advantages.

To Moodajee Bhooſila: Written 23d November.

After acknowledging the receipt of his laſt letter, and recapitulating the contents of it:

To this time I choſe to wait for the ſure knowledge of your ſentiments, though in my own mind I was perſuaded that they were exactly conformable to my own, before I ventured to fix the ultimate deſtination of the army. Your letter has ſatisfied me; and in the firm aſſurance that a connection ſo well cemented, an union of two States ſo powerful, and ſo fortunate a concurrence of time and circumſtances as the preſent, muſt, with the bleſſing of God, which ever attends meaſures concerted with prudence, and founded on juſtice, be productive of ſucceſs. I have ſent orders to Colonel Goddard to propoſe to you the conditions of a treaty between your State and that of the Engliſh Company, and a plan of operations to be undertaken by your forces and ours under his command, in conjunction, both founded on the inſtructions delivered to my late valuable friend Mr. Elliott, and he has been inveſted by me and the Council compoſing this Government with full powers for theſe purpoſes. You have now in your hands the means of binding the intereſts of your family with thoſe of the Engliſh Company by the ties of a perpetual alliance, and of exalting your name above thoſe of the moſt renowned warriors and chiefs of Hindoſtan and Decan. Seize the occaſion which God and fortune, which is but the chain of events produced by the natural effect of his prudence, have placed within your reach; and know, that gifts borne on the wings of time, paſs forward, and if neglected never return. To ſay more would imply a diſtruſt of your wiſdom and fortitude, of which, were I not aſſured, I would not adventure the concerns of my nation with yours in ſo great an undertaking.

To Dewagur Pundit: D°.

Containing the whole ſubſtance of the foregoing letter with the following addition:

In the whole of my conduct I have departed from the common line of policy, and have made advances where others in my ſituation would have waited for ſolicitation, as the greateſt advantages to which I can look cannot in their nature equal thoſe to which the proſperous iſſue of our meaſures may conduct the ſtate of the Maha Rajah's Government. But I know the character to which I addreſs dreſs myſelf. I truſt to the approved bravery and ſpirit of your Chief, that he will ardently catch at the objects preſented to his ambition, and to your wiſdom, of which, if fame reports truly, no Miniſter ever poſſeſſed a larger portion: that you will view their importance in too clear a light to hazard the loſs of them by attempting to take an advantage of the deſire which I have expreſſed for their accompliſhment. This intimation is not ſo much intended for a caution to you, as for an explanation of my conduct to thoſe who may be leſs able to penetrate the grounds of it.

APPENDIX, No. 154.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 30th November 1778.

PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident;

Richard Barwell, Philip Francis, Edward Wheler, } Eſquires.

RECEIVED the following letters from Mr. Lewis, Aſſiſtant to the Reſident at Poonah:

My laſt reſpects were dated 27th ultimo. Having received information that the Durbar had received ſeveral letters from Pondicherry, I employed a perſon to procure me copies of them, which he accordingly effected; but they being written in Perſian, and I having no perſon here who can tranſlate them, I am under the neceſſity of forwarding the Perſian copies to you.

Hurry Punt having, by partial payments, in ſome ſhape ſatisfied the principal officers of his late army, the Durbar I hear have determined on ſending him again to oppoſe Hyder in the Carnatic.

I am, &c.

(Signed) W. Lewis.

Copy of a Letter from the Chief of Pondicherry to the Peiſhwa.

Your gracious letter expreſſive of friendſhip, together with letters from Nanah Purnaveſe and Hurry Pundit, on the ſubject of the quarrel with the Engliſh, and of aid and aſſiſtance of money, troops, &c. honoured me by its arrival, and afforded me inexpreſſible pleaſure. Accordingly, agreeable to your orders, I am prepared to exert myſelf in the manner you point out, and to fulfil your pleaſure.

You will be fully informed of every particular from my letters to Nanah Purnaveſe and Hurry Pundit.

Copy of a Letter from the Chief of Pondicherry to Nanah Purnaveſe.

Your friendly letter on the ſubject of a war with the Engliſh nation, and aſſiſtance of money and troops to be afforded by Seremunt Sahib, and the eſtabliſhment of a factory at Poonah after the buſineſs of the Engliſh is brought to a concluſion, arrived, together with a letter from Seremunt Sahib, in a happy hour, and greatly honoured me.

Agreeably to what you write, in which you propoſe terms advantageous to me, which I delay to reply particularly to, till a fit opportunity, I proceed to ſuch points as are immmediately neceſſary.

In the firſt place, you write that the Engliſh are very unfaithful to their engagements, quarrelſome, and the fomenters of diſturbances; and that the principal actor in theſe diſturbances is Moſtyn, the Vackeel of the ſettlement of Bombay, who laid the foundation of the quarrel with the Engliſh. You ſecondly write, that they have ſet up and eſpouſed the cauſe of Dada Ragonaut Row Jeo, and neither have left nor do leave any act of malice unperformed: that if I will engage warmly in the buſineſs, you will ſhortly cauſe twenty lacks of rupees to be granted me from Seremunt's Circar; and that when I come againſt Bombay, you will ſend twenty lacks of rupees, and ten ſhips filled with your Sepoys to my aſſiſtance.

Thanks to God, I have lately, agreeable to Seremunt's orders and your inclination, entered upon this buſineſs, and neglect no means of proſecuting the war; and every day produces the moſt furious attacks upon the Engliſh army who are come before Pondicherry. A ſmart cannonade is kept up on both ſides, of which the Hircarrahs of the Circar are eye-witneſſes; and that we have deſtroyed three Engliſh grabs, and, by the bleſſing of God, ſhall deſtroy four ſhips which they have at anchor in deep water. It is neceſſary that you adhere faithfully to your treaty, and conſider me arrived at Bombay the inſtant we have put an end to the conteſt here.

Extract of a Letter from the Governor General and Council in Bengal, to the Court of Directors, dated 30th November 1778.

Secret Department.

Par. 10. The very dilatory proceeding of Colonel Leſlie in his march towards Berar, notwithſtanding our repeated orders to him on that ſubject, and his direct violation of our inſtructions by pledging the faith of the Company to a treaty of perpetual friendſhip with the Rajahs Gomaun and Comaun Sing, a copy whereof tranſmitted by him to the Governor General was communicated to the Board, made it, as we judged, incumbent on us to remove him from his ſtation, and to promote Lieutenant Colonel Goddard, the next ſenior officer, to the chief command of the troops. This reſolution paſſed in conſultation the 12th October; and on the 22d we heard of Colonel Leſlie's death, after a ſhort illneſs of four or five days. Colonel Goddard, who on that event aſſumed the command before the arrival of our appointment, moved from Raji Ghur, where the detachment was then encamped, in two days time, and to our ſatisfaction has ſince made a great progreſs in his way to the place of his deſtination.

11. In the laſt letter from Colonel Leſlie to the Board, which he was too ill to put his name to, a pointed reference was made to his correſpondence with the Governor General, for a full account of his proceedings: the Governor General has in conſequence laid the ſame before us, and we have cauſed ſuch parts of the letters as have any relation to public matters, to be tranſcribed for your information. A copy of them is entered after the conſultation noted in the margin. 2 Nov.

12. The importance of the command entruſted to Lieutenant Colonel Goddard, our confidence in his experience and abilities as an officer, and the length of his ſervices to the Company, have induced us to give him the local and temporary rank of Colonel during the expedition on which he is employed; and care has been taken to declare that this is not to prejudice the rights of two Lieutenant Colonels, his ſeniors in the ſervice.

13. The freſh inſtructions we gave to Colonel Goddard on his appointment, were to proſecute his march immediately towards Bombay, if on his arrival at Berar the Rajah ſhould agree to join him with a ſufficient force, to enable him to do it with ſecurity and effect; but if the Rajah ſhould refuſe or decline his aid on this occaſion, we left it to the Colonel's diſcretion to purſue his route or to ſuſpend his operations, unleſs he ſhould receive poſitive orders for his guidance from the Preſidency of Bombay.

14. We gave notice at the ſame time of this licence to the Preſident and Council of Bombay, authorizing them to order the advance of the troops at all events, if their original plan for the reſtoration of Ragoba, or any other plan, conſiſtent with the terms on which we expreſſed our approval of that meaſure, ſhould ſtill ſubſiſt, or that they judged the preſence of ſuch a force immediately and indiſpenſably neceſſary for the defence of Bombay againſt a French invaſion; but in all other caſes, to leave it to act under our orders.

15. We did not at this time intend to depute any other perſon to execute the commiſſion entruſted to the late Mr. Elliott, until we ſhould hear from the Rajah of Berar, who would, we concluded, be more earneſt to bring about an alliance, in conſequence of the accident which had fruſtrated our endeavours; and might probably either depute a Vackeel immediately to us himſelf, or propoſe terms of alliance advantageous to the Company's intereſts.

16. On the news of Mr. Elliott's death, the Rajah wrote a letter of condolance, and preſſed us in ſtrong terms to ſupply his place immediately; recommending that Mr. Farquhar, whom he had taken as an aſſiſtant, might be empowered to execute his commiſſion, that the connection intended to have been formed between us might not be dropped. He even related a circumſtance, which proves, in our opinion, that he is ſincere in his profeſſions: A letter written to him from this Government, on the occaſion of Mr. Elliott's appointment, happened to be intercepted in Bundelcund, and immediately tranſmitted to Poonah; that Durbar and Nizam Ally being in this manner apprized of its contents, immediately wrote to demand the real intentions of Moodajee reſpecting us, and obliged him in conſequence, as he informs us, to declare himſelf the firm friend of the Engliſh, and that their enemies were his enemies. Thus he is neceſſarily obliged to place ſome reliance on our attachment and ſupport.

17. On receipt of the above letter, we thought it adviſable to proſecute the plan of Mr. Elliott's deputation; and that no time might be loſt in carrying his inſtructions into effect, we ordered them to be delivered up to Colonel Goddard, whom we have charged with the performance of that important commiſſion.

18. This meaſure having rendered it improper, as we conceived, to leave a power veſted in the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay to fruſtrate the ſucceſs of the negociation, by ordering the troops to advance before any engagements could be finally concluded, as they had dropped the plan for the accompliſhment of which the troops were originally intended, and as their orders might in other reſpects claſh with our meaſures, we thought it proper to revoke the authority conveyed to them by our letter of the 15th October, and have reſerved to ourſelves the ſole right of directing the future operations of Colonel Goddard. A curſory account of theſe tranſactions is all we pretend to give you in a general letter; for a more particular detail of them we muſt refer you to our conſultations noted in the margin.

19. The ſtate of our advices from Bombay and Poonah, at the date of our laſt diſpatches, will be found particularly given in the accompanying duplicate of our letter of the 17th Auguſt. We have ſince been informed, that Moraba Furneſe, the late Miniſter, and Burhaba Proonder, a Chief warmly attached to his intereſt, had been ſeized by the prevailing party, of whom Nanah Furneſe is nominally the head, and thrown into confinement: the Government nevertheleſs remained ſtill in confuſion, from the ambitious views of the different perſons compoſing it, and the hoſtile advances made by Hyder Ally, which they were preparing to repel. Succaram Baboo had been declared ſuperannuated by Nanah Furneſe, and compelled to give up his offices, and retire to his own houſe, on which guards were placed to keep a watch on his actions.

20. Mr. Lewis writes, under date the 27th October, that he had ſent away his Sepoys, and was in hourly expectation of being recalled himſelf, as the Governor of Bombay wrote to him, that the Secret Committee had determined to act againſt the Poonah Durbar.

21. Mr. Lewis has obtained copies of letters ſaid to have been written by the Governor of Pondicherry to the Peiſhwa and his Miniſters, which we think it our duty to tranſmit tranſlations of, although we have no grounds either to credit or doubt the authenticity of them. Appendix No. 155.

22. Judging the ſervices of the Commander in Chief more neceſſary in the Nabob's dominions, for making a proper diſpoſition of the Company's forces there, in order to protect the weſtern frontier, than at the Preſidency, where a complete diſpoſition has already been formed, we directed General Stibbert to repair immediately to that quarter.

We have the honour to be,
Honourable Sirs,
Your moſt faithful humble Servants,
Warren Haſtings,
Richd Barwell,
P. Francis,
Edwd Wheler.

Fort William,
30th November 1778.

APPENDIX, No. 155.

From Siccaram Pundit; received 5th December 1778.

I HAVE been favoured with your letter, intimating your having received repeated and certain intelligence of the arrival of a French gentleman at Poonah, the grant of a place to him in the neighbourhood of Bombay, and the formation of a friendſhip with him. Your ſurprize at ſuch meaſures, which are inconſiſtent with the treaty of ſtrict friendſhip contracted between the two States (a friendſhip fraught with mutual advantages) and carry the appearance of a diſinclination in this Government to friendſhip. Such acts are a breach of the treaty, and oppoſite to the duties of friendſhip and alliance. That the foundations of the treaty are laid on this baſis, that the friends and enemies of each State ſhould be common to the other; and that a conduct in oppoſition thereto could never be reconciled to the rights of friendſhip, and was highly improper.

My friend! in the terms of the treaty, there is no room for deviation, nor ſhall they ever be diſregarded on our part; and my friendly heart aſſures me, that you on your part will always keep this treaty preſent in your mind; regarding our friends and enemies as common. I had, before the arrival of your letter on the 18th of Summadee Ulawul (25th June 1777) cauſed the French Chief to be diſmiſſed from the preſence of my maſter, Shemund Row Pundit Purdham Peſhwa Sahib; but he afterwards continued ſome time at Poonah, to provide for the tranſportation of his baggage, which being effected, he quitted Poonah the 6th Jummadee Aſſanee (12th July 1777.)

You write with the pen of friendſhip, that our views and intereſts are the ſame. It is true that I regard the preſervation of the friendſhip of the Engliſh Company and King of England as really incumbent; but the Governor and Council of Bombay have not fulfilled one article of the treaty: they have to the preſent time given an aſylum to Seremunt Ragonaut Row, and excited diſturbances and commotions in the dominions of my maſter, Seremunt Sahib.

As Tocojee Row Holcar, Madajee Row Sindia, and other powerful Chiefs, have conceived aſtoniſhment and doubts with reſpect to the propriety of your conduct and good intentions, and the Governor and Council of Bombay will not ſettle the affair of the three lacks of rupees with the Circar, nor reſtore Chickley, &c. places ceded by Futtah Sing Row, with the collections made therein; and Thomas Moſtyn, the Vackeel of the Governor of Bombay, who came here to ſettle the matters in debate, incited by enmity and hatred, has openly declared that he has no orders from the Governor of Bombay to bring the diſputes to a concluſion (copy of an extract of a letter of his is incloſed, Lalla Sereck Ram will preſent it for your peruſal) and it is the uſual conduct of the Chiefs to contract engagements at one time, which they will not afterwards abide by; if in conſequence I ſhould give

give Thomas Moſtyn his diſmiſſion, it will excite your diſpleaſure.

Whilſt Colonel Upton remained here, all matters were ſettled; but from the day of his departure, every matter has been kept under the veil of procraſtination and ſuſpenſe.

God only knows what accuſations Thomas Moſtyn may write to you and the Governor of Bombay; but I conceive from this, that the Governor of Bombay in his heart wiſhes a breach in the ſettlement made and friendſhip contracted between the two States.

At the time the treaty was formed with Colonel Upton, he was told that he ſhould ſend for a perſon of credit on the part of the Governor of Bombay, and execute the treaty in his preſence; to which he made anſwer, "The "Supreme Council of Calcutta have from the King of "England authority over all the ſettlements: the acts of "the Supreme Court are valid; no one has power to "violate their orders."

The event has been, that, notwithſtanding your expreſs orders to the Governor of Bombay, forbidding him to give Seramunt Dada Sahib an aſylum in the territories of the Engliſh Company, and directing him to conclude the affair of the country of three lacks of rupees in the manner ſtipulated in the treaty, and to reſtore the country ceded by Futty Sing Kaikwar, with the collections made therein, and to obſerve a friendly and candid conduct towards me; yet no one ſymptom of attention to theſe orders has appeared in his conduct, but the very contrary of all this. Such being the caſe, induced by friendſhip, adopt the only mode left, by ſending a perſon in whom you may confide, who may in perſon remove the cauſes of diſpute on both ſides, and finally ſettle every matter, and give you entire ſatisfaction. On my part there ſhall be no kind of failure in or deviation from the duties of friendſhip. There is no candour to be expected from the Governor of Bombay; the remedy is in your hands.

Whoever may have written you that an engagement was contracted between me and the French Chief, and a place granted him by the Cirkar, in the neighbourhood of Bombay, it is neceſſary that you make the ſtricteſt inquiry into the matter, and bring that falſe writer, whoſe aſſertions were abſolute lies without the leaſt ſhadow of truth, to his deſerved puniſhment, to deter others by the example, from penning ſuch falſhoods, of which I am entirely innocent.

From Ballajee Pundit, of the ſame tenor and date.

Paper referred to in the above Letters, delivered by Lalla Seurik Ram.

Copy of an Extract of the purport of a Letter, in the Hindoo Language, written by Thomas Moſtyn, from Poonah, which you are to preſent on the part of the Peiſhwa, for the peruſal of Amaud-ul-Dowla Bahadre.

I have replied to Balajee Jenardar, his Highneſs's Miniſter, that I cannot come without an order from the Governor of Bombay; that the orders of my principal are neceſſary to enable me to come on buſineſs, and that I ſhall follow his directions.

Conſider the meaning of the above lines, and that if he makes ſuch pretences for not coming from Poonah to the fort of Poorunder, what can be effected with reſpect to the ſettlement of other matters?

From Siccaram Pundit: Received 7th December 1778.

At the time when ſome of the Company's Chiefs were engaged in diſputes and hoſtilities with the Chiefs of this Government, actuated by a wiſh to promote the good and happineſs of mankind in general, which ſuffered by thoſe troubles, you interpoſed your friendly mediation to remove the cauſe of complaint, and to put a ſtop to them, and deputed Colonel John Upton for this purpoſe, to the preſence of my maſter Seremunt Row Pundit Purdhaun Peiſhwa Sahib. At the time of the ratification of peace I objected to there being no perſon of rank and credit preſent on the part of the Governor of Bombay; to which the Colonel made anſwer, that the Governor and Supreme Council of Calcutta were inveſted with authority over all the ſettlements of the Engliſh Company, and that their acts were binding on the Chiefs of all the Engliſh ſettlements. On the faith of this declaration I made peace between this Government and the Company's Chiefs, and concluded a treaty; but the Governor of Bombay has, in every inſtance of his conduct ſince, excited troubles and commotions in violation of the ties of friendſhip; and notwithſtanding your expreſs orders to expel Seramunt Dada Sahib from the Engliſh Company's dominions, and to ſettle all points between the two States, in conformity to the treaty, he has performed nothing thereof; and an envoy from the King of France arriving here with a letter, intereſted perſons and inventors of falſhoods, conceiving it is a lucky opportunity to obtain credit to their lying reports, without examination or reflection, repreſented it to you in the manner beſt calculated to anſwer their malicious purpoſes. I call God to witneſs, that out of regard to the friendſhip and alliance of the Company and Engliſh Chiefs, I diſmiſſed the ſaid envoy, without negociating or even converſing with him. I have lately heard that ſome of your people have poſſeſſed themſelves of the fort of Calpee, which belongs to this Government. This meaſure is widely removed from the faith of the ſolemn treaty executed by the Engliſh.

When the Governor of Bombay in former times put on the maſk of friendſhip for the purpoſes of deceit, and aided the enemies of this Government, regarding you, Sir, as ſuperior to all other Chiefs, I made peace and friendſhip with you, and theſe are the fruits produced by this friendſhip.

You write, that the maintaining of friendſhip and ſtrict union between our reſpective States, is your reſolve. Is it in effect for the preſervation of friendſhip that you trouble the dominions of this Government? ſuch a mode of conduct is inconſiſtent with the maxims and uſages of high and illuſtrious Chiefs. It is mutually incumbent on us to preſerve inviolate the terms of the treaty. Should any deviations ariſe therein, they are the effects of the will, and diſpenſations of God. Farther particulars will be communicated Seila Sonrick Ram, the Government Vackeel. Let me conſtantly have the pleaſure to hear of your welfare.

From Balajee Pundit; of the ſame tenor and date as the foregoing.

From Madhorow Peiſhwa. Received 12th December 1778.

I have been favoured with your letter the 22d Summadee Aſſanie,) 17th July, intimating your determination to maintain the peace inviolable, and to adhere ſcrupulouſly to all the conditions of the treaty, and your having diſpatched an army for the reinforcement of the ſettlements of Bombay, and deſiring poſitive injunctions to all the dependants of my Government, to allow the troops a free paſſage, with other particulars; which I underſtand, and which afforded me great pleaſure.

As my friendly heart is ever deſirous of maintaining inviolate all the conditions of the treaty concluded between our States, and I am conſtantly attentive thereto, it is incumbent on you likewiſe to perſevere in the path of friendſhip. Our well-beloved Miniſters Sacaram Pundit and Ballajee Pundit have received orders to reply to every article of your letters; this they will do, and you will act agreeable thereto.

From Sacaram Pundit. Received the 12th of December 1778.

I have been favoured with your letter under date the 22d Summadee Aſanie (17th July) on the ſubject of the preſervation preſervation and increaſe of the friendſhip between the two States; and intimating, that it is your fixed reſolve to maintain every article of the treaty as long as it is adhered to by Row Pundit Purhaun; that the troops have been ſent ſolely for the reinforcement of the ſettlement of Bombay; and that the commanding officer has ſtrict injunctions to obſerve ſuch a conduct in every reſpect as is conſiſtent with the friendſhip ſubſiſting. That the ſeveral letters you have lately received from this quarter, meaning from me, contain a declaration to maintain the treaty and friendſhip between us; yet, that my having hitherto evaded your requeſt, to grant paſſes for the march of the troops through the Government dominions, cauſes you great aſtoniſhment; that if I ſtill refuſe to comply therewith, you are remedileſs, and the blame will fall on me. The letter containing the above, and other particulars, which I ſhall notice before I conclude, reached me on the 4th of Shabaun (28th Auguſt) and afforded me great pleaſure.

It is univerſally allowed that there is nothing more excellent in the world than friendſhip and harmony, which are bleſſings to mankind in general. The maintenance of every article of the treaty is equally incumbent on both parties. It is not ſtipulated in any article of the treaty, that either party may ſend forces through the dominions of the other, without conſulting him before hand, and cauſe trouble and diſtreſs to the people. To what rules of friendſhip can be attributed the ſtationing of garriſons in the forts, and making collections in the country of the other party. What has happened is then agreeable to the Engliſh faith. In proof of this aſſertion, be it obſerved, Colonel Leſlie, the commanding officer of the forces, has kept with him Seramunt Dada Sahib's Carkoon, and in conjunction with him collects money from the dominions of the Government by intimidating its ſubjects; this being the caſe, what becomes of your aſſurance before recited, that the treaty ſhould be ſcrupulouſly adhered to on your part, as long as it was maintained by my maſter Seremunt Peiſhwa Sahib, or what degree of credit can be given thereto?

From time immemorial, no forces of the maritime European nations have marched by land through the dominions of the Government, but the route of all the trading and European nations has been by the ocean; nor is it ſtipulated in the treaty that Engliſh detachments ſhall have a paſſage through the Government territories.

Reflect maturely on this, and then determine on whoſe ſide the blame reſts. That ſuch unlooked-for acts ſhould proceed from you, is matter of the higheſt aſtoniſhment, to think that mighty and powerful Chiefs ſhould act in direct oppoſition to the faith of their engagements. You are pleaſed to write, that if the Preſidency of Bombay ſhall ſtill continue to require the troops, you can in no caſe agree to recall them. The matter is briefly this:

At the time of the concluſion of the treaty, I made objections reſpecting the Preſidency of Bombay; to which Colonel John Upton made anſwer, "The King of England and the Engliſh Company have placed confidence "in the Supreme Council of Calcutta, and inveſted it "with authority over all the other ſettlements: the acts "of the Council of Calcutta are binding on the Go-"vernment of all the Company's ſettlements." Having given this aſſurance, he prepared the form of a treaty, ſuch as the critical ſituation of the times rendered neceſſary; and you tranſmitted me a treaty conformable thereto, under the ſeal of the Engliſh Company. It was from the beginning the earneſt wiſh of the Government of Bombay, that no friendly connexions ſhould be eſtabliſhed between the two States, and they have ever ſince been ſtriving to overſet it; and notwithſtanding the concluſion of the treaty, they kept Dada Sahib with them. How then was it to be expected that they ſhould recall their troops, which were diſturbing the peace of the Government dominions? It even appears to a conviction, that they perſuaded Dada Sahib to the meaſures he has purſued. How then does the ſupreme authority of the Council of Calcutta from the King of England appear, ſince the Chiefs of the different ſettlements do not regard engagements contracted by you, as binding on them, but make no ſcruple to break them; and you, paying no regard to your acts, take your meaſures on the repreſentation of the Government of Bombay? This is indeed aſtoniſhing to the higheſt degree. Appendix. No. 156.

It is the dictate of ſound policy that you withdraw your troops to your own territories; this will be a convincing proof of the ſincerity of your friendſhip, and will ſpread the fame of your good faith throughout the univerſe.

From the commencement of the authority of the family of the Peiſhwa, they have entered into treaties with many of the Chiefs both of the eaſt and weſt, and have never before experienced ſuch a want of faith from any one; nor ever, to the preſent time, deviated from their engagements, or been wanting to the duties of friendſhip and alliance. The blame reſts with you.

From Ballajee Pundit; of the ſame tenor and date.

APPENDIX, No. 156.

Bengal Secret Conſultations.

Letter from Beneram Pundit. Received 16th December 1778.

I HAVE already tranſmitted you two Arzies, accompanied by letters from the Maha Rajah and Dewan Dewagur Pundit, on the ſubject of the unfortunate death of Mr. Elliott, under charge of Coſſids; the one by the way of Cuttack, the other by that of Benares; all which I hope you have received, and become acquainted with their contents.

Pundit Purdhaun Peiſhwa, on the news of the late Mr. Elliott's deputation, ſent a Vackeel named Baboo Ram Bade, to the Maha Rajah, to obtain intelligence of what was going on. The ſaid Baboo Ram, in the preſence of Dewan Dewagur Pundit, has repeatedly, on the part of the Peiſhwa, talked to me of the breach of engagements, and obſtinately refuſed to liſten to conviction. Dewan Dewagur Pundit obſerved to him, had Mr. Elliott arrived, all matters would have been known. It is unneceſſary to dwell on notorious facts. The happy influence of the Engliſh fortune has at all times effected the ruin of their enemies, and will continue to do ſo in future. May the Almighty daily augment it.

It is a freſh proof of their good fortune, that on the 26th of Ramgaun, through the valour and magnanimity of the victorious Engliſh, the fort of Pondicherry was reduced, and the enemies of their State, to wit, the French Sirdars, all made priſoners. I ſincerely congratulate you on this happy event. The news of this victory has been conveyed hither by a letter from Mhad Ameen Khan to Vikar ul Dowlah; who, actuated by friendſhip, ſent the letter to Dewan Dewagur Pundit, who ſhewed it to me. All tongues are employed in ſounding the Engliſh praiſes, their power, and good fortune; which may God ſtill increaſe!

We wait impatiently for your reply to the former letters from hence, deſiring that a gentleman might be deputed in the room of the late Mr. Elliott. Biſſember Pundit will repreſent further particulars to you. The Maha Rajah and Dewagur Pundit are greatly rejoiced at the news of this victory. I have been ſo ill with a fever ever ſince I arrived at Naigpore, that I was for many days deprived of ſenſe. I am now, through your auſpicious influence, on the recovery, although ſtill very weak. In two or three days I hope to recover ſufficient ſtrength to attend the Durbar. Let not my illneſs cauſe you any uneaſineſs; for, by the bleſſing of God, every thing will go well.

APPENDIX, No. 157.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 7th December 1778.

PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident;

Richard Barwell, Philip Francis, Edward Wheler, } Eſquires.

THE Governor General having delivered the following minute, it was immediately circulated with drafts of letters to Bombay and Colonel Goddard.

Governor General—As the failure of the plan on which the detachment deſtined for Bombay was originally formed, renders it no longer neceſſary that it ſhould act under the orders of that Preſidency, and as theſe might eventually counteract and defeat the ends of the negociation lately given in charge to Colonel Goddard, I move, That the powers delegated to the Preſident and Select Committee at Bombay, in our letter of the 15th ultimo, be revoked, and that the commanding officer of the detachment be directed henceforth to obey only ſuch orders as he ſhall receive from us; and that the following letters to the Select Committee at Bombay, and to Colonel Goddard, be written accordingly.

To the Select Committee at Bombay.

Gentlemen,

In our letter of the 16th inſtant we informed you, that we had thought it proper to inveſt Colonel Goddard with full powers to conclude a treaty with Moodajee Booſla, Rajah of Berar, on the grounds of our inſtructions to the late Mr. Elliott, of which we encloſed a copy for your information. As the event of his negociation is likely to cauſe a very ſpeedy and eſſential change in the deſign and operations of the detachment, and as the plan which we have choſen to ſupply the place of that originally recommended by you, has rendered it neceſſary that we ſhould retain in our hands the means of effecting it, we hereby revoke the power which we gave you in our letter of the 15th ultimo, and ſhall direct the commanding officer of the detachment to obey only ſuch orders as he ſhall hereafter receive from us.

Although the circumſtances into which we have been thrown by the failure of the plan on which the detachment was originally formed, have rendered it neceſſary to make this alteration in the controul and directions of it, our intention is not to withdraw the ſervices of the detachment entirely from the ſupport of any meaſures which you may have formed in reliance on them, if thoſe meaſures ſhall not prove incompatible with the inſtructions given to Colonel Goddard, and with the engagements which he may conclude in conſequence of them. We ſhall therefore leave him ſtill ſubject to your inſtructions under theſe proviſions, and requeſt that you will communicate to him ſuch points as you may judge proper to be included in the operations concerted with the Rajah of Berar.

23d November 1778.

To Colonel Goddard, commanding the Detachment from the 1ſt Brigade.

Sir,

As we fear that your negociation with Moodajee Booſla, or the meaſures which you may find it neceſſary to purſue in conſequence of your engagements with that Chief, might be interrupted by the orders which you would receive from the Preſident and Select Committee at Bombay, were we to leave the direction of your operations entirely to that Government; we think it neceſſary to revoke the order contained in our letter to you, dated the 15th ultimo, by which you were directed to obey all ſuch orders as you might receive from the Preſident and Council of Bombay; and to forbid you to obey any orders but ſuch as you ſhall henceforth receive from us. But as it is our intention that the detachment under your command, ſhall yet act in ſupport of any meaſures which the Preſident and Council of Bombay may have formed in reliance on it, as far as they ſhall be conſiſtent with your preſent inſtructions, and the engagements which you may have concluded in conſequence of them, we deſire that you will nevertheleſs attend to any inſtructions which you may receive from them, provided they be not incompatible with this rule.

Fort-William, We are, &c.

The following minutes were returned on the above ſubject:

Mr. Francis—At laſt it is avowedly determined that the detachment ſhall not proceed to Bombay. For my own part, I receive this explanation of the intentions of the majority without ſurprize, and ſhall leave them to anſwer to the Company for this, as well as all the other changes and inconſiſtencies which have attended the meaſure. But it is my duty to point out to the Court of Directors, that this laſt arrangement is not juſtified by the motive aſſigned for it: no event has happened ſince the 15th of October, which ſhould induce us to believe that the plan alluded to in the Governor's minute has failed. If it has, it muſt have failed before we gave our inſtructions to the commanding officer, under that date, to concur in the ſupport of ſuch a plan; but let the plan formed in favour of Ragoba have failed when it may, its failure, on the Governor General's own principles, is no reaſon for countermanding the march of the detachment, or revoking the authority of the Preſidency of Bombay over it.—The caſe of an immediate invaſion of Bombay by the French was ſuppoſed and inſiſted on by the Governor General, as the ground of giving powers to that Preſidency to direct the motions of the detachment, and employ it in their defence; but the defence of Bombay, in caſe of an invaſion, has no connexion with a plan in favour of Ragoba, and is now as likely as ever it was to demand the immediate aſſiſtance of the detachment. The intimation contained in the propoſed letter to Bombay, "That it is not our intention to withdraw the ſervices "of the detachment entirely from the ſupport of any "meaſures which they may have formed in reliance on "them," is nugatory, and can mean nothing, ſince it is reſted on a condition that ſuppoſes an impoſſibility; viz. That any meaſures formed in favour of Ragoba, can be compatible with the plan and object of Mr. Elliott's inſtructions.

For this, and many other reaſons which I could eaſily ſtate, if I thought it were to any purpoſe, I diſſent from and proteſt againſt the meaſure.

(Signed) P. Francis.

I likewiſe diſſent from and proteſt againſt the meaſure.

(Signed) Edwd Wheler.

Mr. Barwell having approved of the letters propoſed by the Governor General to be written to the Select Committee at Bombay, and to Colonel Goddard, they were copied fair, and diſpatched.

The following propoſal from the Governor General was received and circulated the 4th inſtant:

Governor General—Not having yet received advice of the arrival of the gentlemen who accompanied the late Mr. Elliott, at Naugpoor; leſt any accident ſhould have befallen them, or the papers under their charge, I move, That a copy of Mr. Elliott's inſtructions be immediately tranſmitted to Colonel Goddard, with another copy of the laſt letters written to him.

I acquieſce.

(Signed) P. F.
(Signed) E W.

A letter was accordingly ſent to Colonel Goddard, with a copy of Mr. Elliott's inſtructions, as follows:

Sir,

Leſt ſome accident ſhould prevent the delivery of the original inſtructions to you which were given to Mr. Elliott, we think it proper to tranſmit you a copy of them, by the way of Benares, together with a triplicate of our laſt letter on the ſubject of them.

We are, &c.

APPENDIX, No. 158.

Letter from the Governor General to Ragonaut Row.

I HAVE been favoured with your very agreeable letter on the ſubject, and informing me of your having diſpatched Rajah Ram Dunkar and Trimbuck Dado Jee, perſons poſſeſſed of your confidence, to make me fully acquainted with them.

The reliance you place in my friendſhip is well grounded, of which I ſhall be ever happy to give you the moſt convincing proofs.

It is matter of the higheſt concern to me, that the meaſures taken by this Government, on the plan propoſed for your advantage by the Preſidency of Bombay, have hitherto failed of ſucceſs; and the total ignorance in which we have ſince been kept of the ſtate of your affairs, has left me at a loſs how to act; you may however reſt perfectly ſatisfied that you are in the hands of your friends, and that I ſhall be always ready to join in any meaſure for your benefit which can be executed without any diſtreſs to my own.

Your Vackeel Rajah Ram Dunkar and Trimbuck Dado Jee are arrived, and have related to me very particularly the circumſtances relative to you and your actual condition. I am greatly concerned that ſuch able and faithful advocates were ſo lately ſent, as well as that the powerful means employed by this Government for your ſupport have received ſo little from your other friends.

The detachment of Engliſh forces ſent for the reinforcement of Bombay are ſtill on their march thither, where, by the bleſſing of God, they will ſhortly arrive; and I flatter myſelf that its arrival will be productive of the greateſt advantages to your affairs. I now wait impatiently for further advices from you on the ſubject of your future views, which I requeſt you will ſpeedily favour me with.

Convinced of your warm friendſhip to me and the Engliſh nation, it is with the utmoſt pleaſure I inform you, that Pondicherry, the principal fortreſs of our enemies the French in India, was reduced by our troops on the 10th of October. I doubt not but this event, which deſtroys the power of our enemies, who are likewiſe your's, will be productive of the higheſt ſatisfaction to you, and therefore congratulate you on it. Knowing me, &c.

APPENDIX, No. 159.

Bengal Secret Perſian Correſpondence, 1778.

Copy of a Letter from Maha Rajah Moodajee Bhoſila, to Colonel Goddard; dated the 23d November 1778.

I HAVE been made happy by the receipt of your agreeable letter, informing me of your arrival at Gourdacy, that you have quitted the territories of Balajee, &c. who, notwithſtanding the connexion you had formed with him, and the intercourſe of friendſhip which had been eſtabliſhed between you by letters and meſſages, oppoſed your march by ſtratagem and deceit; yet, that all his attempts to hurt you proved ineffectual, and he could carry nothing away except the camel and effects of Ram Budder Pundit, who ſtayed behind the baggage, and alſo received two wounds from a ſpear; that you reſerve the revenging this to another opportunity; that the Maratta cavalry are collecting on all ſides of your army, and you hear that they are alſo gathering together in the Decan; that I ſhould therefore take ſuch meaſures as may be moſt adviſable in theſe circumſtances; that you ſhall take your route by Bhelſah and Bopaul to the river Nerbudder; with other particulars, which I underſtood, and which afforded me the greateſt pleaſure. Appendix. Nos. 158 & 159.

I before, in conſequence of two letters which I received from you after the death of Colonel Leſlie, intimating your intention to proceed to the banks of the Nerbudder, and from thence to the place of your deſtination, ſent Lalla Jadoo Roy, who had before waited near five months there in expectation of the arrival of the army, and who was then obliged by ſickneſs and the delay of your coming, to return to Naigpore, together with Shas Sing Hazzarey, a man of credit, to Saoty, which Jalook is the Jaghier of the latter; by this time they muſt be arrived there, and will provide you with every neceſſary, and Lalla Jadoo Roy will advance two or three days journey to meet you, and inform you of every particular relative to the junction of the armies of the Decan, (to wit) thoſe of Sindeah and Holcar, and the purport of all the letters received from the Nabob Amaud-ul-Dowla ſince the commencement of Colonel Leſlie's march to this quarter, and the deputation of Mr. Elliott to conclude with me a firm treaty and alliance, and to adviſe with me on many points of the utmoſt importance: of all theſe affairs he will give you a perfect knowledge, as it would take up too much time and paper to commit them to writing. In brief, that the operations of the army in Bundlecund ſhould be determined by the late Mr. Elliott's joint advice and concurrence, and that Colonel Leſlie ſhould follow the inſtructions which Mr. Elliott ſhould write him from Naigpore, he having full powers to conduct the negotiations, and that whatever he ſhould do, be approved and ratified by all, in the ſame manner as if done by himſelf. Mr. Elliott being unfortunately ſtopped in the way by the angel of death, all the intended negotiations and ſchemes are ſuſpended, and muſt continue in this ſtate until the arrival of letters from Calcutta, or of ſome gentleman of credit to ſupply the place of the deceaſed. As the greateſt friendſhip ſubſiſts between me and the Nabob Amaud ul-Dowla, by reaſon of the concerns of Bengal, and the vicinity of our territories, I can have no objection to the army croſſing the Nerbudder, and entering my dominions, which lie immediately on this ſide of it; and Lalla Jadoo Row is ſtationed there, and will to the utmoſt of his power provide you with grain, proviſions and every other neceſſary; but actuated by the warmeſt friendſhip, which will not allow of any diſſimulation or reſerve, I judge it incumbent on me freely to communicate to you whatever I have learnt from the newſpapers, which I receive from every quarter, as well as my ſentiments on every matter which ariſes.

The late Colonel Leſlie after the paſſage over the Jumna wrote to me, that he ſhould ſhortly arrive at the Nurbudder, and that he hoped from my friendſhip I would not allow any neglect or delay to ariſe in the proviſion of grain, &c. neceſſaries for his army; and that from thence, he would proceed to the place of his deſtination: I wrote in anſwer, that notwithſtanding the road by this quarter was a very difficult one, if he ſhould think fit to make it his route, I would neglect no means to ſupply him and his army with proviſions and neceſſaries through my dominions; that he would then paſs a part of the Peiſhwa's dominions dependant on Burhampore, where I had no kind of authority.

As the late Colonel Leſlie marched into the territory of Bundlecund, and the country of Balajee Pundit, who holds it under the Peiſhwa, and waſted near five months in thoſe parts to ſettle the affairs of the country and regulate the Government, every moment of delay was impolitical, and greatly prejudicial to the expedition, for he ought to have marched to the Nerbudder without the leaſt delay, and and from thence with the greateſt expedition to the place of his deſtination through the Soubah of Burhampore; in which caſe, he would have met with no oppoſition or moleſtation; all the Chiefs of the Decan being at their reſpective ſtations employed in their own affairs, ſo that he might have reached Bombay with the greateſt facility, without meeting with the leaſt interruption in his march thither. By his delay of five months in the Bundlecund country, and the letters of Balajee and others to the Government at Poonah, that he was creating diſturbances in thoſe diſtricts, and meditated the reduction of their territories, and then to proceed in an hoſtile manner againſt the Peiſhwa; all the Chiefs were put on their guard, and immediately ſet about raiſing and diſciplining forces, and are now watching an opportunity to employ them to advantage. The oppoſition of Balajee, and the armies of obſervation which attend on the ſteps of the detachment, are in conſequence of inſtructions from the Government, and large armies from Sindeah and Holcar have likewiſe been drawn together at Poonah; the forces of the Nabob Nizam-ul-Dowlah, he being in ſtrict league with the Peiſhwa, and it being ſtipulated in the treaty between the Engliſh and the Peiſhwa, concluded by the Governor of Madras, that no aid or aſſiſtance ſhould be given to Ragonaut Row, and that their friends and enemies ſhould be common to all parties, are likewiſe engaged in the cauſe, and are ſtationed in different parts at the paſſes and Gauts in the Zella of Berar, under the command of able officers, waiting for the approach of the Engliſh army; that all theſe parties are on their guard and in readineſs, is entirely owing to Colonel Leſlie's delay in the Bundlecund country: but all this is fruitleſs, and being paſt ſhould be forgotten.

It was my deſign on the arrival of Mr. Elliott, who was inveſted with full powers, to have conſulted with him, and to have formed ſuch a plan under the maſk of the Peiſhwa, as might have enſured to the troops a free and unmoleſted paſſage to Bombay. My plan was this, that letters ſhould be written by me and Mr. Elliott to Poonah, to the following purport: that the Engliſh are ſteady to the treaty which they contracted with the Peiſhwa, and have not the leaſt deſign to ſupport or aſſiſt Ragonaut Row; but that they bear hatred to the French, the inveterate enemies of the Engliſh nation, and are greatly alarmed at the reſidence of a French Vackeel at Poonah; that if the Poonah Government has ſent away the French Vackeel, and will faithfully adhere to its treaty with the Engliſh, they alſo deem it incumbent on them ſtrictly to perform their part of it, and in ſuch caſe neither have nor will entertain any enmity to the Peiſhwa; that this detachment which is ſent to Bombay, is ſolely diſpatched thither from apprehenſions of the deſigns of the French againſt the Engliſh ſettlements, as war has been declared in Europe between the Kings of England and France; and it is therefore incumbent on them to provide for the ſafety of their poſſeſſions in this quarter.

From ſuch letters and promiſes from us, namely, Mr. Elliott and myſelf, I had no doubt that the Miniſters at Poonah would have given entire credit thereto, and regarding it as impolitic to have broken their engagements with the Engliſh without cauſe, would have replied thereto, that if the Engliſh were ſteady to their treaty, they had no objection to the paſſage of the Engliſh army to Bombay, to keep the French in awe. Under this maſk the detachment might have come hither, and proſecuted their march from hence to Bombay in ſafety and tranquillity, and my warm friendſhip and attachment to the Engliſh Chiefs would have been clearly manifeſted. I formerly intimated in my letters to Calcutta, the purport of what the Poonah Miniſters wrote to me, that they neither had nor would have any friendſhip or connexion with the French nation, and that the French agent came to Poonah ſolely for the purpoſes of trade, and that out of friendſhip to the Engliſh they had ſent him away; that I ſhould therefore write to the Nabob Amaud-ul-Dowlah to be perfectly ſatisfied with reſpect to them, they being ſteady to their engagements. I received a reply from Calcutta to this letter, but to recite the particulars would ſwell this letter to too great a ſize: Lally Judoo Roy will therefore make you acquainted therewith, and ſhew you a copy of the letter. In a word, by the deceaſe of Mr. Elliott, all the deſigns before recited, as well as thoſe exiſting in the breaſts of the Nabob Amaud-ul-Dowlah and myſelf, which could not be explained but in an interview between me and Mr. Elliott, are ſuſpended, and depend on further advices from Calcutta, which by reaſon of its great diſtance from hence cannot ſpeedily be received.

The letters received from Calcutta ſince the death of Mr. Elliott, are in ſubſtance as follows: that the deſigns and ſecret views entruſted to Mr. Elliott, being by his death of neceſſity ſuſpended, what is to be done to obviate the inconvenience? That Beneram Pundit is well acquainted with the affairs and negociations with which that gentleman was charged; that he will fully communicate to me the conditions which he the Nabob Amaud-ul-Dowla offers me, and ſuch as he requires from my friendſhip; that I will therefore inform him of ſuch points as I wiſh from him, for the purpoſe of eſtabliſhing a ſolid friendſhip and ſtrict union between us, as it is not his deſign to draw advantages to himſelf, without granting equal ones to me, knowing that no private friendſhip or public alliance can take firm root, without being founded on reciprocal and equal benefits; that it is on ſuch grounds he has long formed the deſign of an alliance with me; that the opportunity now preſents itſelf; that the detachment will ſhortly arrive in my dominions, and their operations will be guided by my advice; that although either of our armies are in themſelves very powerful, and the delay in the march of the detachment has not been cauſed by oppoſition of an enemy, yet that it is adviſable to ſtrengthen it with a body of my forces.

In the concluſion of the letter is this ſentence, which is the moſt material: I have now fully explained my own views and deſigns, and wait impatiently to be made acquainted with yours, on which to form my ultimate reſolutions. As to form the ultimate plan agreeable to what the Nabob Amaul-ul-Dowlah writes, which requires the ſettlement of points of the greateſt conſequence and matters of great difficulty, viz. the raiſing an army, providing warlike ſtores, large treaſures for the ſupport of each other, and the junction of a body of my forces, under the command of able and experienced officers, will be required of me on the arrival of a reply to my letters; and I muſt alſo write very full information on every point, and propoſe the mode of carrying our views into effect with prudence and foreſight, and the preſent is the time to form the plan, which is to be ſubſequently carried into execution, with the advice and aſſiſtance of Mr. Anderſon, who arrived here after the death of Mr. Elliott, and is well acquainted with the ſincerity of my friendſhip, and has received letters from Calcutta to remain at Naigpore, and to make himſelf acquainted with my ſentiments and views; it will therefore require a long time to tranſmit letters to Calcutta, and receive anſwers from thence, and firmly to eſtabliſh the propoſed union; it is not to be done at once, but requires time to regulate matters of ſuch importance.

The junction of a ſmall body of my forces with yours can produce no good effect, but will remove the veil from the buſineſs, and leave our deſigns expoſed; it will deſtroy the friendſhip which is eſtabliſhed between me and the Peiſhwa and Nizam-ul-Dowlah, and expoſe my dominions to the ravages of the armies of the Decan in Berar, and at the Gauts; therefore wait for a reply from Calcutta with the opinion of the Nabob Amaud-ul-Dowlah; and induced by friendſhip, I have made a full and unreſerved communication to you. Mr. Anderſon has alſo written you very fully. You will be pleaſed to adviſe me of whatever plan you may judge proper to adopt, adopt, for an unreſerved communication between friends is highly commendable, and is approved by God.

Poſtſcript.—On the other ſide of the Nurbudder you will meet with bad roads and mountains difficult of acceſs, great rivers to paſs, and thouſands of Bhalahs concealed in the cavities of the mountains; although theſe cannot have any effect upon the magnanimity of the Engliſh, yet you will find great difficulty to procure proviſions: as ſoon as you get clear of the ſavages aforeſaid, you will find the armies of Holcar and Sindia ready to oppoſe you. Their plan will be to watch your motions at a diſtance, cut off your ſupplies, to watch their opportunity to attack you at a diſadvantage, and having done all the miſchief they can, to retreat to their former poſts.

Although Colonel Leſlie has been diſmiſſed from the command by orders from Calcutta, and you appointed to conduct the army with every poſſible expedition to Bombay; and you will doubtleſs make every exertion of zeal which ſo arduous an undertaking requires; yet every ſtep brings imminent danger, and you can only arrive at the place of your deſtination by fighting your way through, and being ſubject to fierce attacks.

I am induced by friendſhip to give you this intelligence, for my heart is pained at the apprehenſion of your experiencing any misfortune; and to return would leſſen the terror of your arms, and give diſpleaſure to Mr. Haſtings.

My advice is, that you write all theſe particulars to Calcutta, as I have already done, and wait for orders from thence in conſequence, and till their arrival continue on the banks of the Nurbudder. For the reſt, whatever you may judge moſt expedient. If you think it adviſable, write to the Peiſhwa, that your Chief has no idea of breaking the treaty with the Peiſhwa, and that the detachment under your command is ſolely intended for the reinforcement of Bombay, againſt the deſigns of the French, the inveterate enemies of your Sovereign: that if he has expelled the French Vackeel from his preſence, and has no friendſhip with them, the Engliſh on their part are ſteady to their engagements: that if ſuch friendſhip really exiſts between the Peiſhwa and your Chief, he can have no objection to the paſſage of the forces for the reinforcement of Bombay. That you will not in any manner aſſiſt Ragonaut Row. This ſhall be accompanied by letters from me, which may poſſibly produce a favourable anſwer, and in the mean time you will have an anſwer from Calcutta.

Communicate to me your opinion in the ſame unreſerved manner as I have done to you; this will tend to the increaſe of our friendſhip.

I have ſpoken on this ſubject to Baboo Row, the Peiſhwa's Vackeel; who has replied, that he can conſent to nothing without the knowledge and approbation of his ſuperiors, to whom he will write if I deſire him. I therefore think it would be adviſable that you ſend me a letter addreſſed to the Peiſhwa, to the above purport, which ſhall be diſpatched with letters from me to Baboo Row. I ſhewed you copy of Mr. Haſtings's letter on the ſubject of Mr. James Anderſon's ſtaying here.—For further particulars I refer you to Lalla Jadoo Roy.

APPENDIX, Nos. 160 and 161.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 21ſt December 1778.

PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident;

Richard Barwell, Philip Francis, Edward Wheler, } Eſquires.

THE Governor General lays before the Board a letter addreſſed to him by Colonel Goddard, dated 16th November; and deſires in the preſent diſpatches to England it may be added, "that by a private letter from "Colonel Goddard, addreſſed to the Governor General, "we are adviſed that he was arrived at Biſeer, in Bo-"paul, at the diſtance of eight coſs from Iſlamagur, and "ten from Bopaul;" with any other particulars of his letter which the Board may think proper on the peruſal of it. Appendix. No. 161.

Sir,

In my laſt letter from the Kournz, I informed you of Balajee's deceitful conduct, and the unſucceſsful attempt he had made to carry off a part of the baggage, &c. of the detachment, on the day of my leaving his territories, and entering a ſmall diſtrict belonging to a Patan Chief, which is ſituated between Sagur and Bilſah confines. I alſo expreſſed my hope, that the Chief of the latter country would comply with the requeſt I made him, of an unmoleſted paſſage through it, and ſupply me with every thing requiſite on my march, as he had ſent in a confidential man to treat with me. Through this man I received from his maſter a ſolemn engagement to conduct the troops, and furniſh proviſions for them on their route; as a pledge for the performance of which, the Vackeel was to remain in my camp.

I beg leave to enloſe you a copy of the agreement he entered into, the purport of which I have confined to my own preſent purpoſe, without involving myſelf or the Engliſh nation in any future engagements, which might prove inconſiſtent with your political views. I have the pleaſure to inform you, that by this management I have ſucceeded in the obtaining of what I propoſed. I have paſſed the confines of his country, and am arrived at thoſe of the Nawaub of Bholpaul, within twenty-five coſs of the Nurbudda. The troops of Balajee ſtill hover in my rear; but they encamp at too great a diſtance, and are too vigilant, for me to attempt attacking them with any proſpect of a ſurprize: they haraſs me every day on the march, and now and then pick up any baggage that ſtraggles too far from protection: they have alſo cut off ſome ſupplies of proviſion coming into camp; but they are not capable to delay me much, or do any material injury. This may appear ſtrange and inadmiſſible in a country whoſe Chief has entered into terms of friendſhip with me, but the excuſe made for it by the latter is the ſuperior force of Balajee; and he again urges, as a motive for his conduct, the orders he has received from the Poonah Durbar, to interrupt the paſſage of the Engliſh to the Nurbudda all in his power. In ſhort, I can plainly perceive that their mutual inclinations are the ſame; but that views of preſent convenience have induced the Bilſah Chief to adopt a neutrality, which is equally agreeable and ſubſervient to my wiſh of reaching the Nurbudda without delay, and proſecuting the grand object of this expedition. I have within theſe few days received a letter from Moodajee Booſla, in reply to mine from Raje Ghur, informing him of my intention to proceed towards his country with all expedition, and aſſuring him of my zeal and readineſs to promote his intereſts, and execute the treaty which ſhall be ultimately concluded betwixt himſelf and the Engliſh Government. He mentions with much concern the death of Mr. Elliott, which has ſuſpended for a while the negociation to have been carried on with you through him; and requeſts that, if I have left Bundlecund, I will move forward by eaſy marches to the Nurbudda: in the mean time, he hopes to receive anſwer to a letter he wrote you on the occaſion. The terms of his letter, and that from Dewargur, as well as Beneram Pundit, are expreſſed in as friendly a ſtyle and manner as I could have wiſhed. It alſo informs me he has ſent Laloo Jadou Ram, with ſome other Chiefs, to the Nurbudda, to meet me on my arrival there and to provide every thing neceſſary for the care of the detachment; but it is plain he would rather ſome agreement had been entered into before the arrival of the army in his territory, and that perhaps he is apprehenſive of meeting with difficulties in concluding any thing with a perſon whoſe name has not been made known to him by you.

Appendix. No. 161.

you. In all theſe particulars, I hope your letters will by this time have fully ſatisfied him; and that finding the friendſhip you honour me with, and the truſt you may chuſe to repoſe in my attention and endeavours to promote your mutual views and intereſts, he will, before my arrival, be prepared to receive me with that cordiality and confidence, ſo neceſſary to the ſucceſs of the propoſed negociation with him. Moodajee has ſent me a paper of intelligence relative to the Poonah Durbar, which I encloſe for your peruſal. Similar accounts have reached me from other quarters; but it does not appear, from any information I have obtained, that the force intended to be ſent towards this province has actually marched; and I am led to believe that the diſtracted ſtate of affairs at Poonah, and a circumſtance I alſo learn, of Hyder Naic's having taken the field with a large army, will employ their attention too near the capital to admit of their detaching any conſiderable force at this diſtance againſt me. From my neighbourhood to the Nurbudda, I make no doubt of reaching it long before any troops could arrive, even were they detached, as talked of; and this conſideration induces me to puſh on to the river with all expedition. The Nawaub of Bhopal has ſent in a Vackeel to me, with aſſurances of friendſhip, and a ſupply of proviſions, through his country; ſo that at preſent I can foreſee no obſtruction to my march; for although Balajee declares he will follow me to the Nurbudda, I am convinced he cannot give me any material interruption; and I ſhall not ſuffer any project or plan whatever to divert my attention at this time from the main buſineſs. I have every reaſon to expect that the Bhopal Nawaub will furniſh the neceſſary ſupplies of proviſions; and although obliged to preſerve appearances with the Marattas, whoſe power he ſtands in awe of, I am of opinion, will not venture to take an active part on this occaſion. I am hopeful of paſſing through his country in peace and amity, only guarding againſt the invidious depredations of Balajee's troops. I ſhall not fail to inform you of what may be finally concluded on with the Nawaub, and of my arrival at the Nurbudda; and as I have, ſince leaving Rajigbur, repeatedly wrote to Moodajee, informing him of my progreſs, I may expect to receive more particular replies from him every day, which I will immediately communicate to you, and the ſteps I may find neceſſary to take in conſequence.

I am, &c.

Camp at Beerſea, in Bhopaul, 16th November 1778; 8 coſs from Iſlamnagur, and 10 from Bhopaul.

(Signed) Thomas Goddard.

The Governor General likewiſe lays before the Board, the copy of a letter written by Moodajee Booſla to Colonel Goddard, which the Governor lately received from Mr. Anderſon at Naguepoor, and which was delivered to him by Dewargur Pundit. It is dated the 23d November, and entered in the Perſian correſpondence of the Secret Department.

Read the letter.

The Governor General further reports to the Board, that he learns by letters from Mr. Anderſon, and by letters lately received by the Berar Vackeel, that Moodajee Booſla had been dangerouſly ill, inſomuch that his life was at one time deſpaired of, that he was thought out of danger when the letters were written, but advancing ſlow in his recovery. The following is an extract from Mr. Anderſon's letter of the 15th November.

"The Rajah too, I am well aſſured, will not chuſe that we ſhould leave this until he ſees us, and it is not expected, from the ſituation in which he is at preſent, that he will be able to appear in public for theſe ten or twelve days. His illneſs has been exceedingly ſevere: he was for many days delirious, and they had, in utter deſpair of his life, taken him from the cott, and ſtretched him on the ground. It is now, however, ten or twelve days ſince a favourable criſis took place, and they ſeem to think him entirely out of danger, though ſtill in a very weak condition. A large tumour appeared on his neck, which has come to a ſuppuration; there remain, however, two on his body, which afflict him much. His father Ragojee died of a ſimilar diſorder, which has diſconcerted him much.

The newſpapers from the Vackeel at Poonah, as well as the letters from the Miniſters, contain the following particulars, which are repeated by many others, viz. That they aſſert, we neither have had or have now, any other views or deſigns than friendſhip and an adherence to treaty with the Engliſh, nor have we any connection with the French Vackeel; he came for the purpoſe of traffic; if, notwithſtanding, their forces are come to Chatterpore, and they make attempts within our dominions, and form further deſigns againſt us, it is incumbent on us to provide againſt them, and the armies of Scindea and Holcar ſhall be ſent into the Soubah of Malwa: but whilſt there is no act of enmity and diſunion on their part, no ſteps ſhall be taken by us.

Induced by the ſincereſt friendſhip, I write you without reſerve any intelligence I receive from Poorunder. You may depend on the truth of what my Vackeels at the different ſtations write you.

No. 161.

Mr. Francis—The letter from Moodajee Booſla being a public one from the Rajah of Berar to the commanding officer of the detachment, is of authority to the Board, and as I think contains matter of the moſt important information. As it is not followed by any motion from the Governor General, I beg leave to propoſe the following queſtions to the Board: firſt, Whether it does not appear to the Board, from the whole tenor of this letter, that Moodajee Booſla is not inclined to join Colonel Goddard, or to co-operate in any enterprize againſt the Poonah Government? Secondly, Whether it does not appear at this time to be the opinion of Moodajee Booſla, that Colonel Goddard's proceeding on his march will expoſe the detachment to the greateſt difficulties and dangers? The affirmative to thoſe queſtions is on my judgment ſo clear, that I ſhall not attempt to maintain it by any other argument than a bare citation of ſome paſſages from the letter, which I deſire may be entered in this place. The Court of Directors will undoubtedly give due attention to the entire contents of it.

Governor General—To ſave partial quotations, I propoſe to Mr. Francis, that the whole letter may be entered.

Agreed to.

Mr. Wheler—I am of opinion, from the above letter, that it does appear that Moodajee Booſla is diſinclined to join Colonel Goddard, or to co-operate in any enterprize againſt the Poonah Government.

I am likewiſe of opinion, that it does appear by the letter before alluded to, that the detachment will be expoſed to the greateſt difficulties and dangers by the continuance of its march.

Mr. Barwell—I do not think any judgment can be formed from theſe letters of a change in the political line of conduct meant to be obſerved by the Berar State; it is ſuch as under the circumſtances of that Government relative to ours might have been expected. The queſtions now propoſed appear to me calculated to preclude that neceſſary information on which a decided reſolution muſt be taken by this Board; they lead obviouſly to ſome inſtant meaſure to commit the Government in the orders it may ſend to Colonel Goddard before it has heard from that officer; receiving the queſtions in this light, I muſt put my negative upon them; the affirmative, which Mr. Francis is pleaſed to declare to be ſo clear to his judgment, to mine requires the comment of the perſon to whoſe conduct and prudence the propoſed negociations with the Berar State have been committed, I mean Colonel Goddard.

Governor

Governor General—To both queſtions, I anſwer briefly—No. I will add, that whatever were the ſentiments of Moodajee at the time in which this letter was written, it is my belief, that we ſhall find in the event that Moodajee is both inclined to join Colonel Goddard, and to co-operate with him; and that though it is very plain from the poſtſcript of the letter, that he apprehended great dangers from the proſecution of the expedition by the detachment alone and unſupported; yet it does not therefore follow, that he entertains at this time the ſame opinion, if he ſhall have agreed to join and to co-operate with us. The papers which I have introduced on this day's proceedings were intended for record only, conceiving it to be incumbent upon me to afford the Board every information concerning the ſtate and progreſs of this important expedition. I join in opinion with Mr. Barwell, that the queſtions which have been propoſed are premature, if they lead to any object; and the cauſe of an unneceſſary waſte of time if they do not. On the news of Mr. Elliott's death, I wrote to Moodajee Booſla, that I waited for his letters in conſequence of that event, to determine the future deſtination and operations of the detachment. This letter was written on the 11th of October; on the 12th November the expected letter from Moodajee arrived, and contained the moſt preſſing inſtances that the negociation might ſtill proceed, and that for the prevention of delay it might be committed to the charge of Mr. Farquhar, who had attended Mr. Elliott as his Secretary. On the 16th of the ſame month it was reſolved to empower Colonel Goddard to treat with Moodajee Booſla on the grounds of Mr. Elliott's inſtructions; and on the 23d letters were written to Moodajee adviſing him of it; therefore, from the time of Mr. Elliott's death until the receipt of this laſt letter, he (Moodajee) and his Durbar muſt have remained in a total ſtate of ſuſpence and doubt reſpecting the deſtination and operations of the detachment, and of the intereſt which they might eventually have in both; ſo circumſtanced, it was not to be expected that they ſhould precipitately commit themſelves in ſo hazardous a connection, and the whole purport of the letter, read with this key to it, evidently means that they waited the final determination of this Government to regulate their own; that unleſs the orders from hence could enable them immediately, and without further reference, to concert ſome plan for our common operations, they ſhould decline to take any future part in our concerns but that of mediation; and that without their aid it might be dangerous to truſt to the ſtrength of the detachment alone in the proſecution of the remainder of its march to Bombay, neither would there be an adequate object to warrant ſuch a riſk. Perhaps the ſickneſs of Moodajee may have contributed to heighten the apprehenſions conceived by his Miniſter, who undoubtedly dictated the letter. Under a ſtate of ſuch uncertainty I ſhall ſuſpend my opinion until anſwers ſhall be received to the letter which I have laſt quoted, expecting that all written before the receipt of it will be from the ſame cauſes equally diſcouraging. Theſe are ſuch as might have been expected; ſuch as I ſhould have written myſelf in the ſame ſituation, in ſubſtance I mean; in expreſſion I ſhould never hope to equal that of the letter which has juſt been recorded.

The queſtions reſolved in the negative.

APPENDIX, No 162.

Letter from Governor General to Moodajee Bhooſila: Written the 29th December 1778.

I HAVE received from Mr. Anderſon a copy of the letter which you wrote laſt month to Colonel Goddard, and have peruſed it with the greateſt attention.

You write, that by the death of Mr. Elliott all your views are ſuſpended, and depend on further advices from Calcutta; and that by reaſon of its great diſtance, a long time would neceſſarily elapſe before all the points of a ſolid treaty between us could be diſcuſſed by letter; which delay you intimate may be dangerous to our views, and are apprehenſive may expoſe your dominions to danger. My friend, I am not ſurprized at theſe doubts; they were natural to your ſituation, and ſuch as I myſelf ſhould have entertained under like circumſtances. In my firſt letter, after the news of Mr. Elliott's death, I informed you that I ſhould determine on nothing till I had heard further from you, and ſhould regulate the future deſtination and operation of the army by the knowledge of your inclination; had theſe been averſe to the proſecution of my deſigns, I ſhould probably have ſuſpended them, and recalled the detachment; but on the receipt of your letter, written immediately after you heard of Mr. Elliott's death, in which you preſs me to perſevere in them by the moſt ſolid agreements, namely, that no trifling changes ſhould induce the Ruler of a State, poſſeſſed of firmneſs and magnanimity, to relinquiſh a plan formed on mature reflections; but that he ſhould, in ſpite of ſuch interruptions, which are in fact no more than trials, continue ſteadily fixed in the purſuit of his object; and add, that the fame of your friendſhip having inſpired our friends with confidence, and produced terror and diſmay amongſt our enemies, it was incumbent on me to take effectual meaſures to confirm their fortunate beginnings, by inveſting ſome perſon with authority to conclude a treaty on the inſtructions given to Mr. Elliott; I no longer heſitated but inſtantly obtained a formal commiſſion from this Government in my own name and that of the Council, to Colonel Goddard, to negociate and conclude a treaty on Mr. Elliott's inſtructions, and to concert with you a plan of operations for our mutual benefit: this of courſe removes all objections ariſing from ſuſpicion of delays. The meaſure is now made your own: I have done my part, and truſt to your fortitude and reſolution for the reſt. Since, however, delays have happened, and inconveniences may ariſe from Colonel Leſlie having, in contradiction to his orders, loitered away a conſiderable time in his march, I have thought proper to provide a reinforcement of two battalions for the detachment. They will march on the 4th of January, or 15th of Zehedja, without cannon, for the ſake of expedition, by the direct road of Ramgur and Chittu Naigpore, to our weſtern frontiers, and there wait your orders; if you direct them to proceed and join Colonel Goddard they will go, if not, they will remain there or return; for in this ſervice I ſhall do nothing without your concurrence. Major Camac, a ſteady and brave officer, well known to the Chiefs in that quarter, will conduct them. Let Colonel Goddard be made acquainted with your intentions; and write to Major Camac with the proper paſſports, if you approve of his proceeding.

I have engaged thus far at your deſire, even more than on my own confirmed judgment; I repeat your own words, which I have before quoted,

"It does not become great minds to relinquiſh a plan "formed on mature reflection, in conſequence of a "trifling change of circumſtances; but it is their diſ- "tinguiſhing characteriſtic to perſevere ſteadily to the "end."

Do not, therefore, diſappoint me.

Colonel Goddard's inſtructions in eſſentials are poſitive. I have conſulted your intereſts even more than my own, and exact in return the ſame candour and confidence to me which I have invariably obſerved towards you. The eyes of the world are on us both; they have ſeen me ſtruggle through difficulties to the points at which with your aid I have inſured the moſt glorious ſucceſs; the termination of which, by the bleſſing of God, will afford peace and laſting ſecurity to the Engliſh dominions in India, and to increaſe of power, honour, and and immortal reputation. For the reſt I refer you to Colonel Goddard: confide in him as a man that poſſeſſes my confidence; and rely on his bravery and ſkill as an officer of the firſt experience and merits, and endowed with a great portion of all the virtues of a ſoldier, which you poſſeſs in a more eminent degree than any of the Chiefs of the preſent age.

To Dewagur Pundit: D°.

The ſame as the foregoing, except where the difference of ſituation renders a change of expreſſion neceſſary; and with this additional paragraph, which comes in after the quotation ending "Perſevere ſteadily to the end."

The encouragement you have given me in your ſeveral letters to purſue ſteadily the plan formed for our mutual benefit, but more particularly for that of your maſter; and the reputation you have gained for wiſdom, firmneſs, and reſolution, have been ſtrong motives with me to perſevere, not doubting I ſhould receive the moſt effectual aid and ſupport from the Maha Rajah, for the attainment of the beneficial objects propoſed by the plan.

APPENDIX, No. 163.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, December 28th 1778.

THE Governor General delivers in the following Minute:

As the unexpected and unneceſſary delays in the progreſs of the Bombay detachment until the death of Colonel Leſlie, muſt have unavoidably occaſioned a much more conſiderable dimunition of the ſtrength of the corps than could have happened, had he proceeded with that expedition which his duty required, and which it was in his power to have uſed for effecting the ſervice he was ſent upon, and as theſe contingencies will naturally increaſe with the length of the march, it is neceſſary to make proviſion for ſuch a reinforcement, as ſhall not only ſupply all preſent deficiencies, but keep up the detachment to the effective ſtrength of its original eſtabliſhment, and was judged requiſite to attain the objects for which it was formed.

For theſe purpoſes, I beg leave to ſubmit the following propoſitions to the conſideration of the Board.

1ſt. That two battalions of Sepoys be allotted for this ſervice, and ordered to proceed immediately, without their artillery, to the extremity of our weſtern frontier, and there wait the directions of Colonel Goddard, either for a junction with his detachment, for the protection of Naugpoor, or for preſerving the communication with theſe provinces, as he ſhall judge moſt conducive to the purpoſe of the expedition.

2d. That the 13th and 14th battalions of Sepoys be ſent upon this ſervice, and ordered to croſs the river on Monday next, the 4th January, and proceed directly on their march by the neareſt practicable route.

3d. That this detachment be immediately ſupplied with ſixty barrels of muſket ammunition, four barrels of flints, and treaſure to the amount of half a lack of Sunnaut rupees.

4th. That Major Camac be appointed to the command of this detachment.

I do not intend by this ſelection of Major Camac, to derogate from the merits or capacity of other officers of his rank, many of whom may be equal to him in capacity, and the general knowledge of their profeſſion; but his long and ſucceſsful ſervices in ſome of the countries through which the march of the detachment will lie; his perſonal knowledge of moſt of the Chiefs in the route; and their known reſpect for his character and abilities, together with the ſtrong attachment to him of the 14th battalion formerly under his command, peculiarly qualify Major Camac for the execution of this particular ſervice.

(Signed) W. H.

Mr. Francis—The Governor General's minute is founded on a ſuppoſition of a fact, which ought to be aſcertained exactly by the return of Colonel Goddard's detachment. There is no direct evidence before the Board that I know of, to ſhew what loſs of men has already been incurred, or whether there has been any; until I ſee the returns of the detachment, I cannot ſee the neceſſity of reinforcing it by two battalions. On the principles of the propoſition I am to conclude, that Colonel Goddard has already loſt a number of men equal to the reinforcement; but I do not know that this is the fact, nor do I know on what grounds the two battalions amounting to 1,632 men are fixed upon.

Mr. Wheler—The majority of the Board being alone reſponſible for the ſafety of the detachment now under the command of Colonel Goddard, and having I preſume ſufficient reaſon to apprehend, that it is or ſoon will be reduced to a very critical ſtate, from a variety of difficulties which they have already, and muſt yet encounter, I ſhall not in this place attempt to obſtruct the propoſition now before the Board; but beg it may not be underſtood, that by aſſenting to the Governor's motion I depart in any degree from thoſe opinions or principles which have induced me to oppoſe the march and progreſs of this detachment.

Mr. Francis—There being no return before the Board, nor any explanation given of the actual ſtate of the detachment, I am obliged to admit a ſuppoſition, that a loſs, equal to the propoſed reinforcement, has been or is likely to be incurred. On this ground I am of opinion, that every argument which I have hitherto urged againſt the march of the army is confirmed; and that the wiſeſt thing we can do in the preſent circumſtances is to recall it. By ſending reinforcements we increaſe our expence, we hazard ſo much more of our force, and leſſen the defence of Bengal in the ſame proportion. How two battalions, ſent from hence at this time, can be of any ſervice to Colonel Goddard, I do not comprehend. The place at which we have reaſon to ſuppoſe him at preſent, is I believe ten degrees weſt of Calcutta; the country through which the reinforcement is to paſs is wild, ſavage, and unknown; even that part which belongs to us can hardly be ſaid to be under our dominion, and is beſides in a great degree impracticable for troops: for theſe reaſons, I object to the motion. I alſo object to the command being given to a field officer, as I think it an unneceſſary increaſe of expence; the eldeſt of the two Captains might perform the ſervice: I do not mean to derogate from Major Camac's merit; on the contrary, I wiſh to detain him here, where I apprehend his ſervice will be moſt wanted.

Mr. Barwell—I approve entirely of the propoſition and I think it properly timed. Before Colonel Leſlie's detachment advanced into the territories of the Rajah of Berar, this cautionary meaſure could not produce thoſe effects which muſt follow its adoption at this time. The meaſure is a very judicious one, equally if regarded as the means of keeping up the detachment to the effective ſtrength of its original eſtabliſhment, to cover its retreat, or to puſh its advance. It will certainly give vigour and influence to its operations, and that ſecurity to the domihions of the Berar Chief, as to diſpel every apprehenſion he may entertain of the hoſtilities with which he may be threatened. I entirely concur with Mr. Francis in opinion, that is, there is no indiſpenſable neceſſity to influence the propoſition; and if I was to proceed to form my opinion ſimply on the neceſſity of the thing, I ſhould undoubtedly vote againſt the march of theſe troops. The diſtricts of Palamow and Chute Nagpore are by no means ſavage countries, nor is that of Bimbajee, immediately bordering upon them, through which is the direct road to Berar. Major Camac formerly reduced

theſe ſavage countries to the borders of the State ruled by Bimbajee, with his own battalion of Sepoys, and kept them in ſubjection; and I believe the force lately allotted by this Government to the latter purpoſe is limited to five regular companies, and effected to this period by three militia companies. As to increaſe of expence, this meaſure makes no alteration in the military eſtabliſhment, nor will the defence of Bengal in my opinion be weakened by theſe troops being placed in a judicious ſtation on the weſtern frontier, as it does not appear to me that the utmoſt weſtern ſtation that can be fixed on, can go beyond 150 miles from the north weſt point of the Midnapore province.

The Governor General—Since the objections which were made to the propoſitions introduced by me on the 16th of laſt month, among which objections I recollect that Mr. Francis, after having on another occaſion entered on our proceedings as authority, the extract of an anonymous letter, formally denied the authority of a letter addreſſed by the commanding officer of the Bombay detachment, to the firſt and executive member of this Government; and even proteſted in ſubſtance, if not in terms, againſt the correſpondence carried on between them; in which opinions he was ſeconded by Mr. Wheler; I have expected oppoſition to every meaſure propoſed, for the ſafety and ſucceſs of the detachment, as a point of courſe and the effects of ſyſtem, and have diſcontinued the practiſe of anſwering all the arguments which have been occaſionally applied to this ſubject; and indeed I have been diſcouraged from affording the Board in their collective character, thoſe lights which upon many points were neceſſary for their information; eſpecially as the correſpondence with Colonel Goddard has been frequently interrupted, and many of his public letters I believe loſt. I ſhall henceforth hold it unneceſſary to ſwell our proceedings with uſeleſs diſcuſſions, and ſhall confine myſelf to the ſimple recital of facts, and to ſuch comments on them only, as ſhall be neceſſary to the information of our ſuperiors. I have thought it proper to introduce this declaration in this place, that my ſilence in matters of mere controverſy might not be imputed to a wrong cauſe. On the preſent occaſion, it is neceſſary to mention ſimply as a fact, that the loſs of men ſuſtained by the detachment from its firſt marching, bears no degree of proportion to the reinforcement I have propoſed, and has in effect been inconſiderable. But whether one hundred, or ſixteen hundred men are wanted to recruit it, it is equally neceſſary that a force be ſent capable of protecting itſelf in the way, independently of the other reaſons, which have induced me to propoſe, that two battalions be employed on this ſervice.

Mr. Francis—I have never objected to the Governor General's laying any papers he thought proper before the Board; but I do object to our receiving private letters to him as authority to this Government. If there be any reaſon why the correſpondence of the officers commanding the detachment ſhould not be addreſſed directly to the Board, I am unacquainted with it. The fact alluded to by the Governor General, is not accurately ſtated. I did never propoſe an extract of a private letter as authority to the Board, or to be the ground of any act of theirs. It appears by the proceedings, that I repeatedly aſked if there were any returns of the ſtate of Colonel Leſlie's army, or of the caſualties, which had happened on the firſt day's march from Calpee. Finding there were none, I gave the Board that private information, which was in my poſſeſſion. I ſtill believe it was true, at leaſt in the material part. There were at that time many private letters in Calcutta to the ſame effect. On the remainder of the Governor General's laſt minute, I willingly ſubmit myſelf to the judgment of the Court of Directors. Debate in this place is uſeleſs.

Governor General—I appeal to the minutes delivered in the Conſultation of the 22d June, and to the conviction which every man muſt feel in his own breaſt, that a paper of that nature, which contained information of facts alone, ſo ſolemnly given by a member of the Government, muſt have been intended for authority or ought not to have been given at all. The following words extracted from Mr Francis's minute evidently mark it to have been intended for authority. What Mr. Francis deemed worthy of his credit, and eſpecially deſerving the conſideration of the Board, muſt certainly have been underſtood to poſſeſs that quality. "As I find there are no "public letters before the Board, to inform us of the par- "ticular circumſtances that attended Colonel Leſlie's "march on the firſt day from Calpee, I beg leave to lay "before the Board an extract of a private letter from "camp, to which I give credit, and which I think de- "ſerves our conſideration; I underſtand there are many "private letters in town, which give the ſame ac- "counts."

Mr. Francis—I ſtated the letter to be a private one, and deſire that reference may be had to the whole of that day's proceedings. Whatever credit I myſelf might have given to it, I can eaſily ſhew that the Governor General did not receive it as authority; his words are, "I believe that the troops muſt have ſuffered from the "heat and want of water on the road; I did in effect "foretel it in a minute dictated at this Board; but I "believe that the anonymous extract produced by Mr. "Francis, is a groſs exaggeration, and calculated more "to conciliate the favour of the perſon to whom it was "probably addreſſed, than to convey a ſtrict relation of "the truth."

Governor General—I certainly did not, nor did this affect my argument; I ſpeak of authority given, not admitted. I propoſe that a letter be immediately written to Colonel Goddard, to inform him of theſe reſolutions, and that as much as be neceſſary be publiſhed in general orders.

Agreed to.

The following letter is accordingly written to Colonel Goddard:

To Colonel Goddard, commanding the Detachment from 1ſt Brigade.

Sir,

Deeming it expedient that a reinforcement of troops ſhould be ſent to ſupply the loſſes which you may have ſuſtained in the detachment under your command, by deaths and deſertion, and to keep up its effective ſtrength to the original eſtabliſhment, we have ordered the 13th and 14th battalions of Sepoys to march immediately, under the command of Major Camac, to the weſtern frontier of the Company's provinces without their artillery, and directed him to halt there, and to wait your inſtructions, either to form a junction with your detachment, or to preſerve the communication with theſe provinces, as you ſhall judge moſt conducive to the purpoſes of the expedition; and we deſire that you will correſpond with him, and tranſmit to him ſuch orders and information, from time to time, as the good of the ſervice may require.

The following inſtructions were given to Major Camac, on the 14th inſtant, in conformity to the reſolutions of the Board:

Sir,

Having appointed you to the chief command of the detachment which has been lately formed at the Preſidency, and ordered to march to the weſtern frontier of Bengal, we direct that you take charge of the ſame, and proceed, proceed, agreeably to our general orders, with the troops which form this detachment. We have directed the Chief and Council at Burdwan to cauſe 150 draft and carriage bullocks to be preſſed, and held in readineſs to march with you from that place, as the contractor will not be able to ſupply you in proper time; you will therefore notify your approach to them, and fix a place for the delivery of the bullocks, which they may in conſequence provide for the ſervice of the detachment.

We alſo direct that you hold a conſtant correſpondence and communication with Colonel Goddard, or the officer in command of the detachment from the 1ſt brigade. By the laſt advices from the Colonel, dated in December, he was at Huſſingabad, on the ſouth ſide the Nerbudda, on the borders of Berar.

As our intention in making the preſent detachment is to reinforce the troops commanded by Colonel Goddard, you will obey ſuch orders as you may receive from him; he will inſtruct you either to join your force to his, or to remain at ſuch ſtation as may be thought moſt conveniently ſituated for preſerving his communication and intercourſe with theſe provinces.

You will adviſe us from time to time of your proceedings, and correſpond with us until you ſhall have formed a junction with Colonel Goddard, from which period you will conſider yourſelf ſolely under his orders.

To Beneram Pundit; written the 30th December.

I yeſterday addreſſed letters to the Maha Rajah and his Dewan Dewagur Pundit, expreſſive of the concern I felt at the doubts he appeared to entertain, by his letter to Colonel Goddard (copy of which I have ſeen) and ſhould have written you at the ſame time, but was prevented for want of leiſure. As the Maha Rajah long ſince muſt have been acquainted with the powers given to Colonel Goddard to negociate and conclude all points with him, all his doubts muſt have ceaſed; and on your prudence and approved attachment to both States, I greatly depend to make ſuch repreſentations to your maſter as may induce him to join heartily in the proſecution of a plan calculated principally for his benefit, and in which we have both proceeded too far to recede, which would not only bring diſcredit on me, but would likewiſe be the cauſe of the greateſt injury to his affairs, and might end in his ruin; for he may be aſſured, that the part he has already taken, and the inclination he has ſhewn, will never be forgotten or forgiven, and that his retracting would be imputed to want of reſolution, and conſequently embolden thoſe whom he has offended to revenge it whenever an opportunity offers; whereas by a ſteady perſeverance in the meaſures propoſed, he will increaſe the power and credit of his State, and by his intimate union with the Government, will be effectually ſecured againſt the attempt of all his enemies.

From the knowledge I have of the Rajah's penetration, firmneſs, and magnanimity, I have no doubt but theſe arguments will be ſufficient to induce him heartily to join in my meaſures; and in you I truſt to give them the weight they deſerve.

To obviate every poſſible inconvenience apprehended by the Maha Rajah in the proſecution of the march of our joint forces, by reaſon of the delay which has ariſen, I have thought proper to provide a reinforcement of two battalions for the detachment, which will begin their march under the command of Major Camac, a ſteady and brave officer, on the 15th of Zehidja, and take their route through Ramgur and Chittah Naigpore to our weſtern frontiers, where they will wait your orders from the Maha Rajah, and will either proceed and join Colonel Goddard, or remain there, as he ſhall direct; as I am determined to do nothing in their ſervice without his concurrence.

For further particulars I refer you to your brother's letters, which will accompany this. Knowing your maſter's intereſt and honour inſeparably connected with ours, you will uſe your utmoſt endeavours to give a proſperous iſſue to the deſign in hand. The news of the Maha Rajah's indiſpoſition has filled me with inexpreſſible concern, and my anxiety to hear of his recovery is not to be deſcribed. May God ſpeedily reſtore to him perfect health! This is my conſtant wiſh and prayer.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 7th January 1779.

At a Council; PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident;
Richard Barwell, Philip Francis, Edward Wheler, } Eſquires.

READ the following Letters from Lieutenant Colonel Goddard:

Gentlemen,

I had the honour of addreſſing you the 19th inſtant from Heirapore, and informed you of my hopes to meet with no interruption on my march through Ballajee's territories, upon the confines of which I was then arrived. In conſequence of a particular requeſt he made me to avoid Sagur, the capital of his country, on account of the loſs he muſt ſuſtain by the approach of an army there, I gave my conſent, and received from him the ſtrongeſt aſſurances of friendſhip, and every neceſſary aſſiſtance on my route. Determined to loſe no time in protracted negociations, which I knew muſt be the caſe if I waited to ſettle any terms with him, I ſo far confided in the profeſſions he made, as to move forward on the road he had pointed out; however, I was too well acquainted with his perfidious and treacherous character to neglect guarding myſelf effectually againſt any attempts he might be tempted to make upon the baggage of the army. The event juſtified the precaution I had uſed; for on my march yeſterday to this place, when I was leaving the confines of his country, his whole army, to the amount of about 5,000 horſe, appeared on my rear, and made repeated attacks upon the baggage and followers, in which however they were completely diſappointed and baffled. It is ſurely unneceſſary to make any particular remarks upon this conduct of Ballajee's, which equally ſerves to diſplay his inſolence and treachery. After obſerving the greateſt caution and order in marching through his country, preſerving from violation the villages and inhabitants, who did not even quit their habitations on my approach; and above all, after the treaty entered into by his brother Gungader at Calpee, which ought to have been binding on him, and the conſequent reſtoration of that fortreſs, as well as his own repeated profeſſions of friendſhip made to myſelf, the impotent attack he made to plunder the followers, whom he hoped to have found unguarded and defenceleſs, is an inſtance of villainous cowardice, which ſurely deſerves the ſevereſt chaſtiſement. As I deem it of the utmoſt importance to croſs the Nerbudda with all poſſible expedition, I muſt forego the ſatisfaction I ſhould feel in inflicting puniſhment on him at preſent, by marching to Sagur, as it is 20 coſs in the rear, and in its conſequences might detain me a whole month: I ſhall not therefore, unleſs attacked by his people, proceed to further hoſtilities, againſt him. I am now arrived on the confines of the Bilſah diſtrict, a territory belonging to Madhadjee Scindier, whoſe Aumil has ſent a Vackeel in, with propoſals of amity and every friendly aſſiſtance from his maſter; ſo that I hope to have an unmoleſted march through his country. I beg to acquaint you, that ſome of the bills which were drawn upon the Revenue Council at Moorſhedabad have been returned, as they ſay they have not received your orders to diſcharge them.

Gentlemen,

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 15th ultimo, inveſting me with the command and direction of the expedition ordered to Bombay, and requiring the return of Colonel Leſlie to the provinces, with the firſt regiment of cavalry. The demiſe of Colonel Leſlie at Raje Ghur, which has long ſince been communicated to you, render unneceſſary any reply to what immediately relates to him; and, as far as my own feelings are affected by the particular marks of favour you have ſhewn me, I can only aſſure you, that the grateful ſenſe I muſt ever entertain of them will call forth my utmoſt exertion in executing with fidelity the truſt you had repoſed in my zeal and attention, and proving myſelf worthy of the honourable diſtinction which you have conferred upon me. I beg to inform you, that I have detained the firſt regiment of cavalry, conceiving it would be expoſed to conſiderable danger in paſſing through the intermediate countries, from this place to the provinces; as the unſerviceable condition it is at preſent in, while it adds little to the ſtrength of the detachment by continuing with me, would however render its return impracticable, if ſent back alone, eſpecially as the troops are now far advanced on their route. In my laſt letter from Kowry, I informed you of the treachery practiſed by Balajee, and of my arrival on the confines of the Bilſah territory: in conſequence of an agreement received from the Chief of the latter, I have paſſed alſo through his country; and have the pleaſure to acquaint you with my arrival at Bhopal, about 18 coſs from the Gaut of Huſſungabad, at which place I hope to croſs the Nerbudda in a few days. The troops of Balajee, joined ſince by thoſe of the Bilſah Chief, and by others in the intereſt of the preſent Adminiſtration at Poonah, amounting in all to about 10,000, continue in my rear, and endeavour to haraſs me by attempts to cut off the ſtraggling baggage and ſupplies of proviſions. They have not ſucceeded in their endeavours to diſtreſs me hitherto; and the inconvenience they mean to give, has no other effect than to make me move with greater caution and ſecurity.

I have, &c.

Camp near Bhopal, 20th November 1778. Tho' Goddard.

Gentlemen,

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 19th October; and of the minutes of Council tranſmitted by your Secretary, appointing me to the rank of Brevet Colonel during the preſent expedition; for which diſtinguiſhing mark of your favour I beg to offer my ſincere thanks, and the aſſurances of exerting every endeavour to prove myſelf deſerving of it. I wrote you the 20th inſtant, informing you of my arrival at Bhopál, where I have been detained for ſome days in providing a plentiful ſupply of grain for the detachment to the Nerbudda, as the route to that river lies through a country full of jungles, and almoſt totally uncultivated; beſides that the approach of our army, and the fear of being plundered by the Marattas in our rear, has induced moſt of the inhabitants to move off to ſome diſtance for the ſecurity of their effects. I have found it neceſſary, particularly circumſtanced as I was upon my arrival here, to enter into an agreement with the Nawab of Bhopál, who has engaged to ſupply me with a ſufficient quantity of proviſions, and to furniſh boats at Huſſungabad for the paſſage of the troops acroſs the Nerbudda. Theſe friendly inclinations towards us have drawn upon him the reſentment of Balajee and his confederates; who have burnt and deſtroyed great part of his country on the way to this place, and ſtill threaten him with the vengeance of the Poonah Adminiſtration for thus acting in contradiction to the Peiſhwa's orders, of preventing if poſſible our march acroſs the Nerbudda. Appendix. No. 164.

I have therefore at his earneſt ſolicitation, and on account of the difficulties he may hereafter be expoſed to, from the amicable conduct he has adopted reſpecting us, promiſed to recommend him in the ſtrongeſt terms to the favour and protection of the Engliſh Adminiſtration; in doing which I have been careful not to involve your Government in any engagements which you might have cauſe to diſapprove of, or which might interfere with the more important objects of your political intentions, but have left entirely to your own free choice the meaſures you may deem it proper and eligible to purſue in conſequence of my repreſentation made to you. I beg to acquaint you that I propoſe marching from this place to-morrow, and proſecuting my route to the Nerbudda.

Camp near Bhopál, November 25th, 1778. Tho' Goddard.

Gentlemen,

Since the letter I had the honour to addreſs you of the 25th November, I have left Bhopál, and am arrived on the banks of the Nerbudda, at the Gaut of Huſſungabad.

The route to this place has been through a mountainous and rough country, where the troops have exerted themſelves with the greateſt cheerfulneſs and alacrity, in removing the ſtones and large trees which in many places had blocked up the road, and rendered it impaſſable for carriages and artillery, without the greateſt labour and difficulty. It is with particular pleaſure I can recommend to you the attention of the officers, and perſeverance of the men on this occaſion, who performed in four days, under all the difficulties I have mentioned, a march of at leaſt 46 miles. From the diſpoſition and eagerneſs they have now diſplayed, I am led to form the moſt favourable proſpect of their future conduct, and cannot but flatter myſelf with the hopes that it will be ſuch as to merit your approbation. The Nawab of Bhopál has literally and faithfully adhered to the engagements he entered into of ſupplying the army with proviſions through his country, and furniſhing boats for croſſing the Nerbudda at Huſſungabad, which is dependant upon his authority. He alſo prevented the troops of Balajee from following my route, which they repeatedly propoſed to do; and declared he would repel them by force if they proſecuted further war within his territories. In ſhort, he has acted with ſuch ſincerity and regard to his engagements made to me on this occaſion, that I am induced to repreſent to you my entire ſatisfaction with his conduct; and the uſeful aſſiſtance he has afforded at a time when the being compelled to hoſtilities muſt have detained the detachment conſiderably, and perhaps in the end have proved a material injury to the ſervice on which it was ſent: while I thus do juſtice to his ſincerity and friendſhip, let me alſo contraſt with it the treacherous and ill-adviſed behaviour of Balajee, who, notwithſtanding the moderate and conciliating meaſures I adoped towards him, and the pains I took to preſerve his country from violence, attempted all in his power to impede his march. I am informed that he alleges, in excuſe for his conduct, the orders of the preſent Peiſhwa. This he never communicated to me himſelf by letter, or through his Vackeel; but I have no doubt of inſtructions having been ſent him, as well as the other Chiefs on the north of the Nerbudda, by the Adminiſtration at Poonah, to join in preventing the Engliſh from croſſing that river; and I know he threatened the Nawab of Bhopál with the vengeance of the Peiſhwa, in caſe he would not unite his forces to oppoſe our march. I beg leave further to acquaint you, that that the troops have this day began to paſs the river; and I hope in three days to have the detachment completely croſſed. The Berar territories commence about ſeven coſs from the Nerbudda, on the confines of which a confidential perſon from the Court of Naigpore is waiting the arrival of the troops, whoſe preſence I expect in a few days in my camp.

Thos Goddard.

Gentlemen,

I had the honour to addreſs you the 1ſt inſtant, informing you of my arrival at the Nerbudda, which river the whole detachment completely croſſed the following day: the cauſe of this diſpatch was owing to the diſcovery of a ford, at a ſmall diſtance below the Gaut, by which the artillery, carriages, &c. and remainder of the army paſſed over, two battalions only having croſſed the evening of the 1ſt inſtant. I ſhall remain encamped upon the ſouth ſide ſome days; and this delay, while it is neceſſary to determine the political meaſures proper to be purſued, equally ſuits the convenience of the troops; for, owing to the bad roads over which they have marched, more particularly ſince leaving Bhopal, all the artillery and gun carriages are much ſhattered and in want of repair, beſides the healthineſs of this ſpot, upon the high and open bank of a clear plentiful ſtream of water, conveniently ſituated for a ſupply of proviſions from the town of Huſſungabad, and from the neighbourhood of the Berar territories, will in all likelihood greatly recover the remaining ſick of the detachment, which upon the march from Rage Ghur amounted to a thouſand men, and at this time are reduced to about four hundred. Lala Jadou Roy, the confidential perſon ſent to meet the army, on the part of Moodajee, has waited on me ſince croſſing the Nerbudda, and has expreſſed himſelf in terms the moſt friendly and favourable to the Engliſh intereſt, which he ſays his maſter is diſpoſed to promote to the utmoſt of his power. As my arrival at this place was ſooner than had been foreſeen or expected, I ſhall halt ſome days till the particular diſpatches can arrive from the Berar Court, by which my future plan of operations ſhall be directed, which I ſhall not fail to communicate to you. I think it neceſſary to inform you, that I have not been favoured with a letter from the Select Committee at Bombay of a later date than the 21ſt July, which contained no particular intelligence whatever. I have not neglected to acquaint them from time to time with the progreſs of my march, and requeſted to receive their inſtructions and advice relative to the route of the detachment, as well as every information they could give of the motion of any bodies of troops in that quarter; I am therefore in expectation of hearing from them every day.

APPENDIX, No. 165.

Letter from Moodajee Bhoſila to the Governor General: dated the 15th of Zekaida, 5th of December 1778; and received 2d January 1779.

YOUR friendly letter of the 19th of Ramzaun, (11th of October) informing me of your having received advice of the death of Mr. Elliott in his way to Naigpore; your concern at that event, and at the unavoidable ſuſpenſion of the negociations which that gentleman was to have conducted with me on the part of your Government; and the delay in the eſtabliſhment of a ſtrict and perpetual friendſhip between the Company's States and mine, concerning which you had exerted yourſelf ſo warmly, by reaſon that the preſent ſituation of affairs would not admit of the delay which muſt attend the deputation of another perſon from thence, without injuring the deſigns in hand; but that in your conviction of my favourable diſpoſition, from the knowledge that my intereſts and the Company's are inſeparably connected, and in the zeal of Beneram Pundit, whom, during the long period he reſided with you, you found ſo deſerving of your confidence, from his ſincere attachment to our common intereſts; that you communicated to him your ſentiments and views in the moſt full and explicit manner, you have a reſource for effecting the important objects of Mr. Elliott's miſſion; that Beneram Pundit would explain to me the conditions which you ſhould require, and to which you would yield your acquieſcence; and that to him therefore you refer me for fuller information; and requeſt that I will give him an attentive hearing, as your view in the plan propoſed, and in what you have written, is to promote our common advantage, nor for the intereſt of one party only, being convinced that no public alliance or private friendſhip can be firmly eſtabliſhed without reciprocal advantages; that it is on theſe principles that you have long planned an alliance with me, the time for the accompliſhment of which is now come, for you conceive it to be equally for my intereſt as for yours, our countries bordering on each other, and our natural enemies being the ſame; that, in a word, you require nothing but the junction of my forces with yours, by which though each is ſingly very powerful, they will acquire a ten-fold proportion of ſtrength: that the delay in the progreſs of the detachment intended for Bombay had not ariſen from the oppoſition of an enemy, but from other cauſes improper to mention, but that it will now ſhortly arrive in my territories, and its operations be determined by my advice; that you have given directions to Colonel Leſlie, the commanding officer, to co-operate with the forces which I ſhall unite with his; that as you offer me the forces of your Sircar to promote my views, you in return expect the aſſiſtance of mine to effect your purpoſes; with other particulars which I fully underſtand, reached me on the 20th of Shawaul (16th November) and afforded me great pleaſure. I alſo received duplicate and triplicate of this letter; in the latter part of it you expreſs, that as you have fully made me acquainted with your views, it is neceſſary that I alſo communicate to you without reſerve the ends which I look to for my advantage in this union; that the good faith of the Engliſh to every engagement they contract, ſo long as it is obſerved by others, is univerſally known, and that it has been the invariable rule of your conduct to ſupport this character in all acts depending on you, and never to relinquiſh any deſign of importance formed on good and judicious grounds, but to perſevere ſteadily to its completion: that having thus explained to me your ſentiments and views, you wait only to know mine, and on the knowledge of theſe you ſhall form your ultimate reſolutions.

It is equally a maxim of ſincere friendſhip, of good government, ſteadineſs, magnanimity, and foreſight, that a plan formed on good and judicious grounds, ſhould be conducted in ſuch a manner as to end happily: you deſire to learn my ſentiments and views, and deferring to form your ultimate reſolutions till you heard farther from me, is the ſame thing as if you had conſulted me primarily on your firſt deſigns.

Since after the ſtricteſt ſcrutiny and reſearches into the diſpoſitions and views of the multitude, it has been determined, on proofs of mutual ſincerity and good faith, that a perpetual friendſhip and union be eſtabliſhed, it will like the wall of Alexander, for the happineſs of mankind, continue unſhaken till the end of time.

The having cauſed a tranſlation to be made into the Engliſh of the Hindoo books, called the Shaſter and Poran, Poran, and of the hiſtory of the former Kings; the ſtudying theſe books, and keeping the pictures of former Kings and preſent Rulers of Hind, Decan, &c. always before your eyes, and from their lifeleſs ſimilitudes to diſcover which of them were or are worthy of rule, and poſſeſſed of good faith, from which to determine with whom to contract engagements, and what conduct to obſerve to them reſpectively; alſo the endeavour to preſerve the bleſſing of peace, till forced to relinquiſh it; the ſupporting every one in his hereditary right, and revenging the breach of faith and engagements, but on the ſubmiſſion of the offender, the exerciſe of the virtues of clemency and generoſity, by pardoning and receiving him again to favour, and reſtoring him to his poſſeſſions; the not ſuffering the intoxication of power to ſeduce you into a breach of faith; and the giving ſupport to each illuſtrious houſe, in proportion to its reſpective merits, and in matters which require a long courſe of years to bring to perfection; the forming your conduct on mature deliberation, and the advice of the Company and Council, are the ſure means of exalting your greatneſs and proſperity to the higheſt pitch: the intention of all this is to recommend univerſal peace and friendſhip in the manner following: the Almighty diſpoſes of kingdoms, and places whomſoever he chuſes on the ſeats of power and rule, but makes their ſtability to depend on their peaceable, juſt, and friendly conduct to others: it is not every one who is equal to the taſk of government, on the plan deſigned by the Almighty Ruler, and of inſuring his ſtability by a wiſe and juſt conduct: Hind and Decan poſſeſs at preſent very few enlightened, but a great multitude of weak and ignorant men; the Engliſh Chiefs, and you in a ſuperior degree, poſſeſs all the virtues above recited; who coming from diſtant iſlands by a ſix months voyage on the great ocean, by their magnanimity and fortitude, gained the dominion of many Soubahs on that continent: it is eaſy to acquire a kingdom, but to become a King over Kings and Chief of Chiefs, is a very difficult matter: the attainment of this is only to be effected by the means of friendſhip, by which the univerſe may be ſubjected: my conduct is formed on theſe principles. The preſence of Beneram Pundit at Calcutta was ſolely to effect the eſtabliſhment of the moſt intimate friendſhip, and by the bleſſing of God it has taken ſuch deep root, that through your means it has reached the ears of the Company and King of England; and our connection and correſpondence carried on under the veil of the vicinity of our dominions, has been diſcovered by the Poonah Miniſters and the Nabob Nizam-ul-Dowlah; yet although they form various conjectures and doubts, and have ſent a truſty Vackeel, and written repeated letters to endeavour to find out the motives of our union, yet they remain a myſtery, as I make the plea of our ancient ties, and the junction of our territories.

I was impatiently expecting the arrival of Mr. Elliott, who, being endowed with an enlightened underſtanding, and inveſted with full powers from you to conduct the negociations, and determine on the meaſures to be purſued, would have eſtabliſhed the ties of perpetual friendſhip, and have ſettled every matter on the firmeſt baſis. It pleaſed God that he ſhould die on the journey; and the grief I felt on this unfortunate loſs, who would have been the means of ſettling all points between us to our mutual content, and by his negociations with me, of giving ſatisfaction to the Peiſhwa and the Nabob Nizam ul Dowlah, all which have been by his death thrown back many months, is not to be deſcribed, and could only ſerve to add to your affliction. I have not yet recovered the ſhock which this event gave me, as you will learn from Beneram Pundit: there is no remedy for ſuch misfortunes; and it is in vain to ſtrive againſt the decrees of Providence. Had Mr. Elliott arrived, ſuch ſtrokes of policy would have been employed, that the Poonah Miniſters would have adhered more ſcrupulouſly than before to their engagements; and the French, who are the natural enemies of the Engliſh, would have been theirs likewiſe; and their ſuſpicions and apprehenſions, of ſupport being given to Ragohaut Row, which never was nor is deſigned by the Engliſh Chiefs, as I learn from Beneram, who had it from your mouth, and which have cauſed them great uneaſineſs, would have been entirely removed by Mr. Elliott's and my joint ſecurity. Appendix. No. 165.

The Nabob Nizam ul Dowlah, who wrote you repeatedly on this ſubject, and received for anſwer, that you had no idea of aiding or ſupporting Ragohaut Row; that your enmity was ſolely pointed againſt the French; and that whoever aſſiſted the French were your enemies, would likewiſe by theſe means have been thoroughly ſatisfied, and your detachment would have reached Bombay without meeting with the ſmalleſt interruption; and had the Poonah Miniſters then acted a contrary part, I ſhould have withdrawn myſelf from their friendſhip: but by the death of Mr. Elliott all theſe deſigns muſt have fallen to the ground, and muſt be ſuſpended till another opportunity, and the knowledge of your ſentiments. It is a proverb, that what is deliberately done, is well done. In reply to what you write reſpecting your forming your ultimate reſolutions, I have communicated to Beneram Pundit whatever I judge proper and eligible, and which may promote them in ſuch a manner as may not be ſubject to any change from the viciſſitudes of fortune. For theſe points, which I have fixed on after the moſt mature deliberation, as the moſt eligible that can be adopted, I refer you to the letters of Beneram Pundit: if notwithſtanding you have any plan to propoſe for the reciprocal benefit of our States, be pleaſed to communicate it to me.

Poſtſcript.—To your letter reſpecting your ſending an army to over-awe the French, and to reinforce the Government of Bombay; and ſetting forth, that the Poonah Miniſters having broken the treaty with the Engliſh, and in oppoſition to the rights of friendſhip, received an Envoy of the French King, and granted the port of Choul to that nation, thereby enabling them to form an arſenal, and collect military ſtores, and of their having written to their officers to permit the French ſhips to enter their ports; all which inſtances of breach of treaty you learned from the letters of a perſon entruſted by the Poonah Government: and that it being therefore incumbent on you to take meaſures to counteract their deſigns, you had determined to ſend a ſtrong detachment for the reinforcement of Bombay, by the route of Berar; and that in conſideration of our ancient friendſhip, and the vicinity of our dominions, you requeſted that on its arrival in my neighbourhood, I would cauſe it to be inſtructed in the route; and providing it with proviſions and neceſſaries, have it conducted in ſafety through my territories, and join a body of my forces with it, which would cement and increaſe our friendſhip; and that you have, at the aſſurance of Beneram, fixed on this route for its march, in preference to any other. In reply to this letter, actuated by the dictates of the ſincereſt friendſhip, I waited not to take the advice of any one, but without heſitation wrote to you, that where a ſincere friendſhip exiſted, the paſſage of troops through one's country was a matter of no moment: that they ſhould proceed unmoleſted through my country. I likewiſe informed Colonel Leſlie of the difficulties and dangers he would meet with in the way, from dangerous mountains, extenſive rivers, &c. and alſo diſpatched Lalla Jadoo Roy, with a Chief of note, to the banks of the Nurbudder, to ſupply the detachment with proviſions as long as they were in my territory, and to treat them with all the duties of hoſpitality; where he waited ſix months, in expectation of their arrival, to no purpoſe: they loitered away their time in the Bundlecund country, contrary to every rule of policy. At that time all the Poonah Miniſters were ſeparately employed in their own private affairs, or in the war with Hyder Naig, inſomuch that they had no leiſure to turn their attention to the concerns of other parts, and the march to Bombay might have been effected with the greateſt eaſe: the time is now paſt; the arrow is ſhot, and cannot be recalled. As I have repeatedly written to the Poonah Miniſters, with whom I keep up a correſpondence, on the ſubject of their encouraging a French Envoy, and breaking their faith with the Engliſh Chiefs; acts highly inconſiſtent with honour and policy; the anſwer I have received from them I have communicated to you. The ſubſtance of what they ſay in their own juſtification is this: that the French Vackeel came for the purpoſe of traffick, not to negociate; yet, for the ſatisfaction of the Engliſh, they gave him his diſmiſſion: that the account of the grant of the port of Ghoul and an arſenal, is without foundation; and that they have not the leaſt indiſpoſition towards the Engliſh: that I will therefore write to Calcutta, that you may be perfectly ſatisfied reſpecting their diſpoſition. My letter did not produce the effect of ſatisfying you on the ſubject of the Peiſhwa, but your doubts ſtill remained; and, actuated by wiſdom and prudence, you determined to depute Mr. Elliott to me; and wrote me, that on his arrival at Naigpore, after he had had an interview with me, and learnt my ſentiments and views, he would, in conjunction with me, form a plan for our mutual honour and benefit, and give directions to Colonel Leſlie in conſequence, who would be guided thereby. The event of this gentleman's deputation is too well known; and Colonel Leſlie likewiſe, after engaging in hoſtilities with the Peiſhwa's officers and the Zemindars of thoſe parts, and collecting large ſums of money, died alſo. Colonel Goddard ſucceeded to the command, and purſued the ſame line of conduct with reſpect to the Talookdars, as his predeceſſor; and arriving at Gorawaie and Goroſur, in the territory of the Afghans, whither he was obliged to march with the utmoſt caution, being ſurrounded with a Maratta army, who conſtantly ſeized every opportunity to attack him, wrote me from thence, that he ſhould ſhortly reach the Nurbudder, where I would be pleaſed to cauſe grain, &c. neceſſary, to be prepared, and a party of my forces to be ready to join him. I wrote them in anſwer, that Lalla Jadoo Roy and Shao Balo Hazaree were waiting on this ſide the Nerbudder, which is within my territories; and that the Gaut where the troops ſhould croſs was two coſs from thence, under Hoſhungabad: that Sanojee Bhoſilia forded it at that place with his army, in his expedition to Malwa; and that I did not doubt it was now fordable: that he would therefore croſs his army there, and repair to Hoſhungabad; and that Lalla Jadoo Roy would exert his utmoſt aſſiduity in ſupporting them with grain and other proviſions, and treat them with every degree of hoſpitality: but that, as the road forwards was very difficult and dangerous, and thouſands of the Bala caſt were concealed in the holds in the mountains; who, though not able to oppoſe him openly, yet would do it by ambuſcades and ſtratagems, and would cut off his ſupplies of proviſions; and beyond that he would enter the Soubah of Berhampore, dependant on the Peiſhwa; and near four thouſand of Sindeah's cavalry were waiting at the fort of Aſſeer the arrival of the Engliſh on the banks of the Ganges; ten thouſand more, under the command of Baugrut Sindeah and Sindeah himſelf, with other Chiefs, in readineſs at Poonah, waiting to hear the approach of the Engliſh; and moreover in Berar, in which the Nabob Nizam ul Dowlah poſſeſſes a ſhare with me, all the Jagheerdars, to wit, Huſhmud Jung Behadre, Sellabut Khan Behadre, and Belool Khan Behadre, the ſons of Iſhmail Khan, deceaſed, as alſo Bullund Khan Mye, Bharam Jung; and in Newmull, Zuffer ul Dowlah, Mobarez ul Mulk Bahadre, were in readineſs with powerful armies; and although the Engliſh poſſeſſed the greateſt magnanimity in battle, yet as every ſtep they took would be into the mouth of danger, and all the above-mentioned Chiefs would ſet themſelves to cut off and deſtroy his proviſions, and take every opportunity of attacking him where they ſaw an advantage, and of haraſſing him night and day; conſtantly ſurrounding his army with their numerous forces, the junction of a body of my forces with his would avail nothing in the face of ſuch large armies, but would only involve me in the greateſt loſſes: that neither was it adviſable for him to return, which would diminiſh the awe and reſpect in which he was held: that I would therefore write the full particulars, in the moſt explicit manner, to Calcutta; and that whatever you ſhould think proper to intimate to him and me in reply, it would be adviſable to abide by, and act accordingly; till which time I would recommend that he continued at Hoſhungabad: that I had received letters from Calcutta, filled with the warmeſt aſſurances of friendſhip and confidence, to the following purport, that the detachment would come into my neighbourhood, and be guided in its operations by my advice; that it is incumbent on every Chief, who enjoys the confidence of another, to give ſuch advice as may be moſt advantageous to the party repoſing truſt in him, and moſt conſiſtent with the faith of engagements, and with ſuch conduct the Almighty is well peaſed: that I had alſo written to the Poonah Miniſters my advice on the ſituation of affairs, to this purport, that Mr. Elliott was deputed hither to negociate with me, but dying in the journey, all the negociations entruſted to him were ſuſpended; that had he arrived at Naigpore, I had determined, from principles of attachment, to have removed from the minds of the Engliſh the doubts and apprehenſions which had ariſen by reaſon of the ſuppoſed encouragement of the French envoy at Poonah, and the agreement to ſupport that nation, the inveterate enemies of the Engliſh which had given riſe to the quarrel between the two States; by proving to them, under the ſanction of ſolemn oaths, and becoming myſelf guarantee, that thoſe reports were groundleſs, and that the Poonah Miniſters were zealous and ſteady in their engagements with the Engliſh, and on ſeveral accounts highly obliged to them; and I would alſo have taken from Mr. Elliott engagements that the Engliſh had no idea of affording ſupport to Ragonaut Row, but were reſolved to maintain their treaty inviolate, and that their apprehenſions related to the French; and that when I gave the Engliſh ſatisfaction reſpecting the French, and became guarantee, all his doubts were removed: That if it were requiſite, a freſh engagement ſhould be executed, and that he would be guarantee to it. That in brief, each party entertained a reaſonable doubt, the Engliſh that the Poonah Miniſters would join with the French, and the Poonah Miniſters that the Engliſh would ſupport Ragonaut Row. That when theſe ſuſpicions no longer remained, all cauſes of diſpleaſure muſt of courſe ceaſe; and that they could then have had no objection to the detachment of Engliſh forces, ſent for the reinforcement of Bombay, and to overawe the French, not for the ſupport of Ragonaut Row, repairing thither; and to oppoſe them would in ſuch caſe have been highly improper, as Mr. Elliott and myſelf would have been guarantees to the engagement: that as theſe important objects have failed, in conſequence of the unfortunate loſs of Mr. Elliott, and depended on advices from Calcutta; and that the purport of all the letters I have received from thence, and of the aſſurances of Beneram, was, that the detachment of Engliſh forces was ſolely deſtined for the reinforcement of Bombay, in conſequence of apprehenſions of hoſtile deſigns on the part of the French, without the ſmalleſt deſign to ſupport Ragonaut Row; that it was therefore adviſable in them not to give any interruption to the march of the detachment, but to ſuffer it to march peaceably to Bombay; that the event muſt at any rate by theſe means be put off to a diſtant period. That the above was the purport of my letters to Poonah, and thoſe of Baboo Row, who is not merely a Vackeel, but one of the Chiefs of Poonah. That we muſt wait to ſee what anſwer they would give, by which time letters would likewiſe arrive

arrive from Calcutta. That it was therefore adviſable that he ſhould remain at Hoſhengabad, preſerving the ſtricteſt watch and vigilance, as Balajee and Byſajee were lying in wait for a favourable opportunity; and that he ſhould be furniſhed with proviſions from hence to the utmoſt poſſible.

I have written thus to Colonel Goddard, but have not yet received his anſwer; and, induced by the ſincereſt friendſhip, I have given you this explicit information. Inform me of your ſentiments, and of the meaſures which your enlightened underſtanding points out to you, that Colonel Goddard may regulate himſelf thereby.

Poſtſcript.—Baboo Row, the Peiſhwa's Vackeel, has obſerved to me in the courſe of converſation, that his maſter has not the ſlighteſt idea of failing in his enagements with the Engliſh, or of contracting any friendſhip with the French; but that the treaty forbids the march of Engliſh forces through the Peiſhwa's dominions, and that the approach of the detachment now on its march, is an infringement of the treaty. Mr. James Anderſon is frequently acquainted with all the matters; nothing is concealed from him. Ramkaund, Mr. Elliott's Paſhcur, has alſo written regarding them, from which you will receive complete information.

Poſtſcript.—Although it may be improper to repeat the ſame thing over again, yet the importance of the ſubject may plead in my excuſe. On either part a doubt ſubſiſts. The Poonah Miniſters ſuſpect that the Engliſh forces on their march to Bombay, though oſtenſibly for the purpoſe of oppoſing the French, are in reality intended for the ſupport of Ragonaut Row; and that the Engliſh at Bombay, who were not included in the treaty with the Peiſhwa, which was concluded through the Governor of Madras with the advice of the Chief of Calcutta, are deſirous of breaking with the Peiſhwa, and of ſupporting Ragonaut Row; and that the detachment on its march has been ſent at their requiſition. They allege, that the Chief of Calcutta writes to them that he is firmly reſolved to adhere to the treaty with the Peiſhwa, and that the detachment he has ſent to Bombay is ſolely to awe the French, without the leaſt deſign to aſſiſt Ragonaut Row; and that ſince it is forbidden in the treaty to diſpatch troops over land, the march of the troops is a breach of it: that if it is neceſſary to ſend troops to Bombay to awe the French, they ought to be ſent by ſea.

The Engliſh on their part ſuſpect the Poonah Miniſters of joining the French, in conſequence of their having received a Vackeel. As the Peiſhwa formerly wrote me that he had no idea of failing in his engagements with the Engliſh; and that he had given no encouragement to the French Vackeel, who came for the purpoſes of traffic; and that he had diſmiſſed him, and therefore requeſted that I would ſatisfy you reſpecting him; I in conſequence formerly wrote all theſe particulars to you. As I have a voucher in my hands from the Peiſhwa, that he has no connection with the French, and is ſteady to his engagements with the Engliſh, I am able by this voucher to give you complete ſatisfaction on this head; but I have no voucher nor intimation from you by which I may be enabled to give ſatisfaction to him.

As he pleads a prohibition in the treaty to the march of forces over land, and likewiſe complains reſpecting the money that Colonel Leſlie collected in his territories, what anſwer can be made thereto?

As the times require that a conciliation take place with the Poonah Miniſters, you will conſider and determine what reply ſhall be given to theſe two points of which they complain, and by what means they may be ſatisfied; and communicate your reſolution to me, that I may write conformably thereto, and remove all doubts.

From Dewagur Pundit. Received 2d January 1779.

'Your friendly letter, under date the 19th of Ramzaun (11th of October 1778) intimating your having, on the news of Mr. Elliott's death, entruſted the repreſentation of the points of negociation committed to the charge of that gentleman, to Beneram Pundit; your having delayed to form your ultimate reſolutions till you receive further advices from hence; your having appointed Colonel Goddard to take the command of the army in the room of Colonel Leſlie, who is to be conſidered as fully empowered in every point of negociation; your deſire that your army may be accompanied to Bombay by a body of the forces of this Government; and in concluſion intimating that Colonel Goddard will ſhortly arrive in this neighbourhood, and regulate his future operations for the common intereſt, by the advice and concurrence of the Maha Rajah, for which purpoſe you have written the neceſſary inſtructions to the Colonel, who will conduct himſelf accordingly, reached me on the 26th of Shawal (16th November) followed by duplicate and triplicate, and accompanied by three Karetahs for the Maha Rajah, my maſter, and inſpired me with the utmoſt pleaſure. From this letter I become fully acquainted with your ſentiments and views, and of your unchangeable friendſhip to the Maha Rajah; and likewiſe underſtand what Biſſembur Pundit wrote at your deſire to his brother Beneram Pundit.

Appendix No. 165.

By the death of Mr. Elliott, who would have been the means of ſettling many points of the utmoſt importance, all matters were thrown into ſuſpence, and became dependant on further advices from Calcutta. The repetition of the grief felt by the Maha Rajah and myſelf at this unfortunate event, could ſerve no other purpoſe than to renew your affliction; there is no remedy againſt the decrees of Providence. The objects which would have been effected by Mr. Elliott's magnanimity are now thrown back many months, but by the bleſſing of God, will take effect at a favourable opportunity, and your views and deſigns be fully accompliſhed. I am employed day and night in meaſures for the augmentation and perpetual duration of friendſhip between your illuſtrious States. The Maha Raja has very fully written you on the ſtate of affairs, the meaſures which the times require, and the means for the uninterrupted paſſage of the forces deſtined for Bombay; and of his having written in the moſt effectual terms to the Poonah Miniſters on this ſubject; and that in theſe letters he has ſolely attended to the dictates of that warm friendſhip which he feels for you, diſregarding every other conſideration; as alſo of his having unreſervedly communicated to Colonel Goddard his ſentiments and advice on the conduct to be purſued; from that letter, you will have complete information, for it contains the dictates of the heart, and every ſentiment of it proceeds from the trueſt friendſhip, the cleareſt behaviour, and ſoundeſt policy, and will doubtleſs meet with your approval, and produce a reply to the Maha Rajah and Colonel Goddard, with ſuch inſtructions as your judgment ſhall point out to you as beſt adapted to the ſituation of the times: Colonel Goddard has been written to, to continue at Hoſhengabad, which is within the dominions of this State, till ſuch time as advices are received from you, becauſe it is by no means adviſable to proceed forwards into the territory of the Peiſhwa; where no progreſs can be made without fighting, and all the Chiefs with numerous forces are waiting the approach of the Engliſh army, and taking meaſures to ſtop their receiving ſupplies of proviſions, to ſeize on all the paſſes and Ghauts, and difficult roads, but no anſwer has been yet received from Colonel Goddard. We muſt wait to ſee whether he will conſent to remain at Hoſhengabad, or determine to proceed forward, but it is certainly moſt adviſable that he ſhould continue there, which is in the territory of this State, till he hears further from you. He will be ſupplied with proviſions from hence to the utmoſt poſſible.

Byſajee and Balajee Pundit, Talookdars of the Peiſhwa, who conſtantly encompaſs the army, and haraſs it by daily ſkirmiſhes, and have plundered ſome of the baggage, have been written to, that ſuch conduct is highly improper, improper, as the detachment is intended for the reinforcement of Bombay; and to awe the French, not for the ſupport of Ragonaut Row; that the Poonah Miniſters will not approve of their conduct, and that they will ſhortly receive letters from Poonah. I have no doubt but they will pay attention to what has been written to them, and ſuſpend their hoſtilities.

Whenever the army begins its march from Hoſhengabad, the Marattas will inſtantly ſet themſelves in oppoſition, but by remaining in this city which is in the dominion of the Maha Rajah, they will be in a ſtate of perfect ſecurity: their artillery and the guards which they will ſtation around them, will prevent their receiving any injury. In the mean time, replies will be received from Poonah, and intelligence of their force, and of the deſigns of Scindea and Holcar will be learnt; in conſequence of which, a proper plan may be formed for the march of the army. Set your mind at reſt, that the Colonel will experience no inſtance of the ſlighteſt failure or inattention from this quarter, but every thing ſhall be done, and his honour ſhall be conſidered in the ſame light as our own, and his deſires paid equal attention to as our own. Beneram Pundit has received inſtructions to reply to the important points repreſented by him at your deſire. From his letters you will have full information.

Mr. James Anderſon, Captain Campbell, and Ramkund, Mr. Elliott's Peiſhcur, are arrived here; agreeable to your deſire all matters are communicated to theſe gentlemen, and in conſequence of your recommendation, they have been received here with every degree of honour and attention. They have likewiſe, at our deſire, written what was judged proper to Colonel Goddard.

Having made themſelves acquainted with every matter, and of the Maha Rajah's candour and warm friendſhip towards you, they have written your Excellency on the ſubject, to which letters I beg leave to refer you for full information on theſe points. I impatiently wait your reply.

From Beneram Pundit. Received 2d January 1779.

I have been honoured with your three gracious letters, intimating your having received accounts of the death of Mr. Elliott on his way to Naigpore; your grief on that event; your not appointing another perſon in his room; your reſource for remedying the delay which had ariſen in the objects of that gentleman's miſſion; and your appointing me to the truſt of repreſenting your ſentiments and views to the Maha Rajah my maſter, and Dewan Dewagur Pundit, and communicating to your Highneſs their ſentiments in conſequence. The receipt of theſe letters afforded me the greateſt pleaſure.

I have made a full repreſentation to my maſter and the Dewan, of whatever I had formerly learnt from you, and of all the particulars contained in my brother's letters written at your deſire. The Maha Rajah's reply thereto was as follows:—Where a ſincere and intimate friendſhip ſubſiſts, a free and unreſerved communication of all matters, is the moſt certain means of augmenting and carrying it to the higheſt pitch; that in a word, by the delay of Colonel Leſlie for a term of ſix months in the Bundlecund country, a meaſure highly impolitic, the opportunity was loſt; that the Poonah Miniſters had been all engaged in their reſpective affairs, and had no leiſure to pay attention to the concerns of any other part, by which means the detachment might have proceeded to Bombay with the utmoſt facility, and without the ſmalleſt oppoſition. That immediately on the receipt of your Highneſs's letter, he had ſent Lalla Jadoo Roy to wait at the Nurbudder, and on the arrival of the detachment within his territories, to uſe every means to ſupply them with proviſions, and to afford them every kind of aſſiſtance; that he remained there ſix months unprofitably, and that affairs then took a different aſpect, for the Poonah Miniſters, apprehenſive of ſupport being given to Ragonaut Row, which never was nor ever will be thought of by your Highneſs, collected together armies, and ſtationed them in different parts. That for the purpoſe of removing their ſuſpicions, he had written to them with aſſurances, that the Engliſh detachment were repairing to Bombay, with the ſole deſign of reinforcing that Government, and awing the French, the natural enemies of the Engliſh, and had no other deſign in view; that they ſhould be perfectly ſatisfied on this account, and not give way to ſuſpicions, which were unworthy of credit.

There is great reaſon to believe that theſe letters will produce the deſired effect, and that ſatisfactory anſwers will be returned. The Maha Rajah and Dewan Dewagur Pundit have written you very voluminouſly on this ſubject; the letter of the former conſiſting of ſix ſheets of paper, from which you will have complete information.

Colonel Goddard, after the death of Colonel Leſlie, marched from Chattapore, and with unparalleled bravery, exceeding all deſcription, has, by daily marches, in ſpite of every poſſible oppoſition from the Talookdars of thoſe parts, to wit, Byſajee, Bylajee, and others, who have thrown every obſtruction in his way, forced his paſſage to Bopaul. The Maha Rajah and Dewan Dewagur Pundit have written to Byſajee, and other Talookdars to relinquiſh ſo improper and unjuſtifiable a conduct, in which, if they perſiſt, the event will prove fatal to them.

The detachment will ſoon arrive on the banks of the Nurbudder, this ſide of which river is in my maſter's territories. Lalla Jadoo Roy and Shas Sing Hazzaree, are at Hoſhengabad, on the bank of the river, and will employ their utmoſt endeavours to ſupply the detachment with proviſions, &c. and orders have been iſſued to bring proviſions to the army from every quarter. As ſoon as they arrive within the Maha Rajah's territories they will be ſecure from all oppoſition; but as the route forward is very difficult, and the hills are very ſteep and dangerous, and by the direction of the Poonah Miniſters multitudes of Bahlas and others are ſtationed in different parts to oppoſe the progreſs of the army, it has therefore been judged adviſable, and has been recommended to Colonel Goddard, that as the moſt intimate connection ſubſiſts between the two States, he will for the preſent encamp on the bank of the Nerbudda, and will be guided in his future motions by the ſituation of affairs and the reſult of the common deliberations; that it will be proper maturely to reflect on the probable event before the commencement of any undertaking; and that it is the part of wiſdom and ſound judgment, before any further ſteps are taken, to determine by what means they are to be ſupported, that no unſteadineſs may hereafter ariſe. Whatever meaſures may be adopted by mutual conſent after the arrival of the detachment at the Nurbudder, I will communicate to you. For further particulars I beg leave to refer you to the letters of Mr. James Anderſon and Biſſembur Pundit.

Poſtſcript.—Your gracious letter, through the channel of Colonel Goddard, informing me of your having appointed him to the command of the detachment, and that not being able to explain yourſelf on ſeveral points ſo fully as you could have wiſhed, you have referred him to me for particular information, has made me happy by its arrival. As the river Nurbudder is only eight days journey from Naigpore, as ſoon as the Colonel arrives there, I will repair thither, and ſtate every matter fully to him; and whatever ſhall be determined on with the Colonel's advice ſhall be carried into execution, and I will give information thereof to you.

From Moodajee Boſila. Received 2d January 1779.

I have had the pleaſure to receive four letters from you; two by the way of Benares, one by the route of Cuttack, and another from the hands of Mr. James Anderſon. You write that ſince Mr. Elliott is dead, Mr. Anderſon and Mr. Campbell will proceed to Naigpore; and that as Mr. Anderſon is a gentleman of worth, and acquainted acquainted with the Perſian and Hindoſtan languages, he may be of uſe in explaining Colonel Goddard's negociations; and will write to the Colonel whatever he may in conjunction with me deem proper; that he will remain with me at Naigpore, and will with my concurrence write you all the occurrences of this quarter. The aforeſaid gentleman, together with Ramkund, Mr. Elliott's Peiſhcur, arrived here in ſafety, and have frequently viſited me. Mr. Anderſon exceeds your deſcription in worth, and in his perfect knowledge of affairs; Ramkund is likewiſe well verſed in affairs, and poſſeſſed of penetration and ſound judgment. I have already made, and will make them acquainted with all correſpondence which has paſſed, or may paſs between us; and alſo with Colonel Goddard, as well as the advices from Poonah and the Nabob Nizam ul Moulk; and I have cauſed them to tranſmit you in Engliſh and Perſian the particulars of my letters to you and Colonel Goddard; the affairs of this quarter; and the ſubſtance of the advices from Poonah; as well as the account of Colonel Goddard's arrival at Bopaul; his being encompaſſed by the armies of Byſajee and Balajee, and of his daily ſkirmiſhes with them; and that by the bleſſing of God he will reach the Nurbudder in another week, and having croſſed the river will come to Hoſhengabad; and agreeable to my advice, founded on ſound policy, and the letters which I have deſired Mr. Anderſon to write to him, will encamp there, where he will be furniſhed by me with proviſions, and wait for further advices from Calcutta. You will receive fuller information on all theſe points from my letters under charge of the firſt Coſſids which arrive here, in which having written at large, it is unneceſſary to dwell longer on the ſubject in this place.

I have likewiſe written letters to Poonah to remove their ſuſpicions and apprehenſions on the ſubject of Ragonaut Row, aſſuring them that this detachment was proceeding to Bombay, for the purpoſe of awing the French, not for the ſupport of Ragonaut Row, and giving them advice touching their conduct. We ſhall ſee what anſwer they return; I will communicate it to you as ſoon as it arrives; in a word, I have no other wiſh or deſign than the preſervation and increaſe of friendſhip with the Engliſh Chiefs, and of keeping on good terms with the Poonah Miniſters, which the ſituation of the times renders neceſſary; that by theſe means the detachment deſtined for Bombay may reach that place with facility, and experience no hoſtilities in its paſſage. Confiding in the candour and ſincerity which ſubſiſts between us, you may implicitly rely on the above aſſertions.

From Dewagur Pundit. Received 2d January 1779.

I have been honoured with the receipt of your friendly letters, written after the deceaſe of Mr. Elliott, informing me, that Mr. James Anderſon, a gentleman of great worth and abilities, and well verſed in the Perſian and Hindoſtan languages, will remain at Naigpore, and explain the advices received from Colonel Goddard, and will write to the Colonel whatever he may in conjunction with us deem proper, and communicate the ſame to you; that I will therefore make him acquainted with every matter, and regard him as a perſon worthy of confidence. Theſe letters gave me great pleaſure, and from your former and late Karetahs, and letters repeatedly received by the way of Cuttack and Benares, I am perfectly acquainted with your ſentiments and deſigns, the principal of which appears to be the paſſage of the detachment to Bombay, with the advice and concurrence of this Government, which will be attended with reciprocal advantages to both States. I have alſo explained all matters, from firſt to laſt, to Mr. Anderſon, and have replied fully to theſe letters without the leaſt reſerve, ſtating the moſt eligible mode for the paſſage of the army to Bombay, and the removal of the Peiſhwa's ſuſpicions, which the preſent ſituation of affairs renders neceſſary, without ſuffering the leaſt point to eſcape me; and to thoſe letters I muſt refer you, having on mature reflection formed your judgment on the ſeveral points contained therein, and regarding the letters from hence as dictated by the warmeſt attachment and zeal, you will return an explicit anſwer with your ſentiments and advice, that Colonel Goddard, who is now arrived in the country of Bopaul, under the dominion of the Afghans, and is daily engaged in conteſts with Byſajee and Balajee, Talookdars of the Peiſhwa, and who, by the favour of the Almighty, will reach the Nurbudder in another week, and in conſequence of letters from hence will encamp at Hoſhengabad, on this ſide the river, and under the dominion of this State, and wait there for freſh advices from Calcutta, may conduct himſelf thereby. In what I have written I have no other intereſt than my attachment to the proſperity of both States, and my deſire to comply with the views both of the Maha Raja and the Engliſh, and have guided myſelf by the dictates of prudence and foreſight. Appendix No. 165.

Mr. Anderſon and Ramkaund have written you a particular account of what they have ſeen and heard, and from them you will have complete information. The company of Mr. Anderſon and Ramkaund has afforded me the higheſt pleaſure, as they are perſons of diſtinguiſhed worth and underſtanding; they are both here and well, and have written to Colonel Goddard whatever was mutually judged proper to induce him to remain at Hoſhengabad: we are in expectation of the Colonel's reply thereto. The Poonah Miniſters have been written to to remove their ſuſpicions; aſſuring them that the Engliſh Chiefs have not the ſmalleſt deſign to ſupport Ragonaut Row, and that the detachment on its march to Bombay has been ſent thither ſolely from apprehenſions of the French; that they may be aſſured of this, and ſhould not obſtruct or moleſt them in their paſſage, which will inflame the diſputes to the greateſt degree.

There is little doubt but their anſwer will be as formerly, that they have not the leaſt deſign to break their engagements with the Engliſh; and if ſuch idea has been formed from the reception of a French Vackeel, it is entirely groundleſs; and that whoever has written to that effect to Calcutta has been actuated by falſehood; that he came for the purpoſe of traffic, and that they diſmiſſed him to ſatisfy the doubt entertained by the Engliſh; that we will therefore ſatisfy you on this head: but for the purpoſe of ſatisfying their doubts by an aſſurance that you have no idea of ſupporting Ragonaut Row, and that the detachment you have ſent is deſigned againſt the French, and that if the Engliſh Government of Bombay, who had no concern in the formation of the treaty, ſhould on this account wiſh to break the peace, and require aſſiſtance from you, no attention ſhall be paid to them, but they ſhall be diſmiſſed from their ſtations, and that a perſon of credit ſhall be given as guarantee for the performance (for without ſuch a guarantee they will never be ſatisfied.) Whatever you may judge adviſable in this caſe be pleaſed to communicate to me, that they may receive ſatisfaction.

It is my opinion that ſuch meaſures ſhould be taken as may conciliate the mind of the Peiſhwa, and till this point is effected, that Colonel Goddard ſhould remain at Hoſhengabad.

I have been induced to make theſe two propoſitions entirely by principles of the ſincereſt friendſhip to the Engliſh Chiefs, and from a view into futurity. Whatever is your opinion, be pleaſed to make it known to me. It is the duty of friendſhip to labour for the intereſt of both States: for the reſt, it remains with you.

What I have lately learnt from Baboo Row, the Peiſhwa's Vackeel, and the letters of the Poonah Miniſters, is as follows:—that they are firm to the treaty they have contracted with the Engliſh; that they gave no encouragement to the French Vackeel; that he came to traffic, and they diſmiſſed him; that whilſt they adhered to their engagements, the march of an Engliſh army through their territories and the collection of large ſums of money in different places, and moleſting and injuring the diſtricts and perſons of their Talookdars, were evident inſtances of a breach of treaty; what other judgment could they form of it? That ſince the treaty prohibits the march of Engliſh forces over land, to what motive are they to attribute ſuch a meaſure? That if it is neceſſary to ſend a force to Bombay for the reinforcement of that ſettlement, and to awe the French, they ſhould ſend it by ſea, and thereby avoid a breach of treaty: that as they have been guilty of no violation of their engagements, the preſervation of them on the part of the Engliſh is neceſſary to good faith: that the detachment muſt not therefore come by land, but be tranſported by ſea to Bombay, and the money taken from the Talookdars and other places, be reſtored as good faith requires. Such are the intimations which have been received from the Poonah Miniſters, with a requiſition that letters to this effect may be written from hence to Calcutta, and that endeavours may be uſed to confirm the treaty between them and the Engliſh Chiefs, on the terms above-mentioned, and ſatisfactory aſſurances given you, that they neither have, nor will enter into any friendſhip or connection with the French; in brief, ſuch is the purport of their late letters, and Baboo Row confirms the ſubſtance. Whatever you deem adviſable you will therefore be pleaſed to communicate to me without delay.

APPENDIX, No. 166.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 11th January 1779.

PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident;

Richard Barwell, Philip Francis, Edward Wheler, } Eſquires.

MR. Francis—I deſire that the letters received on the 2d, and recorded in the Perſian Correſpondence on the 9th inſtant, from Moodajee Booſla and his miniſters, may be read; and that a minute, which I ſhall ſend in circulation this evening, on the ſubject of theſe letters, may be entered in this place.

Agreed to.

The following minute from Mr. Francis is therefore recorded in this place:

Mr. Francis—I have nothing to object to the pious precepts and excellent moral inſtructions contained in this letter: whether they come ſeaſonably or not, at a time when deep plans of policy and decided acts of vigour might have been expected from our intended ally, inſtead of a general diſcourſe upon the duties of a ſtateſman; or how far ſuch a diſcourſe may with propriety be addreſſed to the chief member of this Government; are queſtions very little neceſſary to be conſidered at preſent. It is of no ſort of moment to us now, to inquire into the moral character or religious creed of this Maratta; though it might have been prudent in us to have been ſomewhat better acquainted with both, before we truſted him ſo far. From other parts of his letters, we may collect information of a more intereſting nature. If we really mean the public ſervice; if we mean to ſave Colonel Goddard's army, and to provide for the ſecurity of the Company's poſſeſſions, let us not obſtinately ſhut our eyes to the evidence before us. After examining the facts without prejudice or paſſion let us draw the natural and obvious concluſions from thoſe facts, and deavour to act firmly and conſiſtently upon both.

For my own part, the declarations contained in Moodajee Booſla's letter to Colonel Goddard, recorded on the 21ſt December, appeared to me ſufficiently explicit: a majority of the Board however ſtill thought it neceſſary to wait for ſome farther explanations; but now I preſume that not a ſhadow of doubt can remain with any of us concerning his real ſentiments and reſolutions. The moſt material points of fact aſcertained by the preſent letters, and by which our meaſures muſt be immediately directed, are, 1ſt, That ſo late as the 5th of December, Moodajee Booſla does not appear to have had the leaſt idea of the extent or nature of the Governor General's views in the propoſed alliance, though we have been informed that his Vackeel Beneram Pundit, was perfectly poſſeſſed of the project of that alliance, from ſeveral converſations which he had had with the Governor General in Calcutta, and was authorized to communicate the ſame to his maſter.

2d, That whatever degree of information the Rajah might poſſeſs on this ſubject, and admitting his ignorance of the Governor's plan to be merely affected, he appears plainly to have no ſort of diſpoſition to catch at the objects preſented to his ambition, or to run the riſque of a rupture either with the Peiſhwa, or with the Nizam, much leſs with both at the ſame inſtant, for the ſake of any offer that we can make him. On this point his declarations are clear and decided.

3d, That ſo far from ſhewing a diſpoſition to join us againſt his countrymen, he ſays expreſsly, "That the "junction of a body of his forces with Colonel Goddard "would avail nothing in the face of ſuch large armies, "but would only involve himſelf in the greateſt loſſes."

4th, That it is his, Moodajee Booſla's opinion, founded on reaſons, which, if he does not deceive us, are ſufficiently ſolid, that the detachment cannot proceed towards Bombay without the greateſt difficulty and danger, nor return without diſgrace.

5th, That ſo far from entering into an offenſive alliance with us againſt the Poonah Government, he inſiſts on the neceſſity of our coming to an immediate conciliation with them, and of our previouſly giving them ſatisfaction for the march of our army through their country, and for the large ſums collected from their Zemindars, firſt by Colonel Leſlie, and afterwards by Colonel Goddard, who, he ſays, has purſued the ſame line of conduct with reſpect to the Talookdars as his predeceſſor.

The peruſal of theſe voluminous letters will ſuggeſt many other intereſting reflections to our ſuperiors. One circumſtance in particular I think deſerves their notice: notwithſtanding the detachment was for ſome months under the orders of the Preſidency of Bombay, whoſe deſigns were very explicitly communicated to us; and although the commanding officer was inſtructed to cooperate with them in the plan they had formed for the ſupport of Ragoba; and notwithſtanding all the meaſures taken here profeſſedly originated from the communication which we received in January laſt, of certain overtures propoſed to have been made by the Miniſters for reinſtating Ragoba, Moodajee Booſla now affirms, that his Vackeel had it from Mr. Haſtings's own mouth, "That it never was nor is deſigned by the Engliſh "Chiefs to ſupport Ragoba." The good advice contained in theſe letters is in effect the ſevereſt reflection on the levity and precipitancy of our Councils; and probably has no other meaning, but to ſhew the Governor General in what reſpect Moodajee Booſla holds a ſtateſman, who profeſſes to have departed from the common line of policy in the whole of his conduct. If we were not become the objects of his ſcorn, would our boaſted ally take ſuch a time to tell us, "That it is a proverb, that "whatever is deliberately done is well done; that it will "be proper maturely to reflect on the probable event, "before the commencement of any undertaking; and "that it is the part of wiſdom and ſound judgment, "before any further ſteps are taken, to determine by what "means they are to be ſupported, that no unſteadineſs "may hereafter ariſe?" What muſt this Maratta think of the prudence of a Government, which ſends an army a thouſand a thouſand miles forward into any enemy's country, on the preſumption of receiving aſſiſtance on the ſpot, without any treaty previouſly concluded, without a ſingle condition agreed on; without one ſtipulation formed for the operations, for the proceeding, or for the retreat of that army; and even without knowing the general ſentiments, views, or diſpoſition of the Prince, on whoſe future ſupport we placed our dependance? I do not wonder that Moodajee Booſla ſhould feel no inclination to unite his fortune with ſuch a Government: but let us now at leaſt profit by his advice, as far as the circumſtances we are reduced to will admit. In the natural order of things, deliberation ſhould go before meaſures; with us, it muſt follow them.

Colonel Goddard's army is now near eleven degrees weſt of Calcutta: we have no other way of tracing his progreſs, or aſcertaining his diſtance from us, but by obſerving, as accurately as we can, the latitude and longitude of his poſition, on a general map of India. If he attempts to proceed, it muſt be into the mouth of danger: if he retreats, it will reflect diſhonour on our arms: if he advances into Berar, it is againſt the advice of the Rajah, who inſiſts on his remaining where he is, and who, I preſume, will never ſuffer an Engliſh army to march into the heart of his country, eſpecially when he hears that another detachment is preparing to enter it from the eaſtward: this meaſure, ſo far from giving him encouragement to join us, muſt naturally fill him with jealouſy and diſtruſt. Without inſiſting on the faithleſs character uniformly attributed to the Marattas, theſe motives alone are ſufficient to put him on his guard againſt us; while others equally powerful may induce him to take advantage of the critical ſituation of our army, and to compromiſe his own differences with the Peiſhwa and the Nizam at our expence. At all events, I preſume it cannot be diſputed, that the ſafety of the detachment depends greatly on the good faith of Moodajee Booſla.

In this ſituation, we have a choice of difficulties before us. Whatever reſolution we adopt, will, I fear, be liable to ſuch objections, as will admit of no better anſwer, than that ſtill greater objections may be urged againſt any other.

We may order Colonel Goddard, at all events, to proceed to Bombay; or to move towards our weſtern frontier, through Berar; or to return as expeditiouſly as he can, by the way he went: I am againſt the firſt, becauſe I am convinced it cannot be attempted without the greateſt hazard to the detachment, or with the ſmalleſt probability of ſucceſs. I conſider it as one common and equally eſſential intereſt of all the Powers of India, to oppoſe the march of an Engliſh army acroſs the Continent; and by defeating the attempt in the firſt inſtance, to deter us from ever forming ſuch an enterprize again; Moodajee Booſla himſelf ſtates the danger to us, in terms which ſufficiently expreſs his opinion of the impoſſibility of ſurmounting it: with reſpect to Bombay, notwithſtanding all that has been ſaid of the deep deſigns of the French, that place is actually in no danger, and if it were, this is not the way of providing for its defence.

I am againſt the ſecond, becauſe it appears, that the Rajah himſelf is very averſe to letting Colonel Goddard come into his country, and inſiſts on his ſtaying where he is: if the army ſhould move into Berar without the conſent and without ſome ſtipulations previouſly determined with him, it will always be in his power to ſacrifice them to the Poonah Government, or to the Nizam, if they can make it his intereſt to do ſo. For my own part, I am very much inclined to think, that all his late delays and uncertainties are affected for no other purpoſe than to give his countrymen time to complete their preparations, and to ſurround Colonel Goddard: no choice then is left but to order Colonel Goddard to return as he went; I do not ſay, that this meaſure will not leſſen the opinion which the Powers of India may hitherto have entertained of the councils of this Government; it may alſo be thought in ſome degree diſgraceful to our arms; but neither is this of weight againſt other ſuperior conſiderations, nor do I apprehend, that if no direct impreſſion be made upon our army, its bare retreat will prove any thing, but the extreme imprudence of thoſe meaſures, which have left us no other option; at the ſame time, I think that proper letters ſhould be written to the Peiſhwa, to inform him of this alteration; to deſire that the army may retire without moleſtation; and to aſſure him, that we are ſincerely diſpoſed to come to a conciliation with him, and to adjuſt whatever differences may have unfortunately ariſen between his Government and ours in an amicable manner, and agreeably to the terms and principles of the treaty of Poonah. Appendix. No. 166.

The time which has elapſed ſince the receipt of Moodajee Booſla's letter, and the critical ſituation of the detachment, make it indiſpenſably neceſſary that ſome clear and deciſive orders ſhould be immediately diſpatched to Colonel Goddard; I ſhall be ready to correct or alter my opinion if I ſee juſt and ſolid reaſons urged againſt it. (Signed) P. Francis.

Governor General—I have received Mr. Francis's minute, but do not think it neceſſary or proper to reply to it. (Signed) W. H.

The following minutes from Mr. Wheler and the Governor General were returned with the above minute from Mr. Francis.

Mr. Wheler—The obſervations contained in Mr. Francis's minute appear to me too ſtrong and too well ſupported, not to deſerve a reply: I have no doubt of their attracting the particular attention of the Court of Directors: at any rate, the ſituation of Colonel Goddard's army makes it neceſſary, that ſome clear and deciſive orders ſhould be ſent him without further delay: I ſee by the book of Perſian Correſpondence, that the Governor General has letters from him as late as the 17th December; at that time Moodajee Booſla does not appear to have altered the reſolution expreſſed in his former letters, of not engaging with us againſt the Peiſhwa: if the news we have juſt received ſhould prove true, that the Preſidency of Bombay have ſent an army to Poonah, under the command of General Carnac, in order to reinſtate Ragoba, an alliance with Moodajee Booſla on the plan of Mr. Elliott's inſtructions becomes impracticable; the Rajah of courſe will conclude, that we mean nothing but to deceive him, or at leaſt, that we have no authority over the Preſidency of Bombay; but let him think as he will of the ſincerity and good faith of this Government, he will naturally make this a plea for not proceeding in any negociation with Colonel Goddard.

In theſe circumſtances, it becomes a queſtion of the greateſt importance to determine, what Colonel Goddard is to do.

I preſume, it is not meant that he ſhould remain much longer on the banks of the Nerbudda; and if he is to move, the object of his future operations, and the place of his deſtination ought to be clearly pointed out; this queſtion is every day embarraſſed with new facts and freſh difficulties, which no information at preſent before the Board is ſufficient to clear up. Waiting therefore for thoſe lights which I preſume the Governor General is able to give us, I ſhall content myſelf at preſent with urging the neceſſity of immediately reſuming the ſubject, and of coming to ſome reſolution on the final orders to be given to Colonel Goddard.

Governor General—As there is no queſtion propoſed in either of the preceding minutes, I muſt decline to bear my part in a debate of which I ſee no object.

APPENDIX, No. 167.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 25th January 1779.

PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident;

Richard Barwell, Philip Francis, Edward Wheler, } Eſquires.

THE Governor General delivers in the following minute:

Governor General—The intimation given by Mr. Barwell, of his intention to return to England, in the Public Department Conſultation of the 11th inſtant, has already given currency to an opinion of an impending change in the Adminiſtration of theſe provinces; not only by the immediate conſequences which his departure would produce in the influence of the preſent Council, but by the concluſion drawn from it, that it proceeded from ſome fore-knowledge of the new ſettlement of this Government, and that it was intended as an anticipation of it: I feel myſelf exceedingly alarmed for the effects of this belief on our public meaſures; and eſpecially on one which is now at its criſis, and may receive its ultimate direction from ſuch an impulſe. Calcutta is unhappily become the reſort of agents, both public and ſecret, from many of the States, and even of ſome of the remoteſt of India. To theſe the nakedneſs of our conſtitution has been long expoſed, and the facility with which the moſt important tranſactions of the Council find their way to the public notice, enables them to ſend early and conſtant advices, modified according to their reſpective views and intereſts; or dictated, as I believe, by a concealed influence, not only of actual events as they occur, but of every rumour of every day, to their ſeveral conſtituents.

By ſuch channels it will be ſoon known, both at Poonah and Naigpore, that the powers of this Government which reſt with a majority of voices in the ſmall body compoſing it, are on the eve of devolving to the two members who have conſiderably oppoſed in every ſtage of its progreſs, the plan which has been publicly adopted for the ſupport of the Company's intereſt on the weſtern ſide of India; and who, it is univerſally believed, will ſeize the firſt means which are offered to them to defeat and annul it altogether. A member of this Government entruſted with the guardianſhip of the Company's intereſt, and of the honour of the Britiſh name in India, has not ſcrupled to propoſe, that we ſhould make an abject ſubmiſſion to the miſerable poſſeſſors of the feeble Government of Poonah; acknowledge our paſt faults, with a promiſe of amendment; and humbly intreat their permiſſion for the ſafe retreat of our army from Berar, to its own confines. If I miſconſtrue Mr. Francis's words, let them ſpeak for themſelves, as they ſtand in the following extract of his minute, dated the 11th inſtant.

" No choice is then left, but to order Colonel Goddard to return as he went. I do not ſay, that this " meaſure will not leſſen the opinion which the Powers " of India may hitherto have entertained of the coun- " cils of this Government: it may alſo be thought in " ſome degree diſgraceful to our arms, but neither is " this of weight againſt other ſuperior conſiderations, " nor do I apprehend, that if no direct impreſſion be " made upon our army, its bare retreat will prove any " thing but the imprudence of thoſe meaſures which " have left us no other option: at the ſame time, I " think that proper letters ſhould be written to the " Peiſhwa, to inform him of this alteration, to deſire " that the army may retire without moleſtation, and to " aſſure him, that we are ſincerely diſpoſed to come to " a conciliation with him, and to adjuſt whatever differences may have unfortunately ariſen between his " Government and ours, in an amicable manner, and " agreeably to the terms and principles of the Treaty " of Poonah."

What conduct may not be expected from ſuch ſentiments, and ſo avowed, if they are allowed the acceſſion of power to give them operation, not only in the inſtance which I have already mentioned, but in every other meaſure of Government, however neceſſary or ſalutary, which has been propoſed by me or Mr. Barwell: this it ſhall be my care, as it is my duty, to obviate by every means within the ſlender compaſs of my ability. I do therefore conjure Mr. Barwell, both by that zeal which he has hitherto ſo ſteadily manifeſted for the intereſts of our common maſters, and even by the ties of a friendſhip cemented by a participation of the ſame labour and ſufferings for the public ſervice, that he will not permit the meaſures in which he has a common and equal reſponſibility with myſelf, to be expoſed to the triumph of a party; but that he will both continue to afford the ſupport of his preſence and abilities to the preſent Government, while it yet exiſts; and that he will ſuffer me to exact from him a declaration to that purpoſe, not only for my own ſatisfaction, but for that of every man, who has the Company's intereſt, or the proſperity of this ſettlement, or the credit of his country, at heart; and who, I preſume to ſay, expect this ſacrifice from him. A few months will either releaſe him from the effects of it; or bind him by freſh obligations, and ſuch as may engage his voluntary ſubmiſſion to remain; for, left as this Government has been for the laſt four years, to a ſtate of ſuſpenſe and indeciſion, it is not poſſible for it to continue ſo beyond the term of its legal exiſtence, which muſt ceaſe of courſe, even without the hand of power to annihilate it, in the month of October; and it is not probable that we ſhall be much longer ignorant of that which muſt of abſolute neceſſity be ſubſtituted in its place. If I may truſt to the intelligence which I have received from England, ſo late as the 10th of June, private indeed, but derived from what I deem the beſt authority, no alteration will take place at that period, which will affect either Mr. Barwell or myſelf.

Mr. Barwell—I am concerned that I ſhould have given occaſion for the minute this inſtant preſented; the declaration of my intention to depart I thought had been ſufficiently guarded to obviate any conſequences that might affect the influence of the exiſting Government. I do not mean by the declaration I have already made, to decline my aid in the ſupport of the Governor General's adminiſtration, ſo long as it ſhall continue; I have hitherto yielded it with cheerfulneſs, and do not propoſe, whatever wiſh my health may make me entertain of going to Europe, to decline ſharing with him in the reſponſibility of his meaſures ſo far as I have engaged in them, and conſequently ſupporting him under every diſcouraging circumſtance that may ſtand in oppoſition to my duty; I do not think myſelf at liberty to follow my own wiſhes, and every private conſideration muſt yield, ſhould the public ſervice require it: the reaſons that are aſſigned for it by the Governor General, require me abſolutely to retract the intention I have declared; I admit the force of them; and with pleaſure declare my determination to ſupport his Government, as long as the public meaſures of it ſhall require me.

Governor General—I beg leave to record my thanks to Mr. Barwell for his ready and honourable acquieſcence in my requeſt: it adds to the many obligations which I already owe him for his paſt ſupport, but cannot heighten the ſenſe of gratitude which I already entertain for him.

Mr. Francis—I ſhall leave it to the Court of Directors, who will have the whole of my argument before them, to determine, whether the paſſage quoted from it by the Governor General, will fairly bear the conſtruction he has been pleaſed to give it; paſſionate and contemptuous terms, unaccompanied with argument, will prove nothing againſt the prudence of that opinion which I ſubmitted to the Board, with an expreſs declaration of my readineſs to correct or alter, if juſt and ſolid reaſons were ſuggeſted to me for doing ſo. The Governor General gives no reaſons, nor does he propoſe any thing: yet I preſume it is not meant that Colonel Goddard is to be left much longer without inſtructions. It happens ſingularly that the advice which I have preſumed to give on this occaſion concurs with an opinion which I ſhould have thought would have had ſome weight with the Governor, I mean that of Moodajee Booſla; his former letters, which I have already referred to, were ſufficiently explicit; but even in one received within theſe few days, and written after he had ſeen and converſed with the perſon whom Colonel Goddard had deputed to him, and after he was perfectly apprized of the intended plan of alliance, his advice ſtill is to come to a conciliation with the Peiſhwa; he ſays, "I do not "myſelf think it by any means prudent at preſent to "enter on this buſineſs; that it is improper precipitately "to plunge into undertakings of ſuch a nature, and that "precipitation is not at preſent by any means adviſable." Theſe ſentiments of Moodajee Booſla I apprehend could not be influenced either by Mr. Barwell's late declaration, or by the opinion expreſſed in my minute of the 11th inſtant; they appear to have been invariably his own ever ſince he had any knowledge of the Governor General's views. In ſuch a ſituation it avails but little to ſay, that any particular opinion of a member of this Government is dangerous, impolitic, or diſgraceful. Moodajee Booſla refuſes to act; can that fact poſſibly be denied? yet the Governor General propoſes nothing. I ſee we differ very much in our ideas of national honour; I have no idea of national honour independent of juſtice. The projects of ambition are uſually ambitious; if they are nothing but the projects of ambition, they are in my judgment always diſhonourable. To revert to that pacific ſyſtem which the Company have uniformly preſcribed to us, to endeavour to conciliate the friendſhip which we have unjuſtly or unwiſely departed from, and to return, if it be poſſible, to the terms of a treaty which we ourſelves have wantonly violated, are not acts that will ever I think, and as I feel, bring diſhonour on the Britiſh name; I am ſure they are the beſt means of preſerving our ſtrength and our real influence in India, and I have no doubt that they will meet with the higheſt approbation from home. As long as I am truſted with any ſhare in the office of guardian of the Britiſh intereſts and honour in this country, theſe ſhall be the principles on which I will invariably act.

For what purpoſe Mr. Barwell made his late declaration, or what purpoſe it is now retracted, is to me a queſtion of the moſt profound indifference; I believe it to be equally immaterial to the ſupport of the influence and authority of the preſent majority of this Board; in the language of Moodajee Booſla, "The arrow is ſhot, "and cannot be recalled." Since the Governor General has been pleaſed to mention his private intelligence, and the ſecurity it gives him, I ſhall beg leave to aſſure him that I alſo have private intelligence, which perhaps may be no better founded than his; but on which I for my own part place ſome dependance; that a total change in the ruling power of this Government was determined when Sir Eyre Coote left England, and I have no doubt that Sir Eyre Coote will give us ſome very ſatisfactory information on this point; but whether he does or not, his preſence alone muſt in the higheſt degree affect that very object which Mr. Barwell's preſent declaration profeſſes to have in view.

Governor General—The reſpect which I bear for the character of Sir Eyre Coote, would have prevented me from introducing his name on the preſent occaſion, had I thought it any way concerned in it, and reſtrains me from anſwering the aſſurances implied in the concluſion of Mr. Francis's minute reſpecting him; for the reſt, I mean not to enter into a debate with Mr. Francis, I had a different object, yet I think it neceſſary to ſay, that I know of no expreſſions of mine which merit the epithets of paſſionate or contemptuous; neither did I mean, or do I now think it neceſſary to anſwer his minute of the 11th inſtant with argument. I did not underſtand it to contain any ſerious propoſitions, it may be irony, it may be ſarcaſm, it may be invective; but I believe that no one who reads it will underſtand it to aim at any other object; and it was for that reaſon I have ſaid that I thought it neither neceſſary or proper to reply to it. Appendix. No. 168.

Mr. Francis— I hope and believe the Governor General did not mean to apply the terms I allude to perſonally to me, nor did I object to them on that preſumption.

APPENDIX, No. 168.

Bengal Private Perſian Correſpondence.

Letter from Moodajee Bhoſila: dated 10th Zehedja, 30th December 1778, and received 22d January 1779.

COLONEL Goddard having by the greateſt bravery and good management arrived in ſafety at Hoſhengabad, on this ſide the river Nurbudder, which is dependant on me; and not judging it adviſable to leave his army at that place, which is 120 coſs from Naigpore, and to proceed in perſon hither, deputed Mr. Weatherſtone, a gentleman in his confidence, to wait on me. This gentleman being accordingly arrived in ſafety, has in an interview fully informed me of your ſentiments and views; which are indeed fraught with the greateſt friendſhip and regard towards me, and with mutual advantages, the ſame which you gave in charge to Mr. Elliott when you deputed him to this quarter. I likewiſe ſome time ago received your obliging letter, written after the deceaſe of Mr. Elliott, to the following purport; that it would not anſwer to depute another perſon from thence in the ſame character with Mr. Elliott, which would occaſion too great delay to the affairs in hand; and that Beneram Pundit, who was fully acquainted with all your views and the points of negociation entruſted to Mr. Elliott, would therefore make me acquainted therewith; and I would inform you in reply with my ſentiments and views, by which you ſhould be enabled to form your ultimate reſolutions, namely, to form a treaty between the King of England, Company, and this Government, on ſo firm a baſis, that like the wall of Alexander it might continue unſhaken from generation to generation to the lateſt poſterity; and that our friends and enemies be in common, and reciprocal and equal advantages derived to both States. Beneram Pundit accordingly fully communicated every point to me. As your views are of the moſt important nature, and to carry them into execution require great preparations to be made, to wit, the aſſembling an army, forming alliances with the Decan Chiefs, preparing military ſtores, mighty treaſure, &c. all which require time, I deemed it adviſable to delay their execution for ſome time, and accordingly pointed out to you in anſwer, the meaſures I judged moſt fit and prudent. Beneram Pundit likewiſe wrote you very fully on the ſame ſubject. Agreeably thereto all theſe matters were ſtated to Mr. Weatherſtone, who, inſpired with the ſentiments of bravery and magnanimity inherent in the Engliſh Chiefs, replied, "The opportunity now pre-"ſents itſelf; the leaſt delay in the buſineſs is impo-"litic." To this he was anſwered; "The Decan is "our country, and we have a ſuperior knowledge of "the ſtate of it, and are well acquainted with the proper "ſeaſon for ſuch an undertaking. I do not myſelf think "it by any means prudent at preſent to enter on this "buſineſs; if, notwithſtanding, the Engliſh Chiefs are "of a different opinion, the firſt ſtep muſt neceſſarily "be the formation of a ſolemn treaty." Mr. Weatherſtone, conformably to the cuſtoms and manners of his own nation replied, "Colonel Goddard is inveſted with "full power to conclude this buſineſs in the room of

Appendix. No. 168.

" Mr. Elliott." As every one prefers his own cuſtoms and manners, and it is neceſſary before the commencement of an important undertaking, that complete confidence be eſtabliſhed, I anſwered, " The formation of " the treaty, which is to be the foundation of all the " meaſures propoſed, muſt of neceſſity be in the preſence of the Nabob (alluding to you); that had Mr. " Elliott arrived, ſtill the final concluſion of the treaty " would have been in your preſence, on the knowledge " of our mutual ſentiments, that ſo both parties might " have been fully ſatisfied; that I would now diſpatch " Beneram Pundit to Calcutta with the liſt of the terms " I expect, and that the Colonel ſhould likewiſe write " whatever the duties of friendſhip required; and that " after this point was firmly concluded, and I had re- " ceived a ſatisfactory anſwer from you, we would then " in concert enter on the undertaking."

Mr. Weatherſtone having obtained complete information on all theſe points, and of the ſincerity of my friendſhip, wrote an account thereof to Colonel Goddard. As you are univerſally allowed to poſſeſs the greateſt penetration and foreſight, and to exceed all others in your judgment of the propriety and fitneſs of every meaſure; and as your opinion on all occaſions receives my approbation and aſſent, I am about to diſpatch to you Beneram Pundit, accompanied by Ramkund, the late Mr. Elliott's Peiſhwa, a man of underſtanding, and attached to your Government, whom I have made acquainted with all my deſigns in this important undertaking. On their arrival they will in private make you fully acquainted therewith, and you will conſider them with the greateſt attention; and having fixed and concluded on ſuch points as are moſt adviſable, and may be completely ſatisfactory to both parties, will inform me thereof, that conformable thereto the moſt judicious meaſures may be adopted.

From Modajee Bhoſilah: received 22d January 1779.

The late events at Poonah and Bombay are theſe: officers from Bombay have marched from thence with three battalions, and ſome pieces of cannon, into the Cokun country, and ſent a detachment from their army to Bore Ghaut, which is about 20 coſs from Poonah, where they have made entrenchments. The Poonah Miniſters have now diſpatched their army, which was in readineſs to march, towards Hoſſungabad, to oppoſe the progreſs of Colonel Goddard againſt the Bombay army. By theſe means there does not at preſent appear to be any force to oppoſe Colonel Goddard's march to Bombay; but I have already repeatedly written to you my opinion on this ſubject, founded on the ſituation of the times; and have fully communicated to you whatever I have learnt of the ſtate of Poonah, and informed you of the tenor of the letters of the Miniſters of Pundit Peiſhwa, as well as what I gathered from report; and I ſhall now perform the duty of a friend, by freely ſtating to you my advice on the preſent ſtate of affairs, which is as follows: you have conceived diſpleaſure and reſentment againſt the Poonah Miniſters on account of the arrival of a French vackeel, and their negociating with him. They have written to me repeatedly on this ſubject, that they never entertained the ſligheſt idea of enmity towards the Engliſh Company, or of giving ſupport to the French: that a Frenchman came there for the purpoſes of traffic, and that even him they ſent away; and have not the ſmalleſt deſign of breaking their treaty with the Engliſh: that ſuch a conduct, while ſolemn engagements ſubſiſted, would render them deteſtable in the ſight of God and men, and be ſo ſhameful a renunciation of every religious tie, as to make them the objects of abhorrence; that I would therefore write to Calcutta, and clear your mind from ſuch ſuſpicions. I accordingly wrote all theſe particulars to you. I now give it you as my advice, that a perſon of credit may on the application of Pundit Purdhaun, with the conſent of the Engliſh Chiefs, become guarantee for both parties, that ſo all doubts may be completely removed, and an end put to all hoſtilities and contentions. That the terms of the guarantee be, that the Poonah Miniſters ſhall never form the idea of giving ſupport to the French nation, who are the enemies of the Engliſh Company; and that the Engliſh Chiefs, in violation of treaty, ſhall take no ſteps for the ſupport of Ragonaut Row; and that if either of the contracting parties ſhall infringe the engagement, the guarantee ſhall be reſponſible for ſuch breach.

Every perſon who undertakes any difficult enterprize or conteſt, ſhould firſt conſider the end thereof, and well underſtand the advantages or loſſes which may reſult therefrom; and if it appears in his judgment, after the matureſt reflection, that the advantages overbalance the loſſes, he may then purſue it.

The monarchs of former times, and Viziers, poſſeſſed of a noble ambition, made this an invariable rule in the proſecution of their conqueſts, and never deviated in the leaſt inſtance from it; on this principle, that where their object could be effected with facility and quiet, it was impolitic and uſeleſs to purſue it with labour and difficulty; knowing that none but the All-wiſe could of a certainty foreſee the event of any undertaking.

Thus it appears improper precipitately to plunge into undertakings of ſuch a nature: I am therefore deſirous that you ſhould for the preſent pretend to be ſatisfied on the ſubject of the apprehenſions which you had conceived of the French, on account of the ſupport of the Poonah Miniſters, and leave the proſecution of your private deſigns to a more favourable opportunity: this may be productive of the moſt important advantages; for it will be reported through the whole country, that the Engliſh Chiefs having conceived ſuſpicions of the Poonah Miniſters, diſpatched an Engliſh army on this account ſolely, to the Decan, and not with any view of ſupporting Ragonaut Row; and that the Poonah Miniſters being convinced and aſhamed of their error, has given a perſon of credit as an hoſtage, and thereby extinguiſhed the flames of a dreadful conteſt, and this would exalt your reputation and fame to the higheſt pitch: you will therefore maturely conſider the advantages and end of ſuch a conduct, and to what good purpoſes it may be turned. The opportunity is not yet paſſed. If you approve of this advice, give immediate intimation thereof to me, Colonel Goddard, and the Bombay gentlemen.

I have communicated all the above particulars to Mr. Weatherſtone, who will write to Colonel Goddard whatever he may judge moſt fit and proper.

From Dewagur Pundit. Dated 10th Zehedja, 30th December 1778, and received 22d January 1779.

Beneram Pundit, after the deceaſe of Mr. Elliott in his way hither, in conformity to your directions intimated to him, fully repreſented all your views and deſigns with which he had been entruſted, tending to the eſtabliſhment of a treaty between the King of England, the Company, and yourſelf, on the one part, and the Maha Rajah my maſter on the other, on ſo firm a baſis that like the wall of Alexander it might continue unſhaken from generation to generation to the lateſt poſterity; and the prudent and judicious anſwer he received, " That for the commencement of ſo important an affair " the neceſſary preparations, ſuch as the aſſembling an " army, the junction of allies from amongſt the zealous " friends of this Circar, the collecting magazines of " warlike ſtores, and the proviſion of a large treaſure, " required a conſiderable time to complete," has been already communicated to you. Colonel Goddard having lately croſſed the Nurbudder, and being arrived at Hoſhingabad, dependant on the Maha Rajah, not deeming it adviſable to quit his army, and repair to Naigpore, which is at the diſtance of 120 coſs from that city, deputed Mr. Weatherſtone hither. On his interview he communicated your ſentiments to the ſame effect as Beneram neram Pundit had before repreſented them, and was anſwered in the ſame manner as has been written to you. Inſpired by the courage and magnanimity inherent in the Engliſh Chiefs, he replied, "This is the time, let not "the opportunity which preſents itſelf eſcape." Actuated by penetration and foreſight, I repreſented to him the ſtate of the Decan, and the neceſſity of a treaty from Calcutta, prior to the commencement of ſo important an undertaking, fully explaining every point to him, which he wrote to Colonel Goddard, who will communicate them to you.

Beneram Pundit and Ramkund the late Mr. Elliott's Peiſhwa, a man of underſtanding, intelligence in buſineſs, and a zealous ſervant of your Government, are about to be diſpatched from hence with letters to you. When they arrive, and you have learnt all my maſter's views, and the terms he requires, you will make me happy by a reply thereto.

Poſtſcript—Certain intelligence has been lately received, that the Engliſh at Bombay have ſent ſome of their officers through the Cokun country to Bhore Gaut, which is 20 coſs from Poonah, and that they are making preparations to croſs, and that the Peiſhwa's army is gone againſt them: as the Poonah Miniſters deny every kind of intrigue or connection with the French, which they have repeatedly done by letters to this quarter, and the Engliſh Chiefs have no deſign to ſupport Ragonaut Row, of which Beneram Pundit has given us repeated aſſurances; to what end, therefore, are theſe ſuſpicions entertained contrary to the treaty, and which give room to the world to talk in a very improper ſtyle? If, notwithſtanding, the Engliſh have any apprehenſions left the Poonah Miniſters ſhould hereafter ſupport the French, the Maha Rajah will, agreeably to what they have deſired of him, give you full ſatisfaction reſpecting them, and in like manner will give ſatisfaction to the Poonah Miniſters, and remove the apprehenſions they have conceived, leſt the Engliſh ſhould ſupport Ragonaut according to the aſſurances made to him by Beneram Pundit: this will exalt the fame and honour of the Engliſh Chiefs throughout the world, and extinguiſh the flames of war and diſcord, of which none but the all-wiſe God can with any degree of certainty foreſee; the event and the views which you deſign to carry into execution in concert with the Maha Rajah my maſter, will likewiſe take effect at a proper opportunity: precipitation is not at preſent by any means adviſable. For more particular information on theſe points, I beg leave to refer you to the Maha Rajah's letters, where they are fully treated with.

If you approve of this advice, you will diſpatch letters immediately to Bombay, forbidding them to engage in a conteſt with the Poonah Miniſters, and will likewiſe write to Colonel Goddard and me, that in conſequence thereof, we may uſe our endeavours to remove all ſuſpicions on either ſide, and for the confirmation and duration of the treaty: this meaſure ſuits with the times, will extinguiſh the flames of diſcord in every quarter, and do you great credit in the eyes of the world.

For the reſt, whatever your enlightened underſtanding, who are endowed with the moſt diſtinguiſhed virtues, and are well verſed in every part of buſineſs, points out to you, will meet with aſſent and approbation.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 1ſt February 1779.

PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident;

READ the following letter from Bombay:

Appendix, No. 169.

Gentlemen,

We have had the honour to receive your letter of the 17th Auguſt, but we have not yet heard a ſyllable of or from Mr. Elliott.

We were for a conſiderable time in ſuch a ſtate of ſuſpenſe ariſing from the ſlow advance of the Bengal detachment, our expectation of advices from Europe, and the fate of Pondicherry, as well as ſome difficulties we had to overcome on the part of Ragoba, that we could not fix upon a period when to write to you with any degree of certainty, as to the meaſures we ſhould purſue with reſpect to our plan for eſtabliſhing him in the regency of the Maratta Government; but we have now the pleaſure to acquaint you, that matters are at laſt brought to a criſis, and our forces have actually taken the field to conduct Ragoba to Poonah.

After the moſt ſtrict attention to the words and contents of your letter of the 17th of Auguſt, nothing more appeared to us to be meant, than that we ſhould not enter into any final engagements with Ragoba, which might be contrary to ſuch as might be concluded with, or of a hoſtile tendency to the Government of Berar; for if your letter was to be underſtood as containing a direction, that we were abſolutely not to undertake anything till we had received advice from Mr. Elliott of the reſult of his commiſſion with the Bouncello, it would have been equivalent to a prohibition of the expedition we had meditated, and which you had approved, by ſuſpending it to ſo diſtant a period, as to leave us little or no hopes of ſucceſs.

We therefore thought ourſelves warranted not only by your letter, but by the moſt urgent plea of neceſſity, to give our immediate and moſt ſtrenuous aſſiſtance for placing Ragoba in the office of Regent; and our lateſt intelligence from Europe giving us not the ſmalleſt apprehenſion of danger to this ſettlement in the abſence of our forces, preſented an opportunity ſo favourable for the execution of our plan, that we could not conſiſtent with our duty any longer forego it: but in order to guard againſt the inconvenience from our treaty with Ragoba claſhing with the engagements you may form with Moodajee Bouncello, we have by the 17th article made the neceſſary proviſion on that head.

It was on the 12th of October, when we took the reſolution for immediately carrying into execution our plan as explained in our minutes of the 21ſt of July, when Mr. Draper thought proper to diſſent, being of opinion the juncture was not favourable to our deſign, for which he aſſigned the following reaſons: firſt, becauſe of the expreſs conditions contained in your letter of the 17th Auguſt; ſecondly, becauſe of the reſtraint Moraba, Butcheba, and their adherents ſtill appear to be under: thirdly, becauſe of the remote diſtance of Colonel Leſlie's very conſiderable reinforcement; fourthly, becauſe of the very great deficiency in our European corps, to the laſt eſtabliſhment ordered by the Honourable Company.

This packet being already ſwelled to a large ſize for an overland diſpatch, we ſhall defer ſending you a copy at length of Mr. Draper's diſſent, till the firſt ſea conveyance, when it ſhall be accompanied by a copy of our whole minutes and proceedings on the occaſion.

We now tranſmit a copy of the treaty, and it will give us the moſt ſenſible ſatisfaction if the terms thereof are approved by you: a copy of the manifeſto, or circular letter, diſperſed by the troops on their landing on the continent, is likewiſe enclоſed.

The whole conduct of the expedition is entruſted to a committee, conſiſting of Mr. Carnac, Colonel Egerton, and Mr. Moſtyn, who are directed to correſpond punctually with you, and to adviſe you of all material tranſactions. A copy of their inſtructions is enclоſed, and of thoſe given to Colonel Egerton; and alſo a copy of the orders we have ſent to Colonel Goddard, who by our laſt accounts, dated the 31ſt October, was only advanced to Kimlaſſy, on the other ſide of the Nerbudah.

The force ſent on this ſervice conſiſts of 172 artillery, 549 infantry,

Appendix. No. 170.

549 infantry, and 2689 Sepoys, all officers included, beſides 500 artillery Laſcars, which we flatter ourſelves, all circumſtances conſidered, will be able to bring this buſineſs to a happy concluſion. The voice of the people, we are aſſured, is ſtrongly with Ragoba; nor do we think Moraba's party ſo much depreſſed, but that they will be able to yeld material aſſiſtance, which with the approach of the Bengal detachment, whoſe arrival we anxiouſly expect, and the fall of Pondicherry, will we truſt effectually contribute to the eaſy accompliſhment of our ſcheme.

Our troops took poſſeſſion of the fort of Bellapore without oppoſition, and are now with Ragoba's forces near the foot of the Gauts, which had before been ſecured by the grenadier Sepoys of the army, advanced for that purpoſe by a different route, under the command of Captain Stewart; they have hitherto proceeded without ſeeing the face of an enemy.

Mr. Lewis remained at Poonah till the very laſt moment, and left that place when recalled by us, without the leaſt moleſtation.

We ſhall immediately ſend a letter to Mr. Elliott, adviſing him of the concluſion and object of the treaty with Ragoba.

The ſlow advance of the Bengal detachment has given us much uneaſineſs; as whatever turn affairs may take at Poonah, we ſhall certainly require a conſiderable augmentation to our force, when we come to ſettle the neceſſary arrangements for the defence of our new acquiſitions, and provide a reſpectable garriſon for this place: their arrival would be of unſpeakable advantage to the Honourable Company's affairs on this coaſt, and place us in a ſituation almoſt above annoyance.

We expect to receive three hundred European recruits by the ſhips of this ſeaſon, including thoſe received by the Royal Henry, and thoſe on board the Gatton and Calcutta; and the Honourable Company acquaint us, they hope to be able to raiſe a further number, in which caſe they promiſe to ſend a ſhip purpoſely with them to this ſettlement.

We have not yet taken poſſeſſion of the ſeveral ceſſions made by the treaty with Ragoba. We believe it was impracticable to have ſtipulated for a territory in lieu of the northern Pergunnahs, which would have been either equal in value or in convenience of ſituation: for the productions of the Guzerat country infinitely exceed thoſe of the Conkan, and when we have got Baſſein we ſhall poſſeſs the whole ſea coaſt from Bombay to the river Myhie, with very little interruption, except the Portugueſe ſettlement of Damaun.

The conduct of Hyder Ally towards the French ſtill continues to ſhew a diſpoſition very favourable to them: he has ſent ſupplies of proviſions, and even money, we believe, to Mahié; and we have had intimation that he has given the French Governor there permiſſion to hoiſt his colours in the place, ſhould it be attacked by the Engliſh. It is ſaid he alſo intends ſending his fleet with ſupplies of proviſions to the French iſlands, and that his ſhips will be armed with detachments of French ſoldiers, which were ſent to him from Mahié, before the account arrived of the rupture with England.

We know not what effect our ſucceſs againſt Pondicherry may have on the Nabob's conduct; but we have now a gentleman under orders to proceed to his Durbar, whom we propoſe detaining until we are at ſome certainty with reſpect to the intentions of the gentlemen of Fort Saint George regarding Mahié, and the part the Nabob will take if that ſettlement ſhould be attacked.

Judging it highly improper that the French ſhould be permitted to continue a factory at Surat, in the very centre of our poſſeſſions, from whence the moſt important intelligence might be tranſmitted, and a dangerous correſpondence carried on with the country Powers, we have arreſted the perſon of the French Conſul, and all other Frenchmen in that city, and have removed them to Bombay, except the Conſul, who remains at Surat under an Engliſh guard; and upon his parole not to carry on any correſpondence whatever but under the inſpection of the chief.

A French officer having in charge a packet from the Miniſtry for Monſieur Bellcombe, has been intercepted at Grain, a port on the Arab coaſt, by a plan of the Company's ſervants at Buſſora, and arrived at Bombay the 3d inſtant. His diſpatches are in cypher, and not to be unravelled, though we have actually got the cypher, which was found amongſt the papers of the French Conſul; we find by the prints and private letters he brought with him, that there had been an engagement on the 27th of July, between the grand fleets under Admiral Keppel and the Count D'Orvilliers, which was not at all deciſive, though it does not appear any declaration of war had yet been made, ſo late as the 14th Auguſt; the paper which Mr. Abraham terms ſo in the encloſed extract being only an order to the French Admiralty to grant commiſſions for making repriſals, of which we have the honour to encloſe a tranſcript.

The Count D'Eſtaing's ſquadron arrived at Boſton the 20th of June.

This packet will be ſent by ſea to Anjengo, from whence it may be forwarded to Madras with the utmoſt ſafety, and we ſhall deſire the gentlemen there to tranſmit it to you with all poſſible ſecurity.

We requeſt you will immediately commence ſending us our annual ſupply of money; and are with much reſpect, &c.

APPENDIX, No. 170.

READ the following letter from Colonel Goddard, to the Governor General and Council at Fort William, dated 5th January 1779.

Gentlemen,

I ſome time ago informed you of the arrival of the detachment upon the confines of Berar, and that a confidential perſon on the part of the Rajah had met me after I croſſed the Nerbudda.

Finding that he was not empowered to enter upon the ſubject of any particular negociations betwixt his maſter and the Engliſh, by confining his converſation ſolely to the ſubject of my march towards Bombay, and the means of reconciling that ſtep to the Peiſhwa and Poonah Miniſters, I judged it proper alſo to be ſilent towards him reſpecting the views of your Government; and that no time might be loſt in communicating to Moodajee, both them and the extent of my commiſſion from you, I determined upon immediately ſending Lieutenant Watherſton to Naigpore, fully inſtructed in every point relative to this buſineſs.

From the uncertainty in which I had reaſon to be, concerning the ſentiments of that Court, and the diſtance of the Rajah's reſidence from the frontier, being above a hundred coſs, I did not think it eligible myſelf to leave the army, till I was aſſured that the intentions of that prince were perfectly favourable to the ſeveral points on which I was empowered to treat with him, and I beg to aſſure you of my entire ſatisfaction with the conduct of Lieutenant Watherſton, on this occaſion, who has, I am convinced, neglected nothing which was neceſſary to promote the ſucceſs of this negociation, and has ſtrictly conformed to the inſtructions I gave him.

I cannot in any reſpect tax this Court with poſſeſſing inclinations unfriendly to the Engliſh; on the contrary, I am convinced they ſee their own intereſts in maintaining a connection of amity with us, which inſtead of breaking, they they will endeavour to improve and ſtrengthen; but in the preſent ſituation of affairs in the Decan, they find excuſes for delay, by which they were determined to be influenced.

To the former part of your inſtructions delivered to Mr. Elliott, concerning the terms of a defenſive alliance, they expreſſed to Mr. Watherſton a perfect ſatisfaction and concurrence; but as theſe in their conſequence do not require an immediate execution, and a ſpirit of peculiar circumſpection and caution ſeems to direct the preſent conduct of this Government; they propoſe to defer the final deciſion, even on this part of the treaty, till the ſeveral articles relating to it ſhall be confirmed under the ſignature of your Board, and the ſeal of the honourable Company, for obtaining which they mean to depute a perſon to Calcutta immediately.

The ſame reaſon they urge for delay reſpecting the former, they alſo advance as one cauſe why the latter part of your inſtructions, which relate to an alliance of an offenſive nature, cannot now be entered into by them, with any regard to their own intereſt and advantage, as the ſanction they require in the firſt place, muſt be the only foundation on which their future views can be raiſed, and becomes more neceſſary, in proportion to the importance of the object they have in purſuit.

Another obſtacle they ſtart to the immediate commencement of any active operations, is the preſent diſputes in which the Miniſters at Poonah are involved with the Engliſh, and the part taken by the Council of Bombay in favour of Ragonaut Row.

They have themſelves addreſſed your Government on this ſubject, and have ſolicited, as well as recommended the relinquiſhing the cauſe of the latter, and accepting terms from the preſent miniſterial party; the motive they acknowledge for acting this mediating part, is to pave the way for the advancement of their own ſchemes hereafter, in concert with the Engliſh, which they profeſs cannot be done conſiſtent with an attention to the intereſts of Ragonaut Row.

For theſe reaſons Moodajee Booſla has declined entering into any treaty, or taking any active part whatever till further accounts may arrive from Calcutta, by the nature of which he will then be guided; and if it ſhall be found eligible by you to adjuſt the difference betwixt the Bombay Council and the preſent Adminiſtration of Poonah, excluding Ragonaut Row from any ſhare in the latter, he will in that event cheerfully ſolicit your aſſiſtance to accompliſh his views; otherwiſe it is plain he will be induced to lay them aſide altogether; in the mean time, I can ſpeak with confidence, that his inclinations towards the Engliſh are perfectly friendly; and I have ſtudiouſly taken care to leave the negociations with him in ſuch a train, that it will be always in your power to renew them whenever you may judge it for the intereſt and honour of your Government to do ſo.

Diſappointed in my views at this Court, I have referred to the latter part of your inſtructions given to Mr. Elliott for his guide, and compared them with the purport of your letter to me of the 23d November laſt, in which you have thought it neceſſary to revoke the order before ſent me for obeying all ſuch orders as I might receive from the Preſident and Council at Bombay, leſt a compliance with them might interrupt any meaſures I might find it neceſſary to purſue in conſequence of my engagements with the Rajah of Berar.

You have alſo ſignified to me, that it is your intention the detachment under my command ſhould act in ſupport of any meaſures which the Council at Bombay may have formed in reliance on it, as far as they may be conſiſtent with the inſtructions given me, and the engagements I may have concluded in conſequence of them.

By the determination of this Court, any difficulties which an attention to the latter might have occaſioned, are entirely removed; and as I conſider it further conſiſtent with the ſpirit of your inſtructions, I have thought proper to march towards Poonah immediately.

I am induced to adopt this ſtep in conſequence of having received letters from the Select Committee at Bombay, informing me that the forces from that Preſidency had actually taken the field to effect the reſtoration of Ragoba; that Meſſrs. Carnac, Egerton, and Moſtyn, were appointed Commiſſioners for ſettling the Poonah Government; and requiring me to advance towards that place with all expedition, as the preſence of my detachment is neceſſary to the ſucceſs of their views. From other authentic intelligence I learn that hoſtilities are actually commenced; I am therefore led to believe, that whatever may be the reſult of your political reſolves, the arrival of the force under me in the neighbourhood of Poonah, will be for the intereſt of the ſervice, either to proſecute the war, or to bring it to an honourable concluſion; at the ſame time that I ſhall be ready to act, in concert with Moodajee, any plan that may be deemed neceſſary in conſequence of your determination. Appendix. No. 170.

I beg leave to encloſe for your fuller information, copies of the letters I have received from the Select Committee at Bombay; and as they are ſo earneſt and preſſing for my arrival at Poonah, I propoſe marching towards that quarter with all poſſible expedition; it will be however abſolutely neceſſary for me to wait the arrival of the treaſure which Lieutenant Watherſtone is bringing from Naigpore, the produce of the bills tranſmitted me in your letter of the 16th November. The Gomaſtah of Gopaul Doſs not being able to collect a ſum more than ſufficient to diſcharge the amount of the bill for one lack, I applied to the Rajah for the two remaining, who immediately advanced them, without any deduction or diſcount for the period to elapſe before they would become due.

I have the honour, &c.

(Signed) Thomas Goddard.

Camp near Huſſeingabad,
5th January 1779.

The Governor General lays before the Board the following letters to him from Colonel Goddard:

Honourable Sir,

I have the pleaſure to tranſmit you herewith a letter addreſſed to the Hon. Board, informing them of the delays I have met with in bringing to a concluſion the treaty they had empowered me to enter into with Moodajee Booſla, the Rajah of Berar, and the reaſons aſſigned by that Chief for his paſſive conduct on this occaſion.

In order to give you a more full and complete idea of the negociation, I beg leave to encloſe for your peruſal, copies of the letters I have ſucceſſively received from Lieutenant Watherſton, ſince his arrival at Naigpore; from theſe you will perceive the determined ſentiments of that Court are, to take no active part whatever till further accounts may arrive from you, when they declare their readineſs to co-operate with the force under my command in any plan that may be fixed on for the mutual intereſt of both parties. The Rajah has himſelf addreſſed a letter to you, expreſſive of their inclination, which I have the pleaſure to encloſe you: He has alſo addreſſed you on the ſubject of the preſent diſputes betwixt the Bombay Council and the Miniſters of Poonah, in which the intereſt he ſeems to take in wiſhing to reconcile the difference that has ariſe proceeds entirely from motives of policy; indeed he does not ſcruple to acknowledge this to be the caſe; and I am perſuaded nothing would in reality be more agreeable to his wiſh, than to ſee the power of the Peiſhwa reduced; but he juſtly apprehends that the eſtabliſhing Ragonaut Row's authority under the influence of the Engliſh would exclude him from all hopes of ever obtaining the object he has in view through their means, as an attention to and obſervance of the intereſts of both would be an impracticable taſk to our Government, and irreconcilable to themſelves. There appears no doubt of the friendly diſpoſition of the Berar Court towards the Engliſh, which from political motives they will ſtudy to cultivate and improve; for the vicinity of Cuttack to our poſſeſſions, and the conveniency of its ſituation to them, renders it an object in our eyes, of which they know we can at any time avail ourſelves. Throughout the whole of what has paſſed with the Naigpore Court ſince my arrival here, this friendly inclination ſeems fully manifeſted; and in the train in which the negociation is now left they have covered their refuſal of immediately acceding to any treaty by ſpecious arguments, which diſcover at the ſame time the trueſt confidence repoſed in our Government. I have alſo made it my particular ſtudy, nor are my endeavours I am perſuaded unſucceſsful, that ſhould you at any time hereafter find it for the honour and intereſt of the Company to proſecute an alliance with Moodajee, upon the eligible and advantageous plan already propoſed, it will always be in your power to do ſo with advantage and convenience to your own affairs. The Rajah ſcruples not to declare his wiſh to ſettle the Sittera ſucceſſion; and as the only Powers on whoſe aſſiſtance and friendſhip he can rely to ſupport him in this attempt he names the Engliſh and Zuffer ul Dowla. You will perceive by the ſubject of a converſation mentioned in one of Mr. Watherſton's letters, how cloſely connected that Chief is with the Berar family, to whoſe views he is made privy, and is very urgent with them to ſeize the preſent opportunity offered by the friendſhip of the Engliſh for their accompliſhment.

By the encloſed letters to you from Moodajee, you at once ſee the plan adopted by that Prince, and the motives that influence his conduct on the preſent occaſion, which appear to be ſolely dictated by regard to political conſiderations of ſafety and convenience. Although he is exceedingly urgent to adjuſt the preſent diſpute with the Peiſhwa's Government, he frankly acknowledges his view in ſo doing is to pave the way for his own future projects; and he declares, with equal appearance of ſincerity, that theſe are incompatible with the meaſures now adopted in favour of Ragonaut Row. Here then we find the principal, and although others are aſſigned by themſelves, I could almoſt ſay the only obſtacle, to the ſucceſs of the negociation I was empowered to manage with Modajee. The ſchemes of the gentlemen at Bombay, and the active part they have taken in ſupport of Ragoba, have deſtroyed all hopes of concluding the propoſed alliance with the Court of Naigpore, until it may be judged expedient by you to direct the former to be relinquiſhed, in order to leave room for the entire and free adoption of the latter. The ſentiments contained in the Rajah's letter to you exactly correſpond with the opinion I have above advanced; and he further poſitively aſſures me, that when the anſwers to his letters ſhall arrive from you; when the treaty which he propoſes to enter ſhall be confirmed by the ſeal of the Company and the ſignature of your Board; and when the plan he has recommended reſpecting the diſputes at Poonah ſhall have taken place; he will join his forces with thoſe of the Engliſh, and aſſert his pretenſions to the grand object of his wiſh and ambition. To the inconſiſtency there appears in labouring ſo ſtrenuouſly for the intereſts of a Power with whom he means ſoon to be engaged in hoſtilities, and for whom he profeſſes to have no friendly inclination, he anſwers, by obſerving, that it is abſolutely neceſſary for his ſucceſs; and that when matters are ripe for execution, the oppoſition of the Peiſhwa will be added to a variety of other excuſes that may be framed for a rupture with that Court. This is a refinement upon policy that might almoſt lead one to ſuſpect he was not altogether ſerious and determined upon his Sittera expedition, was it not to be accounted for by the unfortunate interference of Ragonaut Row's intereſt, and proved ſtill more ſo beyond contradiction by the contents of Zuffer ul Dowla's letters, written by his own hand, and which Watherſton himſelf peruſed.

I have forwarded to the honourable Governor General and Council duplicates of the letters I have received from the Select Committee at Bombay; in conſequence of which, as I find war actually commenced in that quarter, I conſider it for the Company's intereſt, and conſiſtent with the ſpirit of the inſtructions of your Government, that I ſhould immediately march with the troops under me to aſſiſt and co-operate with thoſe of Bombay. In the mean time I hope to be honoured with your particular orders and inſtructions for my future guidance; and I beg leave to aſſure you, that in the eſtimation of a juſt and wiſe policy, whatever proportion the plan in favour of Ragonaut Row may bear to that intended to have been proſecuted with Moodajee, I ſhall exert my endeavours with the ſame zeal and ardour for the good of the ſervice, in accompliſhing the former, as if the more pleaſing and eligible taſk had been fortunately aſſigned me of effecting the latter.

The propoſed treaty with Moodajee would, I am perſuaded, have met with no obſtruction, had not the meaſures taken by the Bombay Council intervened to counteract it. Should it be found political or proper to put a ſtop to them, it will then be liable to no further interruption. I have referred Moodajee in this point entirely to your Government; he waits with impatience for the reſult of your reſolutions, and is ready to take up arms if you give the word. In the mean time the march of this detachment towards Poonah cannot but be attended with the moſt beneficial conſequences; and the Rajah is convinced, that let your determination be which way it will, the preſence of my force will either be of uſe in bringing the Miniſters to a proper ſenſe of their improper conduct, or to commence the operations in his favour when the favourable juncture ſhall arrive; I propoſe therefore to march from this place immediately, and move forward with all poſſible expedition. I am however neceſſarily detained three or four days, till the arrival of the treaſure coming with Lieutenant Watherſton from Naigpore. The Gomaſtah of Gopaul Doſs could only collect a ſufficient ſum to pay off the bill of one lack made firſt payable, ſo that I was obliged to apply to the Rajah for the remaining two, who immediately advanced them to me, taking the bills in depoſit, and without any diſcount or deduction. I think it proper to mention to you, that the Court of Naigpore has cheerfully and willingly afforded every aſſiſtance I found it neceſſary to require of them, except that of joining me with a body of troops, or taking any active part in the war, prior to which they ſay it is requiſite that a treaty ſhould be concluded and ratified by the ſolemn ſanction of your Board; and for this purpoſe the delay of ſome time is neceſſary. They have publicly demonſtrated their friendly ſentiments to the Engliſh, in a manner obvious to the neighbouring Powers; and the aſſurances made by the Rajah and Dewan in the ſeveral converſations with Mr. Watherſton, and in particular when he delivered the preſents from me in the name of your Government ſtrongly evince their ſincerity. Mr. Watherſton's letter to me on this ſubject goes encloſed, together with an account of the preſents he delivered at the Court of Naigpore.

I have, &c.

Camp at Huſſeingabad, January 15th 1779. (Signed) Thomas Goddard.

Honourable Sir,

Encloſed I have the honour to tranſmit you the remaining part of Mr. Watherſton's correſpondence from the Court of Naigpore, together with the letters from Rajah Moodajee Booſla, which I omitted to forward in my laſt night's addreſs.

You will perceive by the converſation related in Mr. Watherſton's laſt letter, which paſſed upon taking his leave, how deſirous the Rajah is of detaining the force under my command in theſe parts till anſwers ſhall arrive from you relative to the point referred by him to your Government, and till an accommodation may have taken place with the miniſterial party at Poonah; on this head my

my reſolution is however taken, and I have in my former letter fully explained to you my motives for proceeding towards Bombay, to be in readineſs to act in ſupport of the meaſures purſued by the Select Committee, either as the Company's intereſts may require, or as it may be hereafter found conſiſtent with the orders and inſtructions you may judge it neceſſary to ſend me in conſequence of the unexpected part now taken by the gentlemen at Bombay.

I have alſo reconciled the preſent movement of my detachment to the Court of Naigpore, by informing them, their buſineſs being ultimately referred to you, as well as the final determination of the diſputes with the Poonah Miniſtry, I ſhall be ready to execute any meaſures in concert with him, which you may judge requiſite for the mutual intereſt of both parties.

In reply to what he mentioned to Lieutenant Watherſton, reſpecting Huſſeingabad and Maundalla, I have in a few words informed him, that the intention of your Government in ſending an army into his country, and empowering me to conclude a treaty with him in your name, was to obtain an object more important and eſſential to his intereſts than the partial ſubjection of a few ſmall diſtricts; that in particular the friendly and hoſpitable behaviour of the Nawab of Bhopal, to whom Huſſeingabad now belongs, upon the arrival of the Engliſh troops in his country, gave him a claim to their favour, and that at any rate I could not act in this buſineſs without the ſanction and authority of the Governor General and Supreme Council being firſt obtained.

I have now made known to you every thing material that has occurred during my negociation with the Rajah of Berar; and muſt, together with him leave the further proſecution of it, as well as the partial line you may think proper to preſcribe for my future conduct, to your final determination.

I have, &c. the honour, &c.

The Governor General remarks, that the letters alluded to in that from Mr. Watherſton to Colonel Goddard, of the 24th of December, are only duplicates of thoſe which have been already received direct from the Rajah.

Governor General—I did hope to have been able to lay before the Board at this meeting, ſome plan for approbation, in conſequence of the late advices from Bombay; but I have been prevented, 1ſt, by the neceſſity of waiting for the advices from Colonel Goddard now received, and 2dly, by the want of the materials which I judged requiſite for the knowledge of the Board, in deciding on the treaty concluded by the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, with Ragoba, and on the meaſures which would be neceſſary on our part, as the conſequences of that treaty: the materials to which I allude, are our late letters to Bombay, eſpecially thoſe which contained the inſtructions on which they had concluded and publiſhed the treaty, as the effect of our immediate ſanction, and their advices to us reſpecting their plan of the 21ſt July appears to be that now carried into execution; I ſhall loſe no time in preparing for the inſpection of the Board, ſuch propoſitions as appear to me neceſſary on the occaſion.

To Colonel Goddard.

Sir,

The Governor General and Council have adviſed us of their reſolution to remove Colonel Leſlie, before they heard of his demiſe, and of their having appointed you to the chief command of the detachment of forces ordered for the ſupport of this Preſidency: they have alſo apprized us of the orders they have given for your conduct on your arrival in the Berar country. Appendix, No. 170.

We congratulate you on this mark of diſtinction conferred on you by the Governor General and Council; and though we hope this will meet you well advanced on your march, in conſequence of our letters of the 13th November and 6th inſtant, yet to prevent all diſappointment, and that you may not be at any loſs in your proceedings, we judge it proper to repeat to you that our forces have actually taken the field in proſecution of the plan communicated to the Governor General and Council, for the reſtoration of Ragoba, and that we deem it requiſite and adviſable that the army under your command ſhould move forwards towards Bombay.

We therefore hereby require you to advance according to our former orders, even without a junction of the troops of any Power in alliance with the Honourable Company, and we likewiſe deſire and enjoin you to conduct your march with all poſſible expedition.

The ſettlement of the Government at Poonah is committed to Meſſrs. Carnac, Egerton, and Moſtyn, with whom we deſire you will correſpond; and we flatter ourſelves the movement of our forces will facilitate your march, in like manner as we expect the advance of your detachment will leſſen the oppoſition to our forces.

We are,
Sir,
Your moſt obedient, &c.

To Colonel Goddard.

Sir,

I beg leave to write you a few lines, to acquaint you with my arrival and reception at the Court of Naigpore: about three o'clock this afternoon, I was met about two miles from the town by Bulwant Roy, the Buckſhy's ſon, who was ſent by the Rajah to conduct me into it.

In the evening I waited upon the Rajah in his palace, where I was introduced to his three ſons, the Dewan, and Bapow Row, the Poonah Vackeel: it was full Durbar, and nothing of buſineſs was talked of: I propoſed to the Dewan, to have a meeting with him on buſineſs immediately, nay, preſſed it very much; as my inſtructions from you were poſitively to loſe no time in commencing negociations, and they were of too important a nature to admit of any delay: he has excuſed himſelf till to-morrow.

The Rajah received me very graciouſly, and mentioned in the ſtrongeſt terms, his friendſhip for the Engliſh, and his ſenſe of the proof given by our Government to theirs, in deputing you to his Court. He has recovered of his ſickneſs, which was a very ſevere one, and it is ten days ſince he received public congratulations on that account; he ſtill however appears weak; he talks, I am informed, little in general; and at this time, on account of the remains of his indiſpoſition, leſs than uſual. All buſineſs is managed by the Dewan, who has promiſed to be with me to-morrow, and to whom I will not fail to mention every circumſtance relative to the buſineſs on which I come, when you ſhall hear from me in the fulleſt, and I hope moſt ſatisfactory manner.

I have the honour, &c. &c. &c.

To Colonel Goddard.

Sir,

About 3 o'clock in the afternoon, as my laſt letter informed you, the Dewan came according to his engagement, and continued near four hours, when the whole ſubject ſubject of the negociation propoſed, was fully canvaſſed. The particulars of what paſſed are as follow:

Appendix. No. 170.

I firſt explained to him, the powers delegated to you by the Governor and Supreme Council, to conclude an alliance of friendſhip, in the name and by the authority of the Engliſh Eaſt India Company, with the Rajah of Berar; mentioned to him the particular wiſh of our Government, and your ſtrong inclination to promote the intereſts of Moodajee, together with your readineſs to carry into immediate execution any plan for that purpoſe.

The Dewan expreſſed the favourable intentions of his maſter, his deſire to enter into terms of friendſhip with the Engliſh, in the warmeſt manner, and his happineſs, that an opportunity now offered of doing ſo by your arrival with full powers from Calcutta to treat with him.

I told the Dewan, you was yourſelf exceedingly deſirous of having a meeting with the Rajah; and as ſoon as he conſented to the alliance, would ſet o[illegible] for Naigpore, to ſettle the buſineſs with him in perſon; that in the mean time you had ſent me to communicate the nature, of the negociation you meant to carry on, and to obtain his anſwer, which would immediately determine your operations.

I then proceeded to ſpeak particularly to the points contained in the inſtructions given by the Board to Mr. Elliott for concluding an offenſive alliance with Moodajee; concluding that to be the object which the Board were anxious to obtain, and in particular the end you had principally in view in ſending me. It is unneceſſary to repeat the whole of the arguments I advanced on the occaſion: be aſſured, I neglected nothing that you had ſuggeſted to me, or that occurred to myſelf at the time. Indeed ſo earneſtly did I preſs their compliance with an object from its nature ſo manifeſtly tending to their advantage, that it ought rather to have been propoſed and ſolicited by themſelves, that nothing but the importance of the meaſure in its probable future conſequences, and the ſtrong wiſh of Mr. Haſtings to effect it, would have juſtified my earneſtneſs and importunities.

It was however to no effect; and I can aſſure you, as you will plainly perceive by their letters now writing you on the ſubject, that they are determined not to take any active part whatever with our armies.

They have a thouſand arguments to oppoſe to thoſe I urged in favour of the plan for aſſuming the dignity of Rauge of Sittara; they gave a long detail of the paſt tranſactions of their hiſtory, the connections which they have ſince formed, and the treaties ſolemnly entered into by them in conſequence. They then dwelt a good deal upon the regard they have ever paid to their faith, by an adherence to which they have always been proſperous and flouriſhing.

They ſay they have ſworn to an alliance of friendſhip with the preſent Peiſhwa, Pundit Purdhaun Madhurow, which they cannot violate; and add, that their aſſerting their pretenſions to the ſovereignty will meet with numberleſs oppoſitions; and that though victory muſt in the end crown our arms over them all; it will not be without ſhedding much blood, and at the expence of their violating the ſacred force of engagements before entered into by them. This laſt circumſtance the Dewan lays much ſtreſs on. It is plain from every ſentiment expreſſed by him, that the Rajah does not mean on any account at this time to commence a war in ſupport of his claim.

I repreſented to him the favourable opportunity that now preſented itſelf; an army on his frontier, ready to accompliſh his wiſh, the diſtracted ſtate of affairs at Poonah, which would prevent the Miniſtry from ſeriouſly oppoſing him, however hoſtilely inclined; and that the reaſons he had in his letter urged to Mr. Haſtings and you accounted for the difficulties occaſioned by Mr. Elliott's death; and the delay of the detachment now no longer exiſting. All this he acknowledged; but declared it contrary to every conſideration of prudence and policy, for his maſter at this time to adopt the ſcheme propoſed: he talked of deferring it for two or three years; but could not give any particular reaſon, why it would then be more eligible than at this time. The motives by which they ſeem to be actuated, appear to me as follow:

Knowing the friendly intercourſe ſubſiſting betwixt the Engliſh and themſelves, and alſo plainly foreſeeing that a rupture with the Peiſhwa is at this time abſolutely unavoidable, they wiſh not to involve themſelves in any hoſtilities till the event of the war ſhall determine on which ſide victory will finally declare; I doubt not but they are conviced in the opinion, that it will be on ours, in which caſe they are aſſured of a friend in us; and ſhould it prove otherwiſe, beſides in the mean time ſecuring their country from the effects of war, they would have the leſs to fear from the reſentment of the miniſterial party hereafter.

The Dewan told me, that Zuffer ul Dowla, the Chief of Narnull, (at preſent independent of Nizam Ally) is much inclined to unite himſelf with Moodajee; that letters have come from him, ſoliciting the Rajah in the ſtrongeſt terms to join with the Engliſh, and aſſert his pretenſions to the ſovereignty of Sittara, in which Zuffer ul Dowla is ready to aſſiſt him with his forces: Notwithſtanding this concurrent favourable circumſtance, ſays the Dewan, the attempt cannot be made at this time; in ſhort, let what will be the motive for retracting from the ambitious projects the Rajah once meditated, it is now obvious that he has altered his views altogether, or at leaſt that he has deferred them till a future opportunity.

The Dewan did not fail to mention to me the motion of the Bombay troops towards Poonah, which he aſſerts to be an abſolute fact, and communicated to him by undoubted authority: Ragonaut Row's adopted ſon accompanies them with a body of his father's troops; ſo that there is no doubt of the intentions at leaſt of that Government in favour of that Chief. This circumſtance, (though he did not poſitively ſay ſo) what with the general averſion in which Ragonaut Row is held; the particular diſputes which have of late ariſen betwixt him and Moodajee, when the latter was compelled to make terms with the preſent Peiſhwa and Nizam Ally; and above all, a conſciouſneſs that his attaining the Rauze of Sittara in the extent he wiſhed, under the adminiſtration of Ragonaut Row, would be impracticable; I ſay this circumſtance ſeems an effectual bar to the Rajah's concurrence with the plan projected for his advancement by the Supreme Government at Calcutta, beſides a firm perſuaſion, I am certain it will be impoſſible to diveſt him of, that however we may profeſs to favour his views, our principal and ultimate end is to favour thoſe of Ragonaut Row. Many parts of the Dewan's converſation, and which do not at preſent occur, to communicate minutely, were of a tendency to aſſure me beyond the need of further conviction, that every effort to perſuade the Rajah into a concurrence with the propoſed plan, would be abſolutely ineffectual.

Although there is too much reaſon to believe the report of our troops at Bombay being in motion, I have ſince my arrival at this Court affected to ſuppoſe it might be premature, or attempted to account for it by ſome diſpute which might have happened with the Peiſhwa and our Government there, or ſome quarrel diſtinct from Ragonaut Row's cauſe; poſitively perſiſting in the intentions of the Supreme Board at Calcutta, to enter into and ſupport the views and pretenſions of Moodajee.

I was induced to be the more peremptory on this head, from the contents of the Supreme Council's letter to the gentlemen at Bombay, relative to Mr. Elliott's embaſſy, in which they poſitively requeſt that Government to refrain from any engagements of a nature hoſtile to the actual Adminiſtration at Poonah, excepting ſuch as may appear abſolutely neceſſary for the defence of their own poſſeſſions.

The

The neceſſity thus provided againſt by no means appearing admiſſible in excuſe for the meaſures this Court ſuppoſed have been taken in favour of Ragonaut Row, I have not ſcrupled altogether to doubt the inclinations for reſtoring him, having prompted the Bombay Council to take the field at this time; and having aſſerted my belief that they mean only to be in readineſs to ſupport and co-operate with us in favour of Moodajee's claim.

I am to have an interview with the Rajah to-morrow, when I ſhall be able to write you more particularly.

I have the honour, &c. &c. &c.

To Colonel Goddard.

Sir,

I wrote you yeſterday informing you of the ſubject of a conference I had with the Miniſter: as you deſired me to be very minute in relating every circumſtance that might occur during my ſtay at this place, I ſhall punctually communicate the ſmalleſt particular, in the courſe of which, if I mention any thing that does not immediately relate to the preſent negociation, or that ſeems to contradict the ſentiments expreſſed by the Court in any former conference, it may ſtill be of uſe to diſcover their real object, and give you a more clear and complete idea of the ſituation of affairs here.

This evening I had a private interview with the Rajah, at which his three ſons and the Miniſter were preſent, when the whole of the converſation of the preceding evening was again talked over, and the ſame ſentiments freely and clearly declared.

The Rajah has however entered more fully into his own particular views; he has acknowledged the object of his wiſh: and to prove his ſincerity in that reſpect, the Miniſter ſhewed me two letters from Zuffer-ul-Dowla, the Nawab of Narnull, in which he urges the Rajah to make uſe of the opportunity now offered by the arrival of the Engliſh troops, and poſſeſs himſelf of the ſovereignty of Sittara.

The Rajah talked much of his intimate connection and friendſhip with this Nawab, whom he eſteemed as his own ſon, and the deſire he had of making him alſo a friend of the Engliſh To this I anſwered in general terms, that the Engliſh would ever conſider his friends as their own.

Moodajee added, that I plainly ſaw what his views really were, but that many things were firſt neceſſary before they could be accomplished: in the firſt place, a treaty of friendſhip muſt be concluded betwixt the Engliſh Company and himſelf. I told him that was your intention, and that you was empowered to do ſo by the Governor General and Council. I then explained to him the principles upon which it was propoſed a defenſive alliance ſhould be made; to all which he gave a general conſent; but added, that the concurrence of the Council muſt be obtained from Calcutta, before his mind could be at eaſe, and before he would undertake the grand and important enterprize. I then read to him the Board's credentials, and explained the nature of them, pointing out the full authority with which it is cuſtomary for the Engliſh to inveſt their Miniſters when ſent to treat with any foreign Power: at the ſame time I told him, that thoſe articles which were intended to be of a permanent nature, and did not require an immediate execution, might be firſt ſettled here, and ultimately referred to the confirmation of the Board, but that what related to the immediate ſervice of the troops could not wait for this reference; and I exhorted him in the warmeſt terms to reflect upon the opportunity that now preſented itſelf, and which might not perhaps ſo readily occur to his wiſh. My endeavours were however to no purpoſe, and he has aſſured me, that he cannot now undertake the buſineſs; he is writing letters to the Governor and to you to this effect, which however will not be ready to accompany this diſpatch; I ſhall therefore forward them by ſome future opportunity. Apendix. No. 170.

In the courſe of our this day's converſation, many points moſt ſtrongly inſiſted on yeſterday were either totally omitted, or but ſlightly touched upon. The ſacredneſs of public faith was once hinted, but no regard to the Peiſhwa's intereſt at all expreſſed; on the contrary, the Rajah plainly avowed his own ambitious projects; but, as I mentioned before, declared the preſent ſeaſon for attempting them altogether improper and unfit. Ragonaut Row was not at all introduced into the ſubject of this day's converſation; but after all I am led to believe that the preſent apparent revolution in his favour is the principal bar to our negociation. The various excuſes urged to-day for delay are prompted ſince the conference of yeſterday, to ſoften the refuſal they think it political to give to the preſent propoſals made to them; at the ſame time they mean to keep up the friendly intercourſe they now have with our Government, and to improve it hereafter to their own advantage at a favourable opportunity.

I have the honour, &c. &c.

To Colonel Goddard.

Sir,

I have now the pleaſure to tranſmit you a letter from the Rajah to yourſelf, and two from Mr. Haſtings, which the Rajah requeſts you will forward to Calcutta: their contents I have already fully explained to you in my former letters: as they exactly correſpond with the reſolutions expreſſed in the ſeveral conferences I have had at this Court, I yeſterday paid the Dewan a viſit, when every particular was again fully and minutely diſcuſſed.

Their firſt wiſh ſeems now to ſet aſide our connection with Ragonaut Row, the ſupporting whom the Dewan ſays he is convinced is highly impolitic, and will in the end be fully proved ſo. The abhorrence in which that Chief is univerſally held is, he ſays, no ſecret to you; and the prejudices in the Decan againſt him will not eaſily if ever be removed. There may be one cauſe why this Court is peculiarly inimical towards him, becauſe an intimate connection formerly ſubſiſted betwixt him and Moodajee, which has ſince ſuſtained a total change; in effecting which, policy concurred with inclination on the part of the Berar Rajah to combine with the Peiſhwa and Nizam, when he ſolemnly engaged to them never to aſſiſt or join Ragonaut. The principal cauſe, however, of their objection to the Bombay ſchemes is, I make no doubt, the invincible bar they foreſee they will occaſion to the accompliſhment of their own.

This conſideration furniſhes one of the moſt conſiderable objections to the negociations propoſed to have been entered into with them at this time; and another they aſſign is the unprepared ſtate in which they now are for effecting the grand object of their ambition, for which they ſay powerful alliances, a large treaſure, and numerous force, are abſolutely neceſſary.

The Dewan did not ſcruple to ſay that your detachment was unequal to ſuch an enterprize; he ſoftened this by adding, that wherever you marched, and whatever foe you attacked, you would be victorious; but that it was neceſſary to guard againſt the depredations of enemies ſo ſudden in their motions as the Marattas are, in many quarters; that it would be requiſite to leave two battalions for the protection of Naigpore, and two for that of Narnull: in ſhort he ſummed up his judgment of the matter by ſaying, twenty battalions would be requiſite, and a thouſand Europeans, for this work; the thouſand Europeans he means principally for the ſervice of the guns, for he has no idea of that duty being properly performed but by them; in this opinion I confirmed him, but added, a few ſkilful men would be able to manage our artillery. What they ſeem to have in view at preſent is this, the making a peace betwixt the Engliſh and the Peiſhwa through their mediation, the totally diſcarding Ragonaut Row, and the taking a future occaſion of aſſerting their pretenſions, when a treaty ſhould have been concluded in the manner they propoſe to the Governor.

The Dewan, whoſe influence directs every thing here, is a man of great prudence and abilities; nor does he ſeem inclined to ſuffer his maſter to enter upon this buſineſs, or riſk the ſafety of his own dominions by new projects, till he conceives every poſſibility of diſappointment is effectually obviated: the preſent ſtate of things by no means flatters or promiſes ſucceſs to the achievement.

The letter they have wrote to you is perfectly plain and pointed, as are thoſe addreſſed to the Governor. The Dewan adviſes the march of your detachment to Poonah, by which time the Governor may ſend orders to Bombay of the nature recommended in the Rajah's letter, and Renie Ram alſo may have ſettled the other buſineſs with Mr. Haſtings. He talks a good deal inconſiſtently, for he propoſed going himſelf to Poonah, to act as mediator on the part of his maſter, with the Miniſters there, which would be a proof of the higheſt friendſhip; whilſt at the ſame time he ought to be thinking of arming, in conſequence of Mr. Haſtings's reſolves, againſt the very root of the Peiſhwa's power; in ſhort, I am, from circumſtances occurring in the courſe of converſation, well perſuaded, that however deſirous the Rajah himſelf may be, the Dewan is himſelf more lukewarm; perhaps he thinks his own honour concerned in the maintaining the treaties between the Nizam and the Peiſhwa, which he himſelf principally brought about; and there is even room to believe he may have entered into negociations of a very ſecret nature with the Miniſtry at Poonah, who are Brahmins like himſelf; nor do I imagine it can be his wiſh to ſee the power of the Brahmins totally annihilated, which would be the inevitable conſequence of placing a Rajepoot of the authority of Moodajee on the throne of Sittara.

Laſt night, by ſome means or other, he ſeemed to give a looſe to his ſentiments a good deal; he acknowledged you had cauſe to be offended with the reception given to Monſieur St. Lubin at Poonah, by the miniſterial party, which he deſcribed.

He ſays he brought letters from the French king, and told them in the name of his maſter, to point out in what manner they might be ſerved, as the French were ready to do ſo. He had very valuable preſents, among which was one picture of a very particular nature, and which denoted the deep addreſs and cunning with which the deſigns had been laid: it repreſented the murder of Narrain Row, in the moſt ſtriking point of view, and the providence of Heaven interfering (which were indeed the heads of the miniſterial party) to ſave the wife of Narrain Row, Gungaboy, from deſtruction, who is attempting to kill herſelf; and telling her to bring forth that child with which ſhe was pregnant (meaning the preſent Peiſhwa) who would live to revenge his father's death, and perpetuate the glories of his race.

The reception they gave St. Lubin was moſt gracious and attentive; he was preſented with an elephant, &c. in proportion, and liberally ſupplied with every thing, whilſt our Reſident Mr. Moſtyn was denied acceſs to the Durbar, and received even particular indignities.

St. Lubin ſince, or about the time of the march of our detachment, was diſmiſſed from Poonah, and is gone to Nidjiff Khân.

Dewagur deſcribes with great ſatisfaction the conduct of St. Lubin, who, he ſays, wept a good deal at this affecting ſtory, as did ſome of the other old Brahmins there; but Nana Furneſe laughed at the artifice of the Frenchman, and greatly admired the facility with which he could ſhed real tears.

Naigpore, 24th December 1778. I have the honour, &c. (Signed) Dal. Watherſton.

To Colonel Goddard.

Sir,

I have received your letter of the 21ſt, by which I find the news of the Bombay troops being in motion has alſo reached you, and before this I make no doubt it will be fully and particularly confirmed to you. This circumſtance and the determination of the Berar Court to remain at preſent inactive, which I have in my former letter ſignified to you, will of courſe make you anxious to adopt ſome plan of immediate operations.

By every thing that has paſſed ſince my arrival here, I am fully perſuaded of the friendly inclinations of Moodajee towards the Engliſh; I before mentioned two letters he ſhewed me from Zuffer-ul-Dowlah, the Nawab of Narnul, and informed me of the contents; laſt night he received another, he ſent it to me to peruſe.

It begins with abuſing the Government at Poonah, pointing out their inſolence in a gleam of proſperity, and their oppoſite conduct when apprehenſive of any misfortune, which he proves by reminding the Rajah of the threats the Miniſters had formerly made uſe of when they were victorious over the party raiſed by Nanah Furneſe, and comparing it with the expreſſions they now employed to prevail upon Moodajee and himſelf to unite in oppoſing the Engliſh, who they ſay, in breach of the ſolemn treaty they had made, are marched with an army from Bombay to ſupport Ragonaut Row; in ſhort, Zuffer-ul-Dowlah tells the Rajah that the behaviour of theſe people is ſolely dictated by their own private views, and adviſes him to put no confidence whatever in their profeſſions, but to join the Engliſh, who, he ſays, are able and willing to be his faithful friends: he adds a few words to the letter in his own hand writing, which are earneſtly preſſing him to make friends with the Engliſh, and to join their forces, which are come into his country: he alſo encloſes a copy of a letter from the Miniſters to the Nizam, informing him of the march of the Bombay detachment, and their taking poſt at Bhore Gaut; to oppoſe whom they have detached Scindia and Tookajee Holcar, with orders to puniſh their temerity; they preſs the Nizam to join them; and after talking of ſome grants of land which they had made over to him, for which purpoſe they had given orders to their Aumil, they mention their inſtructions hereafter, ſending Scindia and Holcar to aſſiſt him in puniſhing Hyder Naig, who they ſay is now beſieging ſome fort belonging to them.

I forgot to tell you that in Zuffer-ul-Dowlah's letter he informs the Rajah that the Miniſters have wrote to him of their entering into terms of friendſhip with Hyder Naig: how palpably the two letters contradict each other in that reſpect. As a farther proof of the artifices to which they are obliged to have recourſe, they propoſe to the Nizam, as an inducement for his joining with them, to aſſiſt him in attacking Arcot. They have alſo inſtructed their Miniſter at this Court, Bapow Row, to demand the aſſiſtance of the Rajah; and have promiſed to ſend Scindia and Holcar with a body of troops to aſſiſt him in levying the chout of Bengal. They have further propoſed to the Rajah to give him an extent of country in the province of Khendeſh, that will yield a revenue equal to that of Cuttack (as they perceive he is apprehenſive of the Engliſh taking it into their poſſeſſion) and they will themſelves receive Cuttack in exchange, which they will maintain againſt all our efforts.

Moodajee ſees the ſituation of the Poonah Durbar, and the folly of their councils; he is reſolved firmly to obſerve a neutral part at preſent; and recommends to the Peiſhwa by no means to enter upon a war with the Engliſh, which muſt be attended with certain ruin to his Government. He avows to them his friendſhip for us, but alſo gives them to underſtand he will not fight againſt their forces; and if they commence hoſtilities againſt him, he has nothing to dread from their power, ſupported as he will be by the arms of the Engliſh.

It appears that a better opportunity than the preſent could not offer for our ſettling the affairs of this country according to our wiſh; Moodajee and Narnull Nawab are our friends; Hyder Naig has for his enemies, ours; the partizans of Ragonaut Row will greatly divide the force of the Maratta State; and I have reaſon to think that even Nizam Ally will obſerve a neutrality.

I think it neceſſary to ſay ſomething about Bapow Row, the Miniſter at this Court from the Poonah Durbar; he has often reſided here in that character; and about eight months ago came to endeavour to prevail upon the Rajah to ſend his ſon Ragogee with a force to aſſiſt the Peiſhwa againſt Hyder Naig, which he was put off from day to day with hopes of obtaining, till the march of our detachment, and the rumour of the deſigns of our Government, gave a turn to the ſyſtem of our politics; ſince that time he has been indefatigable in counteracting our views at this Court; he is treated with a good deal of reſpect and attention, and though his aſſiduity and influence may have proved too weak to make Moodajee wiſh to break off his alliance with us, it has I make no doubt aſſiſted a good deal to prevent his acting hoſtilely againſt the Peiſhwa. I was introduced to him on the day of my public audience, but have not met with him ſince.

This evening I viſited the Dewan; he propoſed, when we were diſcourſing on the ſubject of our diſputes with the Peiſhwa, that this man ſhould be ſent for; but I objected talking to him formally on any point relating to public buſineſs; as a private friend of the Dewan's only, I ſhould be glad to ſee him—the motion for ſending for him was immediately dropped.

I went yeſterday, by the particular requeſt of the Rajah, to ſee his artillery; he takes much pride and pleaſure in it, and has made a number of pieces of ordnance himſelf; they are ſome of them large, and prettily ornamented; but the carriages, &c. are exceedingly clumſy, and ill conſtructed: he has four or five Europe guns, apparently old. The whole of his artillery amounts to forty; twelve of which are very ſmall, not exceeding the bore of one of our muſkets. He has ſome half Portugueze, and a few vagabond Europeans in his ſervice, who receive about 30 rupees per month.

They tell of two Frenchmen of ſome conſequence and rank that came here about five months ago; one of them died, the other is gone to obtain ſervice either with the Peiſhwa or Nizam. Extravagance is not a fault of this Rajah; and I find, though he treated the ſurviving Frenchman with ſufficient attention, and even made him ſome preſents, giving him money for his preſent ſupport, he would not ſatisfy his expectations to induce him to remain in employment at Naigpore; perhaps on account of Mr. Elliott's expected arrival, and the negociations he was carrying on with the Engliſh, the Rajah was not deſirous of his ſtay.

However, upon the ſtricteſt inquiry, I can ſee no grounds to ſuſpect the intereſts of the French nation were any ways connected with this viſit.

I have the honour, &c. &c. &c.

To Colonel Goddard.

Sir,

In conſequence of the authority you gave me for ſo doing, I ſignified to this Government that I had in my poſſeſſion ſome preſents as teſtimonies of friendſhip from the honourable Governor General and Council, which you had hoped to have the happineſs of delivering yourſelf in perſon when you ſaw the Rajah; but as you were diſappointed in that hope, you had deſired me to preſent them in your name: he received them with many marks of ſatisfaction, and ſaid a number of things expreſſive of his attachment to the Engliſh, whoſe friendſhip he affirmed he never would relinquiſh; but that the family of Booſla ſhould be the ſame with the Engliſh, without diminution, to the end of time. This declaration he repeated, laying his hand upon his breaſt; adding, that he did ſo that his three ſons, who were ſitting by him, might be witneſſes of his ſentiments, and that it might make an impreſſion on their minds. Appendix No. 170.

The Dewan propoſed that the preſents intended for him might be given in preſence of the Rajah alſo; which I accordingly did, and he received them with the ſame proofs of ſatisfaction, expreſſing himſelf particularly pleaſed with the preſent of the ink-ſtand, which he placed upon his head, as a mark of the honourable diſtinction he thought done him by ſending it.

Many things were ſaid upon the ſubject of the preſents, all expreſſive of the ſatisfaction they gave; and I am particularly pleaſed that this proof of attention, ſo neceſſary in opening a negociation with any of theſe States, whoſe eſtabliſhed cuſtom it is to make that ceremony an introduction to buſineſs, has not been omitted.

I this evening obtained my audience of leave from the Rajah, at which his ſons and the Miniſter were preſent, as indeed they have always been at the ſeveral interviews I have had ſince my arrival. He repeated at this converſation the aſſurances of friendſhip, and deſire of alliance with the Engliſh, which he before expreſſed to me; and aſſigned the ſame reaſons for delaying the concluſion of the propoſed treaty with our Government, which I have communicated to you in my former letters. He reſted his hopes of every ſucceſs in his own future views upon the reſolutions which may be taken at Calcutta, and the anſwers which ſhall arrive in conſequence of the letters he has addreſſed to Mr. Haſtings, and forwarded to him through you; theſe he ſays, contain every thing neceſſary to be attended to for the accompliſhment of his wiſhes, and the ſubſtance of what he has empowered Benie Ram to propoſe to Mr. Haſtings in his name, by whom alſo he has ſent duplicates of the ſame letters.

Benie Ram Pundit is to ſet out immediately by way of Cuttack; but as he means to travel by daily ſtages, I do not ſuppoſe he will arrive at Calcutta in leſs than forty days.

In addition to the propoſals before made by this Court, relative to the troops under your command, the Rajah and Duan expreſſed a ſtrong deſire that they might not move forwards towards Poonah, but remain in the neighbourhood of the Berar territories till orders might arrive from the Supreme Council, in anſwer to the Rajah's letters; and in the mean time, as it would be neceſſary to make ſome proviſion for the expence that would be requiſite for their maintenance, prior to the final adjuſtment of the grand object, they propoſed that you ſhould reduce to the ſubjection and authority of the Rajah, the diſtricts of Huſſeingabad and Mundalla, over both which they advance a legal claim of ſovereignty, and which they aſſert are unjuſtly withheld from them by the preſent poſſeſſors: to effect this ſervice they propoſe ordering a ſmall force to accompany you.

Not having received any inſtructions from you on theſe points, I declined giving any particular anſwer regarding them; but as I was to ſet out for camp immediately, I promiſed to make known to you their propoſals, to which you would yourſelf immediately ſend an anſwer.

As the diſtance of this place, and the length of time I muſt neceſſarily take in conducting the treaſure to camp, will make my arrival ſomething tedious, I have diſpatched an expreſs to you with the particulars of what has paſſed, that you may be enabled to reply to the Rajah's propoſals without loſs of time, in the manner you may yourſelf judge moſt proper.

I beg leave to intimate to you one circumſtance relative to Bapou Row, whom in a former letter I have mentioned as Miniſter from the Peiſhwa at this Court: this man prior to my arrival, and for ſome time after, was treated with great attention and reſpect; but for ſome reaſon, which I cannot certainly learn, is now a good deal neglected, and the Dewan told me he was to return to Poonah in a few days; I know he remonſtrated very freely with this court for the partiality and friendſhip ſhewn by them to the Engliſh, but to no effect; and I believe ſome ſome altercations aroſe betwixt the Miniſter and him on theſe ſubjects, which produced the preſent rupture.

I have the honour to be,

APPENDIX, No. 171.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, 4th February 1779.

PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident;

Richard Barwell, Philip Francis, and Edward Wheler, } Eſquires.

RECONSIDERED the advices from Bombay, recorded in the laſt conſultation.

The Governor General delivers in the following minute:

The following obſervations have occurred to me as worthy notice in the conſideration of the letter lately received from the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, and now before the Board:

On the 17th of Auguſt we received a letter from the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, dated the 25th of July, informing us that they had concerted a new plan for conducting Ragonaut Row to Poonah. We replied on the ſame day, and authorized them to carry their plan into execution, with the following expreſs proviſions:

1ſt. That it ſhould not interfere with any engagement formed with Moodajee Booſla by Mr. Elliott, and previouſly notified to them by him.

2d. That their lateſt advices from Europe ſhould amount to an aſſurance that the force required for this ſervice might be ſpared without endangering the ſafety of Bombay, in the event of a French invaſion.

3d. That the engagements which they might form either with Ragonaut Row himſelf, or with Moraba and his aſſociates, ſhould not be contrary to thoſe concluded by Mr. Elliott, and notified to them, nor of a hoſtile tendency to the Government of Berar.

Theſe appear to have been the laſt inſtructions received by them from this Government when they reſolved on the execution of the plan, and concluded the treaty with Ragonaut Row, of which they have adviſed us in their letter of the 12th of December; theſe they have quoted to us as their authority, and the ſame authority has been proclaimed to the world by Ragonaut Row in his manifeſto.

So far the letter of theſe inſtructions could warrant the execution of their plan, independently of the circumſtances under which they were dictated; the ſubſequent change of theſe circumſtances, the period of time originally fixed and notified to us for its execution, the great lapſe of that time, and the known and actual ſtate of our political ſyſtem, it is certainly warranted by them, ſince no engagement had been formed between this Government and that of Berar; nor do the conditions of the treaty viſibly bear a hoſtile tendency to the Government of Berar; neither are they in any danger of a French invaſion.

But whether it can be juſtified under all the other conſiderations which I have enumerated, I ſhall leave to a higher authority to determine, ſince it is not my intention to propoſe that we ſhould either diſclaim or annul it; I ſhall ſimply confine myſelf to a brief recital of the tranſactions and events which have happened ſince the notifications of their deſign, and which may affect the propriety of it, conſidered relatively to the time and mode of its execution.

The time firſt appointed for the execution of the plan was the beginning of September.

On the 11th September they adviſed us, "that they had not yet taken any meaſures in the proſecution of the plan, but ſhould ſpeedily come to ſome deciſive reſolutions, and adviſe us immediately of the reſult," referring us to Mr. Lewis for a full information of the ſituation of affairs at Poonah.

The words which I have maked with lines drawn under them were too emphatical not to attract our particular notice when they were read, and obviouſly impreſſed us with the perſuaſion, that as ſo long a time had already elapſed, (for the letter did not reach us till the 2d of November) and as we had received no other advices from them, though promiſed to be immediately ſent us, of the deciſive reſolutions which were ſpeedily to follow it, no reſolutions had followed, but that the plan had proved abortive. In this opinion we were confirmed; I ſpeak for myſelf, at leaſt by the information received from Mr. Lewis, that the heads of the party at whoſe invitation the Preſidency of Bombay had formed the deſign of conducting Ragonaut Row to Poonah, were all either impriſoned or deprived of office and authority. I muſt add in this place, that notwithſtanding the promiſes ſo pointedly given in their letter of the 11th September, we heard no more from them till the receipt of their letter of the 12th December now before us.

Our army was at this time far advanced; the object originally preſented to it ſeemed to have vaniſhed, and none remained but the propoſed alliance with Moodajee Booſla, which had been to this time treated as little more than a reſource, to which we looked in the event of a failure in the deſign furniſhed us by the Preſidency of Bombay. It was now reſolved to adopt it wholly; and to prevent our being embarraſſed by a revival of the former, Colonel Goddard having been empowered by our letter of the 16th November, to negociate a treaty with Moodajee Booſla on the ground of Mr. Elliott's inſtructions; he was by another Letter of the 22d of the ſame month releaſed from the authority of the Preſidency of Bombay, and directed to obey only the orders of this Board, with the allowance to exerciſe his own diſcretion in complying with ſuch requiſitions from them as were not inconſiſtent with the ſpecial and ſingle commiſſion which he had now in charge.

Theſe were conſequences which the Preſidency of Bombay ought to have foreſeen and to have made a proviſion for them; I will venture to ſay that they did foreſee them; they knew that our army was on the way, and making quick advances, their letter mentions it; they knew that we were in treaty with Moodajee; they knew that we had left the negociations open for the accompliſhment of their plan, while there was a chance of its taking effect; and as they had given us every cauſe to conclude that it would not take effect, they ought to have concluded in their turn, that we had indemnified ourſelves for the diſappointment by an immediate and decided engagement with Moodajee, the only reſource now left us; and which in effect we had at firſt abandoned to act in the proſecution of the ſchemes which they had preſented to us, and to which the orders of the Company had required our preferable attention. They knew alſo that at the very time in which they were in treaty with Ragonaut Row, and preparing to conduct him to Poonah, the Miniſters of this Government were either in immediate treaty, or on the point of commencing it with Moodajee Booſla; and that we had already drawn that Prince into a declared party with our Government, by the proſpect held out to him of the credit and advantages of our alliance; under ſuch circumſtances they will poſſibly be deemed by impartial judges to have exceeded the point of duty in acting at all, and in not waiting waiting for the reſult of the depending meaſures of their ſuperior Government: but as they had reſolved to act, they ſurely ought to have paid ſome regard to the probable ſtate of our connection with Moodajee, and have left an opening for his admiſſion into their engagements with Ragonaut Row, after our example, and in the ſame manner as our inſtructions to Mr. Elliott had preſcribed the junction of Ragonaut Row in his negociation with Moodajee. This precaution they wholly neglected, confining themſelves to a bare acknowledgment of any engagements which might have been actually concluded with Moodajee at the preciſe date of their treaty, without which the treaty itſelf would have been invalid. Thus far their conduct may have been defective; it has defeated our meaſures and expoſed us to the ſuſpicion of duplicity; but I know not how it can be remedied.

The laſt point which remains to be noticed is of greater conſequence, and merits a more ſubſtantial conſideration of it, as the remedy is, I preſume, within our power, and our duty requires that we ſhould apply it. It will be remembered that our detachment was expreſsly deſigned for the ſupport of the plan communicated to us by the Preſidency of Bombay, in December 1777, and ſince executed in a different form. Its object was afterwards varied, becauſe we underſtood, on the authority of that Preſidency, that their plan was wholly laid aſide. They have now precipitately recalled it to its original purſuit, but have neither provided the means of indemnifying the Company for the paſt expences of the army, nor a fund for its future ſubſiſtence, although it was one of the firſt injunctions given to them, when we reſolved on furniſhing them with this aid, "That a ſpecific ſum "ſhould be required, to reimburſe the Company for the "military charges which might be incurred by their in"terpoſition." See our reſolutions of the January 1778. The 9th and 10th articles of the treaty do indeed bind Ragonaut Row to the payment of a ſpecific ſum, viz. two and a half lacks of rupees per month for the charges of the army and ſtores with which he was to be aſſiſted now, that is from the Preſidency of Bombay only; and the number of men compoſing this aid is fixed at 4,000, which is within 90 of the force actually employed on this ſervice. But they have not only made no proviſion for the charge of our detachment; they ſeem to have ſtudied to preclude it altogether, by the following clauſe of the 10th article, viz. "Which the "Governor and Select Committee agree to accept with"out further account, in full of every expence attending "the army."

I hope and believe, that however we may have differed, or may differ, on other points, we ſhall be unanimous in the reſolution to require that this defect of the treaty be ſupplied by a demand of a ſpecific ſum for the reimburſement of the paſt expences incurred by the expedition, and of a monthly ſubſidy during its continuance.

It does not appear neceſſary for this Board to expreſs either an approval or diſapproval of the treaty. It has been made under the declaration of their ſanction, and proclaimed as poſſeſſing it. The conditions have received the firmeſt and fulleſt ratification that could be given to them by the contracting parties, and cannot therefore admit of amendment or addition. It is happily conformable to the orders of the Court of Directors; and if the objects of it be ſucceſsfully proſecuted, the eſſential purpoſes of our late meaſures, which have a relation to the Marattas, will be anſwered by it, though perhaps not ſo effectually, nor ſo durable a ſyſtem of policy eſtabliſhed as might have been obtained by an alliance with Moodajee Booſſa, on the footing projected for it. The meaſure is paſt, and cannot be recalled; our own plan has been rendered impracticable by it, and our detachment muſt by this time be far advanced to ſupport it.—We have therefore no option. We muſt give it all the aids that can be effectually beſtowed on it.

But I do not think for this purpoſe we ſhould entirely diſarm our own Government of its powers, and leave it to the diſcretion of the Government of Bombay. This would be neither conſiſtent with the leſſons of prudence which we have learnt from dearly-bought experience, nor with the dignity we poſſeſs as the ſuperior State. Beſides, the near approach of the period which has been fixed for the duration of the preſent Government impoſes an additional obligation upon us to maintain inviolate thoſe rights of which we are but the temporary guardians. The defects of the preſent ſyſtem have been manifeſted by a trial of five years; and it is to be expected that the wiſdom of the Legiſlature will provide a more complete and effectual controul for the new adminiſtration of the Britiſh affairs in India, than that which was conſtituted by the laſt Act of Parliament.—With this conſideration in proſpect, I ſhall propoſe that Colonel Goddard ſhall ſtill retain his independency on the Government of Bombay; and that he be inveſted with powers to treat with the Adminiſtration of Poonah, as the Miniſter and repreſentative of this Government, on all points which regard the general intereſts of the Company, or the particular views of this Government.

Appendix. No. 171.

Having thus laid down the grounds of our future conduct, I ſhall now proceed to recommend the following propoſitions as dependent on them:

1ſt. That Colonel Goddard be directed to co-operate with the Preſidency and Select Committee of Bombay, and with the committee appointed by them for conducting the political and military affairs at Poonah, in the ſupport of the treaty concluded by that Preſidency with Ragonaut Row, and of the operations dependant on it.

2d. That he be confirmed in the poſſeſſion of the powers which he at preſent holds, dependant on the Governor General and Council of Bengal, and independent of the Government of Bombay.

3d. That he be authorized to apply for ſuch reinforcements of troops, from the Preſidency of Bombay, as he ſhall judge neceſſary for completing the ſtrength of his detachment, and to receive the ſame, with the condition that they be not commanded by any officer of a ſuperior rank to his own, and that the Preſidency of Bombay be deſired to furniſh him with ſuch reinforcements, on the conditions thus preſcribed.

4th. That he ſhall not interfere in any of the negociations or other tranſactions of the committee appointed by the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, nor in any points which reſpect the treaty lately concluded with Ragonaut Row, or the ſeparate and immediate intereſts of that Preſidency, except only in ſuch points in which he ſhall be called upon by the Preſidency and Select Committee, or by the committee appointed for conducting the military and political affairs at Poonah, for his advice or aſſiſtance.

5th. That he be appointed the Miniſter of this Government at the Court of Poonah, with full powers to treat with Ragonaut Row, or ſuch other perſon or perſons as ſhall be at the head of the Maratta State, upon ſuch matters as ſhall be expreſsly given to him in charge, and to accept or conclude any engagements for the ſame on the part of the Governor General and Council; and that a letter of credence be given him to that effect.

6th. That he be inſtructed to demand from Ragonaut Row, or the Government for the time being, payment of the expences already incurred in the expedition undertaken by the detachment under his command, eſtimated at two lacks of rupees per month, from the 1ſt of June 1778, to the day of arrival at or near Poonah, and a monthly ſubſidy to the ſame amount, for the time in which it ſhall remain at Poonah; with the allowance of ſix months for the return of the detachment to Bengal from the day of its diſmiſſion; that it be left to his diſcretion to obtain the moſt complete ſecurity for theſe payments, either by aſſignments on the public treaſury, or on reſpectable Shroffs, or, on the laſt reſort, on any of the Aumils or collectors of the revenue, who ſhall engage to him for the ſame, but not on the collections themſelves; and that he be expreſsly forbidden to interfere, or to have any concern in the collections, or to ſuffer any perſon under his authority to interfere, or have any concern therein.

7th. That in caſe of the refuſal to comply with this demand, or of ſuch an evaſion of it as ſhall be equivalent to a refuſal, Colonel Goddard be directed to notify the ſame to the committee, and to the Preſident and Select committee of Bombay; and either to return with the detachment under his command to the province of Berar, or to retire to the lands ceded to the Company, and in poſſeſſion of the Government of Bombay, at his diſcretion; and that the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay be peremptorily required and commanded, in ſuch caſe to recall their troops from Poonah, and from the Maratta dominions.

8th. That the inſtructions already given to Colonel Goddard do remain in full force; and that he be directed to reſume the negociations with the Government of Berar, and to treat with it on the grounds of thoſe inſtructions, whenever an occaſion ſhall offer to proſecute them conſiſtently with the foregoing reſolutions.

9th. That the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay be deſired to appoint an agent or miniſter on the part of their Government, for the management of its ſeparate concerns with the Adminiſtration of Poonah, and for the accompliſhment of the treaty lately concluded with Ragonaut Row; that his inſtructions be limited to theſe objects, and that they themſelves be forbidden to enter into any new engagements without a previous application to us, and our ſanction obtained.

Mr. Francis—I ſhall give theſe propoſitions the moſt attentive conſideration; but that the Board may have the whole ſubject at once before them, I beg leave to aſk whether it be meant that the detachment under Major Camac ſhall proceed under its preſent orders, or be recalled? Colonel Goddard's advance to Poonah, I apprehend, alters the ground on which that reinforcement was ſent, and makes it now impracticable to effect a junction between the two detachments.

Governor General—I think it is probable that we may find reaſons in the ſubſequent advices from Colonel Goddard to recall Major Camac; but I do not think that we ſhould too precipitately reſolve on this meaſure, as we are yet unacquainted with the reſult of the expedition undertaken by the Preſidency of Bombay, the event of which may render the advance of this reinforcement very eſſentially neceſſary. Colonel Goddard was adviſed of our reſolution to ſend him this reinforcement in our letter of the 28th December, which I underſtand from the Secretary was diſpatched on the 1ſt or 2d of January. It will probably have reached him before the end of laſt month, allowing the greateſt probable length of time for its conveyance, and his anſwer to it may be expected by the end of this month: I think it will be adviſable to wait till that time, unleſs from any intermediate intelligence we ſhall have ſtrong grounds to conclude either that the junction will be impracticable or unneceſſary. The detachment will ſtill remain within our own territories, and ready for any other ſervice, although there is no great likelihood that it will be required.

PRESENT,

Bengal Secret Conſultations, 8th February 1779.

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident;

Richard Barwell,
Philip Francis,
Edward Wheler,
} Eſquires.

Re-conſidered the minute of the Governor General, entered in the laſt conſultation.

Mr. Wheler delivers in the following minute:

Having on former occaſions given my opinion fully on the general queſtions, which relate to our political tranſactions with the Marattas, I hold myſelf diſpenſed from again entering into that ſubject, and ſhall therefore confine my preſent remarks to the propoſitions contained in the Governor General's minute, and upon which I am called by him to give my opinion.

I ſee no objection to the propoſition contained in the firſt article; underſtanding it to have been the original deſign of this Government, in ſending a detachment to Bombay, to ſupport and aſſiſt the Preſident and Council of that ſettlement, in their engagements with Ragonaut Row.

To the ſecond and third I object; and to every other propoſition which has for its object the giving to Colonel Goddard any authority, civil or military, independent of the Preſident and Council of Bombay. I conſider it as contrary to every principle of ſound policy, that either in the conduct of war, or negociation between two States, there ſhould ſubſiſt in reality or appearance, two authorities, or two intereſts; I know of no intereſt that this Government or the Preſidency of Bombay can have, ſeparated from each other: and the Court of Directors order, that in our political tranſactions and negociations with the Powers on the other ſide of India, we make uſe of the channel and agency of the Preſident and Council of Bombay.

To the 4th article I ſee no objection: the 5th, 6th, and 7th, I conſider already in a great meaſure as anſwered; and although I am equally deſirous with the Governor General, that the Company ſhould be reimburſed for the expence occaſioned by the march of the detachment acroſs India, yet I cannot conſent to the demand of it being made by Colonel Goddard, or to the alternative propoſed for him, ſhould that demand be refuſed. The Preſidency of Bombay have entered into a treaty with Ragonaut Row, on the part of the Company, by which we are bound, and are engaged in meaſures in ſupport of that treaty; I cannot conſent to orders which authorize an infraction of the treaty, and which may claſh with, or even totally defeat the meaſures taken in conſequence.

To the 8th article I object, becauſe I conſider any negociations or political connections with the Rajah of Berar, as totally inconſiſtent with the Company's policy and conſtant orders; and if this was not the caſe, the diſinclination he has already manifeſtly ſhewn to enter into any engagements with this Government, is a ſufficient warning to us not to renew our negotiations in that quarter.

To the 9th article I muſt obſerve, that during a ſtate of actual war, when circumſtances may change every day, and when the Preſidency of Bombay muſt act from them, according to the occaſion; I cannot conſent to ſo ſtrict a limitation, either of the object of their Miniſter at Poonah, or of their future negociations with Ragonaut Row, becauſe at the diſtance we are placed, an entire change of circumſtances may take place, and favourable opportunities be loſt, before we can be made acquainted with the events, much more give our orders in conſequence.

As far therefore as the letters and propoſed inſtructions to Colonel Goddard may differ from the ſentiments expreſſive above, they muſt meet with my diſapprobation, and I diſſent from them accordingly.

Mr. Francis delivers in the following minute:

The line of conduct which I have invariably purſued with reſpect to the late political meaſures of this Government, and of the Preſidency of Bombay, not only exempts me from all reſponſibility for the conſequences of them, but from any obligation of deciding upon the reſpective merits of their proceedings and ours. That queſtion lies ſtrictly between the preſent majority of this

Board,

Appendix. No. 171.

Board, and the Preſidency of Bombay: I ſhall enter into it no farther than I am compelled to do by the propoſitions before us, and by the exiſting ſtate of facts.

In the conſideration of every meaſure, which I have either recommended or oppoſed, my original and conſtant object was, to preſerve the peace of India; to adhere faithfully to our treaty with the Peiſhwa; and not to ſuffer the Company's arms to be engaged either on this ſide of India or by the Preſidency of Bombay, in ſchemes of conqueſt and ambition. In adhering to theſe principles, I believe I have been guided by the dictates of ſound policy and right reaſon; as I aſſuredly have been by the Company's fundamental maxims, and by their poſitive and repeated commands. I have it too from an authority which in the ſcale of any argument of mine, muſt be deemed particularly weighty * "that in the Company's "concerns with their neighbours and allies, the moſt ſcru- "pulous obſervance of their public engagements, and of "the rights of others, ought to be their firſt and ruling "object; for every Prince and State whoſe poſſeſſions "may ſtand within ſight of the Company's ambition, is "naturally led to apply to their own intereſts the treat- "ment which they ſee others receive from the Company "and their dependants."

* Vide Sect Conſ. 7th Auguſt 1776.

When I found my firſt and principal object no longer attainable, my next endeavour was, to preſerve if poſſible an unity of views, a conſiſtency of plan, and a general co-operation of meaſures between this Government and the ſubordinate Preſidencies. My efforts in both inſtances have been equally unſucceſsful. For the truth of theſe aſſertions, I ſhall content myſelf with referring generally to our ſecret conſultations for the laſt twelve months; but more particularly to that of the 17th Auguſt 1778; nothing has happened which had not been foretold: but ſince no reflections on what is paſt will leſſen the difficulty of our preſent ſituation, I ſhall avoid all retroſpect as much as poſſible; new facts create new queſtions, and theſe facts, I fear, are ſuch as exclude this immediate influence of general principles of policy and good conduct, on which alone a great State can found a ſolid ſyſtem of ſtrength, ſecurity, and duration. The arguments and events with which the Governor's preſent propoſitions are introduced, are ſtated to be the grounds of our future conduct. As ſuch, I muſt examine them, and perhaps my own ſafety may make it neceſſary on this occaſion more than any other, to ſhew how far I do or do not concur in the aſſertions or opinions which I may be obliged to ſet my name to.

1ſt. I agree with the Governor General, that the plan lately carried into execution by the Preſidency of Bombay was certainly warranted by our inſtructions to them of the 17th of Auguſt 1778.

2d. I agree with the Governor General in thinking that, conſidering the particular promiſe contained in their letter of the 11th of September, as well as the general line of their duty, the ſubordination in which they ſtand to this Government, and the attention they owe to the common intereſts of the Britiſh empire in India, not leſs than immediately to thoſe of their own Preſidency, they were bound to have ſent us immediate notice of the reſult of their reſolutions; and that their reſolving on an enterprize of ſuch importance on the 12th October, and not giving us intelligence of it before the 12th of December, is not to be defended, not at leaſt by any fact or argument which is yet before us.

3d. But I do not admit that any thing done or omitted by the Preſidency of Bombay after the 11th September, did or could warrant the reſolution taken here of abandoning Ragoba, and ſubſtituting an alliance with Moodajee Booſla, in the place of the object originally preſented to us by the Preſidency of Bombay. That reſolution was taken here on the 11th of July. I conſider our plan as wholly adopted the moment Mr. Elliott's inſtructions were reſolved on. From that time forward it never was conſidered as little more than a reſource to which we looked in the event of a failure in the other deſign; it then became our main and ſole object; and Mr. Elliott was poſitively inſtructed to conclude, even without waiting for any further orders from the Board.

It is true that on the 17th of Auguſt we authorized the Preſidency of Bombay to carry their own plan into execution; but I never can allow that the two meaſures could be reconciled. When their manifeſt inconſiſtency was objected to, the anſwer to that objection was, that "the reſolution of the Preſidency of Bombay to defer "the execution of a deſign, the ſucceſs of which could "only be inſured by immediate action, was equivalent "to a reſolution to do nothing." The Governor General then regarded their deſign in favour of Ragoba as improbable, yet thought it incumbent on him to ſupport their meaſures, though againſt his belief of their taking effect. In the event it appears, that they have adhered to their plan, and have carried it into execution.

4th. Whether the Preſidency of Bombay did or did not foreſee the conſequences which might attend their engaging in this enterprize, they have our direct and explicit authority to plead in their defence. They were not made acquainted with the contents of Mr. Elliott's inſtructions, conſequently they had no direct information of the nature of our views to guide or reſtrain them in the exerciſe of that power, which our letter of the 17th Auguſt gave them. They never received any letter from Mr. Elliott; nor do they appear to have heard of his death on the 12th December; and admitting that they had not left an opening for Moodajee Booſla's admiſſion into their engagements with Ragonaut Row, I know not how the example of this Government, and the inſtructions ſaid to have been given to Mr. Elliott, to provide for a junction of Ragonaut Row in his negociations with Moodajee Booſla, can be urged againſt the Preſidency of Bombay, who knew nothing of the matter. To this hour we do not know that they have ever ſeen Mr. Elliott's inſtructions.

By their letter before us, they do not appear to have known that our army was making quick advances; on the contrary they expreſs an uneaſineſs at the ſlow advances of the Bengal detachment.

5th. In ſpeaking of our intended engagement with Moodajee, it is ſaid, "that in effect we had at firſt aban- "doned it to aſſiſt in the proſecution of the ſcheme which "they had preſented to us."

From the obvious conſtruction of theſe words I ſhould conclude that the alliance with Moodajee Booſla was the firſt object of this Government, contrary to every thing that has been profeſſed of our original motives for undertaking the expedition; but be this as it may, it does not appear that we ever abandoned our project to aſſiſt in the proſecution of their's. The fact, as I underſtand it, is totally new to me.

6th. I do not entirely agree with the Governor General in thinking that their conduct has expoſed us to the ſuſpicion of duplicity; perhaps they may think themſelves entitled to reverſe the charge, and to retort it on this Government. Neither do I admit that, in fact, it has defeated our meaſures. Moodajee Booſla, in his letter to Colonel Goddard of the 23d November, expreſſes the ſame determination not to join the detachment, or to co-operate in our views againſt the Peiſhwa, which he has done invariably ſince that time in all his letters to the Governor General; but on the 23d November he knew nothing of the proceedings at Bombay, nor for ſeveral weeks after; nor does he any where allude to their engagement with Ragonaut Row, or allege that as a reaſon for not taking part with us.

7th. Though clearly exempt from any degree of reſponſibility on account of the expence which this Government has voluntarily incurred by ſending the detachment, I am nevertheleſs as deſirous as the Governor General can be of ſeeing the Company reimburſed, though not by all or any means whatſoever: three material objections occur to me againſt the demand which is propoſed propoſed to be made on Ragonaut Row; two of theſe relate to the demand itſelf; the third to the quantum. I deem it unjuſt, for the following reaſons:

It is ſaid, "that the Bombay treaty has been made "under the declaration of our ſanction, and proclaimed "as poſſeſſing it; that the conditions have received the "firmeſt and fulleſt ratification that could be given to "them by the contracting parties, and cannot therefore "admit either of amendment or addition." Acquieſcing in this opinion, I can never admit that we have any right to make ſo material an addition to the treaty, as we ſhould do by inſiſting on a ſpecific ſum for the reimburſement of the paſt expences incurred by the expedition, and of a monthly ſubſidy during its continuance, conſidering that the treaty itſelf has fixed a ſpecific ſum, which the Preſidency of Bombay agree to accept without further account, in full of every expence attending the army. Neither do I think that we have an equitable any more than a conventional right, to make any ſuch demands on Ragoba. If he be reinſtated, it is done without the aſſiſtance of the detachment. Colonel Goddard was not to move from Huſſeingabad before the 15th of January: fifty days at leaſt muſt be allowed for his march to Poonah, which, ſuppoſing nothing to retard him but the length of the journey, fixes his arrival at Poonah to the 6th March. But the Bombay expedition moved from thence on the 22d November; and if it did not effect its object by the 15th January, I can only ſay from myſelf that I have very little idea or expectation of its ſucceſs. Colonel Keating, with a much greater force, was beaten in the field, and compelled to retire.

Suppoſing, on the other hand, the expedition to have ſucceeded, and Ragoba to be reinſtated; I wiſh to know on what pretence the charge of our detachment, which in the caſe ſuppoſed will have been of no ſervice to him, can be exacted of him.

My ſecond objection to the demand is, that I am convinced it never can ſucceed. Ragoba has no reſources equal to ſuch accumulated demands; nor if he had, is it likely, that any thing but force ſhould compel him to yield to them. To inſiſt on the demand, or to abandon him in the manner propoſed, I look upon to be as clear and direct a violation of the treaty with him, as if we ſhould determine to renounce it in terms.

My third objection to the demand is, that were it granted it would not reimburſe us the expence of the detachment. A conſiderable part of this charge muſt have commenced in march 1778; the whole of it I believe in April; but the demand is only to be made from the 1ſt June. Again, the expence is eſtimated at two lacks of rupees per month, whereas the Preſidency of Bombay have obtained a ſubſidy of two lacks and a half per month, though their force amounts to little more than half ours. The annexed abſtract ſhews that the actual expence of our army amounts to very near two lacks ſixty thouſand rupees a month, excluſive of the pay of the Nabob of Oude's cavalry, and excluſive of the expence of Major Camac's detachment, which is eſtimated at 64,600 rupees a month. I conceive we have as much right to exact the whole as any part of the expence of the armament from Ragonaut Row.

8th. I ſhall now give my opinion on the ſeveral propoſitions in the order in which they ſtand; premiſing only, that the ſituation we are in compels me to accommodate myſelf to events for which I am not anſwerable, and to ſubmit to facts which I cannot alter.

Suppoſing the meaſure paſt, and that it cannot be recalled, I acquieſce in the firſt propoſition; underſtanding, that by the word co-operate it is meant that Colonel Goddard ſhall follow the inſtructions of the Select Committee of Bombay, as he was originally directed to do.

I am againſt the ſecond as incompatible with the purpoſes expreſſed in the firſt, and becauſe I deem it in the higheſt degree unſafe to employ two armies on the ſame ground and in the ſame ſervice; and to place each of them under a ſeparate, an independent authority. In military operations, more indiſpenſably than in any other, the power that directs them ought to be united in one hand. Independent powers can produce nothing but claſhing councils, or ſeparate purſuits. The meaſure I believe is wholly unprecedented, and cannot be received but with the higheſt diſguſt by the Governor and Council of Bombay. Whether Colonel Goddard, under any inſtructions whatſoever from this Board, can refuſe to obey the orders of General Egerton, when once he ſhall be within the reach of ſuch orders, is a queſtion of the moſt ſerious and extenſive conſequence. I am of opinion that his refuſal could not be maintained without a direct violation of the articles of war, diſobedience of the injunction contained in the body of his commiſſion, and a ſubverſion of the fundamental principles of military diſcipline and ſubordination. I therefore diſſent from the propoſition, and moſt ſolemnly proteſt againſt it. If the Board ſhould now be of opinion that it is not ſafe to truſt the Preſidency of Bombay with the conduct of our negociations at Poonah, or with any authority over the troops which we ſend to their aſſiſtance, ſuch a reaſon may be valid againſt permitting them to embark in enterprizes to which we deem their councils unequal, but it will not juſtify us in purſuing a ſyſtem which naturally tends to divide and weaken our common ſtrength, and of courſe to defeat our meaſures as well as theirs.

On the ſame principles I object to the third; and hope it will be ſeriouſly conſidered, that a caſe may poſſibly happen in which a junction of the two armies may be indiſpenſably neceſſary for the preſervation of both; many probable caſes may be imagined, in which without ſuch a junction, it might be impoſſible for their operations to ſucceed.

I agree to the fourth.

I object to the fifth, not knowing what ſort of buſineſs Colonel Goddard can have to tranſact with the Court of Poonah, independent of the Council of Bombay; and foreſeeing, that we ſhall weaken their credit and influence with the Court of Poonah for no adequate purpoſe. This article conſtitutes an ambaſſador, with letters of credence and full powers—to do nothing. The propoſition is open to many other objections; but the Company's orders in the 21ſt and three following paragraphs of their letter of the 5th February 1777, are poſitive and explicit on this ſubject, and leave no room for argument.

I have already given my opinion fully on the ſubſtance of the 6th article.

Seventh. I agree to the return of the detachment to the frontiers of Berar, ſuppoſing that route to be the ſhorteſt that leads to the Jumna. But I object to our requiring the Council of Bombay to break their treaty with Ragoba, eſpecially on ſuch unwarrantable ground, as that propoſed for doing it. I mean his refuſal to comply with a new condition, not only not ſtipulated in the treaty, but expreſsly excluded by it.

I object to and proteſt againſt the eighth. In another place, the Governor General ſpeaks of the uſes to be derived from dearly-bought experience. We are by this time ſufficiently acquainted with the light and unſteady character, not to ſay duplicity of Moodajee Booſla; and as to the general queſtion no words can be ſtronger than thoſe in which Mr. Haſtings has heretofore expreſſed his opinion againſt an offenſive alliance with the Marattas. But waving this and all former objections to the propoſed alliance with Berar, the Governor General himſelf ſays, that "the Bombay meaſure is paſt, and cannot be re-"called, and that our own plan has been rendered im-"practicable by it."—Will our breaking a third treaty with the Marattas, facilitate the concluſion of a fourth? Let us conſider at leaſt what character theſe tranſactions are likely to fix upon the Britiſh name in India.

I acquieſce in the ninth propoſition.

My opinion of the propoſed letter to Colonel Goddard

is

is virtually included in the preceding obſervations. I think it neceſſary however to obſerve, that although I do not condemn Colonel Goddard for reſolving to march to Poonah, believing him to conſider it as an act of neceſſity, forced upon him by Moodajee Booſla's conduct, and by the circumſtances he was reduced to; ſtill I do not think that it calls for any particular approbation and applauſe. The applauſe of Government ſhould never be beſtowed but upon clear and unqueſtionable ground, and alwavs with dignity and moderation. I think it will appear that Colonel Goddard has acted without orders: by our reſolution of the 23d November, the powers delegated to the Preſident and Select Committee at Bombay were revoked. He was then directed henceforth to obey all ſuch orders as he might receive from us. But he has never ſince received any orders from us, directly or indirectly authorizing him to march to Poonah; or to co-operate with the Preſidency of Bombay in the reſtoration of Ragoba: the Board, I am perſuaded, will conſider the conſequences of giving their applauſe without reſerve to any reſolution, however prudent or neceſſary, which a commanding officer may take without their authority. In the preamble to the propoſed letter to Bombay, I object to our ſaying that, in conſequence of their operations, our meaſures have been abruptly broke off; becauſe I am convinced, for reaſons already aſſigned, that their proceedings have really had no influence whatever on the councils of Moodajee Booſla.

Eleventh. It only remains for me to ſay, that I think Major Camac's detachment ſhould be immediately recalled.

(Signed) P. Francis.

Extract of the Obſervations on Sir John Lindſay's Letter to the Preſident and Council of Fort St. George, dated 18th April 1771.

We have frequently in our deliberations on this ſubject expreſſed our opinion very clearly and fully againſt an offenſive alliance with the Marattas. In this we are juſtified by the repeated ſentiments of the Court of Directors, expreſſed in their commands for ſeveral years paſt, againſt diſtant operations, and engaging in alliances with the country Powers. Theſe ſentiments of the Court of Directors, it is true, are not expreſſed in ſuch terms as naturally convey the idea of abſolute and determinate orders; nevertheleſs we ſtand in ſo unhappy a predicament that we have no ſafety but in conſidering them as ſuch: for the whole tenor and ſpirit of the diſpatches of laſt ſeaſon (as we have noticed in other inſtances) are proofs that ſentiments ſo expreſſed are quoted as abſolute orders; at the ſame time candour obliges us to acknowledge that the ſentiments of the Court of Directors on this ſubject are perfectly conformable to our own. Their orders of the 27th June laſt, received per Dolphin, are very poſitive and expreſs; they are as follow:

"We have only here to enjoin you to avoid, as much "as in you lies, becoming parties in any diſputes be- "tween the Powers of India, and to pay the moſt ſtrict "obedience to our orders for confining our views to "our preſent poſſeſſions, the peace and ſecurity of "which are the utmoſt ſcope of our wiſhes, as they "will neceſſarily tend to advance the commercial and "vital intereſts of the Company."

Theſe, if there were no other, would be very ſufficient motives to induce us to be very cautious of entering into alliances or engagements with the country Powers in general; but with regard to the Marattas, the honourable Court have very clearly in many parts of their commands expreſſed their apprehenſions of the dangers of an alliance with them, or of adopting any meaſures which may tend to increaſe their power.

Ordered, that the account referred to by Mr. Francis be entered after the conſultation.

Mr. Barwell—It is not neceſſary for me to enter into a diſcuſſion of the objections that have been urged againſt the Governor General's propoſitions; whoever will take the trouble to examine the real exiſting facts, and the reaſonings upon them, to controul the meaſures that are now propoſed to be purſued, will be impreſſed with a conviction that they are urged more upon ſyſtem than policy of State. The argument is not ſupported by the facts, theſe I have carefully weighed, and upon theſe, after the matureſt deliberation, I concurred with the Governor General in ſentiment, and with him formed and approved the propoſitions on which the ſentiments of the Board are now to be delivered; my opinion ſtill continues the ſame of the meaſures that ſhould be purſued; I in conſequence give my voice in the affirmative to the ſeveral propoſitions. Appendix. No. 171.

Governor General—I believe I ſhall make no reply, I think it unneceſſary, and I have no time. If on reading the paſt minute, I ſhould think it neceſſary to add to the debate, I ſhall take another occaſion for it.

Reſolved, that the following letter be written to Bombay:

Gentlemen,

We have received your letter of the 12th December, with its ſeveral encloſures.

It was formerly a matter of great concern to us that you had ſuffered ſo many opportunities to eſcape after the concluſion of the plan which you had formed in December 1777, for reſtoring the power of Ragoba, without taking any effective means to carry it into execution. It now affords us equal concern and mortification that you have precipitately undertaken it, after having given us every reaſon to conclude that you had abandoned it altogether, and compelled us therefore to adopt other meaſures, which in conſequence of your preſent operations have been abruptly broken off, without intimating your deſigns to us, and affording us time to ſuſpend the courſe of our own tranſactions, or to accommodate them to yours.

You appeal to the authority contained in our letter of the 17th Auguſt, as a ſanction for concluding the late treaty with Ragonaut Row, and for proceeding immediately to carry it into execution. It is true that you were warranted by that letter to form ſuch engagements, and that you have literally complied with our inſtructions; but no attention appears to have been had either to the circumſtances under which they were dictated; to the length of time ſince elapſed; or to the very eſſential change which has taken place in the ſituation of affairs: we ſhall leave it to our ſuperiors to determine whether you were juſtified under every other conſideration that occurred.

On the 11th September, about the time fixed for the commencement of your operations, you informed us, "that you had not yet taken any meaſures in proſecu- "tion of the plan, but would ſpeedily come to ſome "deciſive reſolutions, and adviſe us immediately of "the reſult;" you alſo referred us to Mr. Lewis for full "information of the ſituation of affairs at Poonah." Words ſo emphatically expreſſed as thoſe contained in the above paſſage of your letter, could not fail to raiſe our expectation; and when a long period had elapſed without further advices from you, though we had received intelligence from Mr. Lewis of the ſeizure and confinement of Moraba Furneſe, and, Buſhaba Poonder, and of the entire depreſſion of Ragoba's party, theſe cauſes ſerved to confirm us in the perſuaſion that nothing had been determined, but that your plan had proved abortive. Our army at this time was far advanced towards the Maratta country; the object preſented to it ſeemed to have vaniſhed, and none remained to eſtabliſh an influence in thoſe parts, but to effect the propoſed alliance with Moodajee Booſla: though till then it had been treated as little more than a reſource in the event of a failure of your deſign, we now reſolved to adopt it wholly; and to prevent our being embarraſſed by a contrariety trariety of orders, we thought it proper to releaſe Colonel Goddard, whom we had previouſly empowered to proſecute Mr. Elliott's commiſſion from your entire authority, except in caſes where your requiſitions might not be incompatible with the ſpecial and ſingle truſt thus committed to him.

Theſe are conſequences which we think you ought to have foreſeen, and to have provided for them, ſince it appears that you actually did know of the quick advances made by our detachment after the death of Colonel Leſlie, and of the negociations commenced with Moodajee Booſla. We alſo conceive that you were acquainted with the effects of the alliance held out to that Chief, which had brought upon him the reſentment of Nizam Ally and the Marattas, and in a manner drawn him into a declared party with our Government. Under theſe circumſtances we think you might have waited the reſult of our depending meaſures, or at leaſt have paid ſo much regard to the ſtate of our probable connections with the Government of Berar, as to have left an opening for its admiſſion into your engagements with Ragoba, after the example we had ſet when we preſcribed the junction of Ragonaut Row to Mr. Elliott in his negociations with Moodajee Booſla, and requeſted you to inſtruct him on any points which your own ſituation might ſuggeſt. That precaution however you neglected, and confined yourſelf to a bare acknowledgment of ſuch conditions as might have been concluded at the preciſe date of your treaty, without which the treaty itſelf would have been invalid.

We ſhall here cloſe our remarks upon this ſubject; adding only, that as no conditions were finally agreed upon with Moodajee Booſla, and the treaty with Ragonaut Row has been concluded and proclaimed under the declaration of our ſanction, it remains only for us to ſupport it in the moſt effectual manner we can; we therefore approve the active and zealous conduct of Colonel Goddard in marching immediately towards Poonah, on your requiſition; and we hope that the cauſe has received timely ſuccour from the junction of this force, and credit from its approach.

It cannot however but appear extraordinary to us, that although you foreſaw the neceſſity of Colonel Goddard's force to ſupport your operations, and wrote to him in the moſt preſſing manner to march to your aſſiſtance; and although his detachment was originally formed for the ſervice of Ragonaut Row, and our firſt inſtructions to you, dated the 2d February 1778, expreſsly enjoined, "that a ſpecific ſum ſhould be required to reimburſe "the Company for the military charges that might be "incurred by their interpoſition;" yet you omitted to make any proviſions for the expences of the detachment in your engagements with that Chief. In the preſent ſituation of things we ſhall endeavour to correct this overſight by the beſt means that occur to us; we have therefore inveſted Colonel Goddard with full powers to act as the Miniſter of this Government at Poonah, and he is furniſhed with inſtructions to the following effect:

1ſt. He is ordered to co-operate with you, and the committee appointed by you, for conducting the political and military affairs at Poonah, in the ſupport of the treaty concluded with Ragonaut Row, and of the operations dependant upon it.

2d. We have confirmed him in the poſſeſſion of the powers conveyed to him by our letter of the 23d November, and which he at preſents holds dependant immediately on us, and independent of your Preſidency.

3d. We have authorized him to apply to you for ſuch reinforcements of troops as he ſhall judge neceſſary for completing the ſtrength of his detachment; and we requeſt that you will grant him the ſame, with this expreſs condition, without which he is not authorized to receive them, that the officers whom you ſhall appoint to the command of them, may be of a junior rank to that of Colonel Goddard.

4th. We have forbid him to interfere in any of the negociations or other tranſactions of the committee appointed by you, or in any points which reſpect the late treaty with Ragoba, or the ſeparate and immediate intereſts of your Preſidency, except only in thoſe points in which you or the committee ſhall call upon him for his advice and aſſiſtance.

5th. He is appointed, as we have already obſerved, the Miniſter of this Government at the Court of Poonah, with full powers to treat with Ragonaut Row, or ſuch other perſon or perſons as ſhall be at the head of the Maratta State, upon all matters which we ſhall expreſsly give to him in charge, and to accept or conclude any engagements for the ſame on our part: he is furniſhed with a letter of credence for this purpoſe.

6th. He is inſtructed to demand from Ragonaut Row, or the Government for the time being, payment of the expences already incurred in the expedition undertaken by the detachment under his command, eſtimated at two lacks of rupees per month, from the firſt June 1778, to the day of his arrival at or near Poonah, and a monthly ſubſidy at the ſame rate for the time in which he ſhall remain at Poonah, with the allowance of ſix months for the return of the detachment to Bengal from the day of its diſmiſſion: we have left it to his diſcretion to obtain the moſt complete ſecurity for theſe payments, either by aſſignments on the public treaſury, or on reputable Shroffs; or in the laſt reſort, on any of the Aumils or collectors of the revenue, who ſhall engage to him for the ſame, but not on the collections themſelves, in which we have peremptorily forbid him or any one under him to have any concern or interference.

7th. In caſe of the refuſal of the Maratta Government to comply with theſe demands, or of ſuch an evaſion as ſhall be equivalent to a refuſal, we have directed him to notify the ſame to you and to the committee: and either to return with the detachment under his command to the province of Berar, or retire to the lands ceded to the Company, and in your poſſeſſion, at his diſcretion. We alſo hereby peremptorily require and command you in ſuch caſe to recall your troops immediately from Poonah and from the Maratta dominions.

8th. We have confirmed the inſtructions which we had originally given to Mr. Elliott, and on his death tranſferred to Colonel Goddard; they will therefore remain in full force, and he is directed to reſume the negociations with the Government of Berar, and to treat with it upon the grounds of thoſe inſtructions whenever an occaſion ſhall offer to proſecute them conſiſtently with the plan laid down in this letter.

We recommend that on the return of your committee you appoint an agent or miniſter on the part of your Government, for the management of its ſeparate concerns with the Adminiſtration at Poonah, and for the accompliſhment of the different articles of the treaty which you have concluded with Ragonaut Row, with inſtructions expreſsly limited to theſe objects; and we think it proper to inſiſt and command, that you do not enter into any new engagements without previous application to us for our approbation, and that ſanction obtained.

We are, &c.

The following Letter to Colonel Goddard, containing Inſtructions for his Conduct, was prepared by Order of the Governor General, and ſent round to the other Members on Friday and Saturday.

Sir, To Colonel Thomas Goddard.

We have received your letters of the 4th and 6th January.

We are very much concerned that Moodajee Booſla ſhould have ſo far diſtruſted the powers with which you were were inveſted, as to ſuppoſe that any engagements formed by the Preſident and Council of Bombay could preclude the accompliſhment of a treaty with him, if ſuch had been concluded; and therefore that he declined to enter into the propoſed negociation. If a treaty had been executed by you on the preſcribed terms, it would have been our duty to enforce it in preference to any made at Bombay; and to have taken care that no conditions in which that Preſidency might have bound itſelf, ſhould have operated to the prejudice of our engagements; but in the preſent ſituation of things we approve and applaud the prudence and active zeal for the intereſts of the Company, which you have ſhewn in the reſolution ſo immediately taken on receipt of the requiſition from the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, to relinquiſh the proſecution of the commiſſion which had been ſpecially entruſted to you, and to proceed with the detachment under your command to ſupport the meaſures in which the Preſidency of Bombay was actually engaged, and in which they had ſo far committed the ſafety and proſperity of their own Government, and perhaps the general welfare of the Company, as to require every aid that could be poſſibly given to them.

As the treaty concluded by the Preſident and Select Committee at Bombay with Ragonaut Row was declared to be made under our ſanction and authority, and as we actually did grant our conſent to ſuch a treaty on the 17th Auguſt 1778, we are determined to abide by and ſupport it, notwithſtanding the total change which has ſince taken place in the circumſtances under which it was propoſed to us, and the new meaſures which we have ourſelves adopted, on the ſuppoſed failure of thoſe planned by the Preſidency of Bombay: but as the treaty does not provide for the expence of your detachment, although it was expreſsly deſigned for the ſupport of the plan on which the treaty was founded: and although our inſtructions to the Preſident and Council of Bombay, dated the 2d February 1778, expreſsly direct, that a "ſpecific "ſum ſhould be required to reimburſe the Company for "the military charges which might be incurred by their "interpoſition;" we think it neceſſary to rectify this omiſſion, and to inveſt you with full powers for that purpoſe, alſo to furniſh you with the following orders, to which we require your ſtricteſt obedience.

1ſt. We direct that you co-operate with the Preſident and Council or Select Committee at Bombay, and with the committee appointed by them for conducting the political and military affairs at Poonah, in the ſupport of the treaty concluded by that Preſidency with Ragonaut Row, and of the operations dependant on it.

2d. We do hereby confirm you in the poſſeſſion of the powers which you at preſent hold, dependant on this Government, and independent of the Government of Bombay.

3d. We authorize you to apply for ſuch reinforcements of troops from the Preſidency of Bombay as you ſhall judge neceſſary for completing the ſtrength of your detachment, and to receive the ſame; with the condition that they be not commanded by any officer of a ſuperior or ſenior rank to yours: and we have deſired the Preſidency of Bombay to furniſh you with ſuch reinforcements on the condition thus preſcribed.

4th. We forbid you to interfere in any negociations or tranſactions of the committee appointed by the Select Committee of Bombay, or in any points which reſpect the preſent treaty with Ragonaut Row, or the ſeparate and immediate intereſts of the Preſidency of Bombay; except only in ſuch points in which you ſhall be called upon for your advice or aſſiſtance by the Preſident and Council or Select Committee appointed to conduct the military and political affairs at Poonah.

5th. We do hereby appoint you the Miniſter of this Government at the Court of Poonah, with full powers to treat with Ragonaut Row, or ſuch other perſon or perſons as ſhall be at the head of the Maratta State, upon all matters which ſhall be expreſsly given in charge to you by this Government for that purpoſe, and to accept or conclude any engagements for the ſame on our part: a letter of credence to this effect is enclоſed. Appendix, No. 171.

We hereby enjoin you to demand from Ragonaut Row, or the Maratta Government for the time being, payment of the expences already incurred in the expedition of the detachment under your command, eſtimated at the rate of two lacks of rupees per month, from the 1ſt June 1778, to the day of your arrival at or near Poonah; and a monthly ſubſidy at the ſame rate for the time in which it ſhall remain at Poonah, with the allowance of ſix months for its return to Bombay, from the day of your diſmiſſion.

We leave it to your diſcretion to obtain the moſt complete ſecurity for theſe payments either by aſſeſſments on the public treaſury, or on reſpectable Shroffs; or, in the laſt reſort, on any of the Aumils or collectors of the revenue, who ſhall engage to you for the ſame, but not on the collections themſelves. And we expreſsly forbid you to interfere, or to have any concern in the collections yourſelf, or to ſuffer any perſon under your authority to interfere or have any concern therein.

7th. In caſe of the refuſal of the Maratta Government to comply with your demand, or of ſuch an evaſion on their part as ſhall be equivalent to a refuſal, you are to notify the ſame to the committee at Poonah, and to the Preſident and Select Committee at Bombay; and either return with the detachment under your command to the province of Berar, or retire to the lands ceded to the Company, and in poſſeſſion of the Government of Bombay, at your diſcretion. And in ſuch caſe we have peremptorily required the Preſident and Select Committee at Bombay to recall their troops from Poonah, and from the Maratta dominions.

8th. We think it proper to declare, that the inſtructions originally given to Mr. Elliott, and transferred to you, do remain in full force; and we direct that you reſume the negociations with the Government of Berar, and treat with it on the grounds of thoſe inſtructions whenever an occaſion ſhall offer to proſecute them, conſiſtently with the following proviſions:

If Ragonaut Row ſhall conform to the terms of his engagements with the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, and ſhall yield to the juſt and equitable demands of this Government, you muſt give, and continue to give, all the ſupport which ſhall be requiſite for the confirmation of his authority: but if he ſhall depart from the terms of thoſe engagements, and the Preſident and Council, the Select Committeee, or the committee appointed by them, ſhall declare to you that he has ſo departed from them; or if he ſhall refuſe to comply with the demands which you are inſtructed to make; or if he ſhall himſelf deſire to include the Government of Berar in his alliance with the Company, on the footing preſcribed by your original inſtructions; or in the event of his death, or of the failure of the plan laid for reſtoring him to the adminiſtration of the Government at Poonah; we ſay, in either of the caſes here premiſed we authorize you to recur to the negociations which have been ſuſpended with the Court of Berar, and to conclude a treaty with that Government in the manner, and on the terms already preſcribed by your former inſtructions.

However we may be reſtrained by motives of policy from proſecuting this meaſure under the circumſtances which have cauſed the preſent ſuſpenſion of it, we are by no means precluded by the terms of the treaty with Ragonaut Row; the pretenſions of Moodajee Booſla to the Rauze, or ſovereign authority of the Maratta State, exiſting independently of any connections between the Company and Ragonaut Row, and being alſo perfectly reconcileable with them.

Although the orders which are numbered, taken collectively as they ſtand, are of themſelves very expreſſive and clear, we have thought it neceſſary to add this explanation of the laſt, with a view to obviate any poſſible miſapprehenſion

Appendix. No 171.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 15th February 1779;—Preſent, the Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident; Richard Barwell, Philip Francis, Edward Wheler, Eſquires.

The Governor General having delivered in the following minute in reply to Mr. Francis's, which is entered in the laſt conſultation, a copy of it was ſen ſome a number in the Shrewſbury's packet.

Mr. Francis.

I conſider our plan as wholly adopted the moment Mr. Elliott's inſtructions were reſolved on. From that time forwrad it never was conſidered as little more than a reſource to Governor General—I think it proper to make the following detached obſervations in reply to ſuch parts of Mr. Francis's minute of the 8th inſtant, as appear to me to require it, for the purpoſe of correcting the fact miſ-ſtated, of completing the ſenſe of partial quotations, or of removing objections ariſing from principles to which I cannot ſubſcribe.

Reply.

1. To ſo pointed a denial of my aſſertions the beſt argument which can be oppoſed will be a reference to Mr. Elliott's inſtructions, and particularly the following clauſe:

" But if you ſhall have reaſon to believe that the Preſidency of

" Bombay

(Mr. Francis.)

to which we looked; in the event of a failure in the other deſign, it then became our main and ſole object.

But I never can allow that the two meaſures can be reconciled, when their manifeſt inconſiſtency was objected to. The anſwer to that objection was, "that the reſolution of the Pre-"ſidency of Bombay to defer the execution of "a deſign, the ſucceſs of which could only be "inſured by immediate action, was equiva-"lent to a reſolution to do nothing."

The Governor General then regarded their deſign in favour of Ragoba as impoſſible, yet thought it incumbent on him to ſupport their meaſures, though againſt his belief of their taking effect. In the event it appears, that they have adhered to their plan, and have carried it into execution.

I know not how the example of this Government and the inſtructions ſaid to have been given to Mr. Elliott, to provide for a junction of Ragonaut Row, in his negociation with Moodajee, can be urged againſt the Preſidency of Bombay, who knew nothing of the matter to this hour; we do not know that they have ever ſeen Mr. Elliott's inſtructions.

By their letter before us, they do not appear to have known that our army was making quick advances; on the contrary, they expreſs an uneaſineſs at the ſlow advances of the Bengal detachment.

In ſpeaking of our intended engagement with Moodajee, it is ſaid, "that in effect, we "had not firſt abandoned it to aſſiſt in the "proſecution of the ſcheme which they had "preſented to us." From the obvious conſtruction of theſe words, I ſhould conclude, that the alliance with Moodajee Booſla was the firſt object of this Government, contrary to every thing that has been profeſſed of our original motives for undertaking the expedition.

(Reply.)

"Bombay have commenced any negociation, or entered into any "engagement, either for the firm eſtabliſhment of peace with the "Poonah Miniſtry, or for the reſtoration of Ragonaut Row, or for "any other purpoſe, which may prove incompatible with the ope-"rations which we have authorized, you will in ſuch caſe ſuſpend "your negociations until you ſhall have received authentic infor-"mation, either from Mr. Moſtyn or the Preſidency of Bombay, of the nature of the engagements either "projected or executed by them; and you will ſo conduct yourſelf as to conform to their meaſures, if "you can conſiſtently with the prior attention which you will give to our views; or at leaſt not to engage "in any offenſive plan which ſhall be contrary to that of the Preſidency of Bombay." In this caſe Mr. Elliott is not only directed to ſuſpend his own negociations on the information of any engagement actually concluded by the Preſidency of Bombay, and to conform to it; but he is reſtricted from the proſecution of his own, on the information, and even on the belief of any negociation having been only commenced, and from engaging in any offenſive plan which ſhould be contrary to the plan of the Preſidency of Bombay.

How then can Mr. Francis ſo peremptorily affirm, that the negociation with Moodajee Booſla was never conſidered as little more than a reſource to which we looked in the event of a failure in the other deſign, and that it then became our main and ſole object.

2. I muſt here repeat the obſervation which I have had too frequent occaſion to make, of Mr. Francis's mode of extracting, that by the ſelection of disjointed ſentences, any given ſenſe may be affixed to any words, even in the literal queſtion of them. To the firſt of theſe quotations I have no objection, but do not ſee how it applies to Mr. Francis's argument.

The ſecond is highly exceptionable, as it implies and involves in it, for want of its context, a complication of the groſſeſt abſurdities, for what purpoſe I know not; for even theſe do not aſſiſt the propoſition which it appears to have been introduced to prove, namely, that the meaſures of the two Preſidencies could not be reconciled.

I ſhall beg leave to inſert my words at full length, and leave it to thoſe who may be the judges of our conteſts, to compare the ſenſe of his quotation with the genuine extract: "But though I regard "the projected deſign in favour of Ragoba as improbable, I ſtill "conſider it as poſſible, and in that view only propoſed the anſwer "expreſſed in the queſtion; and I have thought it incumbent "upon me to ſupport the meaſures of that Preſidency in this in-"ſtance, though againſt my own belief of their taking effect, becauſe the Court of Directors have ex-"preſsly enjoined the renewal of the engagements with Ragoba in the caſe of a rupture with the preſent "Government of Poonah."

Although Mr. Francis has not aſſigned any reaſon for his aſſertion, that the two meaſures cannot be reconciled, yet as it is poſſible that others may adopt the ſame concluſion, I ſhall briefly ſtate the two meaſures as they were propoſed, without any comment upon them.

That formed by the Preſidency of Bombay was to reſtore Ragonaut Row to the office of Peiſhwa or Chief Miniſter of the Maratta State; ours to ſupport Moodajee Booſla in his pretenſions to the Rauze or ſovereign authority of the Maratta State. Theſe offices are both univerſally acknowledged to be conſiſtent and exiſtent parts of the Maratta State; they were therefore, and ſtill continue, reconcileable to each other.

3. It is true they had not then ſeen Mr. Elliott's inſtructions, but they knew ſo much of their intended effects, as to juſtify the obſervation made in my minute that "they ought to have left an "opening for the admiſſion of Moodajee Booſla into their engage-"ments with Ragonaut Row, after our example, and in the ſame "manner as our inſtructions to Mr. Elliott had preſcribed the in-"ſtructions of Ragonaut Row, in his negociation with Moodajee "Booſla."

Our letter to them dated the 17th Auguſt, clearly implied, that we had left ſuch an opening in our inſtructions to Mr. Elliott, becauſe it authorized them, under certain conditions, to aſſiſt Ragonaut Row with a military force, and conduct him to Poonah; and it was not poſſible for them to ſuppoſe, that at the time when we gave them ſuch an authority, we ſhould either give or leave to Mr. Elliott ſuch inſtructions as in their nature would tend to annul it.

4. By their letter before us, they acknowledge their having received intelligence of the arrival of the army at Kimbaſſy: it is to this knowledge I have alluded in the expreſſion to which Mr. Francis objects, and which I think is warranted by it.

5. An alliance between the Governments of Bengal and Berar, was firſt ſuggeſted by Shawbajee Booſla, the predeceſſor of Moodajee Booſla, in the year 1773, and has been the ſubject of a continued correſpondence between the two States to the preſent time: I believe, it was alſo intimated by me on the acceſſion of the new Government, in a minute which I wrote upon the political ſtate of their Preſidency: it has been frequently mentioned in the courſe of our debates on the preſent depending meaſure.

Appendix. No. 171.

(Mr. Francis.)

But be this as it may, it does not appear that we ever abandoned our project to aſſiſt in the proſecution of theirs: the fact, as I underſtand it, is totally new to me.

Moodajee Booſla in his letter to Colonel Goddard of the 23d November, expreſſes the ſame determination not to join the detachment or to co-operate in our views againſt the Peiſhwa, which he has done invariably ſince that time in all his letters to the Governor General; but on the 23d November, he knew nothing of the proceedings of Bombay, nor for ſeveral weeks after, nor does he any where allude to their engagement with Ragonaut Row, or allege that as a reaſon for not taking part with us.

I can never admit that we have any right to make ſo material an addition to the treaty as we ſhould do by inſiſting on a ſpecific ſum for the reimburſement of the paſt expences incurred by the expedition, and of a monthly ſubſidy during its continuance; conſidering that the treaty itſelf has fixed a ſpecific ſum, which the Preſidency of Bombay agreed to accept without further account, in full of every expence attending the army.

Neither do I think that we have an equitable any more than a conventional right to make any ſuch demand on Ragoba.

If he be reinſtated, it is done without the aſſiſtance of the detachment. Colonel Goddard was not to move from Huſſengabad before the 15th January; fifty days at leaſt muſt be allowed for his march to Poonah, which, ſuppoſing nothing to retard him but the length of the journey, fixes his arrival at Poonah to the 6th of March.

Ragoba has no reſources equal to ſuch accumulated demands.

My third objection to the demand is, that were it granted, it would not reimburſe us the expence of the detachment.

(Reply.)

6. I knew, which Mr. Francis indeed could not, that the firſt change of Moodajee Booſla's ſentiments aroſe from his knowledge of the deſigns which were then actually formed by the Preſidency of Bombay, to engage in ſome active enterprize with Ragonaut Row: this was mentioned by Beneram Pundit, the Maratta Vackeel, in a letter to his brother, and communicated to me. I own it made little impreſſion at that time upon me, becauſe I had no expectation of what has ſince paſſed at Poonah, and thought that Moodajee had a more obvious and ſubſtantial reaſon for his heſitation in the ſuppoſed indeciſion of this Government. All the letters written ſince that date by Moodajee Booſla, the conferences held by him and his Dewan with Mr. Watherſtone, the opinion of Mr. Watherſtone, and that of Colonel Goddard, all combine to prove, that this was the prime if not the ſole cauſe, and I think an allowable one, of his declining to accept of the proffered engagement with us.

7. By the treaty, the Preſidency of Bombay are only bound to conduct Ragonaut Row to Poonah, and to place him in the Government, with this expreſs ſtipulation, that this done they ſhall leave him there. We have therefore a clear right to withdraw our force when theſe points are accompliſhed; and the orders iſſued to this effect, in the event of the caſe ſuppoſed, can only operate after the reſtoration of Ragonaut Row to the poſſeſſion of Poonah, and of the Government of that capital. The treaty with the Preſidency of Bombay doth not preclude any demand which may be made by this Preſidency for the ſpecific aid afforded to Ragonaut Row; and every principle of juſtice, and the univerſal practice of all States in ſimilar caſes, authorizes us to demand an equivalent for the aid which we have furniſhed to Ragonaut Row at his requiſition, and applied directly to his ſupport; we have ordered the demand to be made, but no other means have been preſcribed to enforce it, except to avail ourſelves of the poſſible advantage which the treaty itſelf, both in the preciſe terms and evident intention of it, gives us.

If Mr. Francis had objected that the means propoſed might, under certain and poſſible caſes, prove inſufficient, I ſhould have acknowledged it; but pleaded that this was a caſe of neceſſity, impoſed upon us by the Preſidency of Bombay, and ſuſceptible only of the imperfect remedy which we have applied to it.

8. I impute the firſt revolution in the Maratta State to the influence of our detachment, although it was then ſcarcely formed.

I aſcribe the ſecond to the inaction of the Preſidency of Bombay, and to the ſlow progreſs of our detachment.

I ſhall aſcribe a ſhare at leaſt of the ſucceſs of the operations undertaken by the Preſidency of Bombay, if they ſhall prove ſucceſsful, to the advance of our army, and to the other correſponding meaſures which have been taken by this Government to defeat the deſigns of the Adminiſtration at Poonah.

I ſhall leave the juſtice of theſe concluſions to every man's own breaſt, who knows the force of opinion on all great political events; but without reſting the equity and reaſonableneſs of our demand on this ſingle ground, I ſhall add as incontrovertible proofs that this aid was originally projected at the requiſition of the Preſidency of Bombay, on the behalf of Ragoba; that repeated requiſitions have been made for it by both; that its deſtination has been lately called by the ſame party from the other objects in which it was then engaged; and laſtly, that the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, whom we muſt regard as empowered to tranſmit the ſentiments and wiſhes of Ragonaut Row, have expreſsly aſſigned as a reaſon for calling the detachment to their ſupport.

9. The reſources of the Maratta Government, if united through the means of our aſſiſtance, added to thoſe which Ragonaut Row inherently poſſeſſes, are equal to theſe and infinitely greater demands; and ſurely we have a right to claim the firſt application of his treaſures to the diſcharge of the expence incurred on his account, if he derives the poſſeſſion of them immediately from us.

10. After having read it objected to the demand, that it was too much, I did not expect an objection immediately to follow it, that it was too little; it was not my deſign to obſerve the preciſion of an account current in the groſs ſum to be demanded as the reimburſement of a general expence: the ſum propoſed for the ſubſidy is certainly moderate, but I believe upon the whole it will prove adequate to its profeſſed object; the charge of the detachment did not properly commence until we had carried into execution the expedient adopted in July laſt, for replacing the number of effective men which had been drawn from our eſtabliſhment by this detachment, and the expence of their being confined to effectives only, bears but a ſmall proportion to the battalions which have been ſpared for this ſervice; I do not include Major Camac's detachment in the expence of Colonel Goddard's, nor ſuppoſed it to make a part of the preſent demand.

(Mr. Francis.)

Whether Colonel Goddard, under any inſtructions whatſoever from this Board, can refuſe to obey the orders of General Egerton when once he ſhall be within the reach of ſuch orders, is a queſtion of the moſt ſerious and extenſive conſequence.

(Reply.)

11. This is a very alarming declaration, and may be attended with ſerious conſequences if it ſhould reach the Preſidency of Bombay, which is not improbable from the facility with which the moſt important, and what from their nature ought to be the moſt ſecret tranſactions of this Government, make their way to the public notice. I know no powers which Colonel, not General, Egerton poſſeſſes over the officers and ſoldiers of this eſtabliſhment.

It has been uſual in all inſtances in which detachments have been ſent from one Preſidency to another to particularize in the inſtructions and orders given to the officer commanding each detachment, how far he was to obey the orders of the Preſidency under which he was to ſerve.

From the many inſtances which may be brought to prove this, I ſhall juſt mention ſuch as at preſent occur to me.

When Colonel Clive was ſent from Madras in 1757 to retake Calcutta, he was empowered and directed by the Preſidency of Fort St. George to return with his troops, or any part of them which he thought proper, when he ſhould judge it neceſſary.

When Colonel Peach was ſent from Bengal to the Decan in 1767, with a diviſion of the 1ſt brigade, this Preſidency not only reſerved to itſelf the power of recalling the detachment whenever they pleaſed, but ſtipulated alſo that Colonel Peach ſhould command this force, and any other that the Preſidency of Madras ſhould judge neceſſary to add to it.

Mr. Francis may not now perhaps recollect, that when ſo ſmall a detachment as a Lieutenant, an Enſign, and 50 men from the 1ſt regiment, were ordered to Bombay in 1776, under the command of Lieutenant Taylor; it was expreſſed, that in the event of a campaign that party was to be put under the command of a Bengal officer, Captain Allan M'Pherſon.

It was further agreed, that on the arrival of this party at Bombay they were to be put under the orders of the Governor and Council there.—This ſurely implies that it was neceſſary for us to grant an authority to the officers under this Government to obey the orders of the Government of Bombay before they could obey them, we might of courſe have reſerved to ourſelves the power of recalling the detachment when we thought proper.

If after this explanation any doubts ſhould remain as to our power of ſending diſcretional orders to General Goddard, or inveſting him with an authority over the troops of this Preſidency, ſubject only to our future inſtructions, although I am ſorry to take up the time and attention of the Board on a point ſo extremely clear, let Mr. Francis read over the commiſſion of an officer in this ſervice; he will there ſee that every officer on the Bengal eſtabliſhment is directed and bound to obey our orders, and the orders of his ſuperior officers, which inevitably implies officers commiſſioned by or acting under our authority only.

9th March. While the treaty of Poonah was depending in 1776, and there was a proſpect of our commencing hoſtilities againſt the Maratta Government, we took upon ourſelves to appoint the late General Gordon to command the army that ſhould be ordered to act upon the Malabar coaſt, and to appoint Lieutenant Colonel Upton commander of the troops that ſhould be ſent from Bengal, and ſecond in command of the forces that might be ordered to act againſt the Marattas.

In the firſt inſtance our orders were thus expreſſed:

"We think it incumbent upon us to require and inſiſt that you aſſign the command of the army to "General Gordon, &c."

The ſecond inſtance was expreſſed, "We ſhall direct Lieutenant Colonel Upton to ſend the two "companies of Sepoys under the command of Captain Wroe, which he took with him as his eſcort to "ſtrengthen your army, and to command it to you that he may be appointed ſecond in command in "your army, &c."

The words uſed by Mr. Francis in a minute, delivered by him on this occaſion, are ſo oppoſite to the preſent debate, that I ſhall beg leave to extract them: "Neither is our recommendation of Colonel "Upton, in my opinion equivalent to an abſolute order; at the ſame time, I expect it will be complied "with; ſince, independent of the ſuperior authority veſted in this Council, it would be highly unreaſonable, that even on the footing of a combined army, the party from which the chief ſupport of the "common cauſe is expected, ſhould have an officer in that army on whom they can directly depend."

I object to the 5th, not knowing what ſort of buſineſs Colonel Goddard can have to tranſact with the Court of Poonah, and foreſeeing that we ſhall weaken their credit and influence with the Court of Poonah, for no adequate purpoſe. This article conſtitutes an ambaſſador with letters of credence and full powers—to do nothing.

12. The inſtructions expreſs in very plain terms, what ſort of buſineſs Colonel Goddard is to tranſact at the Court of Poonah, independant of the Preſidency of Bombay.

The 5th article empowers him to treat upon ſuch matters as ſhall be expreſsly given to him in charge; and the next expreſſes in terms the matter on which he is to treat, namely, to demand a ſpecific monthly ſum for the charge of the detachment.

I am at a loſs to conceive, on what grounds Mr. Francis has crowded together ſo many ſtrong and pointed terms, to expreſs his ſenſe of the futility of Colonel Goddard's powers.

But I object to our requiring the Council of Bombay to break the treaty with Ragoba, eſpecially on ſuch unwarrantable ground as that propoſed for doing it, I mean his refuſal to comply with a new condition, not only not ſtipulated by the treaty, but expreſsly excluded by it.

We are by this time ſufficiently acquainted with the light and unſteady character, not to ſay duplicity, of Moodajee Boonſla.

13. I have ſaid, that the Preſidency of Bombay "ſeemed to "have ſtudied to preclude it," but I do not agree with Mr. Francis "that they have expreſsly excluded it," for the truth of which, I refer to the article of the treaty itſelf.

14. I know no inſtances of Moodajee's conduct which can juſtify theſe charges: on the application to him, to permit the detachment to march through his dominions, and to ſupply it with proviſions, he complied inſtantly and liberally; wrote to the commanding manding officer to come with ſecurity; and ſent a man of truſt with a ſtore of proviſions to his own borders, when it lay waiting for the detachment five months: on the propoſal made to him of an alliance, he acquieſced without reſerve; and when that propoſal was in danger of failing by the death of Mr. Elliott, he ſtrongly recommended the immediate transfer of the commiſſion to another: before the commiſſion could take effect, he received intelligence of a deſign projected, and on the eve of being executed at Bombay, which he judged incompatible with the propoſed engagements, or with his views in it; he therefore declined to engage further in it, until that obſtacle was removed, or until it could be undertaken on more ſolid and ſatisfactory grounds, and for this purpoſe, he had deputed an expreſs agent to receive our ultimate determination, and to explain the conditions on which he will acquieſce in it: he may have carried the principle of caution, as I think he has, to a faulty exceſs; but of levity, of unſteadineſs, of duplicity, I wholly acquit him.

Appendix. No. 171.

(Mr. Francis.) (Reply.)

Mr. Francis has in another place, produced contraſted paſſages of Moodajee's letters, written under different ſituations, which I have explained; but he has not offered the evidence of a ſingle fact, nor I preſume can any be offered, in ſupport of the allegations which are thus harſhly pronounced againſt Moodajee Booſla, not by Mr. Francis in his own perſon only, but on the behalf of the whole Board as united in the ſame ſentiments with him.

And as to the general queſtion, no words can be ſtronger than thoſe in which Mr. Haſtings has expreſſed his opinions againſt an offenſive alliance with the Marattas.

15. With equal reaſon the garments which I now wear may be conſtrued to infer an inconſiſtency with declarations made by me with reſpect to the weather on the 1ſt of May laſt: different ſeaſons and circumſtances require different ſolutions of the ſame general queſtion. At the time from which Mr. Francis has borrowed his quotation, the Maratta empire was in its full vigour; its parts entire; its poſſeſſions extending from the banks of the Jumna to the walls of Seringapatam; and it was adminiſtered by a ſpirited and enterprizing Prince, who had demanded our aid, not as the gift of reciprocal policy, but as the right of aſcertained ſuperiority; and denounced war and ruin on the Carnatic if we refuſed: it was then argued, that it was impolitic to contribute to the aggrandizement of a Power already too great for our own ſafety. This was the language of the Court of Directors, and of the Preſidency of Fort Saint George, reiterated to each other: it is now propoſed to aſſume an aſcendant over this no longer dreaded State; ſuch is the ſpirit of the orders given by the Court of Directors for the reſtoration of Ragonaut Row; and ſuch is the ſpirit of the meaſures which we had projected for the elevation of Moodajee Booſla.

I think it will appear that Colonel Goddard has acted without orders. By our reſolution of the 23d November, the powers delegated to the Preſident and Select Committee at Bombay were revoked. He was then directed henceforth to obey all ſuch orders as he might receive from us; but he has never ſince received any orders from us, directly or indirectly, authorizing him to march to Poonah, or to co-operate with the Preſidencies of Bombay for the reſtoration of Ragoba.

16. It is true that our orders of the 23d November directed Colonel Goddard henceforth to obey all ſuch orders as he might receive from us, and from us only; but theſe did not forbid him to comply with a requiſition of the Preſidency of Bombay, although delivered, as it muſt be, until the revocation of our former orders was known, in the ſtyle of authority, if it was conſiſtent with the inſtructions before given to Colonel Goddard; and both our inſtructions of the 15th October and thoſe of the 23d November, fully warrant the laſt movement of the detachment, the former inſtructions allowing him authority to advance, even without the order of the Preſidency of Bombay, and the latter to aſſiſt and co-operate with them, conſiſtently with the primary objects of his commiſſion.

I ſhall conclude this minute by acknowledging, that the propoſitions were written with the immediate and perſonal aſſiſtance of Mr. Barwell, after the moſt deliberate and wary conſideration of them, and are at leaſt as much his original compoſition as my own, which I repeat with pleaſure, becauſe I think they will reflect no diſcredit on him; and I ſhall ever think it a credit to my labours, that they have ſo ſtrong a ſanction as his participation in them.

(Signed) W. H.

Mr. Francis in conſequence ſent in the following remarks, a copy of which were alſo incloſed a number in the packet.

Mr. Francis—I beg leave to offer one obſervation on the Governor General's minute recorded yeſterday, and which I deſire may accompany it as a number in the packet.

Having ſtated my objections to the command propoſed to be exerciſed by Colonel Goddard, independent of Brigadier General Egerton, his ſuperior officer in the Company's ſervice, with whom he is nevertheleſs to co-operate, it is urged in reply that, in May 1776, we directed the ſole command of the Company's troops at Bombay, or that ſhould be ordered to act on the Malabar coaſt, to be veſted in General Gordon; and that we recommended it to the Preſidency of Bombay, to appoint Lieutenant Colonel Upton ſecond in command in their army. Whether theſe meaſures were adviſable or not, or whether we had a right to inſiſt on their compliance with our injunctions, are not the points at preſent in debate. The queſtion is, whether, when I object to dividing the command of troops on the ſame ſervice, and to our making an inferior officer independent of his ſuperior, ſuch objection is anſwered by ſaying, that at a former period we inſiſted on the ſole command being veſted in General Gordon, and recommended that Lieutenant Colonel Upton ſhould be appointed to act under him.

On all the other points I ſubmit to judgment, with this remark only, that I do not believe it will appear to any impartial judge, that I have ever in any inſtance miſrepreſented the ſenſe of any paſſage in the Governor General's minutes, though I do not think it neceſſary to recite all the words he makes uſe of. If the contrary be affirmed, it ſhould be ſhewn by a clear ſtatement of the amount of his meaning, compared with that which I have attributed to him, in what particular, or to what degree the one eſſentially differs from the other.

Long quotations, which nobody will attend to, ſeldom have any other effect but to leave the queſtion perplexed and undecided.

(Signed) P. Francis.

Governor General—I do not myſelf make long or full quotations, but think it incumbent on me to include in them every thing neceſſary to complete their ſenſe; and I complain that Mr. Francis, by a different practice, and particularly by the excluſion of intermediate words and ſentences, has totally perverted my meaning.

A compariſon of his extract from my minute of the 4th inſtant, with the complete paragraph inſerted in the ſecond paragraph of my laſt, will verify this obſervation.

APPENDIX, No. 172.

Extract of a Letter from the Governor General and Council in Bengal to the Court of Directors in their Secret Department; dated the 1ſt February 1779.

WE have juſt received very important advices from the Select Committee at Bombay, and from Colonel Goddard, which being now under our conſideration, we ſhall defer writing on the ſubject of them until we can inform you of the reſult of our deliberations; in the mean while we encloſe copies for your information.

Copy of a Letter from the Governor General and Council in Bengal to the Court of Directors, in their Secret Department; dated the 11th February 1779.

Honourable Sirs,

In our laſt diſpatch of the 1ſt inſtant, by the Godfrey, we tranſmitted you a copy of the important advices which we had juſt then received from the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, and gave you to expect that our proceedings upon them would ſhortly follow. We have now the honour to forward a complete copy of them by the Shrewſbury, agreeable to our promiſe: as they are very full, and not encumbered with any foreign ſubject, we truſt that you will beſtow on them the attention which they deſerve; and therefore we ſhall take the liberty to refer you principally to them.

We ſhall not enlarge in this place upon the apparent irregularity and precipitancy of the meaſures lately adopted by the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, but leave you from a peruſal of the facts to judge and paſs your opinion, whether they were fully juſtified in reſolving to undertake them on the different grounds and conſiderations that occured at the time.

With reſpect to the mode of conduct which we have reſolved to purſue on this occaſion, we think it proper to be rather more minute. The preſent treaty with Ragonaut Row having been formed by the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, under the expreſs letter of our ſanction; and this authority having been proclaimed to the world in a manifeſto, under the Company's ſeal, it remained only for us to ſupport the engagements thus concluded, although a very principal condition, both enjoined by us in our letter to Bombay, dated 2d February 1778, and obviouſly ſtriking in itſelf, had been omitted; we mean a ſtipulation or proviſion for the expences of the detachment ſent from hence to the aid of Ragonaut Row; which was at that time advancing quickly into the Maratta country, and which has ſince actually marched towards Poonah, at the expreſs requiſition of the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay.

Thus circumſtanced, with an object of ſo much importance to ſecure at the Court of Poonah, we thought it adviſable to purſue the moſt effectual means of accompliſhing it that were ſuggeſted by the occaſion; and therefore reſolved to inveſt Colonel Goddard with powers to treat with that Court, and to furniſh him with inſtructions to the following effect:

Colonel Goddard is directed to co-operate with the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, and with the committee appointed by them for conducting the political and military affairs at Poonah, in ſupport of the treaty concluded by that Preſidency with Ragonaut Row, and of the operations dependant on it.

He is confirmed in poſſeſſion of the powers conveyed to him by our letter of the 23d November, which he at preſent holds, dependant on this Government and independent of the Preſidency of Bombay.

He is authorized to apply for ſuch reinforcements of troops from the Preſidency of Bombay, as he ſhall judge neceſſary for completing the ſtrength of his detachment, and to receive the ſame, with the condition, that they be not commanded by any officer of ſuperior rank to himſelf.

We have forbid Colonel Goddard to interfere in any of the negociations, or other tranſactions of the committee appointed by the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, or in any points which reſpect the treaty lately concluded with Ragonaut Row, or the ſeparate and immediate intereſts of that Preſidency, except only in thoſe in which he ſhall be called upon by the Preſident and Select Committee, or the committee appointed by them, for his advice and aſſiſtance.

We have appointed Colonel Goddard the Miniſter of our Government at the Court of Poonah, with full powers to negociate with Ragonaut Row, or ſuch other perſon or perſons as ſhall be at the head of the Maratta State, upon all matters which ſhall be expreſsly given to him in charge, and to accept or conclude any engagements for the ſame on our part.

We have inſtructed Colonel Goddard to demand from Ragonaut Row, or the Government for the time being, payment of the expences actually incurred in the expedition undertaken by the detachment under his command, eſtimated at two lacks of rupees per month, from the 1ſt of June 1778 to the day of his arrival at or near Poonah, with the allowance of ſix months for the return of the detachment to Bengal, from the day of its diſmiſſion; to obtain the moſt complete ſecurity for theſe payments, either by aſſignments on the public treaſury, or on reputable Shroffs; or in the laſt reſort, on any of the Aumils or collectors of the revenue, who ſhall engage to him for the ſame, but not on the collections themſelves, in which we have forbidden him, or any one under his authority, to have any concern or interference.

In caſe of a refuſal on the part of the Maratta Government to comply with theſe demands, or of ſuch an evaſion of them as ſhall be equivalent to a refuſal, Colonel Goddard is directed to notify the ſame to the committee, and to the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, and either return with the detachment under his command to Berar, or retire to the lands ceded to the Company, and in poſſeſſion of the Government of Bombay, at his diſcretion; and we have peremptorily required and commanded the Preſident and Select Committee in ſuch caſe to recall their troops from Poonah, and from the Maratta dominions.

We have thought it proper to confirm the inſtructions originally given to Mr. Elliott, and after his death transferred to Colonel Goddard, and to direct him to reſume his negociations with the Government of Berar, and to treat with it on the grounds of thoſe inſtructions whenever an occaſion ſhall offer to execute them conſiſtently with the foregoing reſolutions.

For the fuller explanation of our intentions in this article, and to obviate any miſconception of the obligation impoſed on us by the treaty concluded by the Preſidency of Bombay with Ragonaut Row, we have diſtinctly ſpecified the ſeveral caſes which ſhall authorize him to renew the negociations with Moodajee Booſla. Theſe are as follow:

1ſt. If Ragonaut Row ſhall depart from the terms of his engagements with the Government of Bombay.
2dly. If he ſhall refuſe to comply with our demands.
3dly. If he ſhall himſelf deſire to include the Government of Berar in his alliance with the Company, on the footing preſcribed by our inſtructions to Mr. Elliott.
4thly. In the event of Ragonant Row's death.
5thly. In caſe of the failure of the plan undertaken by the Preſidency of Bombay for reſtoring that Chief.

Appendix. No. 173 & 174.

We have given the neceſſary directions on theſe ſeveral ſubjects to the Preſident and Select Committee at Bombay; and further recommended it to them, on the return of their committee, to appoint an agent or miniſter on the part of their Government for the management of its ſeparate concerns with the Adminiſtration of Poonah, and for the accompliſhment of the different articles of the treaty which they have concluded with Ragonaut Row, but with inſtructions expreſsly limited to thoſe objects; and we have alſo thought it neceſſary to forbid them to enter into any new engagements, without a previous application to us, and our ſanction obtained for that purpoſe.

We are, honourable Sirs,
Your moſt faithful humble ſervants,
Warren Haſtings,
Richd Barwell,
P. Francis,
Ewd Wheler.

APPENDIX, No. 173.

Bengal Secret Perſian Correſpondence.

Letter from Governor General to Moodajee Bhoſila: written 9th February 1779.

I DID not think proper to return an immediate anſwer to your firſt letter, becauſe it had been written on the ſuppoſition that the commiſſion which had been entruſted to Mr. Elliott had not been transferred to any other perſon, and that the negociations and objects of it were left in total ſuſpenſe; and as all your objections to the propoſed alliance were grounded on that preſumption, I expected that when you were informed, as you would ſoon have been after the diſpatch of that letter, that Mr. Elliott's commiſſion had been transferred to Colonel Goddard, with full powers for carrying into execution the plan intended by it, all your objections would ceaſe of courſe, and that you would be as much diſpoſed to accept of the propoſed alliance, and to join in the meaſures projected for it, as you appeared to be in the letter which you wrote me immediately after the news of Mr. Elliott's deceaſe: in this hope, however, I have been diſappointed; an unfortunate concurrence of circumſtances has cauſed a change in your ſentiments, and defeated my deſigns. By your laſt letter, and by the advices received at the ſame time from Colonel Goddard, I underſtand that you have given him his final anſwer, and that the ſubjects of his negociations remain ſuſpended to an indefinite time; and that the cauſe of your reluctance to enter into my views, has proceeded from the engagements which have been lately concluded by the Government of Bombay with Ragonaut Row, and the meaſures actually taken by them for replacing him in the Adminiſtration of Poonah. I will own that the doubts you entertained on the receipt of this intelligence were reaſonable; for I have no right to expect that you ſhould place an implicit reliance on the faith of any engagements implied by the overtures made by me to you, but not ratified by any formal inſtrument; yet I am ſorry that you entertained this diſtruſt; and do declare, that had you accepted of the terms offered you through Colonel Goddard, and concluded a treaty with this Government upon them, I ſhould have held the obligation of it ſuperior to that of any engagements formed by the Government of Bombay, and ſhould have thought it my duty to maintain it, and to defend the faith of this Government pledged for the performance of it againſt every conſideration even of the moſt valuable intereſts and ſafety of the Engliſh poſſeſſions intruſted to my charge; nor in effect was the plan propoſed to you precluded by the engagements of the Government of Bombay with Ragonaut Row, but as I conceive entirely reconcileable to it; this however has had the effect of diverting your mind from the proſecution of our mutual deſigns, and I am therefore without remedy.

You will be pleaſed to remember that the original intention of ſending an Engliſh army from this to the weſtern ſide of India was to aſſiſt the Government of Bombay in the accompliſhment of a plan connected with the actual rulers of the Maratta State, with whom they were in alliance, and ſimilar to that which they have lately carried into execution, as I informed you in my firſt letter written upon this ſubject. That plan proved abortive; but the ſame cauſes which had induced me and the members of this Government to give our ſanction to the meaſures of the Government of Bombay, namely, the dangerous and forward intrigues of the French at Poonah, ſtill ſubſiſted, with other additional motives, for proſecuting the undertaking; and I thought this a fair occaſion to afford you the moſt ſubſtantial proof of the ſincerity of the profeſſions which I had repeatedly given to you, and of cementing a laſting friendſhip between your houſe and the Company by the ſtrong connection of mutual advantages. With this view I firſt deputed Mr. Elliott with full powers to negociate, and to conclude a treaty between us, and to concert the operations dependant on it. His death ſuſpended this deſign, which was inſtantly renewed on the intimation given me by you of your wiſhes concurring with mine, and Colonel Goddard was ſubſtituted the Miniſter of this Government in his place.

To you I had unreſervedly communicated all my views, partly and indiſtinctly by letters, but very fully in repeated converſations with Beneram Pundit, as it would have been very improper to have truſted affairs of ſuch delicacy and importance to letters, and to the hazards to which theſe would have been expoſed in a long and doubtful journey. Your caution was ſtill greater, and was perhaps more commendable, although I may regret the neceſſity which preſcribed it; for neither your letters, nor the letters of Beneram Pundit, afforded me the leaſt clue to judge of your ſentiments or inclinations reſpecting the particular points of action which were to form the ſubſtance of our projected engagements; and although from your general profeſſions, and the warmth and ſincerity with which theſe were manifeſtly dictated, I had every reaſon to conclude that you approved of them, yet, without ſome aſſiſtance, common prudence required that I ſhould not precipitately abandon every other reſource, and irrevocably commit the honour and intereſt of this Government in a doubtful meaſure. Precautions were taken that nothing ſhould be undertaken by any of the Governments dependant on this, which might eventually interfere with thoſe actually concluded with you; and laſtly, that Colonel Goddard might be freed from all embarraſſments which might check or impede him in his negociations with you. The orders by which he had been ſubjected to the authority of the Government of Bombay were revoked, and he was inſtructed to give his whole attention to the treaty which he was charged to conclude with you. Due intimation of this was at the ſame time written to Bombay.

The paſt is paſt, and cannot be recalled; it is therefore as unneceſſary as it would be improper, to paſs a judgment on the propriety of it. With reſpect to the future, my diſpoſition and wiſhes remain the ſame; nothing is yet loſt, although the proſpect be removed to a greater diſtance. I ſhall wait for the arrival of Beneram Pundit for the information of future inclinations; and by this it is my deſire to be guided in the hopes that they may be ſpeedily accompliſhed to our mutual and entire ſatisfaction.

APPENDIX, No. 174.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 2d March 1779.

PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident;
Richard Barwell,
Philip Francis,
Edward Wheler,
} Eſquires.

MR. Francis having ſent in the following minute on

on the 23d ultimo; it was circulated, and returned this morning by the Governor General, with the minute which is entered after it.

Mr. Francis, 23d February, 1779.

Mr. Francis—It does not belong to me to anſwer for the inconſiſtency of the meaſures purſued by this Board ſince December 1777, or to reconcile and account for the contradictory declarations with which they have been occaſionally introduced or ſupported; in every inſtance, in which I may be able to produce the Governor General's own authority in defence of my opinion, I ſhall think myſelf at liberty to make uſe of it.

The queſtions left in debate by his laſt minute, recorded the 11th inſtant, and in which I underſtand him to maintain the affirmative, are as follow:

1ſt. "Whether at the time when Mr. Elliott's inſtructions were reſolved on, the plan propoſed by that commiſſion was not the principal object of this Government; or whether it was conſidered by us as little more than a reſource to which we looked in the event of a failure in the other deſign?"

When Mr. Elliott's appointment was reſolved on in July 1778, it appears by his inſtructions, that the Bombay plan, in favour of Ragoba, was abandoned by this Government. In the inſtructions it is expreſsly inſerted, That "the deſign had failed; that Ragonaut Row had now "no party left; that the Preſidency of Bombay could "not now, under any circumſtances, afford him this "aſſiſtance; and that, thus deprived of the reſources on "which we depended, in the partizans of Ragoba, &c. "we were therefore deſirous of joining our forces and "our intereſts with thoſe of Moodajee Booſla." Even the paſſage quoted by the Governor General proves, that the junction with Moodajee Booſla was not conſidered by us as little more than an eventual reſource, but that it was then our main and principal object. On a ſuppoſition that the Preſidency of Bombay might have actually entered into engagements with Ragoba, the inſtructions to Mr. Elliott ſay, "you will ſo conduct yourſelf as to conform "to their meaſures, if you can, conſiſtently with the "prior attention which you will give to our views, remembering that a defenſive alliance with Moodajee Booſla being the permanent object of your commiſſion, you "are to ſuffer no conſideration whatever to divert you "from that object, &c."

Finally, the Governor General in his letter of the 9th inſtant to Moodajee Booſla, ſays, "I do declare, that "had you accepted the terms offered you through Colonel Goddard, and concluded a treaty with this Government upon them, I ſhould have held the obligation "of it ſuperior to that of any engagement formed by the "Government of Bombay."

2d. "Whether the two plans, viz. that formed at Bombay for the reſtoration of Ragoba to the office of "Peiſhwa, and that projected by us for the advancement of Moodajee Booſla to the ſovereign authority of "the Maratta empire, are compatible in their nature, "and may really exiſt together."

The object conſtantly aimed at by Ragoba on one ſide, and held out to Moodajee Booſla on the other, has been the actual ſovereignty of the Maratta State. It is not to be ſuppoſed, that either of them would be ſatisfied with a bare title, while the actual power was left in the hands of his rival; nor in fact was ſuch a propoſition ever made to them. But if the actual power of the Adminiſtration was their common object; it can hardly be a queſtion, whether two plans, the profeſſed purpoſe of which is to place both of them in poſſeſſion of ſuch power, can be reconciled and executed together. The Governor General himſelf ſays, That the reſolution taken at Bombay has defeated our meaſures, and expoſed us to the ſuſpicion of duplicity; but the affirmative of the queſtion ſuppoſes the meaſures compatible, conſequently the execution of one ought not to defeat the ſucceſs of the other. The opinion that they are really incompatible does not belong to me alone. In Mr. Elliott's inſtructions, the poſſible caſe of an engagement on the part of Bombay, for the reſtoration of Ragoba, is ſtated as incompatible with the operations which we had above authorized, viz. in the preceding part of the inſtructions. Colonel Goddard, in his letter of the 6th of January, ſays, "that "Moodajee Booſla juſtly apprehends, that the eſtabliſhing of Ragonaut Row's authority under the influence "of the Engliſh, would exclude him from all hopes of "ever obtaining the object he has in view through their "means, as an attention to, and obſervance of the intereſts of both would be an impracticable taſk to our "Government, and irreconcilable to themſelves."

Appendix. No. 174.

In another part of the ſame letter he tells us, that "Moodajee Booſla acknowledges his view is to pave the "way to his own future projects; and that he declares, "with equal appearance of ſincerity, that theſe are incompatible with the meaſures now adopted by Ragonaut Row."

Mr. Watherſtone, in his letter of the 24th of December ſays, "The principal cauſe, however, of their objection "to the Bombay ſchemes, is, I make no doubt, the "invincible bar they foreſee they will occaſion to the "accompliſhment of their own." The Governor General himſelf ſays, that "our own plan has been rendered "impracticable by it."

I ſubmit to judgment, whether this evidence be or be not concluſive?

3d. "Whether the Preſidency of Bombay were bound "by our example, to leave an opening for the admiſſion "of Moodajee Booſla into their engagements with Ragoba "in the ſame manner as our inſtructions to Mr. Elliott "had preſcribed the junction of Ragoba in his negociations with Moodajee Booſla?"

The Governor General affirms, "That it was not poſſible for the Preſidency of Bombay to ſuppoſe that at "the time when we gave them ſuch an authority, we "ſhould either give or leave to Mr. Elliott ſuch inſtructions, as in their nature would tend to annul it." Yet the declaration quoted from the Governor's laſt letter to Moodajee Booſla, plainly ſhews that ſuch a ſuppoſition, if they had formed it, would not have been unwarrantable. At all events they ought not to have been left to their own conjectures, on a point of ſuch importance. They ought to have been informed of the preciſe object of Mr. Elliott's commiſſion. They would then have had no excuſe for entering into engagements, which are now ſaid to have defeated our meaſures, and to have expoſed us to the ſuſpicion of duplicity. It reſts with the Governor General to ſhew how it was poſſible for them to follow our example, and to leave an opening for Moodajee Booſla, in the ſame manner as our inſtructions to Mr. Elliott had preſcribed the junction of Ragoba, with his negociation with Moodajee Booſla, when they had never ſeen Mr. Elliott's inſtructions, nor known any thing of the plan of them.

4th. "Whether the ſupport of the plan, preſented to "us by Bombay, in December 1777, was not our firſt "profeſſed object in undertaking the expedition, and "whether we have ever abandoned our plan, to aſſiſt in "the proſecution of their's?"

When the Court of Directors ſhall have read the following quotations, I believe they will view with the ſame ſurprize that I do, the Governor General's preſent declaration, that the alliance with Moodajee Booſla was the firſt profeſſed object of this Government.

"If there are men in England ſo devoid of common "ſenſe as to ſuppoſe it poſſible for me to have formed "a plan, oſtenſibly profeſſed for the ſupport of Bombay, "but really meant as a cover for other deſigns, let them. "Whoſoever they are, or in whatever relation they may "ſtand to this Government, ſuch opinions will give me "no kind of concern."

Conſultation, 12th October 1778.

"We were called upon by the Preſidency of Bombay "to aſſiſt them in a plan, &c. Our aſſiſtance was only "neceſſary to ſupport it."

"The object originally preſented to our army, ſeemed "to have vaniſhed." "It will be remembered, that "our

Mr. Haſtings to Moodajee Booſla, February 1779.

" our detachment was expreſsly deſigned for the ſupport " of the plan communicated to us by the Preſidency of " Bombay, in December 1777."

" You will be pleaſed to remember, that the original " intention of ſending an Engliſh army from this to the " weſtern ſide of India was to aſſiſt the Government of " Bombay, in the accompliſhing of a plan, concerted " with the actual rulers of the Maratta State."

If nevertheleſs, an immediate and decided engagement with Moodajee had in effect been firſt adopted, and afterwards abandoned by us, to aſſiſt in the proſecution of the other ſcheme, with what reaſon can it be conſidered as little more than a reſource, to which we looked in the event of a failure in the deſign furniſhed us by the Preſidency of Bombay?

I deny that we have ever abandoned the project of an alliance with Moodajee Booſla, ſince it was firſt avowed. The proof of the contrary lies on the affirmative.

5th. " Whether the ſuppoſed change in Moodajee " Booſla's ſentiments, is to be attributed to his know- " ledge of the deſigns lately formed at Bombay?"

A private letter from the Maratta Vackeel to his brother, is no evidence to this Board, if it had ever been before us. It appears that the Governor General himſelf paid no regard to it. But Moodajee Booſla's letter to Colonel Goddard, of the 23d of November, muſt be received by us as public authority. He therein ſtates a multitude of reaſons for not engaging in the propoſed alliance. Is it to be ſuppoſed, that if he had been acquainted with the reſolution then taken at Bombay, he would not have added that argument to the reſt, or that he would have deſignedly omitted to juſtify himſelf by the only plea to which in truth there could be no poſſibility of reply?

6th. " Whether we have ſtrictly a right to inſiſt on a " farther ſubſidy from Rogoba, in addition to the ſum " ſtipulated and limited by the Bombay treaty?"

The twelfth article of the treaty ſays, " The Engliſh " forces are to continue with Ragonaut Row, until the " object of this treaty is accompliſhed, which is to place " him in the Regency of Poonah." But, if he refuſes to comply with the demand of two lacks a month, beyond the ſubſidy limited by the treaty, Colonel Goddard is commanded to retire with his detachment, and the Preſidency of Bombay to recall their troops from Poonah. The execution of theſe orders is not to wait till the objects of the treaty are accompliſhed; the demand is to be inſtantly made, and a refuſal to comply with it is to be immediately followed by the retreat of both armies. The concluſion from theſe premiſes is obvious and unavoidable.

7th. " Whether we have an equitable right to inſiſt on " ſuch a demand?"

We muſt wait the event, before we can determine whether Colonel Goddard's army will really have contributed in any degree to the ſucceſs of the expedition from Bombay. That Preſidency may naturally tell us, that the motion of their army was the cauſe of Colonel Goddard's ſecurity, ſince it evidently muſt have diverted a part at leaſt of the force that would have oppoſed him. The argument, otherwiſe equal in itſelf, preponderates clearly in favour of that party which ſtands neareſt to the common enemy, and enters firſt into action.

8th. " Whether Ragoba, ſuppoſing him reinſtated, " derives the poſſeſſion of his treaſures immediately " from us?"

I know of no reſources which Ragoba inherently poſſeſſes; for a conſiderable time paſt he has been a burthen to the Company, even for his perſonal ſubſiſtence. That he will derive the future poſſeſſion of any other treaſures immediately from us, is a propoſition which, I believe, the Preſidency of Bombay will be as unwilling to admit as Ragoba himſelf; they will claim the whole merit of the ſervice, and they will engroſs the reward of it. We need not yet, however, embarraſs ourſelves about a diviſion of the ſpoil. That queſtion at preſent is premature.

9th. " Whether my objection to the amount of the " demand be unfair on my own principles?"

There is an air of cavil in the remark on my objection to the amount of the demand, which perhaps might excuſe me from replying to it. Yet I ſhould be ſorry to be miſunderſtood; my meaning is, that if all objections to increaſing our demands on Ragoba, on the ſcore of the aſſiſtance he may derive from the march of Colonel Goddard's army, be over-ruled, the demand then ſhould be proportioned to our actual expence. On any principles that will juſtify us in demanding a part, we have a right to the whole. Two lacks a month from June laſt, fall very ſhort of reimburſing the Company for the charge of this meaſure.

10th. " Whether it appears what ſort of buſineſs Co- " lonel Goddard is to negociate and tranſact at the Court " of Poonah, as ambaſſador from this Government?"

To make a peremptory demand of a ſpecific ſum of money, does not require us to veſt Colonel Goddard with the character and full powers of an ambaſſador, and no other object of negociation appears to be intruſted to him.

11th. " Whether we have no reaſon to charge Moo- " dajee Booſla with levity, unſteadineſs, or duplicity?"

If it be true that Moodajee Booſla conſtantly ſolicited an alliance with this Government, and, as I find it aſſerted by the Governor General on the 16th of November laſt, that " he was both willing and prepared to join his " aſſiſtance in the operations of the detachment;" I am entitled to charge him with levity and unſteadineſs in departing from all his former profeſſions, as he evidently did on the 23d of November, when it was impoſſible for him to be apprized of the reſolution taken at Bombay. With reſpect to his duplicity, I muſt leave it to others to judge from facts; in the mean time I do not deem it unwarrantable, nor is it unprecedented in the conſultations, either here or at Madras, to queſtion the good faith of a Maratta. How it ſtands with the Governor General's perſonal credit, or with the wiſdom of his meaſures, to maintain that Moodajee Booſla's conduct has been unexceptionable, is a queſtion which I think deſerves his conſideration.

12th. " Whether the direct change of opinion admit- " ted by Mr. Haſtings, with reſpect to the policy of en- " gaging the Company in an offenſive alliance with the " Marattas, be juſtified by a total change of circum- " ſtances, ſuppoſed to have taken place ſince his former " opinion was delivered?"

When fundamental maxims of policy are avowedly ſet aſide, the change of circumſtances ſhould not only be clear and incontrovertible, but it ſhould be ſuch a one as warrants the adoption of new and oppoſite principles of action. I am not ſufficiently maſter of the revolutions which have happened in the Maratta empire ſince April 1771, and which in ſo ſhort a period are ſuppoſed to have produced a total alteration in its circumſtances, to enter into that part of the queſtion. Taking the facts as they are ſtated by the Governor, it ſeems to me an obvious concluſion, that, if it were dangerous for us to unite with the Marattas when their empire was entire and in its full vigour, it muſt be uſeleſs to commit ourſelves by taking any part in their diviſions, when their empire is falling to pieces of itſelf; either way, our engaging the Company's arms in an offenſive war, whether in conjunction with a part or the whole of the Maratta empire, is indefenſible, ſince it is equally contrary to the Company's poſitive, moſt ſolemn, and repeated commands.

13th. " Whether Colonel Goddard in marching to " Poonah, has not acted without orders?"

It is admitted, that on the 23d of November, Colonel Goddard was directed thenceforth to obey all ſuch orders as he might receive from us, and from us only. The excluſion contained in theſe terms, could only relate to the authority heretofore delegated to the Preſidency of Bombay and now revoked; under theſe laſt inſtructions Colonel Goddard could no longer obey the direct orders of that Preſidency; but it ſeems he was at liberty to comply with their requiſitions. Such a conſtruction of poſitive orders I believe is unprecedented. The verbal diſtinction between orders and requiſitions, ſeems to me to be of no weight. Colonel Goddard has defended his conduct on much better grounds.

of

(Signed) P. Francis.

The Governor General—This is not a time for ſpeculative diſcuſſion; yet I muſt defend myſelf againſt the charge of inconſiſtency in meaſures of ſuch importance to the intereſts of the Company and to the national reputation, as thoſe into which I have been forcibly drawn, not by my own option, but by the acts of others independent of me, ſince December 1777; and which are rendered yet more important to my own character by the miſerable cataſtrophe which has attended the deſign from which theſe all derive their origin. I ſhall conform to Mr. Francis's arrangement of his arguments in my reply to them, and hope at leaſt to have the merit of brevity, if I am not juſtified by the motives which have impelled me to give up ſo much of my time to debate, which might be devoted to more uſeful purpoſes, and to write what perhaps no one will read.

1ſt. Mr. Elliott's commiſſion conſiſted of two diſtinct and independent points; a defenſive alliance, which was to be concluded independently of any meaſures or engagements of the Preſidency of Bombay; and an offenſive one, which was not to take place, if any engagements ſhould have been concluded, or meaſures formed, by the Preſidency of Bombay, which were contradictory to it. This is clearly expreſſed in the following extract of his inſtructions, which I quote again to ſave the trouble of a reference. "But if you ſhall have reaſon to believe that the Preſidency of Bombay have commenced any negociations or entered into any engagements, either for the firm eſtabliſhment of peace with the Poonah Miniſtry, or for the reſtoration of Ragonaut Row, or for any other purpoſe which may prove incompatible with the operations which we have above authorized, you will in ſuch caſe ſuſpend your negociations until you ſhall have received authentic information, either from Mr. Moſtyn or the Preſidency of Bombay, of the nature of the engagements either projected or executed by them; and you will ſo conduct yourſelf as to conform to their meaſures, if you can conſiſtently with the prior attention which you will give to our views, or at leaſt not to engage in any offenſive plan which ſhall be contrary to that of the Preſidency of Bombay." There is a clear and pointed oppoſition ſtated of two deſigns; one propoſed by Mr. Elliott's commiſſion, and the other by the Preſidency of Bombay; and it is declared that the former ſhall not be attempted in the caſe of the actual proſecution of the latter; therefore it is provided, that "at the time when Mr. Elliott's inſtructions were reſolved "on, the plan propoſed by the Committee was not the "principal object of this Government, but conſidered "by us as little more than a reſource, to which we looked "in the event of a failure in the other deſign."

The quotation made from my letter to Moodajee, has no relation to the propoſition ſtated by Mr. Francis himſelf, which expreſsly confines it to the date and duration of Mr. Elliott's inſtructions. This ſpeaks only of engagements made by Colonel Goddard. The relative ſtate of the two commiſſions was clearly this:—in Mr Elliott's, we conſidered the project formed by the Preſidency of Bombay as abortive, but in the ſuppoſition of the poſſibility of its exiſtence we gave it the preference, and therefore left the detachment under the orders of that Preſidency. In Colonel Goddard's commiſſion, we ſtill conſidered that project as abortive, and deeming it indiſpenſably neceſſary to fix the deſtination of Colonel Goddard's detachment, then advanced to the confines of Berar, where it muſt either remain for the junction of Moodajee, and for the accompliſhment of the plan propoſed to him; or abandoning that deſign, proceed to the ſupport of that of the Preſidency of Bombay; we gave the preference to the former, and therefore releaſed the detachment from the orders of that Preſidency. Appendix. No. 174.

2d. It was never agreed nor propoſed, neither did Ragonaut Row ever require, that he ſhould be put into poſſeſſion of the ſovereignty of the Maratta State, whatever might have been the implied and ſecret object of the engagement concluded with him. He did not dare in his ejected ſtate to violate the conſtitutional forms which the Peiſhwas, his predeceſſors, in the plenitude of their power profeſſed to hold ſacred. Whether therefore he were ſatisfied or not with the "bare title" of Peiſhwa, without the uſurped powers of it, would have been no concern of mine, nor ought to have influenced the meaſures of our Government if we could have improved its relation to the Maratta State by other aids, not prohibited by our engagement with him.

The profeſſed object of the alliance with Moodajee, was to put him in poſſeſſion of the ſovereignty of the Maratta State, to which he had fair and legal pretenſions, and which he might have certainly held without prejudice to the rights of Ragonaut Row as Peiſhwa; and Ragonaut Row might as conſiſtently have exerciſed the office of Peiſhwa under his authority as his predeceſſors in the ſame office did before the uſurpation of Ballagee in 1740, which has been ſupported under all the forms and avowed rights of the conſtitution.

Therefore, the two plans, viz. "that formed at "Bombay for the reſtoration of Ragoba to the office of "Peiſhwa, and that projected by us for the advancement "of Moodajee Booſla to the ſovereign authority of the "Maratta empire, are compatible in their nature, and "may really exiſt together."

My aſſertion, that "the reſolution taken at Bombay "has defeated our meaſures and expoſed us to the ſuſ-"picion of duplicity," does not imply that the two meaſures are incompatible. The union of two diſtinct caſes may be conſiſtently ſuppoſed, although the attempt to unite them may fail, or the means ſeparately taken to eſtabliſh one may defeat or counteract the other. Moodajee could not truſt Ragonaut Row, nor commit himſelf and his fortunes in an engagement with us, which might eventually be defeated by thoſe which he ſaw formed by the Preſidency of Bombay with Ragonaut Row, and with the nature and extent of which he was unacquainted. He therefore declined it under ſuch circumſtance; ſo that in effect, the reſolution taken at Bombay has defeated our meaſures, becauſe he did not chuſe to be a party in it, yet it does not therefore follow that the meaſures were in themſelves incompatible. That "our own "plan has been rendered impracticable by it," which are quoted as my words, and I ſuppoſe are ſuch, meant no more, than that it was no longer practicable for Colonel Goddard to concert a plan of operations with Moodajee Booſla, ſince he had been obliged to leave him, and to march to Poonah, for the purpoſe of giving his ſupport to the Preſidency of Bombay in favour of a plan to which Moodajee was adverſe; yet ſurely neither is this a proof that the two meaſures were in themſelves incompatible.

3d. I preſume that the point is ſufficiently proved by what has been already ſaid upon it in my former minute, as I find nothing new in Mr. Francis's preſent argument againſt it.

4th. Here again Mr. Francis has confounded two different and unconnected ſubjects, viz. the defenſive alliance with Moodajee Booſla for the mutual and perpetual ſupport of our reſpective territories, immediately bordering on each other, and an offenſive alliance for other purpoſes. The deſign of the firſt had exiſted ſince the middle of the year 1773, and a fair opportunity preſented itſelf of accompliſhing it, when the Preſidency of Bombay called our attention to another object. It would have been unreaſonable at ſuch a time to attempt it. It was therefore "abandoned to aſſiſt in the proſecution of "theirs." This is a ſufficient comment on the multiplied quotations, which Mr. Francis has too exultingly produced for the "surprize of the Court of Directors."

Appendix. No. 175.

5th. Mr. Francis has affirmed, that the ſuppoſed change in Moodajee's ſentiments could not have been influenced by the knowledge of the deſigns lately formed at Bombay, becauſe it is firſt avowed in his letter to Colonel Goddard of the 23d November, when no ſuch deſigns exiſted.

It now appears that the treaty with Ragonaut Row was executed on the 24th of November, and that on the 5th of December the operations of the army for the ſupport of it were in ſuch forwardneſs, that an advanced party from it was in actual poſſeſſion of the fatal paſs of Roorgaut. If a month only be allowed, which is a very ſhort allowance for making the neceſſary proviſions for the expedition, and paſſing the army and ſtores to the Continent, this time was much more than ſufficient to have furniſhed Moodajee with a complete knowledge of their intentions. It appears beſides from Mr. Lewis's letter, dated the 27th of October, that there had been formally notified to him by Mr. Hornby, that he had in conſequence ſent away all the Sepoys ſtationed with the Reſident, and hourly expected his own recal. The proof therefore of Moodajee having poſſeſſed this knowledge, no longer reſts on a private letter from the Maratta Vackeel to his brother; and for its effect on Moodajee's ſentiments, his declarations, the corroborative opinions of Mr. Watherſtone and Colonel Goddard, and the plain concluſions of common ſenſe, are ſufficient evidences.

6th. The profeſſed object of the treaty is to place Ragonaut Row in the Government of Poonah; and it is a condition of it, that this being effected, our forces ſhall have liberty to leave him. This is all that is propoſed by the orders given to Colonel Goddard, and to the Select Committee of Bombay, in the event of Ragoba's refuſal to repay the charges of our detachment. We have therefore "ſtrictly a right to inſiſt on a further "ſubſidy from Ragoba, in addition to the ſum ſtipulated "and limited by the Bombay treaty," with this ſingle alternative.

7th. The failure of the undertaking renders this a point of pure ſpeculation; I ſhall therefore leave it to be ſupported by the arguments which I have already uſed in my former minute.

8th. This too ſuppoſes a caſe no longer exiſting nor likely to exiſt; I ſhall therefore leave it.

9th. I refer to my former minute as a complete reply to Mr. Francis's ſhort argument on this propoſition, as he has ſtated it, if either his reaſonings or mine on ſuch a ſubject merit ſo much attention.

10th. Colonel Goddard is not ſimply empowered to make a peremptory demand, but he is inſtructed in the ſeveral modes in which it may be accepted, and in the conduct which he is to obſerve in the caſe of the refuſal to comply with it. Theſe are powers ſpecifically given to Colonel Goddard, and whether neceſſary or not, in Mr. Francis's opinion to the character of an ambaſſador, theſe ſufficiently prove that, "it appears what ſort of "buſineſs Colonel Goddard is to negociate and tranſact "at the Court of Poonah, as ambaſſador from this Go-"vernment."

11th. This quotation has been ſufficiently diſcuſſed in my obſervations on the 5th propoſition, and in my former minute.

12th. "The emphatic appeal made by Mr. Francis "to the Company's poſitive, moſt ſolemn, and repeated "commands," might deter me from replying, if I had no other means of defence than in ſheltering myſelf under contradictory orders of the Court of Directors; their recent commands to recur to the engagement formed by Ragonaut Row, are a virtual repeal of all former orders given to abſtain from hoſtilities with the Marattas, and under the circumſtances in which theſe oppoſite orders were dictated, both are mutually reconcileable, as I have proved in my former minute.

13th. Colonel Goddard was freed from the authority of the Preſidency of Bombay, but he was directed to uſe his diſcretion in certain preſcribed caſes. He might therefore comply with a requiſition from Bombay, or even an order, which preſented to him any of the caſes preſcribed, as in effect it did. He has not therefore acted without orders in the reſolution taken by him to march to Poonah on ſuch requiſition.

APPENDIX, Nos. 175, 176, and 177.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 25th February 1779.

PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident;

Richard Barwell, Philip Francis, and Edward Wheler, } Eſquires.

RECEIVED the following letter from Bombay.

Gentlemen,

We have had the honour to receive your letters, dated the 15th and 20th of October, by the Terrible; and agreeable to the power given us in the firſt of theſe letters, we immediately ſent an order to Colonel Goddard to advance to this coaſt, even without a junction of the forces of any Power in alliance with us; a meaſure we thought indiſpenſably requiſite, having formed our plan with a dependance upon the ſervices of this detachment, which we always underſtood was meant for the ſupport and aſſiſtance of this Preſidency.

We were therefore much ſurprized and concerned upon receipt of your letter of the 23d November, to find the direction of the detachment taken out of our hands, at a time when we had ſuch preſſing occaſion for its ſervices; and our perplexity was much increaſed by the miſcarriage of the letter and inſtructions therein referred to, whereby we were left entirely ignorant of the object of a negociation, which we are told is likely to cauſe a very ſpeedy and eſſential change in the deſign and operations of that detachment.

All that we could do in ſuch a ſituation was to explain to Colonel Goddard our views in the engagement we had formed with Ragoba, and to ſend him a copy of the treaty that he might judge how far our meaſures were compatible with his inſtructions from you. We at the ſame time preſſed him ſtrongly to advance to this coaſt as ſoon as poſſible; and we truſt that you, Gentlemen, reflecting on our ſituation, will ſee the propriety and neceſſity of enforcing our injunctions.

We beg leave to encloſe a copy of our letter on the ſubject to Colonel Goddard.

Our army has not yet made any conſiderable progreſs, being on the 6th inſtant advanced but a ſmall diſtance from the head of the Ghauts. The enemy cannonade and ſkirmiſh with our troops, but avoid coming to a deciſive action, endeavouring as much as they can to haraſs them and cut off their ſupplies. In theſe deſultory attacks, Lieutenant Colonel Cay, the ſecond in command, has been mortally wounded, and Captain Stewart killed, with ſcarcely any other loſs. Colonel Egerton's infirm ſtate of health has obliged him to give up the command to Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, to whom we have given orders to proceed with the utmoſt vigour and activity in his operations, in order to give encouragement to Ragoba's friends, who are ſlow in declaring themſelves in his favour.

It is with concern we adviſe you of the death of Mr. Moſtyn, who is an inexpreſſible loſs at this juncture.

We have yet no accounts of the Aſia, or the Indiamen under her convoy.

We have judged it adviſable to deſire the gentlemen at Madras to give us a latitude to detain a part of the forces deſtined for the expedition againſt Mybie, after that ſervice is brought to an iſſue, if we ſhould then find ourſelves diſappointed of the Bengal detachment, or the exigence of our affairs may require their aid.

The Royal Henry will be diſpatched in a few days, when we ſhall tranſmit the papers mentioned in our letter of the 12th ultimo.

We are, &c.

Bombay Caſtle,
the 13th January 1779.

Sir,

We yeſterday received your letter dated the 22d ultimo, and had before that received that dated the 7th.

The miſcarriage of a letter referred to in the one you encloſed from the Governor General and Council, leaves us totally in the dark as to the object of your negociation with Moodajee Boofla; nor while we remain in this ſtate of ignorance, can we be proper judges what points relating to this Preſidency may be neceſſary to be included in the operations to be concerted with the Rajah of Berar. We have as before adviſed, depending upon the ſervices of your detachment, and the aid and ſupport of the Governor General and Council, concluded a treaty with Ragonaut Row, and our forces are now actually in the field in conſequence of that engagement; if, therefore, the aſſiſtance of your detachment is withheld from us, we know not how deeply the honourable Company's intereſt may be affected, as the Poonah Miniſters ſeem determined to make a vigorous oppoſition. The Governor General and Council's late orders to you, appear to have been given on a ſuppoſition that the plan for your detachment, as originally formed, had failed, upon which account they had adopted another of their own to ſupply the place of ours.

Their plan we therefore conclude muſt have the ſame object with ours, which was to ſubvert a party in the Poonah Government, connected with the French in deſigns hoſtile to the Company, to prevent the French from acquiring the predominant influence in that Durbar, and to ſettle a Government at Poonah friendly to the Engliſh, and which would look up to their alliance for its ſupport and ſtability. We ſhall not enlarge upon the great political neceſſity of the meaſures we have engaged in, of which we doubt not you muſt be fully ſenſible; and when to the objects above recited, are added the territorial advantages gained by our treaty, the importance of the undertaking muſt appear very ſtriking.

That you may have every light we can afford, we encloſe a copy of the treaty with Ragonaut Row; and when our preſent ſituation is conſidered, and how eſſentially the Company is intereſted in the event of our operations, to which we think the aid of your detachment, on which we always depended, is neceſſary to enſure ſucceſs, we doubt not but the Governor General and Council will approve of your conforming to your former inſtructions alluded to in our letter of the 19th ultimo; and as we cannot ſuppoſe it poſſible that our meaſures can be incompatible with your preſent inſtructions, we moſt earneſtly preſs and enjoin you to march directly to Poonah, without a moment's loſs of time, inſtead of Ziner, as before directed.

Colonel Egerton's bad ſtate of health has obliged him to reſign the command of the army in the field to Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, Lieutenant Colonel Cay being, it is thought, mortally wounded.

It is at any rate highly proper, that your detachment ſhould be at this place before the monſoon, to ſecure Bombay in caſe of an attack by the French next ſeaſon, which our own force is by no means equal to oppoſe; and you muſt bear in mind that there is only an interval of little more than four months left you to perform the march before the rains let in. This conſideration is alone ſufficient to preſs you to advance with expedition, and to which we aſſure ourſelves you will be ſtrongly prompted by your zeal for the Company's intereſt, and the important ſervices you have it in your power to render on this coaſt.

We do not conceive that Hyder's views can in any ſhape interfere with the march of the army under your command, and we have deſired the gentlemen at Madras to make a proper application to the Nizam, and to demand his neutrality in the conteſt.

We are, &c.

Appendix, No. 176.

No. 176.

The Governor General lays before the Board, the following paper of intelligence received yeſterday, with a letter from the Preſident of Fort St. George. A letter arrived at the ſame time from the Nabob of Arcot, which is not yet tranſlated, but which the Governor underſtands contains a copy of the ſame intelligence which appears to have been written from his Vackeel at Poonah. From other intelligence tranſmitted to him by General Stibbert, and through other channels, he is confirmed in the belief that the news contained in this paper is but too true. Alarming as this event is, the Governor does not think it proper to propoſe any immediate meaſures to be taken in conſequence, as the Board are yet unacquainted with the ſituation of the detachment under the command of Colonel Goddard, from whom advices may be hourly expected, which will inform them of the plan of action which he may have formed on the knowledge of this unhappy cataſtrophe.

Although it gives me the moſt heartfelt pain to communicate ſuch news as I have juſt received from Poonah, yet wiſhing to give my friends the firſt intelligence, that they may be put on their guard, and take ſuch meaſures as Providence may dictate, I now encloſe you a copy of it.

I have taken every opportunity of pointing out to my friends ſuch meaſures as appeared to me proper. I encloſe you a copy of a letter containing my advice in conſequence of informations which I ſome time ago received from Poonah, addreſſed to the Governor and Council of Madras, under date the 3d December 1778, and alſo of one I wrote them with the intelligence received from Poonah; had they purſued my plan, the affairs there had been well ſettled. Will you, my friend, who are endowed with wiſdom, even now take ſuch meaſures as ſhall be moſt adviſable?

I did myſelf the honour to diſpatch a pair of Coſſids to your highneſs on the 11th Zehera, with the following intelligence:—That Seremunt Ragonaut had proceeded with the Engliſh army as far as the Gaut with hoſtile intentions; and that Uppa Bulwant Row, Bhum Row Bhanſa, and the armies of Scindia and Holcar, were marched from hence towards the Gaut to oppoſe them; theſe I hope reached you ſafely. I again diſpatched another pair on the 1ſt Zehedje, with this intelligence, that Ragonaut with the Engliſh croſſed the Gaut; but thoſe Coſſids being plundered at Funderpore returned to me. I ſent another pair of Coſſids on the 26th of the ſame month, with intelligence that the Engliſh were marching back towards Bombay, that is to ſay, towards the Gaut; this pair was likewiſe plundered at Naringpore, which occaſioned a delay in your receiving regular advices from me. I now diſpatch another pair: God grant that they may meet you in ſafety, and make you acquainted with all the particulars.

The late occurrences are theſe:—The Engliſh paſſed the Gaut, and employed a month in removing of difficulties, receiving ſupplies from behind; they entrenched themſelves within paliſadoes.

Ragonaut Row came at firſt to the Gaut, from whence he went to Draugaut, and having reduced two forts in the way, returned to the Gaut, from whence he marched forwards.

Appendix. No. 176.

forwards with the Engliſh army, conſiſting of eight battalions of Sepoys, 700 European ſoldiers, 40 pieces of artillery, a Colonel and other officers, cheſts of ammunition, and ſpecie to the amount of 40 lacks of rupees, and his own force, conſiſting of 600 horſe and two battalions of Sepoys. On the ſide of the Marattas, Succarum Pundit and Nannah Purnaveſe in concert, employed two months in preparing their armies, they employed both money and grants of jaghires to ſatisfy Hujjerant Packa and the other Chiefs; and although he ſhewed himſelf attached, yet the Miniſters for greater ſecurity, entered into ſtill ſtricter ties to conciliate him the more to them; and Holcar having been diſpleaſed by the impriſonment of his Dewan Narroo Gunnaſe, the ſaid Dewan was reſtored, and Scindia alſo employed means to induce him to eſpouſe the cauſe. After this the Miniſters aſſembled all their Chiefs, both great and ſmall, and told them to conſult together, and that whatever meaſures they jointly agreed on ſhould be carried into execution: they all with one accord made anſwer—Had Ragonaut Row come with Marattas only, we would not have made war with him, for he was our Chief; but ſince he wiſhes to come in with an Engliſh army, who are foreigners and very powerful, with whoſe diſpoſition we are well acquainted, from their conduct in Bengal, and to Sujah-ul-Dowlah and ſeveral other Chiefs, which is notorious, how can we admit of it? Except we ſhould chuſe to ſubmit to the Engliſh yoke, and put on hats and coats; rather than ſo, it is better to die in battle!—Theſe ſentiments, which were general, they all ratified by oaths. Afterwards Bam Row Bhanſa, Rajah Pundit appa Uppa Bulwant Row, Sindea, and Holcar, with an army of 40,000 cavalry and 15,000 infantry marched to Felgong.

The moſt earneſt wiſh of the Bombay Chiefs was to aſſiſt Ragonaut Row; and the news of the reduction of Pondicherry, the arrival of the Calcutta army at the Nurbudder, and Moodajee Booſla's friendſhip, inſpired them with too great preſumption; in the mean time Mr. T. Moſtyn and Jetoo Peetul went from Poonah, and perſuaded them, that they had only to ſhew themſelves at the Gaut to be immediately joined, not only by thoſe who were already connected with them, but alſo by many other of the Maratta Chiefs; that Holcar would come over to them the moment they arrived at the Gaut, and would be followed by Hujjerant, and all the others; that by reaſon of a general defection, there was no life in the party; that the opportunity then preſented itſelf. Hearing this, the Engliſh and Ragonaut Row repaired to the Gaut, and after waiting a whole month not one of the Maratta Chiefs joined them, but they were informed from hence by Sadaſhew Ramchund and Madho Goherna, that if they would advance more forward there would be a general defection to them, but this was without the ſmalleſt foundation. When Mr. Moſtyn learnt the particulars of the meaſures taken by the Marattas, he perceived that the buſineſs was at an end, and being likewiſe indiſpoſed, he took leave of the Commander in Chief, and returned to Bombay, where I learn he is ſince dead.

The Engliſh quitted the Gaut and marched forwards, and the Maratta Chiefs ſet about hoſtilities after their uſual manner, and commanded the Engliſh at a diſtance, with a large cannon under the charge of Bum Row. The Engliſh marched two coſs a day, and halted every ſecond day, and thus in two days march arrived at Chicklee, which is four coſs from the Gaut. As there were many nullahs and difficult paſſes in the route, the Maratta army could not encompaſs them, but the conteſt was always on one ſide. Notwithſtanding this, the Marattas wherever they ſaw an advantageous ſpot for the purpoſe, diſcharged their cannon at them. Near Chicklee, Colonel Stewart, the Commander in Chief, was killed by a diſcharge of a grape ſhot, and was ſucceeded in the command by his nephew, who was on the ſpot.—Mr. Carnac, the ſecond in Council at Bombay, was preſent, intending, when Ragonaut Row ſhould be eſtabliſhed at Poonah, to contract engagements with each of the Chiefs, and to oblige them to ſubmit themſelves to Ragonaut Row, and for this purpoſe he carried the Company's ſeal with him.

On the 21ſt of Zehedjee (10th of January) the Engliſh army arrived at Jeelgong, ſeven coſs from the Gaut. Siccaram Pundit, &c. were at Jeelgong, and having learnt the firſt day that the Engliſh had reached Roregong, two coſs from them, they had ſent their baggage, &c. towards Cumbandaree, and retreated themſelves two coſs; the Engliſh ſuppoſed they had fled, and the Marattas wiſhed to draw them into an open plain. The day when the Engliſh arrived at Jeelgong an engagement was fought, in which the Marattas had near 200 cavalry killed; and the Engliſh loſt 25 European ſoldiers, including one or two officers, and 100 Sepoys. On the ſecond day the Engliſh, from the heights of Jeelgong, perceived that they were ſurrounded on all ſides by the Maratta forces; they halted there two days, hoping to be joined by ſome of the Maratta Chiefs, but not a ſingle man came over to them; and the intelligence they had been accuſtomed to receive from the other army was ſtopped; ſhould they wait for the Calcutta and Booſla's army, they were on the banks of the Nurbudder, and it would require a long time to receive any news from them; in this ſituation they ſaid to Jetoo Peetul, "You "have brought ruin on us, who engaged thus far on the "ſtrength of your promiſes." It was the general opinion of the officers that they ought to return to Piangaut, it being impoſſible for them to ſtand againſt the Maratta army. Ragonaut Row learning this, ſent to Sindeah and deſired to be received by him in any manner that it could be contrived, and that even if the Marattas would make a ſmart attack upon the Engliſh, he would go over to them with his 600 horſe and two battalions. It is probable the Engliſh got intelligence of this procedure. On the 23d Zehedjee (12th January) at midnight, the Engliſh leaving their tents, &c. neceſſaries, with one battalion of Sepoys and 200 European ſoldiers, with ſeven pieces of cannon, at Jeelgong, ſet off ſecretly with Ragonaut Row, hoping by this means to deceive the Marattas, who might ſuppoſe the whole army in their camp, and that they might by this ſtratagem eſcape; they accordingly took the route of Worgong. Siccaram immediately drew up his army with the moſt conſummate ſkill, and with Nanna Purnaveeſe, Scindia, and Holcar marched to attack the Engliſh, who they imagined were marching towards Poonah, but found they had taken the route of the Gaut. As ſoon as they ſaw this, they flew to the attack of the party which had been left, and plundered the tents and money, and every thing they found there. The two battalions and the Europeans fought very bravely, but Siccaram led his own army to the attack, and multitudes flocked in from all quarters, in the hope of ſharing in the plunder, and the whole were deſtroyed. As the Engliſh and Ragonaut Row had not advanced far, they ſoon overtook and ſurrounded them in a place were there were many nullahs, ſteep rocks, and hollows, and taking poſſeſſion of all the paſſes, attacked them with muſketry from midnight till the evening of the next day; the engagement was kept up with ſmall arms, and the Engliſh were not ſuffered to advance a ſtep; the Engliſh artillery were rendered uſeleſs by the nullahs and heights, ſo that they ſtopped their fire; but the Maratta cannon, which were of a much larger ſize, kept up a continual fire upon them from a diſtance; the Engliſh had therefore no reſource. That day the Engliſh loſt 150 European ſoldiers, 600 Sepoys, and ſeveral officers, and the Marattas loſt two or three officers, namely Gaoda, Suttoola, &c. and 200 horſes and 500 Sepoys. At night the Marattas ſtopped their fire, and ſet ſtrong guards at all the poſts, after which Siccaram Pundit, &c. went and ſupped at Jeelgong. On the 24th Zehedje (13th January) at midnight, all the Chiefs went to attack the intrenchments, and began a cannonade; Siccaram was on foot, and having taken ment to ſecure the nulla, ſent on a party of ſkilful muſketeers to attack the Engliſh. Nanna, Scindia, and Holcar, were as uſual very attentive to their reſpective poſts; the Engliſh artillery did no good, and the firing was therefore ſtopped. On that day the Marattas loſt 75 men, and the Engliſh 50 Europeans and 400 Sepoys. In the afternoon a Kidmutgar of Ragonaut Row, and a Kidmutgar of the Colonel's brought a letter addreſſed to Serement Row Pundit Purdhaun, deſiring to ſend a perſon of credit to treat on ſeveral points. All the Miniſters having peruſed the letter, ordered victuals to be given to the Kidmutgars, gave them a preſent, and ſent them back with this anſwer—That they might ſend whomſoever they pleaſed, that a truce ſhould be obſerved. The Miniſters having then ſtrengthened the guards at the different poſts, returned to their tents, and continued there till mid-day of the 25th Zehedja (14th January) after dinner they went to the intrenchments, and Sindea fired two or three times on the Engliſh, but they did not anſwer it either by cannon or muſketry. At this time Mr. Farmer, a friend of your Highneſs's, with whom he ſome time ago, came out, on which Scindea ceaſed firing, and called him to him. Mr. Farmer came out, and ſpoke thus to the Miniſters—We are merchants, and have ſhed no blood in your families. Ragonaut Row took refuge with us, and ſolicited our aid, and we, ſuppoſing him the Chief of the Government, accompanied him. Fortune does not favour him; we are remedileſs; do you receive and ſettle matters with him; the engagements which were contracted between us are ſtill in force; whatever has ſince paſſed, forgive; in future we muſt conform to the engagements which ſubſiſt. The Miniſters anſwered, Ragonaut Row is one of us; where is the neceſſity for your interference in our negociations? The fort of Shaſtee which you took poſſeſſion of, with the wealth in it, as well as all the money you have collected from the country, you ſhall give back; you ſhall likewiſe relinquiſh Rambooſeer, &c. as well as the Mahals of the Rackwar Goujerat; and the diviſion of Broach which belonged to the Sirkar; you ſhall alſo reſtore the twelve lacks of rupees which the Colonel took on account of the treaty. How would you be ever able to defray the charges of the army, and the price of the horſes which have been killed? but it is neceſſary that you pay the amount of the latter. In future you ſhall conform to the engagements concluded under Ballajee Row Pundit Purdhan, and raiſe no diſturbance.

Mr. Farmer having received this anſwer, returned to his own army. During theſe negociations, 10,000 Maratta cavalry arrived at Piangaut, which being joined to 5,000 which had been ſent there before, deſtroyed all the guards which the Engliſh had poſted at different ſtations as far as the Gaut, and burnt their paliſades, and plundered the whole country from Piangaut to Punveil; this I heard from the mouth of Nanna Purnaveeſe, but cannot certainly tell if it is true or falſe. At noon of the 26th Zehedja (15th January) Mr. Farmer came to Sindea, and ſaid, I give you a ſealed carte blanche, write your own terms; I agree. Sindea accordingly ſent word to the Miniſters, I ſhall put down whatever you ſhall direct me, but it is improper to ſpill more blood, which would leave reſentment in their breaſts. Whatever points are neceſſary, make them agree to: when Ragonaut Row comes hither, every matter is ſettled; they muſt reſtore Shaſtee, the Goujerat country, the ſubjects of the Sircar, the Guicawar's country of four pannahs, which they took at the ſame time with Shaſtee, the Bengal army which is approaching ſhall likewiſe return, and give no trouble in the Sircar's territories; and all matters ſhall remain on the footing they were under Seremunt Ballajee Row and Madho Row; they ſhall reſtore the jewels pledged by Ragonaut Row, and make no demand for the amount, and ſhall give all the bonds and deeds entered into by Ragonaut Row; nor ſhall they claim any thing on the account of the expences they have been at for Ragonaut Row. Theſe are the terms dictated by Sindea, which he ſent to Siccaram, who held a conſultation on them with Nanna Purnaveſe and Madho Row, and ſettled them. I am endeavouring to procure a copy of it, and if I ſucceed will ſend it to your Highneſs. It was further ſtipulated, that till a treaty was received under the ſeal of the Company, and the ſignature of the General, the Council and Select Committee, and garriſons eſtabliſhed in Shaſtee, and the other Mahals, the nephew of Colonel Stewart and Mr. Farmer ſhould remain in their hands. The Engliſh were remedileſs; they had been three days without victuals, and both the ſoldiers and ſepoys had thrown their arms and accoutrements on the ground.

On the 27th Zehedja (16th January) the treaty under the ſeal of the Company which Mr. Carnac had with him, and the ſignature of four officers of the army, Carnac, Egerton, Farmer, and Mr. Holmes, was prepared and delivered to Sindea, who immediately ſent them proviſions; on the 28th Zehedja (17th January) the Engliſh marched from thence, and Ragonaut Row remained there; the Sirkar's guards are kept there. This not being a fortunate day, Ragonaut Row did not come to the camp, but will come at noon to-morrow, which is a lucky hour. The Engliſh repreſented that the garriſons in the Maratta forts would moleſt them in their return, and therefore requeſted an eſcort, and Rahdarry Duſtuck; a Duſtuck and an eſcort of 2000 horſe were accordingly ordered them, and they ſet out. Whatever may hereafter occur I ſhall repreſent to your Highneſs.

Copy of a Newſpaper from the Durbar of the Nabob Nizam ul Dowla Buhadre: dated the 8th Mohurrem 27th January; received at Madras the 16th of Mohurrem (4th February) 1779.

A pair of Hircarrahs arrived on the night of the 16th of Mohurrem; who report that Ragonaut Row, who might be ſaid to be impriſoned in the hands of the Engliſh, being driven to extremity, ſent a meſſage through Sindeah and Holcar, to be allowed to go to that party and make his peace; and that accordingly on the day of the engagement between the Maratta and Engliſh armies, ſeeing the ſuperiority on the ſide of the Marattas, he quitted his party with 5 or 6,000 horſe which he had with him, and joined Sindeah; the Marattas regarding this event as an important victory, received the force brought them by Ragonaut Row.

In a word, Ragonaut Row with his force joined with the Maratta army, and the Engliſh having ſuffered a terrible defeat, took ſhelter in the heights above the Gaut; Sindeah and Holcar are the managers of the negociations for Ragonaut Row, and mean to exclude the Engliſh from all the interference therein, and under the ſanction of oaths to accommodate matters between Ragonaut Row and the Poonah Miniſters. This account is confirmed by the Poonah Vackeel here.

No. 3.

Copy of a Paper of Intelligence from the Durbar of the Nabob Nizam ul Dowlah: dated the 8th of Mohurrem (27th January) received the 16th of the ſame month (4th February).

His Highneſs yeſterday received intelligence from Jewajee Vackeel, of the ſeizure of Ragonaut Row, and peruſed the arzie containing this account, in private, and early this morning ſent for Sämſaum ul Dowla, Vikhar ul Dowla, Sabut Jung, and Jewagee, who attended him in the Dewan Kana, where he held a private conſultation with them; Jewagee the Vackeel preſented letters from Poonah written by Kiſhen Row Mulhar to his maſter, containing the following particulars; that the Engliſh Chiefs at Bombay having determined on an expedition for the ſupport of Ragonaut Row, took him with them, and employed ſome time in ſettling the Cokun, and leaving him on the other ſide the Gaut, three or four ſmart engagements were fought on the heights of the Gaut, and then continued their march to the village of Teelgong on the Poonah ſide of the Gaut, when the Maratta army took poſſeſſion of all the paſſes, and cutting off all their ſupplies reduced them to the utmoſt ſtraits, and made frequent attacks on them, killing hundreds of them, and wounding great numbers, ſo as to deſtroy near half of their force, and thoſe who were ſurrounded found it difficult to ſave their lives: a detachment of the Maratta army was ſent from thence to ſeize on Ragonaut Row, whom they brought back with them. Another letter mentions, that when the Europeans were ſurrounded, and all their proviſions at an end, they aſked their lives, and the Marattas demanding that Ragonaut Row ſhould be delivered up to them, they ſent for him and delivered him up to Sindeah, and thoſe that remained had their lives ſpared.—Theſe are the two different accounts of the matter.

When his Highneſs had peruſed the letters and heard the account from the Vackeel, he ſaid to him, It is well, the right has prevailed in that your enemies have of their own accord delivered themſelves into your hands, but the Naig has reduced the fort of Cheetuldurk to great extremity, if you now take meaſures to raiſe the ſiege it will be well, otherwiſe you will loſe it in a month or two.

From the poſſeſſion of the ſingle fort of Cotee the Naig made himſelf ſo powerful, ſhould he be ſuffered to reduce the fort of Cheetulburk, it will be attended with the worſt conſequences. Jeswajee replied, by the favour of God, in a ſhort time we ſhall ſo completely deſolate the countries of Sena and Myſore, and Balagaut and Pian Gaut on the other ſide of the Carnatic, and the province of Bengal and city of Calcutta, as not to leave a ſingle cherrauk burning.

The quarrel between the Engliſh and French is not yet accommodated in Europe. A mighty engagement has been fought, in which the French loſt 8000 men, and their arm which had nearly reached Burrampore, is on its return to Calcutta.

The greateſt part of the day was taken up in ſuch converſations, when the Nabob diſmiſſed the Durbar.

N° 4.

Copy of a Letter from his Highneſs, addreſſed to Mr. Thomas Rumbold, Governor of Madras: written the 3d December 1778.

The friendſhip which I have borne the Company and Engliſh nation has not been equalled by any other of the Powers in Hindoſtan, and by the bleſſing of God it has been invariable and augmenting daily, and the proſperity or adverſity of either is conſidered as that of the other.

This is impreſſed on the minds of all the different nations and Powers in this continent, and in conſequence many of the Princes of Hindoſtan are deſirous, through my mediation, of obtaining the friendſhip of the Company and Engliſh nation; and whenever I have ſeen an opportunity of promoting our intereſts, I have inſtantly communicated the plan to my friends. Accordingly the peace with the Nabob Nizam ul Dowla was concluded with my advice and aſſiſtance; and through me the Nabob Sellabut Jung agreed to put the fort of Guntore into the hands of my friends, on condition of ſupport from them, and by the aſſiſtance of the Engliſh drive out the French. For a term of five years a civil war ſubſiſted amongſt the Marattas, and many deſperate battles were fought between Ragonaut Row and Sicearam Pundit and Nana Purnaveſe, the Miniſters of Sewal Madha Row the ſon of Narrain Row Pundit Purdhaun. At length Ragonaut Row took refuge with my friends, and the peace concluded between the ſaid Miniſters and my friends at Poonah through the medium of Colonel Upton's embaſſy, it is well known did not continue, on which ſubject it is unneceſſary to enlarge; my whole wiſhes have been lately turned to the promotion of the credit and advantage of my friends by adjuſting of this buſineſs. As it has already taken up a long time, and it appears evident that if it is not heartily proſecuted, it may ſtill be ſpun out to a very diſtant period, and the news of war having broke out in Europe with our enemies being ſpread abroad, many of the Chiefs of Hindoſtan who look with a jealous eye on the ſucceſs and power of the Engliſh, wiſh to keep up a conſtant war in this country, with a view, ſhould our enemies ſend a force into this country, to join them with their whole powers; it is therefore adviſable that my friends employ their warm endeavours, without delay in conjunction with the Poonah Miniſters, that is to ſay, Siccaram Pundit, &c. to eſtabliſh Ragonaut Row in the Chiefſhip of the Marattas, preſerving the rights of ſovereignty to the ſon of Naran Row Pundit Punhan, which will redound to the Company's honour; and that they ſhould endeavour to effect this by policy without employing force. As I have received a private hint on this ſubject from Siccaram Pundit, wiſhing, through me, to form a ſtrict friendſhip with my friends, I have thought it worthy of my friendſhip to give you information thereof; and I have no doubt that the gentlemen of Bengal and here, and the Governor and Council of Bombay, who are all united in the view of promoting the intereſt of the Company's affairs, and the tranquillity of the country, in which I heartily join with them, will judge it proper to repoſe ſo much confidence in me, as to conduct this matter through me. I can with their knowledge, and in conjunction with them, give the moſt happy iſſue to this buſineſs, and thus leave my friends at liberty to employ their whole attention againſt any enemy who may ariſe; and ſhould it be neceſſary, they may have the aſſiſtance of the whole Maratta force under Ragonaut Row; and it will be abſolutely neceſſary to the other Powers of Hindoſtan, to keep on friendly terms with them; and ſhould they have conceived any deſigns of a contrary nature, they will relinquiſh them. My ardor in this buſineſs is excited ſolely by motives of friendſhip, and a view to the intereſt of the Company and Engliſh nation, and the ſecurity of the country; any plan which my friends may adopt, by which the ſecurity and rights of the Carnatic are preſerved, is equally for their benefit.

I requeſt that you and the Council will do me the favour to keep this matter ſecret, as till it takes effect it ought not to become public.

N° 5.

Copy of a Letter from his Highneſs, addreſſed to Governor Rumbold, dated the 14th February 1779.

As you are conſtantly deſirous that I ſhould communicate to you any intelligence which I may receive from any of the Powers in Hind and Decan, I am induced thereby to encloſe you a tranſlation of a paper of intelligence which I have juſt received from Poonah, and copy of a newſpaper from Hyderabad. Although I cannot communicate ſuch news without feeling the moſt ſenſible affliction, yet I have thought it proper to inform my friends of it, that they may be upon their guard. I formerly received a hint from a perſon at Poonah, reſpecting the adjuſtment of this buſineſs, which I inſtantly communicated to my friends, in a letter bearing date the 3d December 1778. Had my friends at that time left the management of the buſineſs to me, I hoped to have concluded it to the honour of the Company and Engliſh nation, whoſe unalterable friend I am.

N° 1[illegible]7.

Mr. Francis.—As we know not what bad effects the news of this event may produce in the upper country, or what influence it may have upon the minds and diſpoſition of Nudjiff Cawn, of the Seiks, of the King, and any other country Powers that border on the Nabob of Oude's dominions, or on our own provinces, I think that immediate immediate orders ſhould be ſent to General Stibbert to put him on his guard, and to hold the troops ſtationed in Rohilcund and in Oude in readineſs to march; that he ſhould order all abſent officers to repair immediately to their poſts (the ſame to be iſſued in general orders here) and take ſuch other meaſures as he ſhall think neceſſary for covering that frontier againſt an invaſion. The Seiks have already made irruption in different parts of the Nabob's territories; and Mr. Middleton, in his letter of the 16th December laſt, acquaints us, that the Maratta army has joined Nudjiff Cawn's camp, and that they have entered into a treaty of alliance offenſive and defenſive with him: I think it very probable that they may avail themſelves of this opportunity to endeavour to diſtreſs us; at all events, we ought to conſider it a poſſible caſe, and be prepared againſt it.

Mr. Wheler—I think it highly proper that this, and every other neceſſary precaution ſhould be taken without delay. I aſſent to the motion.

Mr. Barwell—From the general tenor of the propoſition, I expected it to contain ſome extraordinary cautionary meaſure; but I do not find upon examination of it, that any particular ſecurity is propoſed, than ſuch as the exiſting orders of the Government provide for. The propoſition points out the Nabob Nudjiff Cawn, as a particular object of our jealouſy, and Mr. Middleton's letter, is quoted in ſupport of this ſuggeſtion. Mr. Middleton's letter I conceive, intimates the direct contrary; for he ſays, "though I am aſſured of ſuch things, I think matters are nearly as diſtant from any permanent adjuſtment as ever." To found any orders we may think it neceſſary to iſſue in the preſent criſis of affairs, on ſuppoſition or ſurmiſe of diſaffection in the neighbouring Princes, can neither be juſtified by the conjuncture, nor is conſiſtent with policy. It is a treatment that muſt diſguſt them, and any movements of our army upon ſuch reaſons muſt alarm their Government and compel them to arm in their own defence. By Mr. Middleton's letter, it clearly appears that the Maratta leaders were negociating with the Nabob Nudjiff Cawn on their own account. The invaſion of the Seiks which is alluded to, appears evidently to have been the operations of a predatory band, as little authorized by any Government as thoſe of the different bodies of Faqueers this Government has ſeen at various times committing little pillages in the very heart of Bengal, and which, from the extent and conſtitution of the Hindoſtan Governments, every one of its Governments is ſubjected to. I think with Mr. Francis, and the Governor General's minute warrants the ſentiment, that we ought to appear ſenſible of what is due both to the honour of our own Government, and what is wanting to vindicate the dignity of it.

The Governor General appears to wiſh, that whatever meaſures are determined, they ſhould not be partial, but include the whole political ſcene. In this he is certainly right; but as I can ſee no objection to decided cautionary meaſures, I think in prudence the armies on the weſtern frontiers ſhould be immediately drawn out in the field, and held in readineſs to march on the firſt orders from this Government; and that to preclude the effects of falſe alarms, it ſhould be publicly and poſitively declared that theſe extraordinary camps are not formed to act againſt any of the Powers in the neighbourhood, but are aſſembled for an emergency that may call them into the field, to give weight to the different negociations or diſputes in which we are, or may be engaged with the Marattas, and to protect our alliances.

The Governor General—I confeſs I wiſh the motion had not been made; becauſe I think it both unneceſſary and unreaſonable; and that a general plan of action or of defence ſhould be conſtituted, which we are not yet warranted, by any materials before us, to form. We are yet in the dark with reſpect to every circumſtance which ought to influence our future meaſures, nor have yet an object, except a general defence againſt poſſible, but unknown dangers. I hope that Colonel Goddard's next advices will afford us all the lights that we can want with reſpect to the preſent motion; it is almoſt in terms the ſame with the inſtructions delivered to General Stibbert on the 2d September; theſe were expreſsly given to him for the purpoſe of guarding againſt the probable effects which might be produced by a ſuppoſed event exactly ſimilar to that which has actually befallen us; namely, the diverſion of our arms by a powerful foreign enemy. Theſe inſtructions are ſhort, I therefore deſire that they may be copied in this place, as they will ſhew better than any argument, in how little need General Stibbert ſtands of preſent inſtruction. Nevertheleſs, as it has been propoſed, and as I wiſh upon this occaſion eſpecially to accommodate my own ſentiments, ſo far as I may do it conſiſtent with the indiſpenſable line of my public duty, with thoſe of every member of this Board, I ſhall acquieſce both in the motion made by Mr. Francis, and in the additional propoſitions contained in Mr. Barwell's minute.

Appendix. No. 177.

I cannot quit this ſubject, though I ſhall moſt reluctantly bear a part in any thing which looks like a point of controverſy, without a ſhort obſervation on the ſuggeſtion of Nudjiff Cawn's connection with the Maratta Government. It certainly will be underſtood by thoſe who ſhall read Mr. Francis's minute, unaccompanied by other documents, that Nudjiff Cawn had entered into a treaty of alliance offenſive and defenſive with the Maratta nation: the fact is, that the treaty of alliance to which Mr. Middleton's letter of the 10th December alludes, meant no more than the conditions on which two independent and predatory Chiefs of that nation were treating to engage in the ſervice of Nudjiff Cawn. This plainly appears by a former letter of Mr. Middleton, dated the 1ſt December, when theſe two Chiefs compoſed their differences, which was effected by a pecuniary compromiſe; the Maratta leaders opened negociations on their own account with Nudjiff Cawn, the declared object of which was to obtain an eligible eſtabliſhment in his ſervice, &c. I deſire to be underſtood, I mean not to hold forth Nudjiff Cawn as the friend of this Government. I conſider all the Powers around us as our friends or enemies merely as their intereſt impel them; and I approve the principle of Mr. Francis's recommendation, though I differ in the application of it.

Mr. Francis—The orders I propoſed are purely cautionary and defenſive; they are ſuch as every Government gives on ſimilar occaſions, and in no way tend to preclude or obſtruct our future adoption of any others. Why they ſhould give offence to Nudjiff Cawn; why he ſhould be acquainted with our reaſons for giving them; why he ſhould be diſguſted with thoſe reaſons, if he knew them; or why he ſhould pay the ſmalleſt regard to the ſuppoſed effect which meaſures neceſſary for our own ſecurity, and not tending to the offence of any other Powers, may produce in his mind, form a queſtion too confuſed and perplexed for my underſtanding to decide. I confeſs it appears wholly unaccountable to me, that objections of this nature, which clearly ſuppoſe my propoſition unneceſſary, ſhould be followed by an amendment that carries it much farther than I do. I do not agree to the amendment, becauſe I am ignorant whether the preſent diſpoſition of the two brigades can with ſafety be ſo far altered, as it would be by aſſembling them, in two camps, and becauſe we do not yet know enough of Colonel Goddard's ſituation to determine what particular meaſures may be neceſſary to favour his retreat. The immediate calling in of the detachment of the two brigades, is a meaſure that ought to be decided on here, without General Stibbert's opinion, and without our being thoroughly apprized of the conſequences it may be likely to produce with reſpect to the general defence of the weſtern frontier. With reſpect to the connections formed between Nudjiff Cawn and ſome of the Maratta Chiefs, I think it not unlikely that they might have remained dormant, or at leaſt that they would have produced no effect, in which the intereſt reſt of this Government would have been concerned, but the diſaſter we have ſuffered at Poonah makes a material alteration in every queſtion that relates to the future conduct of the country Powers; it may revive a dormant treaty, or it may give birth to new alliances againſt us. Even when General Stibbert was ſent to take the command in the field, the caſe of an invaſion of the Nabob's country was expreſsly ſuppoſed and ſtated; if it was a probable event at that time how much more ſo is it now? As I really do not wiſh to enter into debate at this time, much leſs into any thing that may have the air of altercation, I ſhall only offer one obſervation on a paſſage in the Governor General's minute: that is, that I do not remember at what time an event exactly ſimilar to that which has befallen us, was ever ſuppoſed poſſible by the Governor General, or by Mr. Barwell. The impoſſibility of any vigorous reſiſtance on the part of the Marattas, and the certainty of ſucceſs in every attempt on our ſide, have conſtantly been held out as propoſitions not to be diſputed.

Governor General—We are led into a boundleſs field of argument, which the occaſion neither requires nor warrants; the event to which I alluded was a diverſion made by a French invaſion, at that time expected, and, as I recollect, the profeſſed motive of our orders given, as above quoted, to General Stibbert. I hope it is unneceſſary to make a further reply to Mr. Francis's minute.

Reſolved in the terms of Mr. Francis's motion, with the amendment propoſed by Mr. Barwell

The following letter is accordingly written to General Stibbert.

Sir,

We have received intelligence which we deem authentic, that the detachment from Bombay, under the command of Colonel Egerton, has been defeated, and compelled to capitulate, by the Marattas: not knowing the effect that the news of this event may produce, or what influence it may have upon the minds and diſpoſitions of the country Powers bordering on the weſtern frontier, or on our own provinces, we deem it neceſſary that you immediately form two camps of the armies under your command, and that you hold them in readineſs to march on the ſhorteſt notice: and to preclude the effect of falſe alarms, the Governor General will adviſe the Vizier that theſe extraordinary camps are not formed to act againſt any of the Powers in the neighbourhood of his dominions; and we deſire that you will publicly and poſitively declare the ſame to the Vackeels of any of the country Powers that may be in your camp.

We alſo deſire that you will immediately iſſue orders for all abſent officers to repair forthwith to their ſtations.

We are, &c.

APPENDIX, No. 178.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, 1ſt March 1779.

PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident;

Richard Barwell,
Philip Francis, } Eſquires.
Edward Wheler,

READ again the paper of intelligence received from the Nabob of Arcot, and recorded on the conſultation of the 25th ultimo, containing an account of the ſurrender of the Bombay army.

Read alſo the letter from the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, dated 13th January, and recorded in the laſt day's proceedings.

APPENDIX, Nos. 179 and 180.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, 1ſt March 1779.

READ the following letters from Colonel Goddard, under date the 17th, 20th, 24th, and 26th January.

Gentlemen,

I had the honour to write you the 5th inſtant, informing you of my intention to move forwards towards Poonah, as ſoon as the ſupply of treaſure expected from Naigpore might reach camp. I accordingly left Hoſſeingabad yeſterday, and am this day encamped at Suiny, a place ſituated between the countries of the Bhopal Nawab, and the Rajah of Berar, both of whom are in receipt of its revenue. This is two days march diſtant from Hurdah, a pretty conſiderable town, belonging to the Peiſhwa, and which is laid down in Mr. Smith's ſurvey upon the road to Burrampore.

By the laſt advices from the Bombay army, they have taken poſt on the top of Bhore Gaut, where they are waiting for ſupplies of ſtores, and upon their arrival I underſtand they intend advancing towards Poonah, which is at the diſtance of fifty miles. The forces of the Miniſters are collected betwixt them and the city, but I do not find that any of the Chiefs in that party have yet declared themſelves in favour of Ragonaut Row; nor according to the beſt intelligence that I can obtain, is there at preſent any proſpect of their doing ſo. It is impoſſible to ſay what effect the vigorous motion and approach of this detachment may have upon their minds; but I have already explained to you the reaſons which have influenced me to move forward, and I flatter myſelf my conduct in this reſpect will meet with your approbation. In the mean time, I ſhall impatiently look for particular anſwers from your Board, to the accounts I have tranſmitted, of the ſituation of affairs here, and by the inſtructions they contain I ſhall be implicitly guided.

I think it neceſſary to repeat my certain belief of the friendly ſentiments of the Berar Chief towards our Government, which his conduct has evinced in every reſpect, except that of taking an active part with our arms; he promiſes to give every aſſiſtance in his power for furniſhing proviſions as we advance, and for that purpoſe a principal perſon belonging to him is to remain upon the confines of this country, and collect and forward the ſupplies of grain.

In obedience to your commands, I have directed the accounts of the detachment to be made out, in order that they may be tranſmitted for your inſpection; theſe being completed to the 1ſt of October, I have ſent by the way of Naigpore, as they were too large a packet to truſt by the public Dauks. I expect in a very ſhort time to have them made out to the 1ſt of December, when I ſhall forward them by the ſame route, conceiving it, though more tedious, to be the ſecureſt mode of conveyance.

I beg leave alſo to mention to you, that the three lacks, for which you tranſmitted me bills of exchange on Naigpore, notwithſtanding the expedient I was obliged to adopt, of drawing upon your Honourable Board, have only been ſufficient to clear off the troops to the end of November. A Gomaſtah belonging to Gopaul Doſs, of the name of Neigecor Doſs, has arrived in camp, where he propoſes to reſide, and promiſes to ſupply me with caſh, through the means of the different houſes eſtabliſhed by his maſter in the principal cities of the Decan. It is impoſſible for me at preſent to aſcertain the exact rate of remittance proper to ſettle with him, as it will always be varying with circumſtances: I ſhall however be guided by the precedent you have given me; and am hopeful my conduct in this particular will meet with your approbation. As I have not however the ſmalleſt confidence in this mode of ſupply, on account of the proſpect there is of my progreſs being hoſtile, from the oppoſition of the Peiſhwa's forces, I beg to acquaint you, that I ſhall continue to grant remittances on the provinces for money paid into the treaſury here in the ſame manner as heretofore, till a certain ſupply can be provided through the means of the Gomaſtah.

This I conſider as abſolutely neceſſary, to guard as much as poſſible againſt any immediate exigency of the ſervice; and I muſt further entreat you to continue to afford me your aſſiſtance, which I conſider as the only certain reſource to which I can look for a ſupply of caſh at this period.

I have the honour, &c. &c.
(Signed) Tho^s Goddard.

Gentlemen,

It is with particular concern I have to communicate to you the death of Lieutenant-colonel Fortnam, this morning; a long and tedious illneſs had reduced him to the weakeſt and moſt helpleſs condition, and that event had become almoſt certain for theſe laſt ten days.

I beg to acquaint you with my expectation to arrive at Burhanpore in five days, it being little more than 25 coſs from my preſent encampment. I ſhall do myſelf the honour of addreſſing you again from that place, and ſhall fully communicate every material occurrence, as well as any intelligence I may be able to obtain of the operations at Bhore Ghaut, from which place I have received no accounts ſince I laſt wrote you.

Camp, at Chumpore, 24th January 1779. I have the honour, &c. Tho^s Goddard.

Gentlemen,

I have the pleaſure to encloſe for your peruſal, copy of a letter received this day from the gentlemen appointed by the Select Committee of Bombay, to conduct Ragoba to Poonah, and ſettle the affairs of that Government. I was in hopes of being able as ſoon as letters might arrive from that quarter, to communicate to you ſomething of importance relative to the Bombay forces, and the progreſs they had made in proſecution of their enterprize; but you will perceive by the contents of this letter, that ſo far from entering into any particular detail of their ſituation, or the plan they mean to purſue, they merely leave it a matter of doubt, whether they have not found it neceſſary to lay it aſide altogether. The change which they obſerve has taken place within the laſt two days in their affairs, and which they ſay has rendered the directions formerly ſent to me for my march to Ziner, in the neighbourhood of Poonah, now unneceſſary, would almoſt lead one to believe that they had themſelves removed every obſtacle to ſucceſs, did not the apprehenſions they afterwards expreſs, of the difficulties to which I might be expoſed in marching to Surat or Broach, prove the forces of the miniſterial party to be, in their eſtimation, ſtill very ſtrong and powerful.

I cannot help remarking upon the difference of ſtyle throughout this letter of Meſſrs. Carnac and Egerton, to what had been before uſed by the Select Committee, who were always moſt urgent for my proceeding to Ziner with all expedition, as you would perceive by the copies of their letters, tranſmitted you the 5th inſtant.

Upon the whole, I am of opinion that a proſpect of being able to effect the revolution in favour of Ragoba themſelves, is their motive for expreſſing ſo little anxiety about the arrival of the detachment. With reſpect to the bodies of horſe who are to infeſt and interrupt my march to Surat or Broach, they are ſo little explicit in the deſcription of them, that I am left altogether in the dark as to their number, or the names of the Chiefs to whom they may belong.

I am ſorry that it is not in my power to give you a more clear account of the ſtate of the Company's affairs near Poonah than the above, which muſt appear founded upon conjecture rather than a knowledge of real facts, for it is plain the encloſed letter gives no poſitive information whatever; and the teſtimony of uncertain report, which ſays, that many of the Chiefs have gone over to Ragoba's party, does not ſeem to deſerve any credit; beſides that it is contradicted by the ſentiments expreſſed by Meſſrs. Carnac and Egerton, in their advices to me.

I am now within four days march of Burhanpore, and on or before my arrival at that place, I make no doubt of receiving letters from the Select Committee at Bombay, which will, I ſhould ſuppoſe, fully explain their preſent views and ſituation. I ſhall then be enabled to determine preciſely my own future operations, which I will not fail to communicate to you inſtantly. Appendix. No. 180.

In my letter of the 5th inſtant, I declared to you my motive for advancing from the confines of Berar towards Poonah was in obedience to what I conceived to be the ſpirit of your orders, and as eſſential to the intereſts of the Engliſh Company. Let me again aſſure you, that my future conduct ſhall be directed ſolely by an attention to theſe objects.

I have already informed you of my neceſſitous ſituation reſpecting treaſure for the ſubſiſtence of the troops; the diſtant hope I entertained of receiving a ſupply at Burhanpore, is now totally vaniſhed, as I learn all the principal merchants have deſerted that place, not ſo much from the fear of being treated with violence by the Engliſh army, as on account of orders ſent them by Scindia, to whom the city belongs, prohibiting them from furniſhing any ſupplies of money to us.

This conſideration, and the impoſſibility there appears of obviating the diſtreſs, which the low ſtate of the treaſury threatens, by any reſource to be found in this quarter, will in all probability compel me to haſten my march towards Surat; but on this point I cannot at preſent determine, as it muſt depend ſo much upon circumſtances, and theſe I cannot perfectly know till my arrival at Burhanpore, when you ſhall hear from me again in the fulleſt and moſt particular manner.

I have the honour to be, &c.

No. 180.

The Governor General—I move, that an immediate remittance by bill of ſix lacks of rupees be ſent to Colonel Goddard; I have had an indirect offer made to me this morning of bills nearly to that amount, from the joint agents of three capital Shroffs, on the terms on which the former bills were granted: I have not ſeen the agents myſelf, but if the Board approve the motion, I will direct them to make their application to the Secretary, the regular channel of ſuch negociations.

Mr. Wheler—I agree to the neceſſity of this ſupply; but am of opinion, that the Shroffs ſhould either lay before this Board, or at leaſt before the Governor General, the means by which they conſider themſelves able to fulfil their engagements with us; to me it appears very uncertain whether they will be able to do it.

Mr. Francis—I acquieſce in the neceſſity of ſupplying Colonel Goddard, but I can form no idea of the means by which the remittance is to be effected. If the Shroffs undertake to remit money to Colonel Goddard, without knowing where he is; and if it be conſidered, that it is at this moment a matter of doubt to ourſelves, whether he be actually at Surat or in the territory of Scindia, or in Berar; I think it will appear that we have no ſort of ſecurity for their being able to fulfil their engagements; at the ſame time the ſum with which they are to be truſted, forms a very conſiderable object. I therefore agree with Mr. Wheler, in thinking that the Shroffs ought to be called upon, to inform us what meaſures they intended to purſue; and that we ſhould furniſh them with whatever lights we can concerning Colonel Goddard's probable ſituation.

Mr. Barwell—I agree to make the propoſed remittance in the terms of the Governor's motion.

Governor General—I am afraid that the conſent given to the remittance with ſo many uncuſtomary reſervations, may have the effect of a refuſal, as it is impoſſible for the Shroffs to produce the evidence required of them, neither do I imagine that they would injure their credit by the attempt to produce it. The concern which I feel for the safety and success of Colonel Goddard's detachment, induced me to make the inquiries, which have produced the offers communicated by me to the Board; I am no better acquainted with the means which the Shroffs possess of discharging the bills, than any other member of the Board, nor better acquainted with their persons or characters, one only excepted. I was desired to conceal their names from the public, because I was told it might expose them to hazardous consequences. I therefore give them with the same caution to the Board, they are Moolchund Doobee, Cassmeery Mull, and Munnoo Loll; if the Secretary can obtain either better terms, or equal, from more creditable persons, I shall agree to them, or shall be as ready to acquiesce in any surer means of supply that shall be recommended by either Mr. Wheler or Mr. Francis. It may be necessary to add one observation on the cautionary terms which have been required, that before the bills can be delivered we must receive decided advices from Colonel Goddard respecting the direction of his march, after the receipt of the news of the defeat of the Bombay army, and these will of course determine the choice of the place appointed for payment of the bills. That bills should be sent, or other adequate means of pecuniary supply provided, I suppose to be a conclusion in which we are all agreed. I shall further add, that the names of some capital cities were mentioned to me where the payment should be made, if I recollect, they were Nagpore, Burkunpore, Arungabad, and Surat; but this is immaterial: the names, I suppose, will be inserted in the bills, unless they shall agree to pay them in Colonel Goddard's camp, wherever it may be.

Mr. Wheler—I have no connection either with the Shroffs or merchants of India, nor would I, if I had, venture to recommend any one or more to this Board upon the present important occasion, who had not previously convinced me, that he was in the habit and course of correspondence with others, who had the certain means of paying bills suddenly drawn upon them to the amount of six lacks of rupees. A precaution of this sort cannot be the means of divulging secrets; 'tis made use of in all parts of the world by private individuals, and becomes more necessary, when the interest of the public is so materially connected with it.

Resolved, That a remittance of six lacks of rupees be made to Colonel Goddard's detachment, and that the Secretary do obtain bills on the most advantageous terms.

The Governor General—In our present state of uncertainty, respecting the state of the army of the Presidency of Bombay, and the designs which the Marattas may form, or other Powers encouraged by the supposed decline of our influence in consequence of its defeat, I should deem it very unwise and precipitate to propose any general or decided plan of operations; but I think it incumbent on us, to use the most early means for guarding our possessions and connections in those parts, which lie the most exposed to attack. The President and Select Committee of Fort Saint George have suggested to us one scheme of defence, which will be a proper subject of consideration, when we are furnished with more recent advices, both from them and from Colonel Goddard. With respect to the countries, the defence of which more immediately depends on our Government, we are in no danger of an invasion except in the Dauab, and the more eastern parts of the Vizier's dominions. I have always held it the best policy to meet the attempts of our enemies when we have just and reasonable grounds to expect them. On this principle, I think it proper now to submit to the consideration of the Board the expediency of ordering General Stibbert to cause the first brigade to cross the Jumna, and to encamp in the most convenient station in the neighbourhood of Allahabad, and of the high road leading from thence to Berar, and to the southern parts of Hindostan. This, if the Board shall agree to it, will be sufficient for an immediate order. I propose this measure as the most likely to prevent any designs being formed against us, and the most ready for repelling any which may be made.

Mr. Francis—I will not venture at this late hour to give an immediate opinion on a proposition of such magnitude and importance, particularly under the first impressions which it has made upon my mind, and which I fear I should not be able to command; I therefore move that it shall lie for consideration, and that the Board be summoned to meet to-morrow at 11 o'clock, or at a later day, to resolve upon it.

The Governor General—There is no pressing business in the revenue department. I have no objection to meet again in this at the usual hour to-morrow morning; in the mean time, as Mr. Francis has expressed his objections to the question proposed by me to the Board in terms so very pointed, I yield to his desire of availing himself of further time to consider the question; I hope he will also allow me the same opportunity of considering his objections, possibly they may have the same weight with me as they have with him, if they are delivered with temper, and not abruptly intruded on the instant at which our determinations are to be formed. The question which I have proposed is a subject for consideration, not a decided opinion offered for the confirmation of the Board.

Mr. Francis—I have never pressed the Governor General, nor any member of the Board, to give a hasty opinion on any proposition of mine; and certainly should not attempt it on an occasion which requires more than common deliberation.

The Governor General—I do not wish to press the subject; I have only requested the same measure to be dealt to me that I deal to others. Upon this particular occasion I wish, if possible, that our resolutions, on the event of which the fate of India may possibly depend, may be formed with that cool deliberation which they demand; and therefore that I may know the grounds of the objections which may be made to the measure now proposed, that I may come fully instructed and prepared either to support, to correct, or to join in the rejecting it; I should not at any other time or occasion be so urgent as I may now appear, but I persuade myself, that whoever reads Mr. Francis's short minute immediately following my proposal, will hold me justified in my apprehensions respecting the spirit with which it is likely to be debated.

Agreed, That the Governor General's proposition lie for consideration, and that the Board be summoned to meet in this department to-morrow morning.

Richard Barwell,

APPENDIX, No. 181.

Extract of Bengal Secret Consultations.
2d March 1779.

THE Governor General delivers in the following minute:

The Governor General—My design is to propose the most effectual measures of defence, and of defence only.

I think that the most certain means of preventing an attack, will be to shew ourselves not only ready to repel but to meet it. The prevalence of opinion is ever a strong spring of action, and in this part of the world it is perhaps the strongest. The unexampled check which the English arms have sustained on the other side of India will not fail to create and circulate the belief that our power is declining; and every State which has any thing to hope by taking the advantage of our supposed weakness, or to fear from the resentment of our capital enemy, will be ready to rise in arms against us, unless by some vigorous exertion and confident display of our strength, we shew ourselves superior to the partial misfortune which has befallen us.

The

The neighbourhood of Illahabad I prefer for the ſtation of the brigade, becauſe of the conveniency which it affords of depoſiting the ſtores of the brigade as they may be occaſionally wanted: it will give vigour and weight to the operations of Colonel Goddard, if he ſhall return to Berar and proſecute his original inſtructions; and in the ſuppoſition of his retreat to our own provinces it will be a ready ſupport to him.

In the event of any deſign which may be formed againſt the immediate dependencies of this Government, it may be regarded as certain, that the countries bordering on the Jumna will be the firſt affected by it: theſe therefore require our firſt and earlieſt attention.

To carry into execution the queſtion which I have propoſed in its full extent, will employ ſome time; circumſtances may occur in the interim which may require a variation of the firſt intention. The firſt movements neceſſary for the brigade may be the ſame, whether it be ultimately reſolved to croſs the Jumna, or to wait within it: and as we may hope to be ſpeedily aided by the preſence of Sir Eyre Coote, I ſhall be better pleaſed to wait his arrival, than to propoſe any decided operations, for which there is not any very urgent call.

For theſe reaſons I beg leave to change the terms of my firſt propoſition, and recommend, that in addition to the orders already given to General Stibbert, he be directed to march the brigade towards the banks of the Jumna, and to chuſe ſuch a ſituation for encamping as he ſhall judge moſt convenient for defending the Duab againſt an invaſion; and at the ſame time to examine which part of that river will admit of his croſſing the brigade, if it ſhall hereafter be found neceſſary, with the greateſt facility. (Signed) Warren Haſtings.

Reſolved, in the terms of the Governor General's minute.

The following letter is accordingly written to General Stibbert.

Sir,

In addition to the inſtructions which we tranſmitted to you on the 25th ultimo, we think it neceſſary to direct, that you order the firſt brigade to march towards the banks of the Jumna, where you will chuſe ſuch a ſituation for encamping it as you may deem the moſt convenient for defending the Duab againſt an invaſion; and at the ſame time you will aſcertain which part of that river will admit of your croſſing the brigade with the greateſt facility, if it ſhall hereafter be found neceſſary.

Fort William, We are, &c. &c.
the 2d March, 1779.

Meſſrs. Francis and Wheler having ſent in the following minute, in reply to the Governor General's motion of yeſterday, it is now recorded.

Mr. Francis and Mr. Wheler—Having attentively conſidered the propoſition made yeſterday by the Governor General, we muſt refuſe our aſſent to it for the following reaſons, which we think it ſufficient to ſelect out of many that occur to us.

1ſt. Becauſe the meaſure itſelf ſtands in manifeſt contradiction to the Company's fundamental maxims, and would be a freſh inſtance of direct diſobedience to their poſitive commands on this ſubject.

2dly. Becauſe the ill ſucceſs which has attended the movement of Colonel Goddard's detachment, on a plan of the ſame nature; and the alarming ſituation to which, we have reaſon to think, he is now reduced; would leave us without a juſtification or excuſe, if we hazarded another portion of the force eſtabliſhed for the defence of our own poſſeſſions in a ſimilar attempt.

3dly. Becauſe no particular object or affirmative reaſons being aſſigned, in ſupport of a meaſure apparently ſo hazardous, we have no ſpecific grounds given us to warrant our aſſent to it.

4thly. Becauſe, whereas it is ſaid generally by the Governor, "That he has always held it the beſt policy "to meet the attempts of our enemies when we have juſt "and reaſonable grounds to expect them," we are warranted in oppoſing the principle he now profeſſes, by another drawn from the ſame authority, and, as we think, much better founded: on the 9th of July laſt, when our military ſtrength was yet unimpaired, and the reputation of our arms had ſuffered no diminution, the Governor General delivered it as his opinion, "That "great as the power is which the Britiſh nation has ac- "quired in India, compared with that of its rival, its "general line of action is and muſt be purely defenſive." Appendix No. 181.

5thly. Becauſe admitting that we had juſt and reaſonable grounds to conclude, that deſigns are formed againſt us by the Marattas, (which however we deem to be a ſuppoſition purely gratuitous) ſtill no argument is produced, to prove that this particular meaſure is wiſely calculated to prevent an invaſion, or to ſhew by what ſteps or operations it is likely to produce that effect.

6thly. Becauſe this meaſure appears to be a leading ſtep to the execution of ſome more extenſive plan yet unavowed. It is ſaid that many conſequent operations may be hereafter neceſſary; but of what nature thoſe operations are meant to be; how far they are to be carried; or to what objects they may be directed, is entirely kept out of ſight. As long as this reſerve is continued, we cannot think it ſafe or prudent, particularly after the fatal experience we have had of the diſtreſſing conſequences of a ſimilar reſolution, to commit ourſelves in any one ſtep belonging to a ſeries of meaſures, of which we do not know the real purpoſe or extent.

7thly. Becauſe, when it is declared that we are in a ſtate of uncertainty reſpecting the fate of the army of the Preſidency of Bombay; and when, from theſe ſuppoſed premiſes, it is concluded, that it would be very unwiſe and precipitate, to propoſe any general or decided plan of operations, we are equally at a loſs to reconcile that concluſion with the motion now before us, (and which appears to us to be the moſt decided ſtep that could be taken) and unable to judge for what reaſon it is ſaid that the fate of the Bombay army is uncertain. The Governor General has repeatedly expreſſed his conviction, that there could be no doubt of the truth of the intelligence from Poonah; and this intelligence aſſures us, that the Bombay army was totally defeated, and had ſurrendered at diſcretion.

8thly. Becauſe we are convinced, that if the object of this propoſition be to relieve or aſſiſt Colonel Goddard, or to favour his retreat, it is morally impoſſible that it can operate in any degree to that effect. To ſee the force of this objection, it may be neceſſary to conſult the maps, and to calculate the time which muſt intervene betweeen the criſis of any danger to which Colonel Goddard may be expoſed, and that at which this pretended relief can reach him. At the beginning of February his poſition muſt have been at Brampore, that is near twelve degrees of longitude weſt of Calcutta; if from thence he has made his way to Surat, or retreated into Berar, our aſſiſtance would be unneceſſary, nor in the former caſe could he poſſibly receive it; if not, the fate of his army muſt be underſtood to remain undecided, in the heart of an enemy's country, from the 1ſt of February not only to this time, but to that at which our orders for the movement of another brigade can be carried into execution, and the impreſſion of that meaſure felt at ſuch a diſtance as Brampore.

9thly. Becauſe admitting that ſuch a ſtep might at any other time be adviſable or neceſſary, we deem it to be uſeleſs if not dangerous at this particular ſeaſon, conſidering that the brigade cannot croſs the Jumna in leſs than ſix weeks, ſuppoſing the orders to be diſpatched to-morrow; and that in ſix weeks more the violent heats of April and May will be ſucceeded by the rains. But if the rains ſet in with any degree of violence, the brigade will neither be able to act, nor can they continue in camp camp without great diſtreſs: at the ſame time the river will be ſo much ſwelled, and its rapidity ſo much increaſed, that it may be very difficult, if not impracticable, to re-croſs it in any emergency.

10thly. Becauſe all our intelligence agrees in aſſuring us, that among the engagements by which General Carnac and Colonel Egerton have purchaſed their ſafety; and for the performance of which thoſe gentlemen, with the remainder of their army, muſt be conſidered as hoſtages; it is ſtipulated that Colonel Goddard's detachment ſhall return to Bengal. But if inſtead of our ratifying this ſtipulation the Marattas ſhould find their country threatened with another invaſion, what have we to expect, but that they will treat their priſoners with all the ſeverity which the laws of war and of nations entitle them to exerciſe againſt the hoſtages of a baſe and faithleſs nation, neither to be bound by treaties, nor reconciled by the unexampled lenity and moderation with which they appear to have acted towards an enemy invading their country, without the ſhadow of a provocation; and for the avowed purpoſe of overturning their Government?

11thly. Finally, becauſe by croſſing the Jumna, we relinquiſh the great and natural defence which all our poſſeſſions derive from the intervention of the river, and expoſe a third detachment to the ſame diſaſter which has already befallen the Bombay army, and which we have too much reaſon to fear may have befallen Colonel Goddard: by ſuch unconnected partial efforts the whole force of the Britiſh empire in India may be gradually waſted: and our army, which, if united under a wiſe and ſteady direction, we believe to be equal to every purpoſe of defence, ſucceſſively beaten, and ruined in detail.

For theſe reaſons, as well as for ſome others, which we do not think fit to declare, we object to the propoſition, and moſt ſolemnly proteſt againſt it.

(Signed) P. Francis,
Edwd Wheler.

The Governor General—It would lead to endleſs debate, and occaſion a waſte of time, which I ſhould deem inexcuſable in myſelf were I to reply to every part of this minute; and every part equally merits a reply. My opinions are ſo applied, that in the obvious ſenſe of them, as they ſtand in the conſtruction, I cannot avow them, and facts aſſerted for which I believe there is no voucher.

It is ſufficient that I have changed the terms of the queſtion which I propoſed, and accommodated it to the general ſenſe of the Board; every reaſoning, therefore, which can be now introduced upon it, is obſolete and unneceſſary.

APPENDIX, No. 182.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, 2d March 1779.

MR. Francis delivers in the following minute.

Mr. Francis—I had no doubt that the peruſal of the letters read yeſterday at the Board, would have been followed by ſome propoſition from the Governor General, for orders or conditional inſtructions to Colonel Goddard. His ſilence on the important queſtion which thoſe letters immediately bring before us, leaves it open to me, without irregularity, to offer my own opinion upon it. In juſtice to myſelf however, I muſt previouſly ſubmit one general conſideration to the judgment of my ſuperiors.

If it were poſſible to anſwer every objection to the principle on which military expeditions of this nature are founded, and to reconcile their real or pretended object to the dictates of honour, juſtice, and ſound policy, another difficulty inſeparably belonging to the execution of ſuch enterprizes, ought for ever to deter a wiſe Government from engaging in them; it is that armies carried to ſo great a diſtance from our own territory, are in effect removed from under our command; and that we are deprived even of a timely knowledge of their operations. To ſhew the truth of this obſervation, it need only be applied to our actual ſituation: Colonel Goddard is at ſo great a diſtance from us, that his letters never can enable us to judge truly of the circumſtances he may be in at the time we receive them; much leſs will it permit us to ſend him aſſiſtance if he wants it; or even ſuch orders or inſtructions as we can in any degree be aſſured will properly apply to the poſition in which ſuch orders may find him. Our councils then muſt be directed in a great degree by chance or conjecture, and the motions of our army governed ſolely by the diſcretion of the commanding officer, or by the neceſſities he may be reduced to: ſuch diſcretion too he muſt exerciſe not only in the choice of means, or in the detail of military operations, but in determining the general line of his conduct, and even the choice of his objects. Colonel Goddard's movement towards Poonah; his march to Surat, if he purſues it; or his retreat into Berar, if circumſtances ſhould leave him without any other reſource; are all of them ſteps unauthorized by our orders, and whichever of them is adopted muſt be executed without our knowledge.

If theſe reflections be well founded, it follows, that whatever orders we ſend to Colonel Goddard muſt be conditional, and that a latitude muſt be allowed him to accommodate the execution of them to his actual ſituation: orders given with this reſerve may, in ſome caſes, be abſolutely neceſſary for his guidance, and cannot in any caſe be productive of bad effects: at all events, he ought not to be left any longer unacquainted with the general intentions of the Board.

I move therefore, That if at the time when Colonel Goddard ſhall receive the preſent orders, he ſhall not have arrived at Surat, Broach, or Bombay; or if he ſhall have been obliged to halt at Brampoor, or at any other ſtation in the Maratta dominions; he do immediately retire to Berar, and demand a paſſage from the Rajah through his country towards the coaſt of Orixa; or if he ſhall have been already obliged to retire into Berar, that he continue his march towards the coaſt of Orixa and the Chicacole Circar.

I adopt the meaſure as recommended by the Preſidency of Fort Saint George, as well for the reaſons aſſigned in their letter of the 7th ultimo, as becauſe I deem it the beſt that can be purſued in our preſent circumſtances. I am alſo influenced in my choice of it by the ſentiments of Sir Eyre Coote, with whoſe approbation I conclude it was propoſed, if not immediately recommended by himſelf.

If the motion be carried, the Preſidency of Fort Saint George muſt be adviſed of it, and the Governor General requeſted to write ſuitable letters to Moodajee Booſla, to claim the effects of the frienſhip he has profeſſed for us, and to give our army all the relief and aſſiſtance in his power.

(Signed) P. Francis.

Ordered, That this minute lie for conſideration till Thurſday next.

Warren Haſtings,
Richd Barwell,
P. Francis.

Bengal Secret Conſultations the 4th March 1779;—Preſent, the honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident; Richard Barwell, Philip Francis, Edward Wheler, Eſquires.

The Governor General delivers in the following minute:

Governor General—There cannot, in my opinion, be a greater inſtance of weakneſs and levity, in perſons entruſted with the conduct of great affairs, than to enter into precipitate reſolutions, involving the moſt important conſequences on the firſt rumour of diſaſtrous events. By adopting deciſive meaſures without any certain knowledge of the facts on which they are founded, a partial misfortune may be converted into general ruin.

I contend

I contend that we have not yet received ſuch authentic information as can warrant our taking an active part with ſafety. We are ignorant of the ultimate ſtate of the Bombay detachment; of the exact manner in which their enterprize terminated; of the operations which Colonel Goddard will have purſued in conſequence; or of the real ſituation of the Government of Fort Saint George: I therefore have delayed offering any propoſitions to the Board on the ſuppoſed ſtate of affairs on the other ſide of India, and I muſt ſtill ſuſpend my opinion on the meaſures moſt proper to be purſued until ſuch informations arrive—theſe may be hourly expected.

If Mr. Francis's poſition were true, that diſtant military expeditions were in themſelves irreconcilable to the dictates of honour, juſtice, and ſound policy, Great Britain ought not to be in poſſeſſion of theſe provinces, nor of any other remote territory obtained by conqueſt.

A diſcretionary power to officers commanding diſtant military enterprizes, is both cuſtomary and unavoidable: Government may direct the object, and preſcribe the general means of attaining it, but the dependant operations muſt be left to thoſe with whom the executive part is entruſted; and Mr. Francis's objection, that "armies "ſo far removed from our own territories are in effect "removed from our command, &c." is anſwered by the glorious ſucceſſes which attended the Britiſh arms in the moſt diſtant enterprizes during the courſe of laſt war, where the commanders were much further removed from the controul or aſſiſtance of Government, than Colonel Goddard is from ours.

Had the politics of Great Britain been confined within ſuch narrow limits, as Mr. Francis would preſcribe to thoſe of this Government, her power and opulence muſt have been unknown beyond the ſeas which ſurround her.

I cannot conceive why Mr. Francis perſiſts in aſſerting that Colonel Goddard is unauthorized by our orders to proceed either to Surat, Poonah, or Broach, or to retreat to Berar, as circumſtances may render either prudent or neceſſary; ſince my minutes of the 25th February and 2d March clearly prove, that we have given him ſuch authority.

Having anſwered the preface to Mr. Francis's minute, I now proceed to give my opinion on the queſtion.

However urgent the neceſſity may be for the aid which the Select Committee of Fort Saint George require from us, it does not therefore follow that ſuch aid muſt neceſſarily be afforded by Colonel Goddard's detachment; admitting the neceſſity as ſtated by the gentlemen at Madras, we are the judges of the means by which we can beſt relieve it; and this reduces Mr. Francis to the ſingle reaſon aſſigned by him in ſupport of the requiſition, viz. that it appears conformable to the ſentiments of Sir Eyre Coote, and was probably recommended by him. Such an argument may very well ſuit the purpoſe of eſtabliſhing an influence by party, but ought never to be urged as a motive of public conduct.

The opinion of Sir Eyre Coote would have as great weight with me as with Mr. Francis, where full information of circumſtances might enable him to decide; this cannot be the caſe in the preſent inſtance: with reſpect to our ſituation, and from the knowledge which I have of his character, I will venture to affirm, that he will not expect that the intereſts of Government ſhould be hazarded for a perſonal compliment.

I have two ſtrong objections to the queſtion:

1ſt. It is probable, from the advices juſt received from Colonel Goddard, that he has reſumed his negociations with Moodajee Booſla; and his abrupt recall at ſuch a juncture might not only deprive us of the advantages that we may expect from that alliance, but might juſtly excite the reſentment of Moodajee, and provoke him to oppoſe the march of Colonel Goddard through his country, and thus both deſigns would be rendered abortive.

2d. The propoſed route of the detachment would lie through a conſiderable part of the dominions of Nizam Ally Cawn. It is not to be expected from the known and avowed diſpoſition of that Prince, that he would conſent to their paſſage, nor is this a time to furniſh him with a pretext for open hoſtilities againſt us. Appendix. No. 182.

I might object to the queſtion upon Mr. Francis's own principles; as during the whole line of the route which Colonel Goddard muſt unavoidably purſue from Berar to Rajahmundry (the only place to which he can direct his march to the northern Circars) his communications would be more difficult and precarious, and his diſtance greater from Calcutta than Hoſſengabad, his late ſtation on the banks of the Nerbudda.

(Signed) W. H.

The queſtion is put on Mr. Francis's motion of the 2d inſtant, viz. "If at the time when Colonel Goddard "ſhall receive the preſent orders, he ſhall not have arrived "at Surat, Broach, or Bombay; or if he ſhall have been "obliged to halt at Brampour or at any other ſtation in "the Maratta dominions; he do immediately retire to "Berar, and demand a paſſage from the Rajah through "his country towards the coaſt of Oriza; or if he ſhall "have been already obliged to retire into Berar, that he "continue his march towards the coaſt of Oriza and "the Chicacole Circar."

Mr. Wheler—I agree to the motion.

Mr. Francis—The immediate object of the motion is, if poſſible, to withdraw Colonel Goddard from a ſituation of the greateſt danger; the future deſtination of his army, if he were once in Berar, would always be ſubject to the orders of the Board: without making any further reflections at preſent on the Governor General's minute, I adhere to the motion.

Mr. Barwell—The reaſons with which the Governor General has oppoſed the direction of Colonel Goddard's march towards the northern Circars appear to me unanſwerable, and I concur with him in opinion, that any meaſures at this inſtant that may deprive us of the alliance of the Berar State, or create a miſunderſtanding between that Government and ours, is to be avoided. In objecting to Mr. Francis's motion, I ſhall not enter into the propriety of affording an aid to the Preſidency of Fort Saint George; but I do not think it poſſible that aid can be given by the detachment under Colonel Goddard, unleſs a treaty takes place between the two Governments of Bengal and Berar.

The Governor General—Had the queſtion been propoſed in terms ſimilar to the explanation given of it in Mr. Francis's laſt minute, I ſhould have given a very different opinion upon it; wiſhing equally with Mr. Francis for the return of the detachment to Berar, and equally dreading to hear of its proceeding to the other coaſt; but I ſhould have oppoſed the propoſition of ſending any expreſs orders to Colonel Goddard for this purpoſe, ſimply on the principle that ſuch orders could not reach him till their intended effect were paſſed.

The queſtion is reſolved in the negative.

Mr. Francis—It reſted with the Governor General to have adopted ſo much of the laſt motion as concurred with his wiſhes and opinion; and I ſhould have been well content to have ſeen even the firſt part of my object accompliſhed; I mean the retreat of the detachment from a ſituation of danger into the country of a friend: having this object ſtill much at heart, I will not relinquiſh it, becauſe I cannot obtain all I propoſed; I therefore beg leave to move, in the terms of the firſt part of the laſt motion, viz. "That if at the time when Colonel "Goddard ſhall receive the preſent orders, he ſhall not "have arrived at Surat, Broach, or Bombay; or if he "ſhall have been obliged to halt at Burrampore, or at "any other ſtation in the Maratta dominions; he do "immediately retire to Berar." I am inclined to think with the Governor General, that any orders we ſend now may be too late; but, ſince the contrary is not impoſſible, we ought not to leave Colonel Goddard without orders, which perhaps may be neceſſary to him, and which we are not abſolutely certain will be uſeleſs.

Appendix. No. 182.

The Governor General—I beg leave to ſtop the courſe of the queſtion, by an obſervation which I think may poſſibly induce Mr. Francis to withdraw it: the object of it is already paſſed. Our orders to Colonel Goddard of the 5th, and recorded in conſultation the 8th February, preciſely enjoin what is now required: I will repeat ſo much of them as appertain to the preſent ſubject: "Or in the "event of his death, or if the failure of the plan laid for "reſtoring him to the adminiſtration of the Government "at Poonah, we ſay, in either of the caſes here premiſed, "we authorize you to recur to the negociations which "have been ſuſpended with the Court of Berar, and to "conclude a treaty with that Government, in the man"ner and on the terms already preſcribed by our former "inſtructions." The plan for reſtoring Ragonaut Row to the adminiſtration of the Government at Poonah has failed; Colonel Goddard therefore, from the inſtant he receives certain advice of this concluſion, was under expreſs orders to return to his negociations with Moodajee Booſla, which neceſſarily and unavoidably implied his return to Berar; and from the reluctance with which he quitted the objects of that commiſſion at the call of the Preſidency of Bombay, we may ſafely conclude, that in this inſtance his inclinations, equally with his duty, would prompt him to return: but if the contrary ſhall have happened; if for reaſons which lie beyond the reach of our preſent conjecture, he ſhall have reſolved to proſecute his march, either to Bombay, Surat, or Broach, what will be the effect of the order which it is now propoſed to ſend? the diſtance from Burampore to either of thoſe places would ſcarcely require a month to accompliſh it, but a full month has already elapſed ſince the date of the laſt letter, in which he informs us of his reſolution to make an immediate choice of his future line, and another month at leaſt muſt paſs before he could receive any orders now ſent him, they would be therefore ineffectual for the prevention of ſuch a deſtination of his force; but other conſequences might attend it, ſince, as it is expreſſed, it would require his implicit obedience to it, though he had reached either of thoſe places, and though his return would ſubject him to the repetition of all the dangers which have been ſtated as inſurmountable in his attempt to attain them; again I repeat, why ſhould we form precipitate and decided reſolutions without a clue to guide us, when the delay of a day may furniſh us with all the knowledge on this point, at leaſt that may be neceſſary to guide us in the choice of them?

Mr. Francis—The Board I am perſuaded are in poſſeſſion of every argument that I could urge in ſupport of the motion. If Colonel Goddard ſhall have reached any of the ſettlements of the Malabar coaſt, it is expreſsly provided, that the preſent orders ſhall not operate: if they are preciſely the ſame with any which we have already given him (which however I do not admit) the repetition of them can do no miſchief; whereas in many caſes, they may relieve Colonel Goddard from any doubt about our intentions.

As for the reſt, I ſhall only obſerve, that I did never underſtand that Colonel Goddard quitted the objects of his commiſſion to Moodajee Booſla at the call of the Preſidency of Bombay: I am ſure I can prove from his letters, that he took this reſolution upon the refuſal of Moodajee Booſla to concur in the propoſed plan of alliance; even in one of the letters before us, he ſpeaks of the neceſſity he conceived there was of advancing towards Bombay, in conſequence of the delays that have ariſen in the accompliſhment of the negociation with Moodajee Booſla. I deſire that the queſtion may be put.

The Governor General—Colonel Goddard's reaſons for the reſolution taken by him to march to Poonah, to which this extract is little more than an alluſion, are contained in his letter of the 5th January, in which that reſolution is firſt notified to us; theſe are his words: "Diſappointed "in my views at this Court, I have referred to the "latter part of your inſtructions given to Mr. Elliott "for his guide, and compared them with the purport "of your letter to me of the 23d November laſt, in "which you have thought it neceſſary to revoke the "order before ſent me for obeying all ſuch orders as I "might receive from the Preſident and Council at Bom"bay, left a compliance with them might interrupt any "meaſures I might find it neceſſary to purſue in con"ſequence of my engagements with the Rajah of Berar.

"You have alſo ſignified to me that it is your inten"tion the detachment under my command ſhould act "in ſupport of any meaſures which the Council at Bom"bay may have formed in reliance on it, as far as they "may be conſiſtent with the inſtructions given us, and "the engagements I may have concluded in conſequence "of them.

"By the determination of this Court any difficulties "which an attention to the latter might have occaſion"ed, are entirely removed; and as I conſider it further "conſiſtent with the ſpirit of your inſtructions, I have "thought proper to march towards Poonah immediately.

"I am induced to adopt this ſtep in conſequence of hav"ing received letters from the Select Committee at Bom"bay, informing me that the forces from that Preſidency "had actually taken the field to effect the reſtoration of "Ragoba; that Meſſrs. Carnac, Egerton, and Moſtyn, "were appointed commiſſioners for ſettling the Poonah "Government, and requiring me to advance towards "that place with all expedition, as the preſence of my "detachment is neceſſary to the ſucceſs of their views. "From other authentic intelligence I learn, that hoſti"lities are actually commenced; I am therefore led to "believe, that whatever may be the reſult of your poli"tical reſolves, the arrival of the force under me in the "neighbourhood of Poonah will be for the intereſt of the "ſervice, either to proſecute the war, or to bring it to "an honourable concluſion, at the ſame time that I ſhall "be ready to act, in concert with Moodajee, any plan "that may be deemed neceſſary in conſequence of your "determination." Here he expreſsly declares, that his intended march to Poonah was occaſioned ſolely by the requiſition of the Select Committee at Bombay; and the refuſal of Moodajee Booſla is mentioned only as his juſtification in relinquiſhing the immediate object of his commiſſion to comply with that requiſition. His private letters to me are all tinctured with the ſtrongeſt marks of diſcontent and mortification at being thus defeated in his negociation by the Preſidency of Bombay, to whoſe acts he imputes the failure of it by the ſudden diſinclination ſhewn by Moodajee to accept of the proffered terms of it. This however he had not abſolutely relinquiſhed, but had left it on ſuch a footing that the obſtacle of Ragoba being removed he might reſume it; and Moodajee on his part equally deſirous, in appearance at leaſt, that it might take effect, has ſent back his confidential Vackeel with powers to conclude a treaty immediatly with this Government, and did requeſt Colonel Goddard to wait with the army within his territories until the final reſolves of this Government could be received concerning it. As for the reſt, having ſhewn that in my ſenſe of it, the queſtion was unneceſſary, and that it might be attended with danger, it is unneceſſary to repeat that I cannot agree to it.

Mr. Francis—I do not doubt that Colonel Goddard was immediately determined to move towards Poonah, by the letters he received from Bombay, but it appears plainly, that he did not take that reſolution until after he had received Moodaee Booſla's refuſal to co-operate with him on the terms of the propoſed treaty. Diſappointed in his views at the Court of Berar, he then, and not till then, referred to his inſtructions. This doubt, however, if there be any, may eaſily be reſolved: is it a queſtion with any members of this Board, whether, if Colonel Goddard had not been diſappointed in his views at the Court of Berar, and if he had actually concluded the intended alliance with Moodajee Booſla, he would in that caſe have paid any regard to the requiſition from Bombay to aſſiſt in the reſtoration of Ragoba; or could he have done it, conſiſtently with the treaty he had concluded?

The Governor General—I beg leave to diſcontinue the debate.

Mr. Wheler—Whether Colonel Goddard has or has not already received orders from this Board under preſcribed circumſtances, to return with his army into the province of Berar, is not the preſent queſtion: if he has received ſuch orders, the propriety of Mr. Francis's queſtion is fully eſtabliſhed, for ſurely there can be no harm in repeating them; if he has not, the neceſſity of Mr. Francis's queſtion is evinced, upon ground equally tenable; in either caſe, there does not in my opinion exiſt the ſhadow of an argument againſt the preſent queſtion. I therefore moſt heartily concur in it.

Mr. Barwell—I agree in opinion entirely with the Governor General; and excluſive of the reaſons he has aſſigned for his negative, I ſhould have an objection to the queſtion, as propoſing a meaſure which it only in fact repeats: the meaſure has already been propoſed and carried in the affirmative, in the inſtructions to Colonel Goddard on the 2d of laſt month, againſt the opinions of both Mr. Francis and Mr. Wheler, though by a new form it now appears as an original propoſition, proceeding from the diſſenting members to the firſt queſtion, included in the inſtructions above referred to.

Mr. Francis's ſecond motion reſolved in the negative.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 8th March 1779.

At a Council; preſent, the Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident; Richard Barwell, Philip Francis, and Edward Wheler, Eſquires.

The proceedings of the 4th inſtant, read and approved.

Mr. Francis—I deſire that the Governor General's minute, entered at the beginning of the conſultation of the 4th inſtant, be read.

Read accordingly.

Mr. Francis records the following minute in reply to it.

While a queſtion of ſo much importance to the public ſervice was depending, I would not allow myſelf to engage in a debate, which was not likely to influence the deciſion of the Board, and could only delay it. But ſince I am convinced, that the late political meaſures of this Government, and of the Preſidency of Bombay, will ere long be the ſubject of a parliamentary inquiry; and that every part of our proceedings, which has occaſioned or led to the late diſaſter, will be ſubmitted to the judgment of the public; it highly concerns my reputation, if not my ſafety, that my conduct through the whole of the tranſaction ſhould be fairly repreſented, and in no inſtance miſunderſtood; for this purpoſe only I preſume to trouble the Board with obſervations on the preceding minute.

1ſt. I agree with the Governor General, in his idea of the levity and weakneſs of entering into precipitate reſolutions on the firſt rumour of diſaſtrous events. On this principle, there could be no atonement for the motion introduced on Monday laſt, to ſend another brigade acroſs the Jumna, but the early retraction which followed it. Our ſuperiors will judge whether the doctrine can with the leaſt colour of truth be applied to any acts of mine. The evidence of our conſultations will ſhew, that I have at all times, and in all circumſtances, equally preſſed for the recal of Colonel Goddard's detachment; and that I have more than once been reproached for an unavailing perſeverance in this endeavour. In perſiſting to urge the neceſſity of the meaſure, I am moved, not ſo much by the misfortune which has already befallen us at Poonah, as by an apprehenſion of thoſe which are likely to follow it.

2d. Admitting that we were uninformed of the preciſe ſtate of affairs on the other ſide of India, it would be no argument againſt conditional orders, expreſſing clearly the ſeveral caſes in which they are and are not to operate; the ſame degree of ignorance muſt at all times attend our debates concerning objects at ſo great a diſtance. Two months at leaſt muſt elapſe, before our reſolution on any given ſtate of facts on the other ſide of India can reach the perſons who are to be guided by it; and in the interval a total change of circumſtances may have happened. Is it meant, that no orders ſhall be given, becauſe the nature of the caſe will not permit us to make them poſitive and abſolute? or how can we be aſſured, that any further information we may receive of Colonel Goddard's ſituation a month ago, will enable us to give him inſtructions perfectly adapted to that in which he may find himſelf a month hence? Appendix. No. 182.

3d. I am ſuppoſed to aſſert that diſtant military expeditions are in themſelves irreconcilable to the dictates of honour, juſtice, and ſound policy; and that officers intruſted with the conduct of ſuch enterpriſes ought not to be allowed a diſcretionary power to judge of the means of carrying them into execution. When propoſitions ſo palpably abſurd are imputed to me, the cleareſt proof ſhould accompany the imputation. The meaning of my argument could not have been ſo totally miſtaken, if the terms in which it is expreſſed had been recited. The object before me was a military expedition through an immenſe tract of countries hardly known to us, and avowedly deſtined to conquer nations; from which we have received no injury. From this fact my inference was deduced, that if it were poſſible to anſwer every objection to the principle of expeditions of that nature; and to reconcile their real or pretended object to the dictates of honour, juſtice, and ſound policy, another difficulty inſeparable from the execution of ſuch meaſures, would remain in force, viz. that the diſtance of an army ſo circumſtanced, obliged us to truſt the commanding officer with an abſolute diſcretion, not only in the detail of military operations, but in the choice of his objects. In ſupport of this propoſition it need only be obſerved, that a month ago it depended ſolely on Colonel Goddard's determination, certainly not on any orders of ours, whether he ſhould proceed to Poonah, to Broach, or to Surat, or whether he ſhould return to Berar.

4th. The limits I would preſcribe to the Britiſh empire in India, are wide enough to anſwer every wiſe and profitable purpoſe. The force of our arms ſhould now be employed in ſecuring what we have gained. All our acquiſitions may be loſt while we are endeavouring to extend them. But if maxims of an oppoſite tendency are recommended, as the foundation of a wiſer policy, ſuch maxims cannot be ſupported by the example of Great Britain. The diſtant dependencies of the Britiſh empire took their origin from the ſpirit of commerce and colonization, not from conqueſt; and, though it be true that our fleets have acted with honour in the moſt diſtant quarters of the globe, the ſucceſs of naval enterprizes proves nothing in favour of expeditions by land, into the heart of countries hoſtile or unknown to us. Later events have demonſtrated the inſuperable difficulty of ſuch attempts.

5th. My aſſertion, that if Colonel Goddard has proceeded to Surat, Poonah, or Broach, or retreated to Berar, he has acted without orders, is not anſwered by ſaying, that we ſent him orders on the 8th February; ſince they probably have not reached him at this moment: ſuppoſing theſe orders clear and to the purpoſe; and though it ſhould happen that they coincide with the reſolution he may have taken, ſtill he acts without orders, if he acts before he receives them.

6th. I do not affirm, that the aid to be given to Fort St. George muſt neceſſarily be afforded by Colonel Goddard's detachment, or that we are not judges of the means by which we are to relieve that Preſidency. Yet theſe propoſitions are ſtated as mine, and left, as they ought to be, without a reply; I ſhould indeed deſerve no anſwer, if, when I recommended a meaſure to the choice and judgment of the Board, I could forget myſelf ſo far as to aſſert or intimate that the Board were not the judges of it.

7th. When I adopt the reaſons aſſigned by the Preſidency of Fort St. George, thoſe reaſons become mine; and when I adviſe

Appendix. No. 183.

I adviſe a meaſure, expreſsly becauſe I deem it the beſt that can be purſued in our preſent circumſtances, it is clear, that I am not reduced to the ſingle argument of its appearing conformable to the ſentiments of Sir Eyre Coote. But as on this point I really do not underſtand the Governor General's reaſoning, I muſt leave it unanſwered.

I will not look into the heart of any man for the ſecret motives of his conduct: thoſe which the Governor General is pleaſed to impute to me, are ſufficiently anſwered by a denial. That Sir Eyre Coote has formed his opinion without ſufficient knowledge of our circumſtances, I for my own part do not believe; but I perfectly agree with the Governor General, in thinking "that he will "not expect that the intereſts of Government ſhould "be hazarded for a perſonal compliment."

8th. I ſee no probability for my own part, that Colonel Goddard has reſumed his negociations with Moodajee Booſla; nothing at leaſt appears in his letters of the 27th of January and 2d of February to incline us to think ſo. But let Colonel Goddard's diſpoſition be what it may, there ſeems no likelihood that Moodajee Booſla, who refuſed to unite with us when our force was entire, and the reputation of our arms had ſuffered no diſcredit, ſhould be forward to engage at this ſeaſon, againſt a Government flushed with victory and ſtrengthened by ſucceſs.

9th. I underſtand the dominions of the Rajah of Berar to reach from the Nerbudda to the coaſt of Orixa; it would not be neceſſary therefore for the detachment to march through any part of the Nizam's dominions. But if this be not a time to furniſh that Prince with a pretence to open hoſtilities againſt us, with what conſiſtency can it be propoſed to revert to the intended alliance with Moodajee Booſla, one of the main objects of which is to attack the Nizam, and to conquer a part of his dominions?

10th. In the laſt paragraph of the Governor's minute, I underſtand it to be aſſerted, that ſuppoſing Colonel Goddard to move from Brampore through Berar to the coaſt of Orixa, his communication with us would be more difficult and precarious, and his diſtance from Calcutta greater than if he were not to purſue that route. If this be not the meaning of the propoſition, I have nothing to do with it; if it be, I muſt deny it, as a matter of fact, that any march eaſtward from his preſent poſition will place him at a greater diſtance from Calcutta, or make our communication with him more difficult and precarious.

APPENDIX, N° 183.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 4th March 1779.

At a Council; PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident;

Richard Barwell,
Philip Francis, } Eſquires.
Edward Wheler.

READ the following letters from Colonel Goddard:

To the Honourable Warren Haſtings, Eſquire, Governor General, &c Supreme Council.

Gentlemen,

I have had the honour of your letter of the 28th ultimo, informing me of the two battalions you have thought proper to ſend under Major Camac, to reinforce my detachment, and the orders he has received to act conformably to ſuch inſtructions as I may find it neceſſary to give him. As the route of Major Camac in order to join me, after leaving Ramghur and Chutta Naigpore, muſt lie through the territories of the Berar Rajah, I have wrote a letter to that Prince, informing him of this force having been detached by you, to be employed under me, for the mutual intereſts of both parties; and from the Rajah's favourable and friendly diſpoſition towards the Engliſh, I do not doubt his cheerful concurrence to their paſſage through his dominions, and every neceſſary and proper aſſiſtance on their march.

I have already related to you every tranſaction attending the negociation I was empowered by your Government to enter into with Moodajee Booſla, and the neceſſity I conceived there was, in conſequence of the delays that have ariſen in the accompliſhment of that buſineſs, of advancing towards the Bombay ſettlement; and as I am of opinion in the preſent uncertain ſtate of affairs, that ſhould I find it neceſſary to proceed beyond Burhampore, the effecting a junction of the force under Major Camac with my detachment might be attended with extreme hazard and danger; I have directed him not to advance beyond the weſtern boundaries of the Berar territories, or enter the dominions ſubject to the Peiſhwa or Nizam Ally, till he ſhall receive further inſtructions from me. I beg to encloſe you copy of a letter received from the Select Committee at Bombay, accompanying a copy of the treaty concluded on by them with Ragonaut Row, in the name of the Engliſh Company. The earneſtneſs with which they repeat their anxiety and ſolicitude for the arrival of the troops under me, as a meaſure neceſſary to the Company's affairs, does not ſeem to correſpond altogether with the ſentiments expreſſed by the commiſſioners, in their letter, of which I had yeſterday the honour of tranſmitting you a copy; nor indeed does the purport of the one in any reſpect throw a light upon the irreconcilable doubts a peruſal of the other had occaſioned. You will however perceive that this letter from Bombay bears date the 12th inſtant, and was wrote the ſucceeding day to that from the army of the 11th; of courſe the circumſtance alluded to in the latter could not then have been communicated to the Select Committee: I remain therefore in hourly expectation of full and ſatisfactory accounts from that quarter, which I ſhall no doubt receive before my arrival at Burrampore. I beg to acquaint you that I ſhall moſt certainly reach that city the 31ſt, the narrowneſs and difficulties of the road having occaſioned the delay of a day longer than I expected.

I have the honour, &c.

Camp at Suvill, 27th January 1779. (Signed) *Tho*s Goddard.

To the Honourable Warren Haſtings, Eſquire, Governor General, &c. Supreme Council.

Gentlemen,

I had the honour to addreſs you the 26th and 27th ultimo, encloſing letters for Meſſrs. Carnac, Egerton, and from the Select Committee at Bombay; ſince which I have marched to Burhampore, the capital of Khandeiſh, and am encamped oppoſite the city, upon the banks of the Taplee river. I reached this place on the 30th, one day ſooner than I expected, having found it neceſſary to make a forced march through ſome broken ground and narrow defiles, in order to get ground for encampment.

Since my arrival I have been in conſtant hope of receiving ſome advices from Poonah, to remove the uncertainty I was under, from the ſtyle of thoſe before arrived; but except the encloſed, no letter or authentic intelligence whatever has reached me; and you will perceive, that I can derive no certain information from a peruſal of its contents.

I am ſorry that the letter alluded to of the 16th has miſcarried, becauſe the gentlemen with the army might perhaps in it have condeſcended upon a detail of particulars, which would have diſcovered to me the real ſituation of their affairs: at preſent, when I compare the two letters they have written me, with the flying report that prevails at this place, although I am left in the dark as to the manner in which matters have been ſettled, it is however manifeſt that ſome change has taken place in them; and there is great reaſon to apprehend it has been brought about by circumſtances unfavourable to our arms.

The firſt letter, by the cautious advice it gives againſt the bodies of horſe I may meet with, to interrupt and moleſt my march towards Surat or Broach, proves that if any terms have been made, they are ſuch as were dictated by neceſſity, and a regard to their own particular ſafety, without reference to the object for which the enterprize was firſt undertaken; except perhaps, agreeing to relinquiſh the purſuit of it; and without providing in any ſhape for the probable progreſs of the detachment, I am confirmed in the belief that the gentlemen of Bombay have laid aſide the proſecution of their plan in favour of Ragonaut Row, from the name of the place at which the laſt letter is dated, as I underſtand it is a few coſs on the Bombay ſide of Bhore Ghaut.

The Coffids who brought this, inform me, that Ragonaut Row has remained behind at Jelligong with the miniſterial forces; that the Chiefs, after a long and obſtinate conflict, in which numbers were killed on both ſides, many of them ſubmitted themſelves to him, and promiſed to put him in poſſeſſion of the Regency at Poonah, if he would diſmiſs the Engliſh troops; other accounts again ſay, that Ragoba was taken priſoner by Sindiah and Holkar: in ſhort, ſo various are the reports that prevail, and ſo little are any of them to be depended on, from the partial channels through which I am forced to receive them, that I can fix upon no certain opinion, except that our troops are actually upon their return to Bombay; and that Ragoba's buſineſs is either accompliſhed, or it is become unneceſſary to proſecute it further.

I have halted at this place two days, and am collecting a ſufficient quantity of proviſions, that I may be ready to adopt ſuch meaſures as ſhall be judged moſt expedient upon aſcertaining the exact ſituation of affairs at Poonah, which I expect muſt arrive every hour; for although the gentlemen with the army have, for reaſons which I cannot account for, thought proper to conceal from me a knowledge of circumſtances ſo neceſſary for the intereſt of the Company, and the ſafety of the detachment to be known, I do not doubt but the Select Committee will explain the whole tranſaction clearly and fully to me. In the hope of receiving this ſatisfactory account, I think it prudent to defer coming to an immediate determination; when it arrives, I will addreſs you fully.

I have the honour &c.

Camp, oppoſite Burrampore, the 2d February 1779. (Signed) Thos Goddard.

To Colonel Goddard.

Sir,

We addreſſed you on the 16th a letter containing orders, which upon recollection we do not think ourſelves authorized to give you: you are therefore to pay no regard whatever thereto.

We are, &c.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, dated the 11th March 1779.

Preſent, the Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident; Richard Barwell, Philip Francis, Edward Wheler, Eſquires.

Read the following letter from Colonel Goddard:

To the Honourable Warren Haſtings, Eſquire, Governor General, &c. Supreme Council.

Gentlemen,

I had the honour of writing to you the 2d inſtant, enloſing copy of a letter received from Meſſrs. Carnac and Egerton, ſince which I have looked with anxious expectations for accounts from that quarter, to clear up the uncertainty I had reaſon to be under concerning the event of affairs at Poonah; but it is with a good deal of concern I muſt ſtill repeat to you my ſurprize at their continual ſilence and reſerve; having received no other intelligence from them or the Select Committee at Bombay, except the unſatisfactory information contained in the letters I have had the honour to tranſmit for your peruſal. Appendix. No. 183.

Situated as I now am in the centre of the Maratta dominions, and the ſeaſon faſt approaching in which it would be extremely hazardous to keep the field in an enemy's country, I have thought it neceſſary to come to an immediate determination, and have reſolved to march towards Surat with all expedition. The reaſons which have induced me to take this ſtep, I beg to ſubmit to your conſideration; and I am hopeful they will appear to you founded upon a regard to the intereſts of the Honourable Company, and to the nature of the inſtructions which you have been pleaſed to give me for my guidance and direction.

Although the firſt letter received from the gentlemen with the army could not poſſibly make me acquainted with any particulars that had paſſed, it however gave me reaſon to believe, as I before hinted to you, that the troops of the miniſterial party were powerful in their eſtimation: the laſt letter, of the 19th ultimo, by being dated from Campoly on the Bombay ſide of Bore Ghaut, amounted to a proof that the Bombay forces were returning to their own ſettlements: and the different intelligence I have been able to obtain here, together with the reports made me by my own Hircarrahs from that quarter, all ſeem to confirm the belief, that a ſettlement has been made with the Chiefs of the adverſe party, by no means favourable to our arms; this opinion is further corroborated by a letter I have juſt received from Moodajee Booſla, informing me, that a battle had been fought betwixt the Bombay forces and thoſe of the Miniſters, in which the latter were victorious; and that having ſurrounded the Engliſh, the latter ſent a deputation to the Marattas, propoſing to deliver up Ragonaut Row into their hands, and promiſing to adhere to the terms of the treaty before made with Nanah Furneſe by Colonel Upton.

What I have been enumerating are all the grounds on which I can form any certain conjectures of the ſituation of affairs at Poonah; and as I think the intelligence ſent by Moodajee deſerving of particular credit, I doubt not you will concur with me in opinion, that the Government of Bombay muſt have ſuſtained a conſiderable check; and that the preſence of the force under me may be abſolutely neceſſary to prevent any bad conſequences that might happen to the Company's intereſt on that ſide of India in conſequence of it, ſhould this event be followed by an attack from the French, which you will perceive by the Select Committee's letter, may be the caſe next ſeaſon, and on that account preſs my ſpeedy march, from the inſufficiency of their own force to oppoſe it, I cannot but anticipate a probable ſuggeſtion, that my arrival may not only be the means of reſtoring the affairs of the ſettlement of Bombay, but of ſaving it from utter ruin.

I propoſe marching from this place to-morrow morning on the road to Surat; and as I ſhall uſe all poſſible expedition, I make no doubt of being able to reach it in a month, notwithſtanding the oppoſition I may expect to meet with on the road. I am ſorry however Meſſrs. Carnac and Egerton were not more explicit in their firſt letters to me, as I might by this time have been conſiderably advanced on the road.

With reſpect to the negociation propoſed to be carried on with the Rajah of Berar, nothing can be effected in that buſineſs, till the arrival of anſwers from your Government to the letters ſent by him through me; and even admitting the certainty of their acceding to the alliance, the diſpoſal of the detachment in the mean time becomes a conſideration of importance and difficulty to determine: ſhould I wait anſwers at this city to letters I might write to Moodajee on the ſubject, adviſing with him upon a place to halt at till the expected diſpatches might arrive from Calcutta, a period of one month would in all probability elapſe; and ſhould he after all prove averſe to my remaining in any part of his territories, the hot ſeaſon would be ſo far advanced, and the rains be ſo near at hand, that even my march to Surat, allowing for many other circumſtances which might happen, would be rendered very inconvenient, and perhaps impracticable. I am induced to believe he would object to my continuing within his dominions, becauſe with the account he has written me of the tranſactions at Poonah, he has propoſed my returning to Calcutta by ſuch road as I ſhall find moſt convenient and eligible, without making any reference in favour of his views in concert with your Government.

In this uncertainty reſpecting the intentions of Moodajee; the unfavourable aſpect of affairs at Bombay; the probability of an attack from the French upon that ſettlement next ſeaſon; and the preſſing terms uſed by the Select Committee for my ſpeedy arrival, to guard againſt the evil conſequences of ſuch an event; I beg to repeat to you that I conſider it for the intereſt of the Honourable Company, and entirely conſiſtent with the ſpirit of your inſtructions; that I ſhould purſue my route towards Bombay by the neareſt and moſt practicable road, which is by the way of Surat.

I have wrote to Major Camac in conſequence of Moodajee's propoſal, for this detachment to return to Calcutta; and the interruption the negociation with the court of Naigpore has met with, not to advance beyond the weſtern boundaries of the Company's provinces; but to be guided with reſpect to his remaining there or returning to Bengal, by the inſtructions he either has or may receive from you.

I have the honour, &c.

Camp, oppoſite Burhampore, 5th February 1779. (Signed) Tho^s Goddard.

Poſtſcript.—Since writing the above, a letter from the Select Committee is juſt arrived, copy of which I beg to tranſmit for your peruſal: you will perceive it contains no certain intelligence of what has happened, except confirming my belief of the return of the Bombay forces, and further proving the expediency of my march towards that ſettlement. As ſoon as the particular information they promiſe to give me arrives, I ſhall do myſelf the pleaſure of communicating it to you.

To Colonel Goddard.

Sir,

We have juſt received your letter, dated the 3d inſtant; and concluding this will meet you on your march, we direct that you proceed ſtraight to Surat, inſtead of to Poonah or Ziner, as before directed.

Our army we learn is now on the return to Bombay; but we are not at preſent able to give you any preciſe information as to the reaſons for that meaſure, or the probable conſequences of it. We will however write you fully the moment we are able to do it with certainty.

We are, &c.

APPENDIX, No. 184.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, dated the 15th March 1779.

PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident;

Richard Barwell, Philip Francis, Edward Wheler, } Eſquires.

MR. Francis delivers in the following minute:

Mr. Francis.—Having received no advices from the Preſidency of Bombay of the circumſtance or conſequence of the defeat of their army near Poonah, nor any direct information whatſoever of the actual ſtate of the Company's affairs on the other ſide of India; we are left to judge of both from appearances, and to form our meaſures on ſuch facts as are known to us, and on ſuch probable conjectures as the lights we are poſſeſſed of may ſuggeſt. It appears to me, as well from the profound ſilence which the Preſidency of Bombay have obſerved to us, as from their letter of the 22d of January to Colonel Goddard, that ſuppoſing he ſhould reach Bombay, they have it in their contemplation to break their laſt engagement with the Poonah Government, and to renew the war at all events. They now have nothing to loſe, not even honour; and we know not to what fatal extremities deſpair may impel them. Uniform experience entitles us to form any conjectures whatſoever, however unfavourable to them, with reſpect to their future conduct: the ſame experience, I think, obliges us to ſuppoſe the neceſſity of our guarding againſt the moſt injudicious and dangerous meaſures, that it is poſſible for them to purſue.

In this ſituation the firſt thing in my opinion to be done, is to prevent the Preſidency of Bombay from acting at all; I mean without our ſpecific orders and inſtructions: I therefore move, that a letter be immediately written to the Preſidency of Bombay, to expreſs our concern and ſurprize at the profound ſilence they have obſerved to us, on the late operations and defeat of their army; and to prohibit them, in the moſt preciſe and poſitive terms, and as they will anſwer the contrary at their peril, from commencing or renewing hoſtilities againſt the Marattas, or any other Indian Princes or Powers, except in their own immediate defence, without our conſent and approbation firſt had and obtained.

The Governor General—It has perhaps eſcaped Mr. Francis, that his preſent motion has been anticipated by orders exactly to the ſame amount already paſſed, and ſent in the following clauſe of the 9th article of our inſtructions of the 4th of laſt month; "And they "themſelves (that is, the Preſident and Select Com-"mittee) be forbidden to enter into any new engagements "without a previous application to us, and our ſanction "obtained." If it be true that their deſign in favour of Ragoba hath failed; that they have entered into a new treaty of peace with the Maratta Government; and that they had actually abandoned Ragonaut Row, or ſurrendered his perſon to their common enemy, for which facts we have ſo many concurrent authorities as to leave us with ſcarce the poſſibility of a doubt of their reality; they can neither commence nor renew hoſtilities againſt the Marattas, or againſt any other Indian Prince or Power, except in their own immediate defence, without a poſitive breach of thoſe orders. The whole tenor of our letter ſtrongly expreſſes the reluctance with which we agreed to ſupport them in the proſecution of the meaſure which they had undertaken; ſo that it is impoſſible they can have miſtaken the force of this order, or overlooked it: and if, in defiance of it, and with the moſt ſcandalous breach of their own ſacred engagement ſo recently contracted, they ſhall have commenced a new war with the Marattas, they will have brought themſelves preciſely into that ſituation deſcribed by the act of Parliament, by which they will become liable to be ſuſpended from the Company's ſervice, by the controlling power of this Government. Our letter of the 4th February, containing the order above mentioned, may by this time have been received; and I ſhall deem them accountable for every act done in contradiction to it. But the order now propoſed to be ſent cannot reach them before the month of May, at which time it will be impoſſible for them to begin any military operations, if they ſhould be ſo diſpoſed; and inſtead of preventing further miſchief may ſerve them as a plea to juſtify any acts of hoſtility, which they may have previouſly committed, in breach of our former orders. It appears therefore to me both unneceſſary and improper to ſend them any new orders to the ſame effect: let us wait a few days longer; we yet know no more of the event of this expedition than we did on the 25th of laſt month, when we received the firſt news of it: it is ſcarcely poſſible that we ſhould remain many days longer in this ſtate of ignorance and ſuſpenſe; and therefore I with ſtill to wait for materials, before we venture to iſſue orders the effect of which we cannot foreſee and which have no apparent object, in the ſituation of thoſe for whoſe guidance they are deſigned.

Mr. Francis—We were not informed of the diſaſter at Poonah, when we wrote to Bombay, on the 4th of laſt month; neither does the inſtructions quoted from our letter of that date, appear to me to amount, in any degree, to the meaning of my propoſition; this I think will be evident, from a bare inſpection of the terms of the two orders. They may commence or renew hoſtilities on their former plan, without entering into any new engagements. If nevertheleſs the two orders were preciſely the ſame, I think that the important event which we have heard of in the interval, and of the effects of which on the minds of the gentlemen of Bombay, we cannot be abſolutely certain, would authorize and oblige us to repeat them. In the preſent critical circumſtances, it is our duty even to them, not to leave them the ſhadow of a pretence for acting in oppoſition to our intentions. Our not ſending the orders I now propoſe will no more enforce the obligation they were under to obey former orders, than our ſending them will leſſen it. Whatever they may have done in the interval muſt be condemned or juſtified by the terms of the orders of which they were actually in poſſeſſion.

Mr. Wheler—I agree to Mr. Francis's motion.

Mr. Barwell—To agree to Mr. Francis's motion would imply an opinion, that it had been rendered neceſſary, by a deficiency in the orders already given: that there is no ſuch deficiency is evinced by the quotation made by the Governor General from the orders of the 4th of laſt month; yet to deny my aſſent to it, I am ſenſible may expoſe me to the charge of inattention to the conduct of the Bombay Preſidency, which too much warrants the ſuggeſtion thrown out by Mr. Francis. Under the orders exiſting, the preſent motion is premature, and anticipates that full information on which alone the Board can maturely reſolve; and which motion, probably inſtead of appearing irregular, might have been a general vote of the Council, reſulting from the facts before them. I am againſt the motion.

Mr. Francis's motion reſolved in the negative.

PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident;

Richard Barwell,

} Eſquires.

RECEIVED the following letter from the Select Committee of Bombay.

Appendix. Nos. 185 & 186.

Gentlemen,

The preceding is a duplicate of our addreſs, dated the 13th ultimo.

We ſhall very ſhortly diſpatch a veſſel expreſs to Bengal, with a full account of the unſucceſsful iſſue of the late expedition; this being tranſmitted over land, to convey to you as quick as poſſible this diſagreeable intelligence. When our army had advanced to Tellagong, within eighteen miles from Poonah, and it was found, contrary to expectation, that none of the Maratta chiefs ventured to join the ſtandard of Ragoba, it was judged expedient by Meſſrs. Carnac and Egerton, that the army ſhould fall back to the head of the Gauts, to ſecure their ſupplies of proviſions, which they could not procure as they advanced, the country being entirely laid waſte by the numerous bodies of horſe that oppoſed them: the army was accordingly put in motion the 11th at night, and on their retreat were very vigorouſly attacked by the Maratta horſe, who carried off ſome of the baggage and proviſion; but after a long and warm action, were compelled to retire. This engagement having occaſioned the army to halt, Ragoba took that opportunity to open a negociation with Moodajee Scindia; and the commanding officers having given it as their opinion, that the army would not ſtand another attack, and refuſed the charge of conducting it to Bombay, the committee found themſelves obliged to treat with the Maratta Chiefs for an unmoleſted paſſage. They at firſt only demanded, that we ſhould give up the cauſe and perſon of Ragoba, which was accommodated without difficulty, as Ragoba had already declared his intention of putting himſelf under the protection of Moodajee Scindia: they then roſe in their demands, and inſiſted that we ſhould ſurrender all the acquiſitions made ſince the time of Madarow, and that Colonel Goddard's detachment ſhould be ordered back to the Bengal provinces. This the committee declared in writing, in the moſt plain and poſitive manner, that they had no authority whatever to agree to; and that, if they did make ſuch an agreement, the Miniſters would be deceived; however, as they perſiſted in their demands, the committee after that declaration, having no alternative, did ſubſcribe a paper, containing the above conditions, and our troops accordingly returned to Bombay. As we cannot admit that an agreement made in ſuch circumſtances, and after ſuch a previous declaration, is of any validity, we ſhall endeavour to treat with the Marattas upon another footing; and we have directed Colonel Goddard to march to Surat, inſtead of to Poonah, as before ordered. We requeſt, Gentlemen, that you will ſuſpend all judgment and determination reſpecting this unfortunate affair, till the whole is fully laid before you, which ſhall be done as ſoon as poſſible; and in the mean time we remain, with reſpect,

Gentlemen, &c. &c.

N°186.

Mr. Francis—As it appears to me, by the preceding letter from Bombay, that the opinion I had formed of their intentions is well founded, viz. that they have it in contemplation to renew hoſtilities with the Marattas, and that it is for this purpoſe they have ordered Colonel Goddard to proceed to Surat; I beg leave to renew the motion which I made on Monday laſt in the ſame terms, viz. "that a letter be immediately written "to the Preſidency of Bombay, to expreſs our concern "and ſurprize at the profound ſilence they have ob- "ſerved to us, on the late operations and defeat of their "army; and to prohibit them in the moſt preciſe and "poſitive terms, and as they will anſwer the contrary at "their peril, from commencing or renewing hoſtilities

Appendix. Nos. 186 & 187.

" againſt the Marattas, or any other Indian Princes or " Powers, except in their own immediate defence, without " our conſent and approbation firſt had and obtained."

Mr. Wheler—I agreed to the propriety of Mr. Francis's motion on Monday laſt; and I am, in conſequence of the letter now before the Board, fully convinced of the abſolute neceſſity we are under of reſtraining that Preſidency from any further act of hoſtility againſt the Maratta States.

The Governor General—As I am not aware of the extent of the queſtion, I muſt beg leave to interrupt the courſe of the votes given upon it, by a few previous and neceſſary obſervations. I have carefully read over that part of the letter from Bombay, to which the queſtion has an immediate relation, but do not find any thing in it which can warrant Mr. Francis's concluſion, " that " they have it in contemplation to renew hoſtilities with " the Marattas, and that it is for this purpoſe they have " ordered Colonel Goddard to proceed to Surat." I infer the reverſe from their words; and, that their meaning may not be loſt by a diſtant reference to them, I will here quote them: " As we cannot admit, that an agree- " ment made in ſuch circumſtances, and after ſuch a " previous declaration, is of any validity, we ſhall en- " deavour to treat with the Marattas upon another foot- " ing; and we have directed Colonel Goddard to march " to Surat inſtead of Poonah, as before ordered." They had before mentioned, that a treaty had been extorted from their military committee, conſiſting of three articles, viz. 1ſt, that they ſhould give up the cauſe and perſon of Ragoba; 2dly, that they ſhould ſurrender the acquiſitions made ſince the time of Madabrow; and 3dly, that Colonel Goddard's detachment ſhould be ordered back to the Bengal provinces. The paſſage which I have before quoted, is a diſavowal of the treaty, and a declaration that they will not abide by it; that is to ſay, that they will not ſurrender Salſette, Broach, and all their other poſſeſſions, excepting Bombay and Surat, to the Marattas, but treat with them for their poſſeſſions. It is impoſſible that their declaration can have any other meaning; becauſe, of the three articles, the firſt has had its full effect; the third has been already broken; and the ſecond of courſe is the only one which remains undecided. I think it poſſible that their refuſal to ratify it may have provoked the Maratta Government, flushed with its recent ſucceſs, to renew hoſtilities on them; but it is plain, from the terms of their letter, that it is their intention to avoid the renewal of hoſtilities againſt the Marattas, unleſs they ſhould be compelled to it, in the defence of their poſſeſſions. I muſt beg leave to aſk, whether it is the intention of the queſtion now before the Board, that the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay ſhall be directed to give up thoſe poſſeſſions? I ſhould apprehend not; becauſe we are not yet furniſhed with the authority, which the military committee poſſeſſed, to conclude treaties; and becauſe we are not in poſſeſſion of the treaty itſelf, nor of the written declaration, ſaid to have been given by the committee, diſclaiming their own authority to make it; and of courſe we are incompetent to judge how far the treaty, under the circumſtances in which it was made, was binding on the Preſidency of Bombay: I omit the conſideration of its obligation on ours, it being foreign from the preſent ſubject. The Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay would obviouſly apply the propoſed order, if ſent to them in anſwer to their letter, to that part of the letter only to which it had a relation; and as they have no where expreſſed a deſign of renewing offenſive hoſtilities, they would of courſe underſtand it as a prohibition to withhold the performance of that part of the treaty, on the performance of which the confirmation of the peace between them and the Marattas apparently reſted.

Mr. Francis—I have ſtated my opinion of the intentions of the Preſidency of Bombay; as I collect it from the terms of the letter before us, perhaps it may be erroneous. The preſent motion is to prohibit them from again invading the Marattas, or renewing hoſtilities againſt them, except in their own immediate defence; it goes no farther.

Mr. Barwell—There is no new matter before the Board. The ſhort reply made by Mr. Francis to the foregoing obſervations, is not to the point thoſe obſervations are propoſed to guard againſt. I muſt ſuſpend my opinion on the orders neceſſary to be reſolved by their Government, until we ſhall be fully informed. If the Preſidency of Bombay, upon good and ſufficient ground, ſhall refuſe to ratify that part of the act of the army committee, which gives up the poſſeſſions of the Company, I ſhall not think myſelf authorized to lay it as an injunction upon them to part with thoſe poſſeſſions. The preſent repetition of the queſtion appears to me totally unneceſſary; every cautionary meaſure has been taken by this Government, and I do not apprehend any others can be added to them, until we receive further advices.

Governor General—As Mr. Francis, by declining to anſwer the queſtion put to him, has left the conſtruction, which I ſuppoſed, in the words of the motion, and as that conſtruction is, in my opinion, clearly warranted by them, this alone is ſufficient reaſon for me to object to it. I have other objections; theſe I partly have ſtated in the opinion which I before gave on the laſt council day upon the ſame motion. The letter received from Bombay has indeed opened new lights upon the ſtate of their affairs, but theſe are yet too imperfect to enable us to form a true judgment of them; beſides, as I have already obſerved, it is ſcarce poſſible any orders which we can give will prove effectual. Their line muſt be decided, and its effects irrevocably paſſed, before our orders can poſſibly reach them.

Mr. Francis—It appears to me that my laſt minute contained a direct anſwer to the Governor General's queſtion; at leaſt I meant it ſo. A prohibition againſt invading or renewing hoſtilities againſt a people who never injured us, and who, when they had our army in their power, acted with ſuch moderation as to permit that army to return unmoleſted is evidently ſo juſt, and ſo reaſonable, that I cannot conceive it ſhould require any argument to defend it. Such prohibition, however, certainly does not include an order to the Preſidency of Bombay to give up any poſſeſſions, neither does it direct the reverſe. On that point I deſire to be underſtood to give no opinion whatſoever pro or con. It would be premature at this time, when we have neither a copy of the engagement before us, nor even of the commiſſion under which Meſſrs. Carnac and Egerton acted.

Governor General—Not to give an opinion, is to leave the queſtion to its natural conſtruction. The Preſidency of Bombay have told us, that they will not give up their poſſeſſions; which in other terms is, that they will renew hoſtilities, if the Marattas inſiſt on this article to the treaty. In anſwer to their declaration, it is propoſed to forbid them to renew hoſtilities, which in this conſtruction is equivalent to an order for them to give up their poſſeſſions; for, as I have ſaid before, there is not a word in their letter to which the ſuppoſition of the renewal of hoſtilities can poſſibly apply, but their diſavowal of the treaty, and implied reſolution not to abide by it.

Mr. Francis's motion reſolved in the negative.

No. 187.

Governor General.—As a conſiderable time has elapſed ſince the Board were adviſed of the reſolution taken by Colonel Goddard to march to Surat, and no reply has been yet written to him upon that ſubject, I propoſe the following.

To Colonel Thomas Goddard.

Sir,

We have received your letter, dated 5th of February, and approve the reſolution which you have taken to direct direct your march to Surat; which, under the circumſtances deſcribed by you, and eſpecially with the ſtrong requiſition of the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, we think was a meaſure indiſpenſably neceſſary.

We have waited thus long in the daily expectation of authentic intelligence from Bombay, to guide us in forming the inſtructions which it might be neceſſary to give you, in the great change which has taken place in the general line of our political ſyſtem. We have at length received a letter from the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, dated 3d February, which contains the firſt authentic account of the unhappy concluſion of the expedition undertaken by that Preſidency for the ſupport of Ragonaut Row. We ſend you an extract of ſuch parts of their letter as we think may be uſeful for your information.

It is impoſſible for us to conjecture, with any degree of confidence, what events may have followed the defeat of our arms; but from the reſolution expreſſed by the Select Committee to diſavow the authority by which the late treaty was concluded, and to refuſe their compliance with the terms of it, we think it probable at leaſt, that they may be engaged in further hoſtilities with the Maratta State, but of what kind we may yet remain for ſome time in ignorance; nor can we form any reaſonable concluſion of the ſituation in which you may be on the receipt of this letter. We can therefore give you no new inſtructions, but leave you to act on thoſe which you already poſſeſs; of which the following is rather an explanation than any addition to them.

As the motive and object of your march to that ſide of India were to afford the protection of the forces under your command to the Preſidency of Bombay, your whole attention in all your operations muſt be confined to that object, ſo long as the ſituation of their affairs ſhall require it, until we can furniſh you with more explicit orders; and we truſt to your diſcretion, that in the performance of this ſervice you will conduct yourſelf with the caution which the particular ſtate of our affairs on that ſide of India demands; and that you do not involve either yourſelf or this Government in the reſponſibility of the acts of that Preſidency, remembering that you ſtill act under the ſole authority of this Government, independent of theirs, and that of courſe you are to exerciſe your own judgment, both in the acceptance and execution of any ſervice which they ſhall require you to perform.

Fort-William, 18th March, 1779. We are, &c.

Mr. Francis.—I do not think that the march to Surat was a meaſure indiſpenſably neceſſary. Colonel Goddard might, I think, have retreated to Berar. I acquieſce in the remainder of the letter, without relinquiſhing any opinions which I have heretofore delivered.

Mr. Wheler.—I accede to the letter propoſed to be ſent to Colonel Goddard, with the reſervation pointed out by Mr. Francis.

Mr. Barwell.—I agree to the letter.

READ the following letter from Colonel Goddard.

Appendix. No. 188.

To the Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, &c. Supreme Council.

Gentlemen,

I had the honour to addreſs you the 5th inſtant, informing you of my intention to proceed immediately towards Surat, and fully explaining my motives for ſo doing, which I flatter myſelf were ſuch as you would approve of. I rejoice much at the reſolution I then took, as it appears a meaſure abſolutely neceſſary, not only to the proſperity of the ſettlement of Bombay, but to its immediate ſafety. The accounts which you muſt long ere this have received from that Government, of the event of their military tranſactions at Poonah, will have confirmed the truth of the above opinion, and alſo render unneceſſary any particular explanation I could give of the ſtate of their affairs; beſides that except the letters already ſent you, and that which accompanies this diſpatch, every other information I could obtain has been of a private and indirect nature, and neither authentic nor particular enough to deſerve being communicated to you.

The incloſed letter from Meſſrs. Carnac and Egerton was delivered me by a Vackeel belonging to the Peiſhwa Madherow Narrain, with another at the ſame time from his maſter, correſponding with the directions contained in the former, of returning towards the Bengal provinces. I at the ſame time received a letter from Mr. Farmer, forwarding that of the commiſſioners, and acquainting me, that himſelf and Lieutenant Charles Stewart were left in the Maratta camp, as hoſtages for the due performance of the capitulation made with the Durbar of Poonah, for the unmoleſted return of our army to Bombay.

I am releaſed from every obligation this letter of Meſſrs. Carnac and Egerton might lay me under, by theirs of the 19th ultimo (copy of which has been already tranſmitted you) deſiring me to pay no attention whatever to the directions before ſent me of the 16th; and I am alſo on this account convinced, that the perſonal ſafety of the gentlemen left as hoſtages will not be affected by my march. This conſideration, added to the cogent reaſons furniſhed by an attention to the ruined ſtate of the Bombay ſettlement, which would of itſelf render the ſtep at all riſks abſolutely neceſſary to the Company's intereſts, has determined me to proſecute my intention of proceeding to Surat with all expedition.

In conſequence of this reſolution, I have wrote to the Poonah Durbar, that in obedience to the orders of your Government, I marched with a part of your forces to protect the Engliſh ſettlement of Bombay againſt any invaſion of its enemies the French; that your intentions, and the inſtructions given me for my guidance, were perfectly friendly to the Maratta State, as the whole of my conduct hitherto muſt have convinced them; and that I ſhould continue to preſerve the ſame regard to the friendſhip ſubſiſting betwixt your Government and the Poonah Adminiſtration inviolable, protecting the ſubjects of the Peiſhwa from all violence, and avoiding any act of hoſtility whatever, unleſs compelled to it by their oppoſition. I farther added, that I had now advanced to the neighbourhood of Bombay, according to your orders; that in obedience to them it was neceſſary I ſhould reach that ſettlement; after which I ſhould be guided by the directions your might think proper to give me.

I beg to acquaint you with my having reached the Gul Nuddy in four days march, which is diſtant from Burhampore near 40 coſs. I ſhall halt to-morrow upon the banks of it, to refreſh the troops and cattle, and ſhall proceed the next day, with the ſame expedition, towards Surat, which place I hope to reach by the end of this month, as it is very little more than 100 coſs from my preſent encampment.

The late loſſes ſuſtained at Bombay, and the check given given to their arms, must inevitably for some time put a stop to any military operations depending upon a plan formed by their Government; the measures to be pursued will therefore rest solely upon the resolutions you may find it necessary, for the interests of the Company, to make, in consequence of the unfortunate event that has happened; and I shall wait with anxiety for a knowledge of them, to direct my future conduct; at the same time I beg to be honoured with your full and particular instructions relative to the situation and connection of this detachment with the Government of Bombay, in order to prevent every possible obstruction to the public service; from a regard to which, and the honour and interest of your Administration, it shall be my fixed and constant object never to depart.

To Colonel Thomas Goddard, commanding the Forces from Bengal.

Sir,

Having this day settled an agreement with the Durbar, wherein it is stipulated, that the army under your command shall be immediately directed to march back to the Bengal provinces, you will please, on the receipt of this, immediately to march back in the most convenient and expeditious manner you may think fit, and on your march no molestation is to be offered to any person, the Durbar sending with their Hircarrahs proper persons to direct the different Aumildars to supply you with whatever may be requisite.

We are, &c.

APPENDIX, No. 189.

Extract of Bengal Secret Consultations, the 23d March 1779.

PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Hastings, Governor General, President;
Richard Barwell, Philip Francis, } Esquires.
Edward Wheler, indisposed.

MR. Wheler having sent in the following minute just as the Council broke up yesterday, it was circulated to the different members of the Board.

Mr. Wheler's minute.

Mr. Wheler.—The situation to which I see the Company's affairs reduced, in every part of India, fills me, I confess, with the deepest anxiety and concern. On the Malabar coast, I see a war undertaken, and likely to be continued, against the Marattas, without the pretence of a provocation of any kind, and from the success of which the Company cannot, in my opinion, derive any possible advantage, none, I am certain, that can ever compensate for the immediate expence and distress which must attend it; for I am convinced that new acquisitions can answer no end, but to entail upon us and perpetuate new establishments; I need not point out the consequences of a second defeat.

To support a war at such a distance, and on such disadvantageous terms, or even to maintain the military establishment now existing on that side of India, is enough to exhaust all the resources of Bengal; from which the Company will in vain expect returns of wealth to England.

On the other coast, I see the Presidency of Fort Saint George already engaged, and likely to be more deeply involved, in military operations, on which not only the defence of the Carnatic, but even of their own Presidency, may depend, without a friend in reserve, or any mode of obtaining supplies of money, on which they can securely rely. Hyder Ally threatens them on one side, the Nizam on the other; and what reason have we to suppose, that the attempts made by these Powers will not be followed or accompanied by an invasion of the Marattas? On these circumstances, the Presidency of Fort Saint George apply to the treasury of Bengal, as to their only refuge.

In our own Government I see an expensive and useless military expedition still on foot, towards our western frontier, without an object of any kind. A marine maintained at the enormous expence of fourteen lacks a year, which never has done, nor, as far as I can judge, ever will do the smallest service. In the mean time, we are to provide against troubles in the Vizier's country, where two camps are ordered to be formed for that purpose.

We know not what particular designs may be formed by Nudjiff Cawn the King, or the Seiks, or what may be the views of the former in inviting Timur Shaw into Hindostan; but we know, in general, that the disposition of those Powers is not favourable to us, and that, as the power of the English, and the use we make of it, is to them an object of constant jealousy and distrust, so it is not unlikely that they may promise themselves extraordinary advantages from the invasion and plunder of these provinces. The opinion of our superiority in arms has received a check, to which we never should have exposed it. In this situation, I see no steps towards peace, no measures any where taken to recover or secure the friendship of any of the Indian Powers; but demands made upon Bengal from all quarters, for supplies of men and money, as if all India was united against us, and our resources alone were equal to every demand.

I state the general position of our affairs without exaggeration, and exactly as they strike me, in hopes that the Board will consider in the same light that I do, the necessity of adopting pacific measures, at least in some of the quarters in which we are threatened with hostility.

The letter now before us from Fort Saint George cannot, I think, be read without suggesting similar reflections to every member of the Board. With respect to the point on which Mr. Francis has delivered his opinion, though it does not come in the form of a motion, I deem it equally incumbent on me to say, that, as things are actually circumstanced, we cannot in safety or prudence refuse them a supply of money; if we do, they will either borrow at a heavy interest, or draw upon the Company; each of which may be productive of very bad consequences. At the same time, the strictest economy should be recommended to them; and this recommendation cannot be more effectually enforced, than by an assurance that we see no probability of being able to continue such supplies in future, and that they must exert their own efforts, and regulate their expences accordingly.

APPENDIX, No. 190.

Extract of a Letter from the Governor General and Council in Bengal to the Court of Directors, in their Secret Department, dated the 29th March 1779.

IN a letter from the Select Committee at Bombay, of the 13th January, we were informed that their army under Colonel Egerton had made but a slow progress towards Poonah, as none of the Maratta Chiefs had joined Ragoba; and that, in order to give encouragement to his friends, who were slow in declaring themselves in his favour, they had directed the commanding officer to proceed with the utmost vigour. This letter also advised us of the death of Mr. Mostyn; that Lieutenant-colonel Cay and Captain Stewart were killed in a skirmish a ſkirmiſh with the Marattas: and that Colonel Egerton's bad ſtate of health had compelled him to give up the command of the army to Colonel Cockburn.

Soon after the receipt of the above letter from Bombay, the Governor General laid before us a paper of intelligence of the moſt alarming nature, ſent by the Nabob of Arcot, and acquainted us that the like intelligence had been communicated to him through other channels. It informed us of the total defeat of the Bombay army by the Maratta forces on the 11th January. The particulars of this diſaſter were ſo circumſtantially related, and its authenticity ſo ſtrongly marked, that they did not leave a doubt in our minds concerning the truth of it.

In order therefore to guard againſt any bad conſequences which this unfortunate event might have on the minds of the country Powers, we immediately directed Brigadier-general Stibbert to form two camps of the firſt and temporary brigades, and to hold them in readineſs to march at the ſhorteſt notice. To preclude the effect of falſe alarms, the Vizier has been adviſed, that theſe extraordinary camps are not formed to act againſt any of the Powers in the neighbourhood of his dominions. General Stibbert has alſo been deſired to declare the ſame publicly to any of the Vackeels of the country Powers that may be in his camps.

At a ſubſequent meeting we iſſued inſtructions to General Stibbert, to order the firſt brigade to march towards the banks of the Jumna, and there fix on ſuch a ſituation for encamping it as ſhould appear the moſt convenient for defending the Douab.

A letter from the Select Committee at Bombay confirms in part the intelligence tranſmitted by the Nabob of Arcot. It ſtates that Meſſrs. Carnac and Egerton had thought it adviſable to retire with the army to the Ghauts; that this being agreed on, the troops were accordingly put in motion on the 11th January; that they were immediately attacked by the Marattas, whom they repulſed; but that the officer commanding having declared that they were not in a condition to ſuſtain another attack, and having refuſed to undertake the charge of conducting the army back to Bombay, they were obliged to treat for an unmoleſted paſſage, which was granted on their delivering up the perſon of Ragoba to the Miniſters. That this ſtipulation being agreed to, the Marattas roſe in their demands, and inſiſted that all our acquiſitions ſince the time of Mada Row ſhould be reſtored to the Maratta Government, and that Colonel Goddard's detachment ſhould be ordered back to the Bengal provinces. That with reſpect to this latter requiſition, Meſſrs. Carnac and Egerton had informed them, that they had no authority whatever to aſſent to it, and that if they did comply with it, the Miniſters would be deceived. Notwithſtanding ſuch a declaration, they perſiſted in their demands; which were at laſt agreed to. Hoſtages for the due performance of the engagements on both ſides were exchanged, and we learn that the troops are returned to Bombay. The Select Committee have deſired us to ſuſpend our judgment on this fatal event until a complete account thereof can be tranſmitted to us. For your further information, we muſt beg leave to refer you to our various minutes on this ſubject, and the different motions in conſequence of the intelligence received; they will appear in the conſultations noted in the margin.

We beg leave to refer to the letters from Colonel Goddard, recorded in the conſultations noted in the margin, for a particular account of the progreſs of his detachment, and of the ſteps taken by him in conſequence of the intelligence he had received reſpecting the diſaſter which befel the Bombay army. In his letters of the 5th and 9th February he acquaints us of his final reſolutions, in conſequence of the urgent deſire of the Select Committee at Bombay, to march forward to Surat; the reaſons which induced him to this meaſure are fully ſtated in his letters, and deſerve your notice.

Not knowing what events might have followed the defeat of our arms, and unable to form any reaſonable concluſion of the ſituation in which Colonel Goddard might be on the receipt of a letter from us, we refrained from giving him any new inſtructions, and left him to act on thoſe which he already poſſeſſed. We approved however of the reſolution he had taken; and, as the motive and object of his march to the other ſide of India were to afford the protection of the troops under his command to the Preſidency of Bombay, we directed him to confine his whole attention in all his operations to that object, ſo long as the ſituation of affairs might require it, and not to involve either himſelf or this Government in the reſponſibility of the acts of that Preſidency. Appendix No. 191.

APPENDIX, No. 191.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 5th April 1779.

THE Governor General lays before the Board the following minute:

Governor General's minute.

The aſſembly of the Board being now rendered complete by the acceſſion of Sir Eyre Coote, and the ſeaſon of the year too far advanced to admit of our waiting longer for more authentic or more circumſtantial intelligence of the ſtate of our affairs on the other ſide of India, to deliberate on the meaſures neceſſary to retrieve the diſgrace which the Britiſh arms have ſuſtained by the late miſcarriage of the expedition undertaken from Bombay, and to prevent the conſequences which may be ſtill expected from it; I ſhall now call the attention of the Board to this intereſting ſubject.

We already poſſeſs a ſufficient knowledge of the capital points on which our future reſolutions ought to turn; theſe I ſhall briefly ſtate:

An army ſent into the field for the purpoſe of effecting a revolution in the Maratta State has failed in the attempt, and been compelled to purchaſe its ſafety by ignominious conceſſions, made without authority on the part of thoſe who ſubſcribed them, and with a knowledge of the want of that authority in thoſe who exacted them. Of theſe conceſſions we only know the following; viz.

1ſt. That Ragonaut Row, in whoſe cauſe the enterprize was formed, ſhould be delivered up to our common enemy.

2d. That all our poſſeſſions immediately dependant on Bombay, excepting Surat, were to be ſurrendered to the Maratta Government.

3d. That the detachment under the command of Colonel Goddard ſhould return to Bengal.

The firſt of theſe conditions was performed upon the ſpot.

The ſecond remains unaccompliſhed, and the Select Committee of Bombay have declared to us both their diſavowal of the engagement and their determination not to yield to it.

The third condition has been already broken, by the march of Colonel Goddard to Surat.

The laſt letters from Bombay inform us that their army was ſafely returned thither.

By private but certain intelligence I can inform the Board, that Colonel Goddard, with the forces under his command reached their deſtination at Surat, either on or about the 26th of February.

Of the conſequences of theſe events the following conjectures may be rationally formed:

1ſt. I think it probable, for many reaſons, that the Maratta Miniſters will be content with the advantages which they have gained in the poſſeſſion of the perſon of Ragonaut Row, and will not be very ſtrenuous in inſiſting upon the performance of the engagements made with them by Meſſrs. Carnac and Egerton. The Select Committee have informed us that they ſhould treat with them upon theſe points, and will probably have concluded a peace, on the agreement of the Marattas to relinquiſh linquish their pretensions, or that they have been referred to us for our decision on them.

2d. If however, contrary to this expectation, the Maratta Government shall have insisted upon the performance of the conditions of the treaty signed by Messrs. Carnac and Egerton, it is probable that the Select Committee of Bombay will have refused their compliance; that Colonel Goddard will have been called upon to assist with his force in their defence; and that the war has been continued to this day, since there is no apparent object on our part which could lead to a termination of it.

Or, 3dly. The Marattas may have insisted upon the performance of the engagements, and on the refusal of the Select Committee of Bombay have taken no instant measure to enforce the performance of them; that knowing the invalidity of these engagements, and expecting that they would not be ratified, they had exacted them only to serve as a specious subject for present negociation, and a pretext for a renewal of the war when they should be in a condition to prosecute it with a surer effect; and that with this intent they may have invited the French to unite with them in availing themselves of the advantages presented to both by our late defeat, and the decline of our influence, and to bring an armament from Mauritius for that purpose. We are certain that the French have a force at that island sufficient and more than sufficient for a design of that nature; and if such an occasion has been presented to them, it cannot be supposed that they would slight it, or not use every exertion to seize and improve it. It is the only employment left for their troops, and the only chance left them of regaining their influence in India.

A vessel sent with dispatches from Mahé or Damaun, might if it sailed in January, arrive at Mauritius by the middle of March. The whole southerly monsoon would be then before them, and if they had vessels ready to transport the number of troops necessary for the purpose of giving the first movement to the plan, these might be expected to arrive at the destined scene of action by the month of September next at farthest.

4thly. The divisions of the Maratta State has been superficially covered, but by no means healed, by the necessity which lately united the different parties of that State in one common cause. The loss of the person of Ragoba has indeed deprived us of the influence which that before gave us on the fears and passions of the present rulers; but his presence is as likely to be the cause of new contentions and new jealousies amongst themselves. Madajee Scindia, who is said to have the actual charge of his person, who has always supported a separate interest from that of the Government which he defends, and who is regarded as the capital instrument by which the present Administration holds its power and authority, may apply the sanction of Ragoba's name, and his pretensions, to the confirmation of his own independency, and with such an advantage his ambition may be excited even to the pursuit of more extended views. But I see no present chance of our being able to recover the possession of Ragoba: on the contrary, he seems lost to us for ever; nor am I certain that, all things considered, we have much cause to regret it, but in the wound which the British credit may have received in the manner of his separation from us.

5thly. The conduct observed by Moodajee Boosla, since his knowledge of the late event, manifestly shews the impression which it hath generally made on the minds of the people of Indostan. Inattentive to the peculiar circumstances which have occasioned the defeat of the Bombay army, or ignorant of them, he considers it as a natural and unavoidable consequence, and a proof that any force which we could oppose to the Marattas must prove unequal to their superiority of numbers, and the rapid movements of their cavalry.

The apprehension of drawing upon himself the resentment of a Power so formidable, was the undoubted motive of the advice so repeatedly and strongly urged by him to Colonel Goddard, to return to Bengal; and influenced by the same impression he has apparently given up all thoughts of the designed alliance, which he was at one time so desirous of concluding with us; nor, great and extended as my hopes were of the advantages of such a connection, shall I think it advisable to propose the renewal of any overtures towards it. Whenever a prosperous state of our affairs, added to the apprehensions of danger impending on the Government of Berar, shall induce it to solicit from us the support which we have hitherto ineffectually offered to the present Ruler of it, I shall deem it advisable, under every situation of our affairs, to grant it, provided it shall not be contrary to any other engagements subsisting. For the present, I regard this State as neutral, but secretly disposed to us, and wish only to keep it so.

I shall not carry on my conjectures to other points of less importance. These are sufficient for our present purpose.

The greatest loss which we have suffered by the late disaster is in the discredit which it has reflected on our military reputation, and therefore the greatest care ought to be taken, in all our measures which have a relation to this subject, that they do not appear to betray a consciousness of weakness, or a distrust in our own powers, but rather that we feel ourselves possessed of the ability, and animated with the resolution, to support our interests and possessions against all opponents.

If peace can be obtained on such terms as may be consistent with this ruling principle, I suppose that it will be the object of our unanimous wishes; but if peace cannot be so obtained, I hope we shall equally agree in the determination to exert every power which this Government possesses, either within itself or by its influence over the other Presidencies, to efface, by a vigorous and successful war, the loss which our credit and influence have recently suffered. At all events, while we seek for peace we ought at least to be prepared for war, as the surest means, whether immediate or remote, to obtain it.

Upon these principles I beg leave to offer the following propositions to the consideration of the Board:

1st. That we invest Colonel Goddard with full powers, as the Minister of this Government, to treat with the Peishwa and Ministers of the Maratta State for the renewal or confirmation of the treaty of Poorunder, provided they will recede from the pretensions which they have acquired by their late engagements with Messrs. Carnac and Egerton, and that they will engage never to admit any French forces into their dominions, nor allow them to form any establishments on the Maratta coast; and that these conditions be made the alternative of peace or war. Accompanying is a draft of his instructions, No. 1.

2dly. That the first brigade, which has already been ordered to march to a station convenient for crossing the river Jumna, be completely supplied with ordnance, ammunition, and stores, fit for any service on which that body or a force equal to it may be destined.

I make this distinction, because it will officially rest with the Commander in Chief to recommend both the strength of this corps and the parts of which it should be composed; expressing my own hope that it may not be found necessary at any time to employ either our European infantry or artillery, but for the sole defence of our own provinces and the prescribed limits of the dominions of the Nabob of Oude.

3dly. That Major Camac be ordered to return to Korumber, or to any other station as convenient, near, and within our own borders, and to remain there until further orders and that he be supplied with ammunition, guns, and stores for complete battalions.

4thly. That the Commander in Chief be requested to issue the necessary orders for carrying the resolutions of the Board into execution on the two foregoing propositions.

5thly. That a letter be written to the Peiſhwa and his Miniſters, with the ſame ſubſtance with Colonel Goddard's inſtructions, according to the accompanying draft N° 2.

6thly. That a letter be written to Moodajee Booſla, according to the annexed draft, No. 3.

7thly. That a letter be written to the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, adviſing them of Colonel Goddard's inſtructions, and requiring them to conform to them; and in the mean time to be prepared either for repelling any hoſtile attempts of the Marattas, or for any other ſervice which may hereafter be judged neceſſary, but to undertake nothing offenſively without explicit and poſitive orders from us.

8thly. That a letter be written to the Preſidency of Fort Saint George, to inform them of this deſign, and, in the event of their ſucceſs againſt Mahé, to order all the troops which are now employed in that expedition to remain there, or otherwiſe at Tellicherry, and to be prepared to move on the receipt of any orders for their junction with our forces on that ſide of India.

Theſe diſpoſitions are propoſed as the neceſſary preparatives to any plan which we may be hereafter compelled to concert, with the aid of the other Preſidencies, in the event of a war with the Marattas alone, or joined with the French, or of an attempt ſingly made by the French on the Preſidency of Bombay.

The ſubſequent arrangements I leave to the Commander in Chief, to whoſe province they officially belong.

Read the following letters from Major Camac.

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

I have the honour to inform you of my arrival here on the 20th ultimo, which is fifteen coſs diſtant from Burwah; but from its apparent healthy ſituation, the goodneſs of its water, and eaſineſs of getting proviſion, is much preferable to it. Ever ſince my arrival, I have been very impatient for inſtructions for my further progreſs, but have neither heard from the Council nor from Colonel Goddard on that head.

I have wrote to the Colonel ſeveral times, informing him of all the particulars relative to my detachment, and requeſting his directions alſo how I am to act in reſpect to the countries which I am to paſs through.

I have diſpatched ſeveral Hircarrahs to Bimbajee, telling him of our friendly intentions, and requeſting him to ſend a perſon to meet me, in order to obviate my march, and to give aſſurances to the inhabitants that they have nothing to apprehend from us.

Since my arrival I have heard from report, that the treaty with Moodajee has not been concluded, which I am doubtful may alter the plan of my march. When I ſet out it was expected that he would forward my progreſs, and with this view it was not thought neceſſary to furniſh me with more ammunition than was ſufficient for that occaſion; I have now only forty rounds per man, and ten rounds in the pouches, with one hundred and fifteen round and grape for each of the guns; which ſtock is not more than we ought to be provided with for a ſingle action, conſidering how much ammunition the native troops uſually conſume. If, therefore, we ſhould be obliged to act ſeparately, or the countries we have to paſs ſhould be hoſtile to us, as they are ſtrong and difficult, and ſome oppoſition and ſkirmiſhing may be expected, we ought in that caſe to be provided with much more. I have thought proper to mention this to you, as the nature of the ſervice may now be ſo much changed, from the failure of the negociation with Moodajee.

In order that at all events I may be able to act without any unneceſſary delay, I have ventured to ſend an Indent to Patna, which will complete us to one hundred and fifty rounds a man, and two hundred for each of the guns, which I think is the leaſt we ought to have with us, in caſe any oppoſition is to be expected.

Two hundred of the drafts have no arms; thoſe from Berrampore were ſent away without any, and were moreover ſtript of their coats, though they were property, having already paid for them; and though the Council had ordered new ones to be made up in their ſtead. Appendix, No. 191.

Our march was delayed much by the badneſs of the carriage bullocks, as we got only ſeventy from Burdwan, which were preferable to thoſe brought from Calcutta; all the good ones belonging to the former place being either ſent out of the way, or hid; with this, and the deſertion of the drivers, the magazine was ſtrewed in the roads, and could never have been got on, was it not for the activity of Captain Mayaffre, and ſixty Sepoys placed with him, who were obliged to act the part of drivers. The guns went very well, and even outmarched the Sepoys all the way; but the diſtreſs of individuals was very great; ſervants of all ſorts extorted large ſums from their maſters, and took the firſt opportunity of leaving them; the gentlemen were forced to advance two or three months pay to their coolies and bearers, at the extravagant rate of eight rupees a man, who threw down their baggage, and left them after the firſt three or four days; it is a pity that theſe could not be brought to puniſhment, and this matter regulated for the benefit of future detachments under the ſame circumſtances.

At the range of hills which parts Patchete from Naigpore, there were two Gauts, one of Junck, and the other called Jymarah, through the Tamar and Boondo diſtricts; theſe I paſſed in two diviſions; and, as troops had never marched through them before, I wrote to Lieutenant Rankins, who was ſurveying in the neighbourhood, to go with one diviſion, whilſt Lieutenant Cameron accompanied the other. I embraced this opportunity, which might not again offer (becauſe of the turbulency in theſe hills) to have thoſe paſſes traced, which may be eſſential for military ſervice, and for the benefit of future detachments.

I thought it neceſſary to halt at Jelda three days, to get proviſions, and to get in the Gaut Wallahs, who had made ſome ſhew of reſiſtance; I was induced to this that I might not be inſulted without puniſhing them, in caſe they had the temerity to fire on us, as we had not time to throw away. On this occaſion, Borun Sing, who behaved ſo ill to Mr. Daniel, was very inſolent, but did not proceed further. For the coming in of theſe Gaut Wallahs, I am much obliged to Purſanab Sing, the Rajah of Ramgur, who came to me to Julda, and accompanied me through them.

Mr. Hewitt alſo was very obliging, and extremely aſſiduous in providing every thing we ſtood in need of; we had much occaſion for his aſſiſtance, for we might as well have come through a deſert as Burdwan; the inhabitants had all left their villages (as we were informed) by order of a man called Byjonate, who was ſent on before by the Ranny's people for this purpoſe.

We have not had twenty men deſerted ſince our march, and thoſe were all from the drafts; the Sepoys are all in very good ſpirits, and will go wherever we want them; however, it is to be apprehended that many of the followers will run away, though every means has been uſed to encourage them.

At this place we joined Captain Crawford's corps, which he has already brought into very good order and diſcipline: he has ſupplied me with a vaſt addition to my Buzar, and I expect much from his aſſiſtance.

I am in eager expectation to hear from Bimbajee, and of the political ſtate of matters to the weſtward; when any thing material occurs, I ſhall not fail immediately to adviſe you of it.

I have, &c.

Camp at Corambah, in Chuttah Naigpore, 11th March 1779. (Signed) Jacob Camac.

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

We have had for ſeveral days reports of the defeat of the Bombay army, and we have had it ſince confirmed by

by very authentic letters by way of Patna and Banaras. In this posture of affairs I was entirely without instructions for my further progress, until yesterday that a Cossid arrived from Colonel Goddard, with a letter for me, dated at Asseragur 28th of January, two days from Boorhampore. In this he directs me to proceed, in case Moodajee Boosla should give his concurrence and consent to my passing through his country, and gives me instructions for my route to Poonah. He acquaints me he has wrote to the Berar Prince on this subject, who will forward this letter to me with one from himself, intimating his approbation of the measure. That I am to obviate or overrule any objections he may make for detaining me, unless urged in the most pointed terms; and that in case of his refusal I am to remain at the extremity of the Company's provinces, till I receive further orders either from your Board or from himself.

Moodajee, after keeping the Hircarrahs waiting for five days, permitted them to come away without any letters for me; so that, without his approbation or disapprobation, I am now left to my own judgment. Indeed, circumstanced as we are, I should be apt to deem his silence a disapproval. Bimbajee too has not wrote me in answer to my letters. He holds the adjoining parts of Moodajee's dominions, and though he is in a manner independent, may be cautious of taking such a measure without his brother's consent.

Undoubted news is now come, dated the 5th of February, from Boorhaunpoor, that the Colonel, hearing of our disaster near Poonah, was to march that night for Surat; so that if he pursues his intention, it will be in vain my thinking to join him. Had he kept his ground at Boorhaunpoor, or had determined on returning by Burrar, I should have thought it indispensable for me to march immediately to support him.

In this situation, I think it necessary to pursue a middle course, until I shall receive further lights: Colonel Goddard may be obliged to give up his scheme of going to Surat; he may obliged to return through Nagpoor: Madajee may be induced through fear, or to pay court to the prevailing side, to behave unfriendly to him. I propose therefore advancing slowly into Ruttempoor, professing the greatest friendship for Moodajee and his brother, until I hear further from them; which will be the means of keeping Moodajee at least at home, secure the Colonel on that side, and further his retreat, if necessary, through Burar into our provinces; or push on to join him, if offensive measures should be determined on. In the mean time, whilst I am moving slowly on, Captain Crawford, whom I shall direct to remain for some time at Burwa, to forward provision and keep open the communication, will escort to me the supply of ammunition, which I have indented for to Patna, and will then return to Burwa, or to his station at Chetrah.

Lest you should think it extraordinary that a detachment so lately come out should want ammunition, I took the liberty of mentioning it in my last. The circumstances under which it was supposed I was to proceed then, made very little requisite, and no more than a sufficient quantity for that purpose was provided. Things being now so much changed since that time, I thought it expedient that I should be completed for any contingency; and, to prevent unnecessary delay, indented to Patna for a sufficient quantity. I am only apprehensive that enough of musket ammunition or powder is not to be got there, and beg that you will direct whatever has been indented for may on requisition be supplied from Burar or Chuna. I beg also you will write to Patna to supply me with money, which we shall be soon in much want of.

Enclosed is the proceeding of a general court-martial held in this camp on the 25th of February, and which has been dissolved. I have, &c.

Camp at Korumba, Chuta Nagpore, 14th March 1779. (Signed) Jacob Camac.

Resolved, that the following letter be written to Major Camac:—

Sir,

We have received your letter of the 14th ultimo.—We desire that you return to Korumba, where you will encamp the detachment under your command, and there wait our further orders.

We are, &c.

Warren Hastings,
Rich. Barwell,
P. Francis.

To Siccarom Pundit and Balajee Pundit.

I have received your letter, containing various complaints of the conduct of the Governor and Council of Bombay, and other particulars, which I fully understand.

This letter not having been as usual accompanied by one from the Peishwa, I think it necessary to inform you of it, lest, should one have been written and miscarried in the way, there might appear an impropriety in my not returning an answer to it.

I have heard by various channels some particulars of the late events on that side of India, and have received some little and imperfect intelligence relative thereto from the gentlemen of Bombay; but, till my knowledge of those matters is more complete and authentic, I must suspend my judgment respecting the rectitude of the conduct of the members of that Government. I hear with the greatest surprize, that the Chiefs of the army from Bombay have made a convention with you without the authority of this Government, which you well know was indispensably necessary for an act of that nature, and that the conditions of it are very injurious to the rights of the Company and the honour of the English name. I have not yet received a copy of it; but, whatever it may be, it is incumbent on me to take the earliest occasion to disavow it, and declare it null.

This declaration ought to be unnecessary to you, to whom the like information was given in form on the deputation of Colonel Upton.

The past cannot be recalled; but for the future it is my firm wish, that, as I laboured before, however ineffectually, to conciliate the differences which had arisen between you and the Government of Bombay, and which prevented the execution of the treaty made through Colonel Upton, peace may be yet restored, and all past grievances buried in oblivion. For this purpose, I and the Counsellors of this Government have authorized Colonel Goddard to negociate and conclude with you, in the name and behalf of the Company, a new treaty, confirming that made by Colonel Upton, on these conditions, viz. That you relinquish all claims derived from the unauthorized act of our army, and which could not even have received the sanction of the Presidency of Bombay; and that you also engage never to grant the French, who are the enemies of our nation, any settlement or residency in the ports of the Peishwa, nor to admit the forces of the French into any part of his dominions, nor to form any alliance nor any connection with them, either for traffic or otherwise.

On these conditions, we offer you the friendship of the Company, and the English nation, for ever. If you reject them, we are remediless, and blameless of the consequences, whatever they may be, as peace or war depend upon your determination.

For further particulars I must refer you to Colonel Goddard, to whom I have granted full powers for the purposes above described, and desire that you will regard him accordingly, as the Representative of this Government, and his acts, done under this authority, as the acts of the Company, and of the English nation.

To the Peishwa in substance the same as the foregoing.

Draft

Draft of a Letter to Moodajee Booſla.

I have received your letters. They are long, and dictated with the ſame wiſdom and friendſhip with which all your former letters have been written: but as the great object of them all is now entirely at an end, it is unneceſſary to recapitulate the ſubſtance of them. Beneram Pundit is arrived, and has delivered to me the paper which you entruſted to his charge: at his deſire, in obedience to your poſitive injunctions, and the other oath which I underſtand he ſwore to perform them, the paper was delivered and opened in the preſence of Rameaunt Moonſhy, and read to me by him. Having fully underſtood the contents, I have returned the paper to Beneram Pundit, at his particular requeſt, that it might be ſent in its original ſtate to you; this alſo being, as I underſtand, a part of his inſtructions. Reſpecting the different points contained therein, they are ſuch as will not admit either of negociation or comment; I conceive them to have been intended as an implicit but deciſive anſwer upon a ſubject in its own nature ſo delicate, and rendered more ſo by the paſt interchange of our ſentiments upon it, and our known mutual wiſhes, that you apparently choſe this indirect method of declining to engage any further in it, rather than to relinquiſh it by an abrupt declaration which might have been conſtrued unſuitable to the friendſhip and cordiality which have hitherto ſubſiſted ſince ſo long a period, and which I hope will ever ſubſiſt between us, and between your family and the Company and Engliſh nation; otherwiſe it was certainly unneceſſary to have ſent a perſon honoured with ſo high a degree of your confidence as Beneram Pundit poſſeſſes, upon ſo long and perilous a journey, merely to give me the information which might have been expreſſed by a letter containing no more than a ſingle line. What is paſt, is paſt—of the deſign which I had formed, I ſhall totally relinquiſh all future thoughts; but of your paſt kindneſs I ſhall retain a laſting remembrance.

When I firſt wrote to you that an Engliſh army had been appointed to proceed to the other ſide of India, and deſired you to aſſiſt it in its progreſs, you immediately returned an anſwer expreſſing your cheerful compliance; and not contented with bare profeſſions, which are oftener the maſk of deceit than the indication of ſincerity, you wrote at the ſame time to the commander of our forces, inviting him to paſs through your country; you ſent a perſon of rank and truſt to wait on the borders of your dominions with a ſtore of proviſions for their ſubſiſtence; you cauſed them to be entertained, in the long ſtay they made in your country, with all hoſpitality, and have continued the ſame conduct to them ſince their departure.

Theſe are not complimentary or equivocal, but real and ſubſtantial acts of friendſhip; as ſuch, it is eſpecially at this time incumbent on me to expreſs the ſenſe that I entertain of them, as it is my wiſh, and ſhall be my care, to make every ſuitable return to them, whenever any future occaſion of your affairs ſhall demand it.

I have ordered Major Camac to remain within the borders of Bengal, and not to proceed any further; but have not yet determined whether he ſhall return to Calcutta, or join any other part of our army; this muſt depend on future contingencies.

Poſtſcript.—Since I wrote the above, I have received a letter from Major Camac, informing me that orders had been ſent him by Colonel Goddard to proceed forward and join him, provided it ſhould be agreeable to you, without whoſe inſtructions he was to take no ſtep: that for this purpoſe the Colonel had written to you, requeſting that you would either ſend a paſſport to Major Camac, or intimate to him your diſapproval of his proceedings; in which latter caſe he would lay aſide the deſign—That the Coſſid ſent to you by the Colonel having been detained five days at Naigpore, and then bringing with him no letter or inſtructions from you, he had conceived it a tacit conſent to his march, and that for private reaſons you might not chooſe to truſt it to writing; and that he was therefore marching on ſlowly.

As this meaſure is by no means agreeable to me, I have written to Major Camac to return within our borders. Appendix. No. 191.

Agreed to the propoſitions contained in the Governor General's minute; and Reſolved, That the following letters be written to the Select Committee of Bombay and Fort Saint George, and to Colonel Goddard; and that the Governor General be requeſted to write, in the propoſed terms, to the Peiſhwa and Moodajee Booſla.

Gentlemen,

We have received your letter of the 21ſt February.

We wiſh that you had not apprehended the perſon of Gazidy Cawn, as it has the appearance of at leaſt an act of violence to him, which no pretext can juſtify, and which may furniſh occaſion for jealouſies, that at this time you ſhould be particularly careful to avoid. We muſt therefore earneſtly recommend to you, inſtantly to grant him his liberty, peremptorily inſiſting that he do immediately quit the Engliſh territories; and, if you have an opportunity, we further recommend that you forward him on his way to Mecca.

We have deemed it neceſſary to inveſt Colonel Goddard with full powers, as the public Miniſter of this Government, to treat with the Peiſhwa, and the Miniſter of the Maratta State, for the renewal or confirmation of the treaty of Pvoondur, provided they will recede from the pretenſions which they have acquired by the late engagements of Meſſrs. Carnac and Egerton, and will agree not to admit any French force into their dominions, nor allow that nation to form any eſtabliſhment on the Maratta coaſt; empowering him to conclude a treaty of peace with them on theſe conditions; acceptance or refuſal of which muſt determine the alternative of peace or war.

Our firſt object in this negociation is to obtain a peace on honourable terms: in the mean time we recommend to you to be prepared, either for repelling any hoſtile attempts of the Marattas, or for any other ſervice which we may hereafter judge neceſſary; and we do formally forbid you to undertake any offenſive meaſure without explicit and poſitive orders from us.

We are, &c.

Gentlemen,

We have received your letter of the

and, in conſequence of your urgent deſire to be furniſhed with a ſupply of treaſure from hence, we have reſolved to ſend you fifteen lacks of current rupees in gold; ten lacks of this ſum we ſhall diſpatch immediately by the Stafford, and the remaining five lacks will be forwarded by the firſt ſafe conveyance in Auguſt: we ſhall take an early opportunity of replying to the other parts of your letter.

We have deemed it expedient to inveſt Colonel Goddard with full powers, as the public Miniſter of this Government, to treat with the Peiſhwa and Miniſters of the Maratta State, for the renewal or confirmation of the treaty of Proondur, provided they will recede from the pretenſions which they have acquired by their late engagements with Meſſrs. Carnac and Egerton, and that they will engage not to admit any French forces into their dominions, nor allow that nation to form any eſtabliſhments on the Maratta coaſt; and that the acceptance or refuſal of theſe conditions muſt determine the alternative of peace or war.

Having thus informed you of our deſigns, we deſire, in the event of ſucceſs in the enterprize now carrying on by your Government againſt Mahie, that you will order all the troops which are now employed on the expedition to remain there, or otherwiſe at Tellicherry, and to be prepared to move on the receipt of any orders for their junction with our other forces on the weſtern ſide of India, in the event of its becoming neceſſary.

Sir,

Appendix. No. 191.

To Colonel Goddard.

Sir,

Having under conſideration the late advices from Bombay, we have deemed it neceſſary to inveſt you with full powers, as the public Miniſter of this Government to treat with the Peiſhwa, and the Miniſters of the Maratta State, for the renewal or confirmation of the treaty of Proonder; provided they will recede from the pretenſions which they have acquired by the late engagements of Meſſrs. Carnac and Egerton, and will agree not to admit any French forces into their dominions, nor allow that nation to form any eſtabliſhments on the Maratta coaſt; and we empower you to conclude a final treaty of peace with them on theſe conditions; the acceptance or refuſal of which muſt determine the alternative of peace or war.

The points in which we are willing to allow you a diſcretion to relax are theſe:

1ſt. To yield up the balance which may yet remain due to the Company, of the ſum of twelve lacks of rupees, which the Maratta Government were bound, by the 6th article of the treaty of Proonder, to pay as an indemnification for the expences of the war undertaken in ſupport of Ragonaut Row, and for which aſſignments were taken on Jamboo ſeer, and muſt of courſe be relinquiſhed with this conceſſion. The ſecond point is the amount of the lands in the neighbourhood of Broach, ſtipulated by the fifth article of the treaty of Proonder to be ceded to the Company, yielding a complete rent of three lacks of rupees. The words which the tranſlation render "complete revenue," are in the original, Jumma Cahmil; which have been interpreted by the Miniſters, the Jumma or rent at which the lands are rated in the public account of the revenues; and the lands which were offered by them amounted to three lacks, according to their eſtimated amount, although their real produce has been ſtated to us by the Preſidency of Bombay to amount to no more than rupees 209,200.

We think this not a point worth conteſting, at the hazard of an object ſo important as peace, if it ſhould prove an impediment to it, and we therefore empower you to accept of the lands tendered as above.

The nature of our connection with Ragonaut Row being very materially changed by the ſurrender of his perſon to the Marattas, we cannot inſiſt on the literal confirmation of thoſe articles in the treaty of Proonder which were ſtipulated in his favour, nor, ignorant of his preſent condition, can we preſcribe any expreſs terms which ſhould be required on his behalf, but generally recommend to you to obtain ſuch proviſions for him as you ſhall judge the moſt ſuited to his preſent circumſtances, for his perſonal ſafety and ſubſiſtence, making the former an indiſpenſable engagement.

Upon the whole, Sir, our object is peace, if it can be obtained on ſecure and honourable terms. By concluding a peace on ſuch terms, you will render a moſt acceptable ſervice to the Company, and merit our higheſt approbation.

We encloſe you a letter of credence inveſting you with this power, and a copy of the treaty of Proonder for your more particular information.

We are, &c.

To Colonel Thomas Goddard, commanding the detachment from the 1ſt brigade.

We the Governor General and Supreme Council of Bengal, in virtue of the authority and powers veſted in us by the Legiſlature of Great Britain, and by the Honourable Eaſt India Company, to direct and controul the political affairs of all the Company's ſettlements in India, relying on your fidelity, prudence, and integrity, do depute, authorize, and empower you, in our names, and on behalf of the Honourable the United Eaſt India Company, to negociate and conclude a treaty of peace and friendſhip between the Chiefs and Rulers of the Maratta State and the Engliſh Eaſt India Company, on ſuch terms and conditions as ſhall be for the mutual honour, benefit, and ſatisfaction of both parties, and remove all the cauſe of enmity now ſubſiſting between that State and the Government of Bombay; and we hereby give you full powers to this effect, declaring that we will ratify and confirm whatever ſhall be ſo concluded by you in our names and in our behalf, according to the inſtructions with which you have been furniſhed for that purpoſe.

Given in Fort William, under our hands, and the Great Seal of the United Company, this fifth day of April in the year one thouſand ſeven hundred and ſeventy-nine.

From Madajee Bhoſila: received 20th February 1779.

Your agreeable letter bearing date the 3d Zehedja, 23d November 1778, conceived in terms calculated to carry our friendſhip to the higheſt pitch, recapitulating the contents of my former letters, and adding, that my views and ſentiments perfectly coinciding with your's, gives a certainty of ſucceſs to our common deſigns; that you have therefore appointed Colonel Goddard in the room of the late Mr. Elliott, and given him directions to act in concert with my forces; that I will not therefore let ſlip the opportunity which now preſents itſelf of exalting my name above thoſe of the moſt illuſtrious chiefs; that I muſt not neglect the preſent moment, as an opportunity once loſt is hardly ever recovered; and adding, that a word to the wiſe is ſufficient: this letter reached me on the 20th of Zehedja, 9th February, by the route of Cuttack, followed by a duplicate, and afforded me the higheſt degree of pleaſure, conveying with it the proofs of the utmoſt ſincerity and warmth of friendſhip, and convincing me of the wiſdom of your plans, your magnanimity, penetration, and foreſight, which are the firmeſt ſupport of Government, and give a certain aſſurance of ſucceſs in the moſt arduous undertakings.

I likewiſe underſtand what you write reſpecting the favourable opportunity which preſents itſelf; the caſe is this:—Men of underſtanding, who are experienced in affairs and ſkilled in all the duties of Government, before they engage in any undertaking, make it their buſineſs maturely to conſider the probable event, and take their meaſures accordingly, omitting no means which the moſt conſummate prudence can dictate to enſure ſucceſs: all your letters abound with theſe ſentiments; and where both parties enter upon an undertaking upon mature judgment and foreſight, and from a knowledge of the probable event, ſuch undertaking will be crowned with ſucceſs; the ſentiments of each will meet the approbation of the other, and their views will coincide in every inſtance, and every plan be purſued which may promote the common intereſt, every deſign freely communicated, and no reſerve obſerved.

When Colonel Goddard had croſſed the Nudbuddar, and was arrived at Hoſhingabad, which is dependant on me, he deputed Mr. Watherſtone to me, and agreeable to your inſtructions informed me of his arrival, that he had received inſtructions from Calcutta to concert a plan of operations with me, and requeſted to be informed of my ſentiments, and that it was expedient I ſhould not let the preſent opportunity ſlip;—in reply thereto, actuated by ſentiments of the ſincereſt friendſhip, knowing that you had placed the moſt implicit confidence in me, I ſaid, "This is a buſineſs of the greateſt difficulty and delicacy; "I am perfectly acquainted with the ſtate of all the "Powers in the country, and with the affairs of the "Decan, which is my country; that an army was called "together at Poonah of 70,000 horſe, and that immediately on intelligence of the connection formed between us they would be increaſed to 100,000, and "that, actuated by a love of their country, their families, "and a regard to their fame, the Chiefs would diſregard "their lives, and make aſtoniſhing exertions to oppoſe "any attempt that ſhould be made againſt them; that "therefore to meet them in arms would require at the "leaſt

" leaſt an army of 50,000 men from hence, in addition " to the Engliſh force, and large magazines of provi- " ſions and ſtores; that the aſſembling ſuch an army and " military ſtores would require an immenſe treaſure, and " moreover a long ſpace of time would be required to " conciliate the minds of the different Chiefs, and to " draw over the moſt conſiderable to our party; that " being now arrived at Hoſhingabad, and calling on me " to join him, it was impoſſible for me to comply; that " if this had been intimated to me in former letters, I " ſhould have been on my guard, and employed the " ten or twelve months which have elapſed in the nego- " ciation, in raiſing forces and collecting military ſtores; " but that all the letters I had received from Calcutta " were to this effect—that the detachment was ſent to " Bombay for an apprehenſion of the deſigns of the French, " and deſiring that on its arrival on my territories I would " take care to ſupply it with proviſions and all other ne- " ceſſaries, and ſend a ſmall party to accompany it to " the borders of my country: now that I learn this im- " portant deſign, how can I at ſo ſhort a notice carry it " into effect? Every ſtep that is taken ſhould be taken " with firmneſs, and on mature reflection; that there- " fore I thought it adviſable to ſend Beneram Pundit " and Ramkund to Calcutta, and to charge them with " my inſtructions reſpecting the final concluſion of this " matter; that after their arrival there, and ſettling the " points of negociation, and the receipt of letters from " Calcutta addreſſed to me and him, a plan of operations " ſhould be ſettled; till that time, if he choſe it, I would " have him remain at Hoſhingabad, and take with " him a part of my forces, &c. and reduce the fort of " Mundilla, which had revolted from me, and that " whatever money he collected ſhould be divided into " equal proportions between us; that if he did not " agree to this propoſal, either let him proceed to Bom- " bay, as there was now no danger from the Maratta " forces, who were all gone to oppoſe the Engliſh at " Borgaut in the Cokun country; that the Engliſh " from Bombay, with their army, were arrived at the ſaid " Gaut, and were followed by Ragonaut Row; that he " ſhould go thither: in a word, that he ſhould remain " wherever he thought proper, but that wherever he " ſhould fix he ſhould wait for further advices from " Calcutta."

Mr. Watherſtone having maturely conſidered and underſtood all theſe particulars, returned ſatisfied to the army.

I diſpatched copies to you by the route of Benaras, with letters containing the particulars of this negociation, which I hope you have before this time received; Colonel Goddard likewiſe has doubtleſs written you on the ſame ſubject. I have not yet heard from Colonel Goddard's army, nor do I know if he will remain at Hoſhingabad, go towards the fort Mondilla, or proceed to Bombay; we ſhall ſee what he writes. You will give the neceſſary directions to Colonel Goddard.

Beneram Pundit and Ramkund have left this, charged with letters of commiſſions to you, and will proceed by the route of Cuttack; they have orders to uſe every poſſible expedition, and on their arrival will repreſent to you whatever I have given them in charge, and will make ſome important propoſitions to you; by the ſpirit of wiſdom you will diſcover, that the foundation of them is like the wall of Alexander, and built on the ſincereſt foundation, and will pay due attention thereto; and Beneram Pundit having fulfilled the purport of his miſſion, you will ſend him back without delay, that agreeable thereto I may plan the execution of the moſt important affairs. I impatiently wait your reply.

From Dewagur Pundit: received the 26th February 1779.

Your friendly letter, containing ſeveral friendly intimations and hints reſpecting your ſecret views and deſigns; the appointment of Colonel Goddard, on the part of the Council, to concert and adjuſt all matters, with the advice and concurrence of this Government; and briefly touching on knowledge of the ſeaſon of action, and not to let the fortunate opportunity which preſents itſelf ſlip, with other particulars of the moſt important nature, arrived in a happy hour; and by its contents, which I perfectly underſtood, afforded me the greateſt pleaſure: and Mr. Watherſtone likewiſe, who came here on the part of Colonel Goddard, made the like repreſentations, and was anſwered in the manner which the ſituation of the times, and the knowledge of the ſtate of affairs in Decan in general, and at Poonah in particular, rendered it expedient. It was therefore judged proper to depute Beneram Pundit, accompanied by Ramkund, a follower of the late Mr. Elliott, to Calcutta, and to concert the operations agreeable to the anſwers which ſhould be received from thence. This determination was communicated to Mr. Watherſtone, who then departed for the army encamped at Hoſhingabad, on this ſide the Nubader. Time will ſhew, whether, conformably thereto, the army halts at Hoſhingabad, or Gurra Mundillah, or proceeds towards Bombay; whichever meaſure is adopted, I will communicate to you. What you write of your hopes of the fortunate iſſue of your deſigns, with the concurrence and aſſiſtance of this Government, founded on your knowledge of the magnanimity and fortitude of my maſter, and my wiſdom and abilities in government, I perfectly underſtand.

By the bleſſing of God, the excellent plans you form are always built on the moſt ſolid and judicious grounds; and your magnanimity and extenſive views are without parallel in Indoſtan and Decan. And from the commencement of this undertaking I have conſtantly written and declared to the Engliſh Chiefs, the meaſures which my confined abilities and judgment pointed out to me as moſt likely to bring it to a fortunate iſſue: accordingly, with the approbation of Watherſtone, a letter in the fulleſt and cleareſt terms was diſpatched to you; and Beneram Pundit, and Ramkund, a follower of Mr. Elliott, were diſpatched by the way of Cuttack, charged with letters, and ſeveral points of negociation, for the final ſettlement of the ground-work of the important deſigns in hand; I doubt not but he will ſhortly arrive, and fully repreſent to you the particulars with which he is charged; and having attained the ends of his miſſion, that you will, without delay, give him his diſmiſſion, by which means it is poſſible the common deſigns may be brought to a ſatisfactory iſſue. Your reply is impatiently expected; and that this matter be ſettled on ſuch firm and ſolid grounds, that the advantages thereof may be felt by the lateſt poſterity, and the warmth and ſincerity of my friendſhip and attachment proved to a demonſtration.

For further particulars I beg leave to refer you to the Maha Rajah's letter, which is full and explicit.

From Beneram Pundit: received the 5th March 1779.

I did myſelf the honour to addreſs ſeveral arzies to you before I left Naigpore, informing you of Mr. Watherſtone's coming thither, and after various conferences returning to the army; which I hope you have received.

I took leave of my maſter on the 24th Zehedja, 13th January, and began my journey, accompanied by Salla Ramkund, the late Mr. Elliott's Moonſhey, and arrived at Cuttack on the 7th Juffer, 24th February. Lalla Ramkund is gone to perform religious ceremonies at Jaggarnaut, and I am detained here a little by ſome buſineſs with Rajah Ram, but ſhall ſhortly renew my journey, and ſoon have the pleaſure of preſenting myſelf before you, and explaining all the particulars of my commiſſion fully to you.

On the day of my arrival here I received letters from the Maha Rajah and his Dewan, to your addreſs, which I now do myſelf the pleaſure to encloſe to you: I hope they will ſhortly reach you, and make you acquainted with their contents. My brother Biſſenber Pundit will communicate to you the news from Poonah. At Saranagan I met with Yatakee, the ſervant whom you ſent to erect a monument for the late Mr. Elliott; I went two coſs out of my way to viſit the tomb of the bleſſed deceaſed, and likewiſe waited on the Chief of the Rajah Biſhenaut Sing, and preſſed him warmly to afford his aſſiſtance, and to ſupply neceſſaries for the completion of the monument; but, as ſtone-cutters and other artificers cannot be had in that diſtrict, and muſt be brought from Simbulpore, I went thither, and made it my requeſt to the Dewan Akber, that he would furniſh Yattakee, on his application, with artificers, and every thing he ſhould require for the completion of the monument. He obliged me by his promiſe of a cheerful compliance, and ſent a man to the ſpot. I have no doubt but the buſineſs will now go on briſkly, and will be ſhortly completed.

From Moodajee Bhoſſlah: received 5th March 1779.

I ſome time ago, after the arrival of Colonel Goddard at Hoſhingabad, and Mr. Watherſtone's coming hither, the former of whom had been appointed from Calcutta, to act with my advice and concurrence in the deſigns projected, wrote you very fully, in repeated letters, whatever prudence, foreſight, and a perfect knowledge of the real ſtate of affairs, and the force of the armies in the Decan, which is my own country, pointed out to me, and likewiſe communicated to you whatever I learnt on theſe ſubjects; I likewiſe diſpatched Beneram Pundit and Ramkund, with letters full of advice and important plans for the future, by the way of Cuttack, who I doubt not will after ſome time arrive at Calcutta, and, having explained to you all the particulars with which they are charged, will form ſuch ſolid engagements as may be the foundation of a firm treaty, which ſhall deſcend to the lateſt poſterity; and that Beneram Pundit, having procured all the neceſſaries for carrying it into execution, may be immediately diſpatched to this quarter.

I ſent word to Colonel Goddard by Mr. Watherſtone, to write to the Bombay gentlemen, who had brought Ragonaut Row with a moderate army into the neighbourhood of Poonah, and commenced hoſtilities with the forces of Pundit Pundhaum, who were prepared to receive them, to ſuſpend their operations, and that he himſelf ſhould halt ſome time in the Mundilla and Guna diſtricts, by which time Beneram Pundit would return from Calcutta with deciſive and ſatisfactory anſwers, by which he ought to regulate his motions; and that this advice was founded on the ſtate of the times: in reply, he wrote me that he had written what was proper to Bombay, to put a ſtop to hoſtilities, and that letters from Calcutta having been ſent to the ſame effect, he had no doubt that they would lay aſide their hoſtile deſigns, and would act with a Samorcand policy; that he could not halt in the diſtrict of Guna Mundilla without orders from Calcutta; that he was marching to the weſtward to Binhampore, where he would wait in expectation of the reſult of the negociations at Calcutta, and the return of Beneram Pundit: in a word, he proſecuted this deſign in preference to all others, and marched from Hoſhingabad, and I have not ſince heard from him how far he has advanced.

Certain intelligence has lately been received here from Poonah, that ſeveral engagements have been fought between the Bombay army and the forces of Pundit Pundhaum, and that in the end the Engliſh inconſiderately and raſhly quitted the Gauts with Ragonaut Row, and deſcended into the plain, when the Maratta army of 50,000 horſe, judging it a favourable opportunity, began an engagement with them by a cannonade from their large artillery, which will throw a ball one or even two coſs diſtance, and kept themſelves ſecure behind their guns; the engagement was very hot, and in the end the Maratta army ſurrounded the ſmall body oppoſed to them, and took poſſeſſion of 3 p^s of artillery, their tents, baggage, and artillery bullocks, and killed great numbers. As all communication was cut off from the Engliſh army, they were reduced to the neceſſity of ſending an agent to treat with the Poonah Miniſters; time will ſhew what terms are agreed on, and what will be the reſult of this buſineſs; to the time when the advices came away, the Engliſh continued ſurrounded. Whatever I may hear further, induced by the ſincereſt friendſhip, I ſhall write. Doubtleſs you have received the ſame advice from other quarters. I am in all events ſteady in friendſhip.

I received two parcels of Engliſh papers from Colonel Goddard; one containing accounts, the other, letters for the General at Madras: I have diſpatched them both: you will receive the accounts, and the letters will be ſent from Cuttack to Madras.

Poſtſcript.—Since I wrote the above, certain intelligence is arrived from Poonah, that the Engliſh being ſtraightly beſieged by the Maratta army, they delivered up Ragonaut Row to the Poonah Miniſters, and have entered into engagements to conform to the treaty of Ballajee Row.

From Moodajee Bhoſila: received 6th March 1779.

Your agreeable letter, containing the joyful news of the ſucceſs of the Engliſh arms in the reduction of Pondicherry, the ſeat of the French power in India, on the 27th Ramzaun, 18th October 1778, and congratulating me thereon, afforded me inexpreſſible pleaſure; before the receipt of your letter, I had received intelligence of this happy event by the Decan newſpaper, and communicated it to Mr. James Anderſon, and directed Beneram Pundit to write to you, from whoſe letters I flatter myſelf you received this pleaſing account. I moſt ſincerely congratulate your illuſtrious Monarch, the Company, and yourſelf, on this event; may the Almighty render it joyful to you, and let it be followed by bleſſings innumerable!

From Dewagur Pundit: received the 5th March 1779.

Your agreeable letter, containing an account of the ſucceſs of the Engliſh arms in the reduction of Pondicherry, the ſeat of the French power in India, arrived by the route of Cuttack, and afforded me inexpreſſible pleaſure. The Maha Rajah likewiſe received the greateſt joy from the news of your important ſucceſs againſt your enemies the French. I ſincerely congratulate you and all the Chiefs of your nation thereon.

I have already written to you in repeated letters, whatever the ſituation of affairs pointed out as adviſable; and Beneram Pundit and Ramkund have been diſpatched to you by the way of Cuttack, charged with letters from the Maha Rajah, and will on their arrival explain to you all the particulars of their commiſſion. I entertain the greateſt hopes, that, actuated by wiſdom and ſolid judgment, and the dictates of ſound policy, the propoſitions to be made to you will meet with your approbation and aſſent; and that you will ſhortly diſmiſs Beneram Pundit with the accompliſhment of the objects of his miſſion.

From the Maha Rajah's letters you will have full information of whatever, prompted by the ſtate of affairs, was written to Colonel Goddard, or communicated perſonally to Mr. Watherſtone, as well as the advices received from Poonah, of hoſtilities between the Engliſh of Bombay and the Maratta army; the diſtreſſes of the Engliſh forces, their ſmall army having been ſurrounded by the numerous troops of the Marattas, and in the end their having been reduced to the neceſſity of ſending a perſon to treat of peace and an accommodation with the Miniſters.

I am firmly reſolved, in all events, ſteadily to purſue the dictates of the ſtricteſt friendſhip towards you, who are ſtrictly united in friendſhip with the Maha Rajah my maſter. I wait impatiently the return of Beneram Pundit, with the accompliſhment of the objects of his miſſion.

Poſtſcript.—The ſame as that to the Rajah's letters.

From Dewagar Pundit: received the 5th March 1779.

When advices, to the effect mentioned in my former letter, arrived from Poonah, I inſtantly diſpatched letters, by ſwift Coſſids, to Colonel Goddard with the intelligence; and ſet forth that his proceeding any further towards Benhampore was highly unadviſable; that it was expedient, that in compliance with the advice which had been given him from hence, he ſhould halt ſome time in the diſtrict of Guna Mundilla, and relinquiſh for the preſent his deſign of advancing; for the Maratta forces would certainly oppoſe him in the neighbourhood of Benhampore. You will therefore be pleaſed to write what you judge proper, to induce him not to advance, but to concert his meaſures with us.

As the hurry and precipitation of the Engliſh at Bombay, and their imprudence, temerity, and diſregard to your directions ſent them from Calcutta, forbidding them to commence hoſtilities (which Colonel Goddard has aſſured me, by letter, you did ſend them) have brought affairs to this paſs, you will not be too precipitate and haſty in the proſecution of your former deſigns; ſhould they be delayed months, till a fortunate opportunity preſents itſelf, it is a matter of no moment; but it is neceſſary that the fabric be built on the moſt ſolid baſis, that it may not be ſubject to any ſhock. The form of this fabric, the baſis on which it is built, and the purpoſe for which it was intended, ſhould be kept the moſt profound ſecret till the time of action, and not truſted to a ſingle perſon, except ſuch as are entirely in your confidence, and heartily attached to you; for even walls have ears.

All the particulars have been confided to Bala Ramkund, who poſſeſſes wiſdom, prudence, and complete knowledge of buſineſs, and is firmly attached to your Government, and verſed in all the views and deſigns of this. He, in concert with Beneram Pundit, will in private fully communicate them to you.—The plan which has been formed, has been entirely built on a complete knowledge of the affairs of the Decan: being convinced of this, you will without delay intimate your aſſent to me, that it may be carried into execution without hurry or precipitation. Let a conſtant correſpondence be kept up between us: I am at all times, and on all occaſions, ſincerely attached to you; and whatever I write you will give implicit belief to, and, regarding it as directed by the warmeſt friendſhip, you will act agreeably thereto. Although it may appear preſumptuous in me to write in this manner to Chiefs who poſſeſs ſuch magnanimity and extenſive views, yet the ſincere and hearty friendſhip I bear takes from me the power of reſtraining my pen, and guides it as the heart dictates; what I write flows ſpontaneouſly from the heart.

Poſtſcript.—As within theſe ten months near 50 letters have been received from you, prompted by the warmeſt friendſhip, and with a view to futurity, I have, without reſerve, communicated to you continually every particular reſpecting the ſtate of the Decan, in which I am completely verſed; had not theſe been my motives, what elſe could have induced me to have writ to you ſo fully and clearly on all theſe matters?

Copy of a Letter from Madajee Bhoſila to Beneram Pundit: received by him at Cuttack.

You are fully acquainted with all my affairs, and ſentiments, and ſchemes; not the leaſt circumſtance is hidden from you: proceed with the utmoſt diſpatch to the place of your deſtination, and apply diligently to the ſettlement of the buſineſs in hand. Although I wrote repeatedly to Col. Goddard, to halt for ſome time in the diſtrict of Gana Mundilla, he has paid no regard thereto, but is marched towards Benhampore. I have juſt received certain intelligence from Poonah, that a great battle has been fought with the Engliſh of Bombay, who had paſſed the Gaut, and that the Engliſh were worſted, and are ſurrounded by the Maratta army, and have ſent a perſon to treat of a peace and accommodation with the Poonah Miniſters, and that Ragonaut Row is encompaſſed with the Engliſh; we ſhall ſee what will be the reſult. In the beginning of this buſineſs, what I ſaid from the dictates of penetration and foreſight, and a competent knowledge of the armies of the Decan, was diſregarded as of no conſideration; it is now come to paſs as I predicted; time will ſhew what plan Colonel Goddard will adopt and communicate to me. I have diſpatched letters on the ſubject of theſe events to Calcutta, do you repair thither with all expedition, as the moſt material point of all my deſires and plans is the raiſing Sepoys, which at the leaſt muſt amount to 50,000 choice men, under the command of country officers; and moreover firm allies and chiefs of note are requiſite to join the party, all which depend on large ſums of money; you will take effectual methods to accompliſh this material object. For the reſt, nothing, however trifling, is concealed from you; you perfectly underſtand them, and will accompliſh them all; write me an anſwer without delay. You will ſettle the plan on ſo ſolid a baſis, that it may not be ſubject to any change or ſhock, and that our mutual pains may not be thrown away unprofitably. As I have received a great number of letters from the Nabob Amaud-ul-Dowla, and have written him as many, as you know, and as you likewiſe brought a meſſage from him to me, it was for theſe reaſons that I have conſtantly written him whatever came to my knowledge reſpecting the affairs of the Decan, and to this I have been prompted by the moſt ſincere friendſhip alone, having had no other view in ſo doing. Exert all your endeavours for the ſucceſs of this, as is the duty of a good ſervant.

From Maha Rajah Moodajee Bhoſilah: received the 18th March 1779.

I have been made happy by the receipt of your agreeable letters, under date the 10th, 14th, and 19th of Zehaida, and 9th and 11th Zehedja, and perfectly underſtand all their contents. I am greatly indebted to your friendſhip for the inquiries you made regarding my health, which you heard had much ſuffered. I thank God, who has been pleaſed perfectly to reſtore it to me. The repeated account you give me of the pleaſing event of the capture of Pondicherry, on which I have before congratulated you, affords me the higheſt pleaſure: may the Almighty give you joy of it! With reſpect to your letter expreſſing your deſire for the eſtabliſhing of a Dauk, by the route of Midnapore and Morebinge, by reaſon of the directneſs of the road; the Coſſids who go that way repreſent it as filled with difficulties and dangers. The route of Cuttack, although longer, is therefore to be preferred. In the other letter you expreſs yourſelf very fully on your ſecret views and deſigns; the recapitulation of all the particulars would take up too much time; but they are in ſubſtance, that I will not ſuffer the preſent favourable opportunity to eſcape, but will concert all the operations with Colonel Goddard, and carry them into execution; and that by ſuch conduct our common intereſt will be effectually promoted. All this I perfectly comprehend, as I am completely maſter of the ſtate of affairs in Decan, which is my own country, and no particular thereof is hidden from me; I therefore explained myſelf very fully to Mr. Watherſtone, and alſo wrote my ſentiments to Colonel Goddard. I alſo diſpatched Beneram Pundit and Lalla Ramkund with letters to you, and hope that they are by this time arrived, and have explained to you all the points of their commiſſion. Your perfect knowledge in the art of government, and in the management of negociations, will, I doubt not, lead you to approve of the points which will be propoſed to you.

Since the Engliſh at Bombay, by their ill-judged and raſh meaſures, and by the precipitation with which they attempted to carry them into execution, have received a ſevere check from the Maratta army, and been obliged to deliver up Ragonaut Row to the Poonah Miniſters, and to relinquiſh Shaſtie, &c.; to give two hoſtages, and to return to Bombay under an eſcort from the Maratta army, army, and to conclude a treaty, ſtipulating that Colonel Goddard ſhould return; and, as an army conſiſting of near 100,000 horſe is aſſembled at Poonah, in high ſpirits and confidence, ſhould Colonel Goddard march on, he will undoubtedly meet with the ſevereſt oppoſition: I have therefore written repeatedly to him to return, but have yet received no anſwer, and am filled with uneaſineſs as to the event, ſhould he continue at Burhampore; the times abſolutely require that he ſhould return. Should you have received theſe advices at Calcutta, you doubtleſs have or will give him inſtructions to return: you will likewiſe direct Major Camac, whom you have diſpatched to this quarter, to ſtop; for in important undertakings, and matters of difficulty and danger, magnanimity and fortitude alone are not ſufficient; other points, ſuch as the aſſembling numerous forces, collecting warlike ſtores, and a large treaſure, are equally requiſite, to enable the parties to proſecute them with ſucceſs, in ſpite of all oppoſitions, otherwiſe diſgrace will be the inevitable conſequences. The preſent ſituation of the Engliſh at Bombay may ſerve as an example. On the arrival therefore of Beneram Pundit and Ramkaunt, having learnt the buſineſs of their deputation, and the real ſtate of affairs at Bombay, you will form a ſolid plan for the projected operations, which you will communicate in writing to me, or ſend both the deputies back to me, that I may warmly engage in the purſuit thereof.—Further particulars you will learn from my miniſter Dewagur Pundit's letter, written with my concurrence.

Your application to me for aid and aſſiſtance is a proof of the ſincere and warm friendſhip you bear me; but every ſtep which I take in this buſineſs muſt be on mature deliberation, reflection, and on ſolid grounds, that ſo there may be no cauſe for drawing back.

From Dewagur Pundit: received 18th March 1779.

Your agreeable letters, accompanied by Karetahs for the Maha Rajah my maſter, the contents of which are very voluminous, and to every point of which I ſhall reply in the ſequel, arrived in a happy hour, and afforded me the higheſt pleaſure; I perfectly underſtand every thing you write. The news of the capture of Pondicherry, by the magnanimity of the Engliſh forces, gave me great joy: God give you joy of it!

Your kind inquiry after the health of the Maha Rajah, who you had heard was greatly indiſpoſed, is a proof of your warm friendſhip; although he was very ſeverely attacked, yet the Almighty has been graciouſly pleaſed to reſtore him to perfect health, and he has in a great meaſure recovered his former ſtrength.

As it has ever been the characteriſtic of the Bhoſila family to keep their friendſhip inviolable, and pay the moſt ſcrupulous regard to their word and engagement, and as it is my practice to communicate to every illuſtrious Chief who will place confidence in my judgment and advice, the advantages and diſadvantages attendant on any object in view, I therefore communicated to Mr. Watherſtone, and wrote to Colonel Goddard, whatever my poor judgment pointed out to me as eligible.

Benerhm Pundit and Ramkaunt have been likewiſe diſpatched to you with Karetahs and letters, and will fully communicate with you on all the points entruſted to them; I have no doubt that actuated by your knowledge of the art of government, by your penetration and foreſight into the probable events of any meaſure, you will approve and aſſent to all the propoſitions they will make you. As I am warmly intereſted in the buſineſs in hand, I ſhall obſerve upon all the correſpondence, and from firſt to laſt, and offer my opinion as a ſincere friend on the meaſures which policy points out for the future.

Your firſt letters treated of the diſputes in Europe between the Courts of Great Britain and France, and of the commencement of war, and of the Poonah Miniſters having received a French envoy, notwithſtanding the treaty ſubſiſting between the Engliſh and Pundit Purdham, their granting him the port of Chowl, and furniſhing him with an arſenal; your having in conſequence diſpatched a formidable detachment under the command of Colonel Leſlie for the ſecurity of Bombay, and intimating your deſire, that, in caſe they ſhould paſs this way, they ſhould be aſſiſted with proviſions and other neceſſaries, and a body of forces ſent to conduct them through theſe territories. As the ties of connection with Bengal, by reaſon of its vicinity, had been long formed, and Beneram Pundit was ſtationed with you ſolely for the purpoſe of cultivating and improving thoſe friendly ties, you were anſwered, That no objection would be made to your detachment marching through theſe territories, and that they ſhould be aſſiſted to the utmoſt poſſible, and accompanied to the borders by a perſon of credit.

Intelligence was given to the Poonah Miniſters, and they were informed, that, whilſt they were in a treaty of friendſhip with the Engliſh, their receiving a French Vackeel, and intriguing and forming connections with that nation, in breach of their engagements with the Engliſh, was highly improper and unjuſtifiable. The anſwer from Poonah was, that they had not given any encouragement to a French Vackeel; that the perſon who came there, came ſolely for the purpoſes of traffic; and that even him they ſent away, for the ſatisfaction of the Engliſh, and were ſteady at all times to their treaty with them; that we would write aſſurances of this to Calcutta.

Letters were accordingly written from hence to Calcutta, to that effect, as well as to Colonel Goddard and Colonel Leſlie, and the ſame was communicated to Mr. Watherſtone and Mr. James Anderſon. In anſwer thereto Mr. Watherſtone replied: "We have not the ſmalleſt "idea of giving ſupport to Ragonaut Row, nor any in- "tention of acting hoſtilely againſt Pundit Peiſhwa or the "Poonah Miniſters; but we are going from an appre- "henſion of evil deſigns, formed by the French againſt "Bombay, and the other poſſeſſions of the Engliſh. If "the Poonah Miniſters give aſſiſtance to the French, we "ſhall certainly commence hoſtilities againſt them." In reply to this, we ſet before him the ſtate of Decan, which being our country, we were perfectly acquainted with, and told him that to advance would be highly impolitic, as they would undoubtedly be oppoſed by the Maratta armies in the way; that they had better halt ſome time in the diſtrict of Mundillah, &c. in expectation of inſtructions from Calcutta. In the mean time, before Colonel Goddard reached Hoſhingabad, ſeveral letters were received from you, intimating that having ſeveral private matters to communicate, which it would be improper to commit to writing, you had therefore deputed Mr. Elliott, a gentleman of ſuperior underſtanding, and entirely in your confidence, to repair hither, who would fully explain the motives of his deputation, and would concert all meaſures; and ſettle all points in conjunction with us; and that, having eſtabliſhed a perpetual friendſhip between the two States, he would write you word thereof. Two or three months paſſed in expectation of Mr. Elliott's arrival, and in the interim ſeveral letters, all tending to the ſame point, that Mr. Elliott would ſhortly arrive, and fully explain your views and ſentiments, were received from you. As that gentleman died in the journey, and the news of his deputation reached Poonah and Hydrabad, and threw both thoſe States into the greateſt apprehenſions, we received letters from both, deſiring to know for what purpoſe Mr. Elliot was coming hither; but, as we were totally unacquainted with your deſigns, what could we write, or what plan could we fall upon?

The Poonah Miniſters, and the Nabob Nizam ul Dowla, becoming daily more apprehenſive of our deſigns, letters were accordingly written to you after the deceaſe of Mr. Elliott, that the ſtandard of our friendſhip and union having been ſeen throughout Hindoſtan and Decan, and been the cauſe of inſpiring our friends with confidence, and our enemies with diſmay, that we ought therefore to make our advantage of it; or in other words, that you ſhould depute another perſon in the room of the deceaſed, to conclude the negociations, that, being informed of your views, we might purſue a plan for their accompliſhment, and remove the doubts entertained by the Powers of Decan.

In what was written from hence "that no trifling "change of circumſtances, which are in fact no more "than trials, ſhould induce the Ruler of a State to re-"linquiſh his deſigns; and that firmneſs and ſteadineſs "in the purſuit of his object, and a ſteady adherence "thereto, was truly praiſeworthy, and the diſtinguiſhing "characteriſtic of great and exalted minds," the meaning was this—that it was not conſiſtent with the ſtatements of magnanimous and illuſtrious Chiefs to ſet aſide the treaty ſubſiſting between Pundit Purdham and the Engliſh for a trifling change of circumſtances, namely, that a French agent came to the Poonah Miniſters; when they would not receive him, but ſent him away. You will not underſtand it to have meant any thing elſe. Since by Mr. Elliott's deceaſe in the way we were deprived of all knowledge of your views and deſigns, how could you write that ours totally coincided with yours, notwithſtanding we were totally unacquainted with them? As you repeat in all your letters that you place entire confidence in my judgment and penetration, you will therefore pay the greateſt attention to any plan which ſhall iſſue from me, conſidering it as formed on the moſt ſolid, not on a weak foundation, or liable to be ſhaken by every blaſt.

In all your letters to this time, you write that Colonel Goddard, when he arrived in theſe territories, would conduct himſelf by my advice. After the arrival of Mr. Watherſtone at Naigpore, I told him, actuated by my knowledge of the real ſtate of affairs in the Decan, the multitude of the Maratta forces, the dangers of engaging in hoſtilities with them, and the difficulty of overcoming them; the impropriety of acting precipitately in affairs of ſo important and extenſive a nature, the neceſſity of a numerous army, the alliance of the principal Powers of the country, and a large treaſure, for the accompliſhment of the deſigns; all which points muſt be provided for, and the operations clearly laid down, and every ſtep taken therein be on ſolid grounds. That from all theſe conſiderations it would be proper to depute Beneram Pundit, who was charged from thence to explain the objects of Mr. Elliott's deputation to Calcutta, and that in the mean time the detachment ought not to advance further, but to halt in the Mundillah diſtrict, and ſend orders to the Engliſh at Bombay to put a ſtop to their hoſtilities, which were very impolitic. Beneram Pundit and Ramkaunt were accordingly ſent by the route of Cuttack, and having been now gone more than a month, I flatter myſelf they will ſoon arrive, and explain to you every matter entruſted to them; and that you, actuated by friendſhip, ſound judgment, and the knowledge of the art of government, will approve of their propoſals and comply with them.

Colonel Goddard would not conſent to halt in the Mundillah diſtrict, but wrote for anſwer, that he could not think of it without inſtructions from Calcutta, and muſt go on; and he is now arrived at Burhampore.

In the mean time, repeated advices have been received from Poonah, that the Engliſh of Bombay having paſſed Boregaut came into the plain, where they engaged with the Maratta army; that being ſurrounded by the multitude of the enemy, conſiſting of 80,000, their ſupplies cut off, and they ſubjected to a ſevere and conſtant cannonade, they were obliged to treat of peace, and to deliver up Ragonaut Row, with his family and dependants, to the Poonah Miniſters; to leave two creditable hoſtages with the army for the relinquiſhment of Shaſtie, &c; and to enter into a new treaty, by which they engage for their peaceable behaviour in future, and for the return of the Engliſh detachment on its way from Hoſhingabad; which treaty having been ratified, they returned to Bombay. On the receipt of theſe advices repeated letters were written from hence to Colonel Goddard, requeſting him not to advance, as the Maratta army, conſiſting of near 100,000 horſe, and being now freed from their apprehenſions of the Bombayers and Ragonaut Row, would immediately follow him and ſurround him; that it was therefore expedient he ſhould return, and on no account think of proceeding; but no anſwer has been yet received from the Colonel, and we are left in the greateſt uneaſineſs of what may be the event. In the interim, Karetahs and letters have been received from you by the route of Cuttack, Midnapore, and Morebunge, of Beneras, and alſo through the channel of Colonel Goddard; two letters of congratulation on the capture of Pondicherry; two on the ſubject of eſtabliſhing a Dauk through Midnapore and Moregunge, provided it ſhould be found ſafe and expeditious; two, containing information of your having diſpatched Major Camac with two battalions of Sepoys by the way of Ramgur and Chutteah Naigpore, and intimating, that on his arrival on the borders he would take advice from hence with reſpect to his proceeding to join Colonel Goddard; three very voluminous letters with your ſecret views, and of their coinciding with ours; and ſetting forth, that from our late letters, and the advices you received at the ſame time from Colonel Goddard, you perceive that delays have ariſen in the execution of your views; that you place the greateſt dependance on our hearty ſupport, and implicitly rely on the fortitude and magnanimity of the Maha Rajah, and on my wiſdom and penetration; that from ſentiments of the warmeſt friendſhip you are engaged ſo far in the buſineſs, and now require our aid and ſupport for the completion of it; that it is therefore incumbent on us not to delay it to a future opportunity, but engage warmly in ſuch meaſures as will raiſe the Engliſh * name in Hindoſtan,

It is neceſſary to look back and attentively conſider the circumſtances you allude to: that ſince, in the term of a full year that this correſpondence has ſubſiſted, nothing has been hinted at in your letters but the enmity of the French, and in the mean time Mr. Elliott was deputed hither, perſonally to explain your ſentiments, which on his deceaſe were entruſted to Beneram Pundit, on the ſubſtance of whoſe letters, and the anſwers from this quarter, you were to form your ultimate plan of operations; and that till that time Colonel Goddard was to conduct himſelf by your advice: and anſwers were immediately written in the fulleſt and moſt explicit terms, in the preſence of Mr. Watherſtone, from which I hope you have a clear inſight into every particular; and ſoon after Beneram Pundit and Lalla Ramkaunt were diſpatched with letters to you. And as moreover we have never failed in the performance of the leaſt duty of friendſhip, have given our advice on the meaſures propoſed, pointed out the advantages and diſadvantages to be expected, and propoſed plans for the preſent and future, which our

Appendix, No. 191.

* If this is meant as a quotation, it is a very imperfect if not a falſe one. The words of the letter to which I ſuppoſe it alludes, are theſe: "The eyes of the world are on us both; they have ſeen me ſtruggle through difficulties to the point, at which by your aid I have inſured the "moſt glorious ſucceſs, the termination of which, by the bleſſing of God, will afford peace and laſting ſecurity to the Engliſh dominions in "India; and to you increaſe of power, honour, and immortal reputation."

It may not be unneceſſary to remark, that I have compared the Perſian tranſlation of the above words with the Engliſh, and find it to be as literal as the different idioms of the languages will allow. I have alſo read it to the Governor General, who is of the ſame opinion.

Appendix. No. 191.

knowledge of the cuſtoms and of the affairs of Decan, and the multitude of the Maratta forces on foot, enabled us to do, pointed out the means of effecting the object in view; the neceſſity of taking every ſtep with firmneſs and ſolidity; notwithſtanding all this, and that the Engliſh at Bombay have by their raſhneſs and precipitation, and ill-formed meaſures, reduced themſelves to their preſent ſituation; and the Maratta army amounts to near 100,000 horſe ready for action, and the Nabob Nizam ul Dowla Bahadre is ſtaunchly attached to their party; yet you write confidently that we ſhould, at ſuch a time, engage warmly in the purſuit of your deſigns, and act therein in concert with Colonel Goddard. Whilſt we are not provided with warlike ſtores, with ſufficient forces or treaſure to meet the other party, how can we engage in this dangerous undertaking, upon the ſtrength of mere perſonal bravery alone? Or how can Colonel Goddard adviſe us to ſuch a meaſure? The event would be attended with diſgrace, in like manner as the expedition of the Bombayers has been. On the arrival of Beneram Pundit and Lalla Ramkaunt, all theſe matters will be made clear to you, and we ſhall receive from you ſatisfactory anſwers: you will alſo write to Colonel Goddard to return, and will give Major Camac directions to ſtop, as this is not a ſeaſon for this ſmall body to give proof of their bravery by advancing. On the arrival of Beneram Pundit and Lalla Ramkaunt, after you are acquainted with the points of their commiſſion, and have learnt the ſtate of the Engliſh at Bombay, you will form a ſolid plan on the moſt judicious grounds, for the completion of the important objects in view, and inform us thereof by letters, or ſend both the deputies back.

You will regard this long and explicit letter as dictated ſolely by candour and the warmeſt friendſhip, and a perfect knowledge of the affairs of Decan.

From the firſt arrival of Colonel Goddard, my ſentiments have been inviolably the ſame, and with theſe, and the products of reflection and penetration, have all my letters been filled; this was the ſubſtance of all my letters to you before the late occurrences happened at Bombay, and I ſhall continue without reſerve to give you my ſentiments and advice.

Poſtſcript.—Since I wrote the above, letters have been received from Colonel Goddard at Burhampore, that he has received advices reſpecting the Engliſh at Bombay, but that it is neceſſary he ſhould go to adjuſt the affairs of Bombay; that he can on no account conſent to return. As we have not been wanting in the duties of friendſhip, or in giving him good advice, if he will not take it we have no remedy.

From Siccaram Pundit: received 28th March 1779.

In former times Seremunt Ragonaut Row, inſtigated by certain villainous perſons, was guilty of acts condemned by all religions and laws, the particulars of which acts you are too well acquainted with to make it neceſſary for me to repeat them. By the ſupport of the Governor of Bombay he raiſed commotions in the neighbourhood of Surat: as ſoon as you heard of theſe improper acts, and the unjuſtifiable deſigns of Dada Sahib, you deputed Colonel Upton and Captain M'Pherſon to Seremunt Peiſhwa Purdhaun, to bring about an accommodation, which was neceſſary for the happineſs of the people, and a treaty was concluded under the ſeals of the Engliſh Company and Seremunt Peiſhwa Sahib; and as it is univerſally allowed that friendſhip is preferable to any thing in the world, particularly with the Engliſh nation, who are famous throughout the univerſe for their good faith and ſteady diſpoſition; and as it was believed by all the Powers of the country, that a ſincere friendſhip and union had been formed between the Engliſh Company and Seremunt Peiſhwa Sahib, in ſuch a manner that it ſhould be of perpetual duration in ſpite of all the attempts of our mutual enemies to deſtroy it; and as on the 14th Rujjub letters to this effect were received from you, that as long as the Peiſhwa continued to fill the Muſnud there ſhould be no failure in the engagements contracted, and that an Engliſh detachment had been diſpatched over land for the reinforcement of Bombay; although you muſt have known, that from the moſt diſtant period to the preſent time no Engliſh forces had ever paſſed that way overland, and that they would be oppoſed in the dominions of the Circar. But to paſs over this: your other officer of this detachment, in the firſt inſtance, on his croſſing the Summum took poſſeſſion of the fort of Culpee, in the Circar's dominions, at the inſtigation of Ragonaut Row's Vackeels, whom he carried with him, and afterwards proceeded forwards in the deſign to injure the Circar's territories. In purſuit of this plan he attacked the Bundlecund Chiefs, between whom and the family of the Peiſhwa the moſt intimate friendſhip has ſubſiſted for a term of 50 years, and you engaged that our friends and enemies ſhould be common, and plundered theirs and the Circar's country. Neceſſity obliged the officers of the Circars, for the ſecurity and protection of the territories entruſted to them, to follow and obſerve the motions of the detachment. The particulars of this you muſt have heard from other quarters; but what is moſt ſurpriſing is, that the Governor and Council of Bombay, in concert with Ragonaut, have raiſed diſturbances, and ſuddenly ſent their forces to the Gauts, which are only 20 coſs from Poonah, and another detachment of Europeans are raiſing commotions in Cokun. I implicitly relied on your ſincerity and good faith, which is in the mouths of all ranks of people, otherwiſe I ſhould have diſpatched an army to Hindoſtan, and ſettled matters.

The Governor of Bombay, who was from of old the diſturber of peace and friendſhip, notwithſtanding your poſitive injunctions to ſettle all points between us, and not to afford an aſylum to Ragonaut Row in any part of the Company's territories, paid no attention thereto. I alſo wrote him repeatedly to fulfil the articles reſpecting the Circar, and to receive thoſe which had relation to the Company. To this likewiſe he turned a deaf ear, and in oppoſition thereto wrote you fictions mixed with ſome truth. He made uſe of the opportunity of the arrival of a French Vackeel here to confirm his repreſentations; but God knows what he wrote to you on the ſubject. I on the firſt hint from you gave him his diſmiſſion, without having any conference with him. Keep juſtice in view, and be yourſelf the judge, who was the cauſe of the troubles which have ariſen. We are now about to attack the forces which are arrived at the Gauts. The detachment ſent by land to this quarter, is in the neighbourhood of Bopaul. I encloſe to Lalla Sewuk Ram, who will deliver it to you, a Perſian copy of a letter, under the ſeals of Ragonaut, and the honourable General of Bombay, addreſſed to the Sirdars of this Government, and other Powers. You are endued with wiſdom, which has induced me to write theſe particulars. Conſider maturely on whoſe ſide the blame lies. There is no remedy againſt the decrees of Providence, and God is the diſpoſer of States and wealth. I have never deviated from the duties of friendſhip and union.

Tranſlation of a Paper delivered by Beneram Pundit, on the part of Maha Rajah Moodajee Bhoſitah.

Delivered for tranſlation the 28th March 1779.

The Almighty Creator of the heavens and the earth, the Enlightener of the ſun and moon, who ſpread out the carpet of the earth, and placed on it animals, vegetables, and mountains compoſed of the four elements; who formed the human race, and the whole univerſe, and gave beauty to the ſeven climates of the globe, ornamenting them with monarchs and illuſtrious characters, the Feeder both of the great and ſmall, agreeably to their different ſtations, is witneſs of the following propoſals, which from firſt to laſt are compounded of religion, good faith, ſincerity, candour and the knowledge and fear of God, and under the ſanction of his mighty name, this mutual treaty, on the conditions following, ſhall remain unſhaken from generation to generation, to the end of time.

1ſt. The Raje of Sittara, the ſtrong forts, places, and dependencies thereon, were reduced to ſubjection, or created by the power of Maha Raja Savajee Bhoſila; and it is the indiſpenſable duty of all the ſubjects or ſervants of the ſaid Raje, on all occaſions to preſerve the rights of the aforeſaid Rajah, by ſubmiſſion and obedience to the government of his deſcendants, whether by the male or female line; it is therefore incumbent on me to place on the Muſnud of the Rajah, the neareſt lineal deſcendant of that family, and to uſe all my endeavours for the ſupport of his government and power; and from the very firſt to the preſent period this conduct has been invariably purſued by my family to the illuſtrious line on the Muſnud, which is in fact the ſame family, and no ſtep has been taken, inconſiſtent with the duties of obedience and religion. Whenever there remains no lineal deſcendant of the ſaid bleſſed Rajah, by the favour of God, my family is worthy of the illuſtrious rank of the Muſnud of this Raje; the hereditary right is in no other. On this point your aid and aſſiſtance is more particularly neceſſary.

2dly. At the time when we in concert regulate the affairs of the Sittara Rajah, every chief or miniſter, who unjuſtly makes oppoſition thereto, and calls in another; as for inſtance the Nabob to his party, regarding both of them inimical, and receiving them, whatever places or territories dependant on ſuch chief (the Nabob) ſhall come into our poſſeſſion, after ſeparating the Soubah of Berar, which belongs to me, and relinquiſhing of the remainder, ſuch places and territories as belong to our ally in this war; what is then left ſhall be divided in equal proportions between us, and our ally ſatisfied in the manner above mentioned.

3dly. If any enemy ariſes againſt you, and on your written application, aſſiſtance is afforded you from hence; or if any one looks with an hoſtile eye on me, and at my application I receive aſſiſtance from you; in caſe of the arrival of forces to the aſſiſtance of either, it is fit that the perſon making the application ſhould defray the expence of the expedition. In the ſequel I have fixed on a mode for the regulation of this, which is, that when forces go from hence to your aid, their pay be ſettled conformably to the treaty of the Nabob Mohabut Jung Bahadre, viz. to every horſeman one rupee per diem, and to particular ones five rupees; to Semuldars and Sirdars according to their reſpective rank and ſtation, from 20 to 100 rupees, and even more, ſhould their rank demand it. And when your troops come to my aſſiſtance, they ſhall receive, one battalion per month, when in cantonments or fixed at any place, 10,000 R*; when in motion 13,000, beſides this, an allowance to the officer ſuitable to his rank; and whatever profits may ariſe from the operations of our joint forces, excluſive of the ſoubas or dependencies of either party, after debiting the party receiving aid, for the expence of the force afforded him, ſhall be divided in equal proportions between us; and whoever joins himſelf to us in theſe deſigns, from amongſt the Sirdars of note, with a good body of forces, we are both bound to ſatisfy him in proportion to the aſſiſtance he has brought us.

4thly. Let the ties of friendſhip and union, from generation to generation, be firmly knit and eſtabliſhed between us, and our friends and enemies common to each. Should it happen that one who is my friend ſhould be an enemy to you, I will interfere and make him your friend. In caſe the enemies of either will not hearken to propoſals of accommodation, we will form a plan in concert, and by ſome means or other bring them over to our views; firſt trying the mode of advice and gentle perſuaſion, and if that fails, by force and chaſtiſement; but in a word, the moderate way ought firſt to be tried. In like manner, ſhould any one who is a friend to you be in enmity to me, you ſhall make him my friend.

5thly. Should any one interrupt the ſettlement of the Raje, and the Nabob affords him no kind of aid or ſupport, in this caſe, after having made ourſelves fully acquainted with the merits of the caſe, we will in concert determine, whether it will be adviſable to keep on friendly or inimical terms with the ſaid Nabob.

6thly. The Soubah of Ouſſa, commonly called Cuttack, has been from ancient time a dependency of mine, and the borders of the ſaid Soubah join your territory: whenever at any time diſputes ſhall ariſe between the borderers of our territories on any trifling matter, in this caſe it is incumbent on both parties to make ſtrict inveſtigation thereunto, and whoever may be found culpable, ſhould be puniſhed by the party to whom they belong. This will tend greatly to the promotion of friendſhip and harmony between us.

7th. From the Soubah of Bengal the ſum of twelve lacks of rupees for the Sircar, and two lacks of rupees for Durbar charges, altogether fourteen lacks of rupees; and preſents of various kinds, were annually remitted, from the time of the Nabob Mohabut Jung to the time of the Nabob Meer Mahomed Jaffier Khan's Government, and were regularly diſcharged to this Government: Coſſim Ally Cawn, in the time of his Soubadarry, fulfilled the engagement for one or two years, after which he broke through this eſtabliſhed cuſtom, and God, who rules by juſtice, brought on him the fruits of it, and the country of Bengal devolved to the Engliſh; on this account a Vackeel from hence has conſtantly reſided with you, and from the knowledge I have of your religious principles, good faith, uprightneſs, integrity, knowledge of the Deity, and piety, under the auſpices of which your ſhips of the greateſt burden, like the moſques of the upright, ſail over the light waves, and give you immenſe wealth, and which is even become a proverb throughout the world, I am perfectly ſatisfied that you will ſettle this matter. It is therefore incumbent on you to adjuſt this matter; and knowing the right, that you fulfil it, although weighed in the ſcales of theſe great deſigns, which are to give us territories and wealth in Decan and Hindoſtan, the tribute of Bengal is an object unworthy of being mentioned; but as it was acquired by my anceſtors, and is my inheritance, and it is neceſſary to preſerve this before all, and then to apply to other plans; your conſent and approbation to this is therefore neceſſary.

8thly. Let a lineal deſcendant of Maha Rajah Chuttebutty Sewajee Bhoſila continue on the Muſnud of the Sittara Rajah; but till the power and authority of the Raje is eſtabliſhed nothing is done. Let us therefore unite, not in appearance only, but in reality, and together with other allies, who are warmly attached to us, purſue every meaſure to eſtabliſh the Rajah firmly in the Raje; and inflicting exemplary puniſhment on every one who ſhall oppoſe or obſtruct this eſtabliſhment, let us uſe our endeavours to put the affairs of the Raje in a proſperous and flouriſhing ſituation. In this caſe, our giving ſtability to the Raje and Rajah will redound greatly to your honour, and will on my part be complying with the duties of a ſubject, in like manner as I have ever done, by an attention to the family on the Raje; and as long as any deſcendants of Maha Rajah Chatterbutty is on the Muſnud of Sittara, my religion points out to me obedience, and with ſuch conduct God is well pleaſed. As by theſe acts the Raje will owe great obligations to the Engliſh, in return for theſe kindneſſes, I will procure grants to them of ports on the ſea coaſt, ſuch as Buſſie, Salſette, and their dependencies; and moreover one or two forts fit for the complete ſettlement of the affairs of the Raje, and the eſtabliſhment of the Rajah upon Sittara. One half of the wealth of the opponents of theſe meaſures, and of the income of their territories, which ſhall come into our hands, ſhall be appropriated to defray the expence of the Engliſh forces, which come to ſupport the meaſures, and whoever will become our ally in this expedition ſhall be completely rewarded by both parties, and the perpetual treaty which ſhall be concluded between you and the Rajah on the moſt ſolid baſis ſhall be engraved by me on a tablet of braſs, and ſhall be returned by you under the ſignatures of the auguſt King, the Directors of the Company, and the Council; let it be ratified likewiſe by ſolemn oaths, that no deviation may ever ariſe therein. And if the Engliſh are engaged in war, the forces of Maha Raja Chatterbutty ſhall be ſent to their aid, and nothing demanded for the expences; and if hoſtilities break out againſt the Raje, Engliſh forces ſhall be ſent on application for its ſupport, and nothing required for their expences. As the armies of the Raje have from ancient time, made expeditions to Hindoſtan, and the Villaet Afghans quit their own border, which is at Keybur and enter Hindoſtan, where they have once or twice made dreadful attacks on the armies of Decan, and defeated them; the aſſiſtance of the Engliſh is peculiarly required to chaſtize them, and the Rajahs of Hindoſtan; and whatever advantages are derived from the expedition, either in wealth or territory, half of it ſhall be given to the Engliſh: I will cauſe a treaty to this effect under the ſeal of Maha Rajah Chatterbutty to be delivered to you, on condition that the Rajah's authority is eſtabliſhed.

APPENDIX, No. 192.

Bengal Secret Perſian Correſpondence.

To Moodajee Bhoſila. Written the 6th April 1779.

I HAVE received your letters; they are long, and dictated with the ſame friendſhip and wiſdom with which all your former letters have been written; but as the great object of them all is now entirely at an end, it is unneceſſary to recapitulate the ſubſtance of them. Beneram Pundit is arrived, and has delivered to me the paper which you entruſted to his charge; at his deſire, in obedience to your poſitive injunctions, and the oath which I underſtand he ſwore to perform them, the paper was delivered, and opened in the preſence of Ramkaunt Moonſhy, and read to me by him. Having fully underſtood the contents, I have returned the paper to Beneram Pundit at his particular requeſt, that it might be ſent back in its original ſtate to you; this alſo being as I underſtand a part of his inſtructions. Reſpecting the different points contained therein, they are ſuch as will not admit either of negociation or comment. I conceive them to have been intended as an indirect but deciſive anſwer upon a ſubject in its own nature ſo delicate, and rendered more ſo by the paſt interchange of our ſentiments upon it, and our known mutual wiſhes, that you apparently choſe this indirect method of declining to engage any further in it, rather than to relinquiſh it by an abrupt declaration, which might have been conſtrued unſuitable to the friendſhip and cordiality which have hitherto ſubſiſted ſince ſo long a period, and which I hope will ever ſubſiſt between your family and the Company and Engliſh nation; otherwiſe it was certainly unneceſſary to have ſent a perſon, honoured with ſo high a degree of your confidence as Beneram Pundit poſſeſſes, upon ſo long and perilous a journey, merely to give me the information which might have been expreſſed by a letter containing no more than a ſingle line. What is paſt is paſt; of the deſign I had formed, I ſhall totally relinquiſh all future thoughts, but of your paſt kindneſs I ſhall retain a laſting remembrance.

When I firſt wrote you that an Engliſh army had been appointed to proceed to the other ſide of India, and deſired you to aſſiſt it in its progreſs, you immediately returned an anſwer, expreſſing your cheerful compliance, and not contented with bare profeſſions, which are oftener the maſk of deceit than the indication of ſincerity, you wrote at the ſame time to the commander of our forces, inviting him to paſs through your country, you ſent a perſon of rank and truſt to wait on the borders of your dominions with a ſtore of proviſions for their ſubſiſtence, you cauſed them to be entertained in the long ſtay they made in your country with all the dues of hoſpitality, and have continued the ſame conduct to them ſince his departure. Theſe are not complimentary or equivocal, but real and ſubſtantial acts of friendſhip: as ſuch it is, eſpecially at this time, incumbent on me to expreſs the ſenſe that I entertain of them, as it is my wiſh, and ſhall be my care, to make every ſuitable return to them, whenever any future occaſion of your affairs ſhall demand it.

I have ordered Major Camac to remain within the borders of Bengal, and not to proceed any further, but have not yet determined whether he ſhall return to Calcutta, or join any other part of our army; this muſt depend upon future contingencies.

Poſtſcript.—Since I wrote the above I have received a letter from Major Camac, informing me that orders had been ſent him by Col. Goddard to proceed forwards and join him, provided it ſhould be agreeable to you, without whoſe inſtructions he was to take no ſtep; that for this purpoſe, the Colonel had written to you, requeſting that you would either ſend a paſſport to Major Camac, or intimate to him your diſapproval of his proceeding, in which latter caſe he would lay aſide the deſign; that the Coſſids ſent to you by the Colonel having been detained five days at Naigpore, and then bringing him no letter or inſtructions from you, he had conceived it a tacit conſent to his march; and that for private reaſons you might not chuſe to truſt it to writing, and that he was therefore marching on ſlowly. As this meaſure is by no means agreeable to me, I have written to Major Camac to return within our borders.

To Siccaram Pundit and Balajee Pundit. Written 6th April 1779.

I have received your letter, containing various complaints of the Governor and Council of Bombay, and other particulars, which I fully underſtand.

This letter not having been as uſual accompanied by one from the Peiſhwa, I think it neceſſary to inform you of it, leſt, ſhould one have been written, and miſcarried in the way, there might appear an impropriety in my not returning an anſwer to it.

I have heard by various channels ſome particulars of the late events on that ſide of India, and have received ſome little and imperfect intelligence relative thereto from the gentlemen of Bombay; but till my knowledge of thoſe matters is more complete and authentic, I muſt ſuſpend my judgment reſpecting the rectitude of the conduct of the members of that Government. I hear, with the greateſt ſurprize, that the Chiefs of the army from Bombay have made a convention with you without the authority of this Government, which you well know was indiſpenſably neceſſary for an act of that nature, and that the conditions of it are very injurious to the rights of the Company, and the honour of the Engliſh name. I have not yet received a copy of it; but whatever it may be, it is incumbent on me to take the earlieſt occaſion to diſavow it, and to declare it null.

This declaration ought to be unneceſſary to you, to whom the like information was given in form on the deputation of Colonel Upton.

The paſt cannot be recalled; but for the future it is my firm wiſh, that as I laboured before, however ineffectually, to conciliate the differences which had ariſen between you and the Government of Bombay, and which prevented the execution of the treaty made through Colonel Upton, peace may be yet reſtored, and all paſt grievances buried in oblivion. For this purpoſe I, and the Counſellors of this Government have authorized Colonel Goddard to negociate and conclude with you, in the name and on behalf of the Company, a new treaty, confirming that made by Colonel Upton, on theſe conditions, viz. That you relinquiſh all claims derived from the unauthorized act of our army, and which could not even have received the ſanction of the Preſidency of Bombay; and that you alſo engage never to grant the French, who are the enemies of our nation, any ſettlement or reſidence in the ports of the Peiſhwa, nor to admit the forces of the French into any part of his dominions, nor to form any alliance, nor hold any connection with them, either for traffic or otherwiſe.

On theſe conditions we offer you the friendſhip of the Company, and of the Engliſh nation for ever. If you reject them we are remedileſs, and blameleſs of the conſequences, whatever they may be, as peace or war depend on your determination.

For further particulars I muſt refer you to Colonel Goddard, to whom I have granted full powers for the purpoſes above-mentioned, and deſire that you will regard him accordingly as the Miniſter and Repreſentative of this Government, and his acts done under this authority as the acts of this Government, of the Company, and of the Engliſh nation.

To the Peiſhwa. Written the 6th April 1779.

In ſubſtance the ſame as the foregoing.

To Madho Row Sindeah. Written 28th April 1779.

I have been favoured with your letter on the ſubject, ſaid to have been formed by the Bombay Government, with other particulars, which I perfectly underſtand.

I have heard by various channels ſome particulars of the events you allude to, but having yet received no authentic accounts of the motives by which the Governor and Council of Bombay have been actuated in the meaſures they have adopted, I muſt ſuſpend my judgment of their conduct, in which this Government had neither ſhare nor knowledge.

The aſtoniſhment I was in, to learn that the Chiefs of the Bombay army had made a convention with the Maratta Government, of a nature ſo highly injurious to the rights of the Company and diſhonourable to the Engliſh name, could only be increaſed by the information, that a Chief ſo renowned for wiſdom, and who has invariably ſhewn a deſire of friendſhip with the Company, ſhould join in accepting a treaty from perſons entirely unempowered to perform an act of that nature, and in dictating ſuch terms as it is the higheſt diſgrace to any perſons aſſuming the Engliſh name to have conſented to. Neither thoſe perſons, nor the Government they are immediately under, had any authority to form treaties with the Powers of India and Hindoſtan. This information was given in form to the Maratta State on the deputation of Colonel Upton; had it been otherwiſe, and the Government of Bombay had been in poſſeſſion of ſuch powers, where would have been the neceſſity or propriety of deputing Colonel Upton to ſet aſide the treaty which that Government had formed with Ragonaut Row, and to conclude a new one on the part of this Government, which alone of all the Company's ſettlements in India has the power of performing ſuch acts? In this caſe the treaty concluded by them muſt have been preſerved; but in the preſent inſtance it does not appear that the Gentlemen who ſigned the papers preſented to you at Tellegong had even the authority of the Government of Bombay for ſuch an act; ſo that it was in every reſpect an idle and ineffectual engagement. It is therefore incumbent on me to take the earlieſt opportunity of declaring to you, that the treaty you allude to is in itſelf abſolutely null and void. It is probable that you were not fully acquainted with the powers of the Engliſh Government in caſes of this nature; but thoſe on whoſe behalf you appeared are without a ſhadow or plea for complaint, ſince in accepting the convention of the Chiefs of the army they muſt have oppoſed their own certain conviction of its invalidity.

The paſt cannot be recalled, but for the future, it is my firm wiſh, that as I laboured before, however ineffectually, to conciliate the differences which had ariſen between your Government and that of Bombay, and which prevented the execution of the treaty made through Colonel Upton, peace may yet be reſtored, and all paſt grievances buried in oblivion. Appendix. No. 192.

For this purpoſe, I and the counſellors of this Government have authorized Colonel Goddard to negociate and conclude with the managers of the Maratta State in the name and on behalf of the Company, a new treaty confirming that made by Colonel Upton, on theſe conditions, viz. that they relinquiſh all claims derived from the unauthorized act of our army; an act ſo diſhonourable that I may not conſider any one as a friend who ſhall adviſe the execution of it; and that they alſo engage never to grant the French, the enemies of my nation, any ſettlement or reſidence in any of the ports of the Peiſhwa, nor to admit the forces of the French into any part of his dominions, nor to form any alliance, nor hold any connection with them either for traffic or otherwiſe.

On theſe conditions we offer the friendſhip of the Company and Engliſh nation for ever; ſhould they be rejected, we are remedileſs, and blameleſs of the conſequences, whatever they may be.

It is well known it is my wiſh, as it is conſonant to the orders of my ſuperiors, to live in peace with all the Powers of India, whilſt they will permit me ſo to do, and I am more particularly anxious to continue on good terms with you, with whoſe worth I am ſo well acquainted. To this, and the conſtant inclination you have ſhewn to maintain a friendſhip with the Engliſh, I truſt that you will exert your influence in promoting peace on the reaſonable terms now offered, and will effect the concluſion of ſuch a treaty with Colonel Goddard as I have propoſed above, and thereby enſure the reſtoration of friendſhip and harmony between the Peiſhwa and Company, and your own good name.

To Siccaram Pundit. Written 7th May 1779.

I wrote you ſome time ago in conſequence of the reports which I had heard of the events on that ſide of India, and expreſſed my ſentiments on them as fully as the imperfect intelligence I had received would admit of, declaring to you that the treaty ſaid to have been concluded between you and the Chiefs of the Bombay army, of which I had likewiſe heard, was null and void; ſince that time I have received your ſubſequent letter, encloſing me a copy of the engagement in queſtion, and the aſtoniſhment I was in to learn from the peruſal of it, that the Chiefs of the Bombay army had made a convention with you, ſo highly injurious to the rights of the Company, and diſhonourable to the Engliſh name, could only be increaſed to find that you had accepted a treaty from perſons entirely unempowered to form an act of that nature, and had dictated ſuch terms, as it is the higheſt diſgrace to any perſons aſſuming the Engliſh name to have conſented to; as you could not be ignorant that neither thoſe perſons nor the Government they are immediately under had any authority to form treaties with the Powers of India, ſince this information was given to you in form on the deputation of Colonel Upton. Had it been otherwiſe, and the Government of Bombay had been in poſſeſſion of ſuch powers, where would have been the neceſſity or propriety of deputing Colonel Upton to ſet aſide the treaty which that Government had formed with Ragonaut Row, and to conclude a new one on the part of this Government, which alone, of all the Company's ſettlements in India, has the power of performing ſuch acts? In this caſe, the treaty concluded by them muſt have been preſerved; but in the preſent inſtance, it does not appear that the gentlemen, who ſigned the papers preſented to you at Tellegong, had even the authority of the Government of Bombay for ſuch an act; act; ſo that it was in every reſpect an idle and ineffectual engagement, and I here repeat my diſavowal of it, it being of itſelf null and void.

Appendix. Nos. 192 & 193.

Nor can you have any reaſon to complain, ſince in accepting it, you muſt have acted againſt your own conviction of the invalidity of ſuch an act.

It is well known that it is my wiſh to live in peace with all the Powers of India, whilſt they will permit me to do ſo. I have already informed you of the terms on which you may ſecure the perpetual friendſhip of the Company and Engliſh nation; ſhould you reject them we are remedileſs, and blameleſs of the conſequences, whatever they may be; but I make no doubt, when you reflect on the reaſonableneſs of the terms offered, you will cheerfully comply, and conclude with Colonel Goddard ſuch a treaty as I have propoſed, by which friendſhip and harmony may be reſtored and perpetuated between the Peiſhwa and Company, and your good name eſtabliſhed.

To Moodajee Bhoſila. Written the 12th May 1779.

Accompanying I have the pleaſure to ſend you a duplicate of my laſt letter, the original of which I hope you have long ago received. As the rainy ſeaſon is approaching, I have directed Major Camac to return into the interior parts of the provinces.

You muſt doubtleſs have heard the full particulars of the late events, which have happened on that ſide of India, and of the unfortunate concluſion of the precipitated and ill-conducted expedition, ſet on foot by the Preſidency of Bombay, of the improper convention made by the Chiefs, who accompanied the Bombay army, and of the arrival of Colonel Goddard at Surat. On theſe circumſtances I think it needleſs to enlarge or comment, any further than to inform you that this Government do not conceive themſelves bound to abide by engagements contracted by perſons who, not having even the ſanction of the Government of Bombay for ſuch an act, it can be regarded in no other light than a private act of individuals, and have therefore diſavowed and declared it abſolutely null. So far is ſuch an act from being binding on us, that even the Government of Bombay have not authority without our concurrence, to engage in any ſuch meaſure, the ſole authority in all political matters being veſted by the King and Parliament of England in the Governor and Council of Bengal.

This was made the foundation of Colonel Upton's deputation, and public notice given thereof to the Miniſters, who can therefore have no right to complain of our diſavowal of a treaty, which they accepted againſt their own conviction of the inſufficiency and invalidity of it; nor can ſuch diſavowal reflect any diſcredit on our good faith, ſince no State can be ſuppoſed to be bound by the unauthorized engagement of individuals of it. As I wiſh for peace, as long as it can be preſerved with honour I have offered to the Miniſters to renew the treaty concluded through Colonel Upton, upon condition that they formally relinquiſh all claims founded upon the aforeſaid convention, and engage never to hold any connection with our enemies the French. If they agree to the reaſonable terms, it is well, peace and harmony will be re-eſtabliſhed, if they reject them they only will be to blame for the conſequences, for which I am now fully prepared.

As from the intimate friendſhip which has long ſubſiſted between us; and as reſerve does not become the boſom of a friend, and as the intereſts of our reſpective dominions are the ſame, I have communicated all theſe particulars for your information.

Beneram Pundit has read to me the ſubſtance of a letter which he has written to you, in conſequence of ſome converſations which have paſſed between us; and what he has ſaid reſpecting my ſentiments, entirely coincides with them. As he has been much indiſpoſed for ſome time paſt, and wiſhes to change the air for that of Benares; and as there are no affairs at preſent depending between us, that can make his ſtay neceſſary, I have given him my permiſſion to go thither.

To the Nabob Nizam ul Dowla. Written the 3d June 1779.

I ſome months ago wrote you very fully on the ſubject of the intrigues of the French with the Poonah Miniſters; the diſpatch of a detachment of Engliſh forces for the reinforcement of Bombay; and my determination to overlook the bad conduct of the Miniſters, and to preſerve friendſhip with them, provided they relinquiſhed all connection with our enemies the French. You are doubtleſs acquainted with the late events on that ſide of India, and the unfortunate concluſion of the precipitate and ill-conducted expedition ſet on foot by the Government of Bombay, in which this Government had neither ſhare nor knowledge, with the improper convention made by the Chiefs who accompanied the Bombay army, and with the arrival of Colonel Goddard at Surat. On theſe circumſtances I think it needleſs to enlarge or comment, any further than to inform you that this Government do not think themſelves bound to abide by engagements contracted by perſons not having even the ſanction of the Government of Bombay for ſuch an act; it can be regarded in no other light than a private engagement of individuals; and have therefore diſavowed it, and declared it abſolutely null. So far is ſuch an act from being binding on us, that even the Government of Bombay have not authority, without our concurrence, to engage in any ſuch meaſure; the ſole authority in all political matters being veſted by the King and Parliament of England, in the Governor and Council of Bengal.

This was made the foundation of Colonel Upton's deputation, and public notice given thereof to the Miniſters; who can therefore have no right to complain of our diſavowal of a treaty which they accepted againſt their own conviction, of the inſufficiency and invalidity of it; nor can ſuch diſavowal reflect any diſcredit on our good faith, ſince no State can be ſuppoſed to be bound by the unauthorized engagements of individuals of it. As I wiſh for peace as long as it can be preſerved with honour, I have offered to the Miniſters to renew the treaty concluded through Colonel Upton, upon condition that they formally relinquiſh all claims founded upon the aforeſaid convention, and engage never to hold any connection with our enemies the French. If they agree to the reaſonable terms, it is well; peace and harmony may be re-eſtabliſhed; if they reject them, they only will be to blame for the conſequences, for which I am now fully prepared.

I have explained myſelf thus fully to you, becauſe I wiſh to preſerve inviolable the friendſhip and engagements which have ſo long ſubſiſted between you and the Company; and I am fully convinced that you, actuated by the ſame motive, will take every means for the continuance and increaſe of it.

APPENDIX, Nos. 193 and 194.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 3d May 1779.

PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident;

Richard Barwell, and Philip Francis, } Eſquires.

Mr. Wheler at Beercbol for the benefit of his health.

Sir Eyre Coote forming military arrangements.

READ the following letters from Colonel Goddard.

Gentlemen,

It is with particular ſatisfaction I can inform you of the arrival of your forces under my command at Surat yeſterday morning. I before acquainted you, in a letter from from Berhampore, with my intention of purſuing the route to that city, and my reaſons for ſo doing; which I explained afterwards more fully in my addreſs of the 9th inſtant. Theſe letters having been tranſmitted in triplicate, will, I hope, have reached you ſafe; and the conduct I have purſued on the occaſion, be ſuch as to merit your approbation.

Not doubting but the Poonah Durbar, as it was their intereſt ſo to do, would endeavour to moleſt and interrupt my march, I thought it adviſable to proceed with all the celerity in my power; and it is owing to the expedition I have uſed, that the troops reached this place without oppoſition; for the day of my arrival, I received a letter from Mr. Farmer, in the camp of Mahadjee Scindia, encloſing another from the Select Committee, which informed me of the Miniſters having detached about 20,000 of their beſt and moſt choſen horſe to ſurprize me: I therefore conceive they have been diſappointed in their views of attacking me in the heart of their own country; and will now, in all probability, to prevent an appearance of hoſtilities on their part, return without ſhewing themſelves in my neighbourhood, as no intelligence of their motions has yet reached from any other quarter.

I am happy in the opportunity now afforded me, of recommending to your notice the good behaviour of the troops in general, who have performed the march from the Nurbuddah to this place, with a cheerfulneſs and alacrity that gives the moſt favourable preſage of their future ſervices; in particular from Burhampore, which is a diſtance of near three hundred miles, we have arrived at Surat in twenty days, including three halting ones. I muſt obſerve to you, that I experienced, in the moſt eminent degree, the good effect of thoſe principles of moderation which had before directed me, in the aſſiſtance I received from the inhabitants on the road, who continued in poſſeſſion of their villages, and voluntarily ſupplied me with proviſions and grain. This readineſs on their part was of particular uſe at this time; becauſe although I had before my leaving Burhampore, collected a ſufficient quantity to ſupply the troops on the road, the rapidity of my march was ſuch, that many of the carts upon which I was obliged to tranſport it, were unable to accompany me; ſo that but for this continued ſupply I received daily, my progreſs would have been a good deal retarded, from the neceſſity there would have been of adapting my motions to the length of road they could travel.

I cannot acquaint you with the preſent views of the Bombay Government, having received no advices from them, ſince their being informed of my near approach to Surat; but as I have from time to time communicated to them my progreſs, I hope to hear from them every day, when I ſhall immediately make known to you their inſtructions. At the ſame time, I am flattered with the expectation of receiving your full inſtructions relative to my ſituation in command of your forces acting under this Preſidency.

I am ſorry to acquaint you with the death of Captain William Campbell of the fourth battalion of Sepoys, who joined the detachment by the way of Naigpore, reduced at that time by a diſorder he caught on the journey from Calcutta; but which did not deſtroy him till within a day's march of this place.

I beg to inform you, that the troops are encamped upon a convenient and healthy ſpot of ground, two miles above the city, upon the bank of the river Taptee.

I have the honour to be, &c.

26th February 1779.

Gentlemen,

I had the honour to addreſs you the 20th ultimo, informing you of my arrival at Surat the preceding day, ſince which nothing material has occurred worthy of communicating.

I have received a letter from the Select Committee at Bombay, expreſſing their deſire to ſee me with the earlieſt convenience; on which account I purpoſe ſetting out immediately, leaving the troops encamped in the neighbourhood of this city, in order that no time may be loſt in laying before you the ſtate of affairs at this ſettlement, and coming to a reſolution upon the meaſures moſt proper to be hereafter purſued. I find it rather troubleſome to ſettle the rate of exchange with the merchants of this city, who ſeem inclined to take advantage of the preſſing want they think I am in of a ſupply of money; but as my ſituation is by no means ſo neceſſitous or without reſource as it was, I ſhall not come to any terms with them that are not very moderate and proper, which I am in expectation of being ſoon able to effect. Appendix. No. 193.

When the troops were in the neighbourhood of Burhampore, I received a ſum of money of Nuggeen Doſs, the Gomaſtah of Gopaul Doſs, in my camp, at the rate of 99 Naigpore rupees for each 100 ſiccas payable in Calcutta. The amount for which I have drawn the bill is 60,000, the exchange is 2½ per cent. dearer than what the bills you tranſmitted me on Naigpore were received at; and the man urges in excuſe for this increaſe, the difficulty he had in procuring even this ſmall ſupply at Burhampore, where his maſter has no eſtabliſhed houſe, and the advanced price he was obliged to pay the merchants for what he could collect at that place.

I have the honour, &c.

the 2d March 1779.

Gentlemen,

I did myſelf the honour of addreſſing you from Surat the 2d inſtant, acquainting you with my intention of ſetting out immediately for Bombay. Owing to the veſſels not being in readineſs ſo ſoon as was ſuppoſed, and the unexpected length of the paſſage, I did not arrive at this place till the 15th. Having made the Select Committee a report of the ſtate of the forces under my command, ordered from your Preſidency for the aſſiſtance of this ſettlement, I received a letter from them informing me of the miſcarriage of a letter from you, encloſing a copy of your inſtructions to Mr. Elliott, which they therefore requeſted I would furniſh them with, and alſo give them ſuch information reſpecting my embaſſy at the Court of Berar, as might tend to diſcover to them the nature of the intended connection with Moodajee Booſla.

Conceiving it for the intereſt of the Company's affairs that they ſhould have as thorough a knowledge as poſſible of this buſineſs, in order to prevent their adopting meaſures which might counteract the views of your Government, I wrote them a letter in reply, of which the encloſed is a copy. I cannot at preſent acquaint you with the political ſyſtem the gentlemen at Bombay mean to embrace, or the plan of operations intended for the forces under my command; as far as it may reſt with me you may be aſſured of my acting conſiſtent with the inſtructions given me for my guidance, and to promote the obvious advantage and improvement of the Company's ſettlements in the weſtern quarter of India. It is with particular ſatisfaction I can declare to you the confidence I place in the courage and attachment of the troops under me, who are prepared and willing to carry into execution whatever may be reſolved upon. I purpoſe ſetting out to join the army at Surat very ſoon, when I will without loſs of time communicate to you the plan adopted for the immediate diſpoſal of the troops, and during the approaching rainy ſeaſon.

The Select Committee have tranſmitted you a particular account of the late expedition to Poonah, which is referred to your conſideration and deciſion, together with the ſeveral tranſactions that have occurred ſince and conſequent to that unfortunate affair. It is therefore unneceſſary for me to ſay any thing further upon this buſineſs, which they will themſelves no doubt take pains to explain explain fully to you. You will find from their relation of circumſtances that the ſituation of this Government reſpecting the Marattas is as follows: The authority by which the diſgraceful convention was concluded at Pilligong, has been declared illegal and inadmiſſible, and of courſe it remains uncomplied with in all its parts. The Vackeel from Mahadjee Scindia has been given to underſtand ſo, and has returned with this anſwer to his maſter: if the Marattas attempt to obtain a performance of the articles by force, the Committee may think themſelves juſtified in commencing hoſtilities; as I am however of opinion, notwithſtanding a report which now prevails of their having attacked a ſmall fort belonging to us called Bancoote or Fort Victoria, that the Government of Poonah will be ſatisfied with the advantage they have gained, and not wiſh to provoke upon themſelves a war, the conſequence of which might be fatal to their party; I do not apprehend a rupture on their ſide, unleſs actually joined by an armament of the French. The operations in this quarter will therefore depend upon the deciſion you may give, and the meaſures you may find it neceſſary to adopt for the regulation of affairs here; and I beg to aſſure you of my entire devotion to your deſire, and my reſolution to promote the views of your Government, for the honour and intereſt of the Company in their fulleſt extent, as far as lies within my power. I before took the liberty of ſoliciting your particular inſtructions relative to my connection with the Adminiſtration of Bombay, on which ſubject I hope to hear from you every day, as well as regarding the negociations with Moodajee Booſla, which continue in the ſame ſtate I formerly deſcribed to you.

I beg to acquaint you with my having drawn on you in favour of Perwarry Doſs, banker in Surat, for ſix lacks of Bengal Sicca rupees. The rate of exchange, which was the moſt favourable I could get, although I wrote to Mr. Boddam, Chief at Surat, on the ſubject ſome time before my arrival, was fixed at 95 Surat rupees for each 100 Siccas.

A young gentleman named William Charles Alſton, a very near relation to Lieutenant Alſton, of the Bengal eſtabliſhment, has ſolicited my leave to join the detachment as a volunteer, which I have permitted him to do; but without any allowances, till I can be honoured with your commands reſpecting him. As he appears to be a young man of ſpirit, and promiſes to make a good officer, I beg to recommend him to your favourable attention.

I have the honour, &c.

Bombay, March 21ſt 1779. (Signed) Tho' Goddard.

Gentlemen,

I am favoured with your letter of the 17th inſtant, requeſting a copy of the inſtructions given by the Bengal Government on the ſubject of an alliance with the Rajah of Berar, and any other information reſpecting an embaſſy at his Court, which may tend to diſcover, to you the nature of the intended connection with him.

Mr. Ravenſcroft, Secretary to your Committee, having acquainted me, that ſince the writing of your letter a copy of theſe inſtructions is come to hand; I do not ſuppoſe it is neceſſary for me to ſend you one. Should you however require it, I will order one to be immediately prepared, and tranſmitted to you.

As the peruſal of theſe inſtructions will fully explain to you the object of the Governor General and Supreme Council in the propoſed negociation with Moodajee, it would be ſuperfluous in me to enter into any particular diſcuſſion of their plan, which is ſo clearly and pointedly laid down by themſelves; what therefore remains for me to do is to relate to you, as far as may be neceſſary to influence the political tranſactions of this Government with the Maratta State, the progreſs made in the treaty; the ſituation in which it was left upon my march from the Nurbuddah, and how it may be conſidered to ſtand at this time.

In ſome of my letters formerly addreſſed to your Committee, and in particular in thoſe of the 3d and 10th January I obſerved, that the meaſures previouſly adopted your Government in favour of Ragonaut Row, had been the means of preventing Moodajee from acceding to the terms wiſhed for by the gentlemen of the Adminiſtration at Bengal, which he otherwiſe ſhewed himſelf in every reſpect diſpoſed to embrace. This ſentiment appeared through his whole conduct, while the army remained in the neighbourhood of his country; and indeed he frankly owned the intereſts of Ragonath Row and his own interfered too much with each other to admit of their being ſupported by the Engliſh at the ſame time. In the letters which I tranſmitted from him to the Governor General, he recommends in the ſtrongeſt terms the relinquiſhing Ragoba, and making peace with the Poonah Durbar; but the part he ſo warmly takes in favour of the latter, he profeſſes to ariſe ſolely with a regard to his own views in concert with us. He at the time of writing this letter, and indeed repeatedly ſince, has declared to me that he only waited for anſwers from Calcutta, containing a compliance with his propoſals, to renew and conclude the negociations upon the terms of alliance mentioned in the inſtructions. Theſe anſwers ought to arrive by the end of this month, when the ſincerity of Moodajee's declarations will be at once put to the teſt; for any objections he could now ſtart, would prove his diſinclination to the propoſed buſineſs, and the little dependance that is to be placed in him. The grand obſtacle of Ragonath Row is effectually removed, and indeed every leading circumſtance has happened favourable to the ambitious views of the Berar prince. The Bengal army is arrived at Surat ready to take the field in his cauſe, whenever the terms of alliance can be adjuſted; and though he tried by every means to prevail upon me not to advance to this ſide of India, I uſed every argument the ſituation of your affairs, conſiſtent with the declared object of the Bengal Government, could ſuggeſt, to prove to him the neceſſity of ſuch a meaſure, and reconcile it to his own future ſchemes and expectations.

In a letter from the Honourable Governor General and Supreme Council of the 23d November, copy of which I had the honour before to encloſe for your peruſal, they begin by abſolutely forbidding me to obey any orders but what I might immediately receive from themſelves; but in order to guard as much as poſſible againſt every accident, they afterwards direct me to comply with whatever inſtructions I might receive from you (ſhould you have adopted any meaſures depending upon the ſupport of my detachment) provided they were not incompatible with the inſtructions I had received from them, or the negociations entered into with the Rajah of Berar.

At the time your letters reached me, with intelligence of the treaty made with Ragoba, and of your army having actually taken the field in conſequence of it, preſſing at the ſame time my expeditious march, the negociation with Moodajee had been put a ſtop to, for the reaſons I have above aſſigned; I therefore found it conſiſtent with the orders of the Supreme Board, and conſidered it every way for the intereſts of the Honourable Company, to leave the buſineſs with Moodajee in the train I have above deſcribed, waiting for replies from the Preſidency of Bengal to the reference and repreſentation made them by the Court of Naigpore, and to proceed with all expedition towards this ſettlement, either to aſſiſt in bringing the deſigns you had undertaken to a ſucceſsful iſſue, or to act in concert with you, in the proſecution of any meaſures that might be neceſſary to the advantage of the Company's affairs, and conſiſtent with the ſpirit of the intentions of the Bengal Government, in detaching their forces acroſs the peninſula of India. I was unfortunately diſappointed in my hopes of effecting the former, but I am full of confidence that my expectations tations reſpecting the latter will be anſwered in their ampleſt and moſt deſirable extent.

Beſides the letters tranſmitted through me from the Court of Berar, others to the ſame purport were ſent to Bengal, under charge of a confidential perſon belonging to the Rajah, who before reſided there in character of his ambaſſador; another perſon of conſiderable truſt accompanied, and ſtill remains in my camp on the part of Moodajee, and through him I have from time to time received letters from his maſter. When the news of what happened at Tillagaon firſt reached him, he communicated to me ſuch particulars as had come to his knowledge, and earneſtly preſſed me not to advance. Of his own buſineſs he only obſerved, that he was waiting with anxiety for the diſpatches from Calcutta. I have not heard from him ſince the letter I wrote him from Burhampore, informing him of my determination to proceed towards Bombay, and that in the mean time leiſure would be given for the arrival of the anſwers from the Bengal Government.

I have endeavoured as much as lies in my power to give you in the above account an idea of the ſtate of the Berar negociation; ſhould I have omitted any thing which may occur to you to aſk; or ſhould there be any public papers relative to this tranſaction, the peruſal of which would tend to explain it more fully to you, I am ready to give every further information you may judge neceſſary.

I have the honour to be, &c.

Bombay, 19th March 1779. (Signed) Tho^s Goddard.

Gentlemen,

I had the honour to addreſs you in a letter dated the 21ſt ultimo, acquainting you with my arrival at Bombay, and incloſing copy of my letter to the Select Committee, on the ſubject of the negociations at the Court of Berar; ſince that time the gentlemen of the Committee here have received a letter from your Supreme Board, and I alſo have been made happy with your favour of the 5th February, accompanying credentials, appointing me your Miniſter at the Court of Poonah; this new mark of your regard and confidence fills me with ſentiments of gratitude, to which I am at a loſs to give expreſſion, and will be beſt ſhewn by the zeal and fidelity with which I ſhall exert myſelf in the execution of ſo important a truſt. I cannot however omit mentioning the ſuperior ſatisfaction it gives me to find that my conduct in proceeding to this ſide of India has merited your approbation; and I am full of hope that the letters I afterwards wrote you, explaining more particularly my motives for advancing on account of the ſituation of affairs here, will have made you of opinion that ſuch a meaſure was not only proper, but appeared abſolutely neceſſary to the ſecurity and preſervation of this ſettlement.

The receipt of your letter to the Select Committee, and of that to myſelf, the contents of which I communicated to them, has at length fixed their reſolves, and they have come to the determination of ſuſpending all operations, till the arrival of diſpatches from your Supreme Board, in conſequence of the repreſentation tranſmitted you of the ſtate of affairs by Mr. Horſley, or till you may have wrote, ſubſequent to your knowledge of the diſcomfiture at and retreat from Tillagong.

I have received no advices from Moodajee of a later date than that mentioned in my letter to the Select Committee, and am therefore in expectation of hearing from him every day, when I will immediately communicate to you the ſentiments he may expreſs, and the propoſals he may make for the promotion of the plan already ſo particularly explained to him by me. Since leaving the Nerbuddah I have continued to write him in the moſt encouraging terms, and at this time I have addreſſed him, forwarding letters from the Bombay Government, expreſſive of the zeal and readineſs with which they will aſſiſt and co-operate in the execution of any meaſures that may be determined upon conſiſtent with the views of the Supreme Council of Bengal, with whoſe intentions in favour of the Rajah they have been made acquainted, as well as with the full powers delegated to me by you, to conclude the terms of an alliance with him in your name. Appendix. No. 194.

As I conceive the ſituation of affairs in the Maratta empire to be widely different from what you had reaſon to expect it would be when your letter was wrote, I have judged it proper to defer making known to the Court of Poonah the powers you have veſted in me, or formally demanding their conſent to the requiſitions you have enjoined me to make, upon the ſuppoſition as I conceive of Ragoba's ſucceſs, till I can be honoured with your further and particular inſtructions on this head; and this delay I am induced to uſe the more readily, as it can be productive of no real inconvenience, the period intervening betwixt the arrival of an anſwer from you, and the ſeaſon for action, leaving ſufficient ſpace to follow and perfect any meaſures you may chuſe to direct ſhould be purſued.

As the further conſideration of political matters, and of courſe, the military operations of the army, are ſuſpended till your reſolves can be communicated to us, I propoſe, during the receſs from public buſineſs, to ſet out to join the troops at Surat, and put them in complete readineſs for the ſervice in which I hope they may ſoon be employed. I beg to aſſure you, that I ſhall implicitly attend to the ſpirit of the inſtructions contained in your letter of the 5th February,

And have the honour to be, &c.

Bombay, April 4th 1779. (Signed) Tho^s Goddard.

No. 194.

The Governor General informs the Board, that Mr. George Horſley, deputed from the Government of Bombay, is arrived.

Read the following letter from Bombay:

Gentlemen,

We have been ſo much taken up with a diſpatch to the Honourable Company, in conſequence of the unfortunate iſſue of the expedition of Ragoba, that we have not been able to ſend away before this the veſſel for Bengal, with the promiſed accounts for your information; but as the ſeaſon is now become ſo much more favourable for a quick paſſage, we flatter ourſelves there will be but a ſmall loſs of time by her detention.

That your information may be as complete as poſſible, and every material may be before you, to enable you to form your judgment, we have thought it the beſt method to ſend you at full length, copies of our late addreſs to the Honourable the Secret Committee, and of every paper therein referred to, which relates to the late tranſactions, or our preſent political ſituation.

We have been ſo particular in our diſpatch to the Secret Committee, in the relation of every circumſtance that can tend to your information, that any thing further we can now ſay, would only be a uſeleſs repetition; we ſhall therefore ſubmit the whole to your determination, with a firm reliance of meeting with a candid and impartial judgment, and confine ourſelves in this addreſs to what has offered ſince the date of our advices to the Honourable the Secret Committee; premiſing only, that excluſive of any general opinion or directions you may pleaſe to give, in conſequence of the papers which will be now before you, we requeſt your particular deciſion on the conduct of Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, and the charge given in againſt them by the Preſident, in his minute of the 29th January.

A liſt of the papers now tranſmitted is incloſed, in which they are enumerated in proper order.

Since our diſpatch to England, the Preſident laid before us a plan of the meaſures which appeared to him proper to be purſued in our preſent ſituation. A copy of this paper is alſo tranſmitted under No. 3: and ſubjoined thereto is a copy of our proceedings and determination, on the day it was taken under conſideration.

We have, as you will thereby obſerve, ſubmitted the propriety of the propoſed meaſures to you, and determined to ſuſpend the execution thereof till we receive your ſentiments, which we hope you will tranſmit with all poſſible expedition: and as, in whatever political ſyſtem you may think proper to adopt for this Preſidency, you may poſſibly require information on certain points or details of local knowledge, which, as we cannot foreſee, we cannot now ſupply, we have, in order to prevent any loſs of time in correſpondence, judged it expedient to ſend round to Bengal a gentleman well informed in the ſtate of the Company's affairs, and the preſent political circumſtances of the Preſidency; and having made choice of Mr. George Horſley for this commiſſion, he now waits on you with theſe diſpatches.

We requeſt you will permit Mr. Horſley to be informed of the meaſures you may think proper to adopt reſpecting this Preſidency, and allow him to repreſent to you any particulars which his local knowledge may ſuggeſt, or may appear to him material to be attended to in your deliberations.

The Marattas have diſcontinued the attack of Fort Victoria, but we have not yet received an anſwer to the remonſtrances made to the Poonah Durbar on that occaſion, nor to the letter written to Mhadjee Scindia, in conſequence of the 11th reſolution ſubjoined to the Preſident's review of Maratta affairs. We however propoſe to continue temporizing with him, and to endeavour to preſerve the diſtinction between him and Nanah Furneſe.

We moſt heartily join with our Preſident in the encomiums beſtowed on Colonel Goddard, in his minute of the 30th ultimo, for his judicious and deciſive conduct in quitting the negociation with Moodajee Bounſillo, and his ready determination of coming to our aid, as well as the activity and military ſkill with which he performed the march. We are happy to find by your letter of February, without further date, that his conduct has alſo met with your applauſe, and we beg to be permitted to remember him, and ſolicit from you ſome diſtinguiſhed mark of your and our ſenſe of his ſervices.

We have deſired the Colonel to be preſent at all our political proceedings; and at our meeting the 31ſt ultimo, when we had aſſembled to conſider on the Preſident's motion of the 30th, he laid before us your inſtructions to him of the 5th of February, and your commiſſion as Miniſter Plenipotentiary to the Court of Poonah. We now, as already mentioned, ſend a copy of our proceedings on that day, to which we beg leave to refer.

On the 17th ultimo we received your letter of the 16th November, encloſing a copy of the inſtructions to the late Mr. Elliott, and on the 29th we received your letter of the 8th February.

It would now be quite unavailing to expreſs our regret that we had not more timely information of the extent of Mr. Elliott's commiſſion, but this is a circumſtance which we hope will have its due weight, when a judgment is formed of our conduct in undertaking the late expedition at the time we did.

As the whole of our conduct will now be before you, we conſider it unneceſſary to make any reply to your laſt-mentioned letter; but we were exceedingly concerned to find ourſelves taxed at the ſame time with negligence, in letting favourable opportunities eſcape, and precipitation in embarking in the late expedition when circumſtances were not favourable. With reſpect to the latter charge, we muſt truſt to the ſtatements now tranſmitted for our juſtification; and the former being quite general, deprives us of the advantage of making a circumſtantial defence; therefore we can only ſay in general, that we acted to the beſt of our judgment, according to the ſituation of affairs and the powers given us, and that our deferring the expedition two months longer than intended, was unavoidable, on account of the unuſual ſeverity and duration of the rains, which rendered the low country between this and the Ghauts impaſſable for troops and artillery earlier than the time our forces were ſent into the field.

We have now the honour to tranſmit ſecond copies of the diſpatch from the Honourable the Secret Committee, received the 8th of February by Colonel Capper.

We have directed Mr. Horſley to touch at Tellicherry, to bring you the lateſt intelligence of the ſtate of the operations againſt Mahé.

We have the honour, &c.

Lieutenant General Sir Eyre Coote, K. B.

Mr. Wheler at Beercool, for the benefit of his health.

THE Governor General delivers in the following minute:

The Governor General—Judging from ſome intimations which have been caſually made at the Board, in converſation upon the diſpatches lately received from the Select Committee of Bombay, that our ſentiments, without a previous and liberal communication of them, might differ not

not ſo much in the judgment which we might ſeverally paſs on the occurrences themſelves, or in the conduct of the perſons by whoſe agency they were produced, as in the choice of the ſubjects which ſhould form the ſubſtance of our reply to their letter; I have thought it proper, and hope I ſhall perform by it an acceptable ſervice to the Board, to enumerate and diſtinguiſh the ſeveral points which are preſented to our notice in the voluminous papers compoſing theſe diſpatches, and which may appear to require either the inſtructions or animadverſions of the Board upon them.

As my deſign in this undertaking is to ſhorten the labours of the Board, and to obviate a difference of opinion on an occaſion which ſeems to me to demand the united and moſt reſpectable application of the power of this Government, I hope that it will be received with candour, or at leaſt that it may eſcape controverſy: if either in the ſtate of facts, in deductions from them, or in the opinion which I may deliver of the conduct to be obſerved by this Government in relation to them, I may not obtain the concurrence of every other member of the Board; I repeat, that I do not mean to offer propoſitions for their determination, but ſubjects for their ſelection.

To theſe I ſhall proceed, and arrange them in their order of time.

1ſt. The plan formed by the Select Committee of Bombay on the 21ſt of July 1778, in concert with Moraba Furneſe Bucheba Proonder and Tuckajee Holcar, for the reſtoration of Ragonaut Row to the chief Adminiſtration of the Maratta State.

2d. The ſecond plan, formed on the 12th October 1778, and engagements concluded with Ragonaut Row, done for his reſtoration.

3d. The inſtitution of the Poonah Committee.

4th. The conduct of the Poonah Committee.

5th. The conduct of Mr. Carnac.

6th. The conduct of Colonel Egerton.

7th. The conduct of Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn.

8th. The ſpecific charge preferred againſt Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, and the reference of the ſame to the Governor-General and Council.

9th. The march of the army from Panwell to Candola.

10th. The deſcent of the army from Candola.

11th. The retreat from Tillygaung.

12th. The ſurrender of Ragonaut Row.

13th. The ſecret ſtipulation with Mhadajee Scindia.

14th. The reſolution of the Select Committee to diſavow both.

15th. The ſuſpenſion of Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn.

16th. The promotion of Lieutenant Colonel Hartley, and the other promotions and ſucceſſions. General rules for promotion publiſhed in the general orders of the and remonſtrances of the ſuperſeded officers.

17th. Plan of negociations propoſed by Mr. Hornby on the and agreed to by the Select Committee.

18th. Plan of operations propoſed by Mr. Hornby on the march.

19th. Recommendation of Colonel Goddard.

20th. It will be a queſtion, Whether any, and what, ſupplies of money ſhall be ſent to the Preſidency of Bombay, and to Colonel Goddard?

21ſt. And laſtly, what inſtructions ſhall be ſent to both for their future conduct, whether dependant or independent of the foregoing ſubjects.

If in this catalogue I have omitted any matter of conſequence offered to our deliberation in the papers now before us, the recollection of the other members of the Board will ſupply the deficiency; theſe will at leaſt be ſufficient to ſhew how extenſive, various, and complicated a duty is impoſed on us by theſe diſpatches, if we muſt of neceſſity enter on the conſideration of all the tranſactions and events which are related in them; if we muſt paſs judgment on every inſtance of perſonal conduct, either directly or indirectly brought by them to our notice; and if we are to preſcribe rules for their conduct on every diſtinct ſubject, under every variation of circumſtances which may eventually attend it. Appendix No. 196.

If the Board ſhall judge it incumbent on them to enter into ſo laborious a diſcuſſion, I ſhall ſubmit, though reluctantly, to bear my part of it; reluctantly, becauſe it will occupy more of our time than we can ſpare from the more ſubſtantial objects; and becauſe I foreſee that it will lead to altercation amongſt ourſelves; it being impoſſible that we, who have but begun to agree in opinion on our public meaſures, ſhould all become of one mind on twenty-two diſtinct and intereſting propoſitions, and becauſe it would be unavailing and inconcluſive.

To cenſure or to commend is all that we can do, except in one ſingle inſtance; for our cenſures cannot impreſs reſtraint, nor our commendations avert the effects of paſt misfortunes, or preclude the judgment which awaits the inſtruments of them from higher authority. Our effectual authority is limited to political engagements and military operations, undertaken without our previous licenſe. The treaty or convention, or whatever name it may bear, which was concluded at Worgaun, certainly falls within this deſcription, and it is in our power if we pleaſe to puniſh the authors of it by a temporary ſuſpenſion; but is it neceſſary? An act ſo fatal to the intereſts of the Company, and ſo diſgraceful to the reputation of the Britiſh nation, cannot fail to excite the moſt rigid ſcrutiny into the conduct of every one concerned in it, and the cauſes which produced it, by thoſe who have the power both to judge and to puniſh, which perhaps in this caſe we have not in effect.

The charge preferred by Mr. Hornby againſt Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, and referred expreſsly to us for our judgment upon it, is but a ſmall portion of a long ſeries of great apparent miſconduct, every part of which has an equal claim, and many greater, to our conſideration of them. There was no need of this reference to us, nor are we competent to receive it: the charge might have been tried by a court martial; and if the Preſident and Select Committee had deemed it neceſſary, for any cauſe not ſo properly cognizable by a court martial, or capable of proof before it, or for any other reaſon, to remove Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn from their military command, or from the ſervice, they might have removed them, and ought to have done it in ſuch a caſe, without any form of trial, by the powers veſted in them by the Company. It does not conſiſt with the dignity of this Government, to aſſume a juriſdiction which it cannot legally exerciſe, nor effectually without the conſent of thoſe who, poſſeſſing ample powers themſelves, have deſired to conſign them to us, whether becauſe they doubted the equity of their own conduct, or dreaded the reſponſibility annexed to it; and therefore ſought to lighten the weight of it by ſharing it with us; for I cannot conjecture any other probable motive for ſo extraordinary an appeal.

If in the above reflections I have expreſſed the ſentiments of the other members of this Board, nothing remains for our conſideration but the queſtion of what ſhall be done, and the review of the paſt events ſo far only as they relate to it.

We have already diſavowed the convention of Worgaun: would to God that we could as eaſily efface the infamy which our national character has ſuſtained by the confeſſion inſerted in it, as we can juſtify, on the ſtricteſt principles of honour, juſtice, and public faith, our refuſal to ratify the ſubſtantial parts of it!

The ſeparate agreement made with Madajee Scindia ſtands on very different ground: it was not a conceſſion extorted by the Maratta Government againſt its conviction of legal ſufficiency in thoſe who yielded it, but it was the price at which they purchaſed the ſafety of the army; and was ſo abſolutely their own ſpontaneous act, that it appears that the Miniſters of Madajee Scindia were were even corrupted to influence his acceptance of it. It is true that they had no authority to make such a compromise, and we may therefore refuse to ratify it, in strict conformity to the letter of our own law; but I doubt whether this will avail us in the opinion of the world, or we can reconcile it to the obligations of justice and honour, which were thus pledged for the retribution of the most signal (though humiliating) act of kindness that a nation could have received from the bounty of an individual; unless we can be allowed the rule of Asiatic policy, in doing to all men what we know they would under similar circumstances do unto us.

I am compelled therefore in conscience and in duty to declare, that unless Madajee Scindia shall have forfeited his right by any subsequent act, he is intitled to the performance of his engagement, and we ought to ratify it.

Except this be made an addition to the instructions already given to Colonel Goddard (and I must own that I do not think that it will contribute to their success, but the contrary) I know of no other point of immediate negociation or action that can be prescribed either to him or to the Select Committee of Bombay, until that commission shall have been concluded either by a definitive treaty of peace, or by a decided war.

This is not a proper time to determine on the measures which may be necessary in the case first supposed.

If the Maratta rulers shall finally reject our offers of peace, we must endeavour to make the most of a state of war; and for that purpose I cannot recommend a better plan of operations, than that which is contained in Mr. Hornby's minute of the 30th March: it appears easily practicable by the force which we possess; it will yield us if successful the possession of the very lands which were the objects of our late engagements, and distress them in the means of supporting the war, by the loss of so considerable a portion of their revenue, at the same time that it will increase our own.

Whether these, or whatever others, may be the grounds of our present resolutions, I hope the Board will see with me the propriety of conveying them in such a form and temper as may give encouragement and confidence to the Presidency of Bombay, instead of adding to their depression. They are the immediate guardians of the Company's property on that side of India; and it is by their agency we must defend and support the general rights of the Company, and the honour of the British nation, unhappily involved as they appear to be in the consequences of their past miscarriages. In an emergency so critical and important, we have (as I conceive) but this alternative, either to transfer the power (if we can do it) into fitter hands, or to render it as complete and as efficacious as it can be made in theirs. To mark our want of confidence in them by any public act, would weaken theirs, in us; to load them with harsh and unoperating reproaches, would indispose them to our authority; at the same time that it would absolve them from its effect; and to bind their deliberations by absolute and undiscretional orders, might eventually disable them from availing themselves of any fortuitous advantages which the confusion of the Maratta Government is more likely to offer them than any plan which we could prescribe to them, or which they could form on the letter of our instructions. In a word, such a conduct, by inflaming the passions of men whom we are not to regard as exempt from the common infirmities of humanity, would prove the surest means of converting the powers which were still left in their hands into the instruments of opposition, and even of the defeat of the very measures which require their agency, and cannot be accomplished without it: let us rather excite them to exert themselves for the retrieval of their past misfortunes, and arm them with means adequate to that end; restricting their powers where the object is determinate, and permitting a more liberal extension of them, in cases which are too variable and uncertain for positive injunctions. Their admission of Colonel Goddard to a deliberative seat at their Board, and the request which they have made to us to allow of his being appointed to the chief command, if it should be vacant, of their military establishment, which would give him an effective voice in their Select Committee, present to us an occasion of their adopting the principle which I have recommended, with the most ample caution for the safe application of it. I hope and persuade myself that we have all the same opinion of Colonel Goddard's merits: I for my own part have a pleasure, and will add a pride, in declaring, that though I have often traced back his conduct in my reflections to the period on which he first obtained the command of the expedition, I have not been able to detect one error committed by him, or advantage neglected, either in his military conduct, or in the line of his political negociations. His command has been alike distinguished by the spirit of enterprize and activity, qualities which he was universally acknowledged to possess, by prudence and circumspection, by a conciliatory temper, a friendly demeanour to the inhabitants of the various countries through which he had to pass, and a strict attention to the good order of the troops under his command, by a happy and ready decision in the choice of expedients, and an implicit obedience to the orders under which he acted, of which the proceedings of the Select Committee afford not the least remarkable instances: by acquiescing in the Presidency of Bombay, and by blending the powers already vested in him with those of the Select Committee, we shall add vigour to their resolutions, and a security against their effects, at least so far as our confidence in him may be justly placed.

The following draft of an answer to the Presidency of Bombay has been formed on the principles recorded in this minute; and are submitted in the form of a finished letter rather for the means of dispatch, than in the presumption of its proving exactly conformable to the opinion of the Board, on every subject which it contains, or which it may be judged advisable to comprize in it. I have not yet drawn up any letter to Colonel Goddard, as that will depend on what is written to Bombay.

To the President and Select Committee of Bombay.

We have received your letter of the 4th of April, with its enclosures, by the hands of Mr. Horsley.

We do not think it necessary to enter on the review of your proceedings, but shall confine our present inquiries to the choice of such means as may best conduce to retrieve their unhappy consequences; leaving the past to the scrutiny of higher and more effectual authority.

We must desire to decline the reference which you have made to us, of the charge preferred by your President against Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, as a point on which we have no jurisdiction, and which is cognizable only by your authority, either with the powers immediately vested in your body by the Court of Directors, or through the regular trial of a court martial.

Having already given full powers to Colonel Goddard to negociate and conclude a treaty of peace with the Maratta Government, and having no cause to alter the terms which we have prescribed in our instructions for that purpose; we have only to repeat, that we look to the issue of that commission as our primary object, and the termination of all our political views on your side of India, if it shall prove successful.

But if the Ministers shall reject the proposals which we have ordered to be made to them, and shall reduce us to the necessity of defending the rights and interests of the Company, by an open war, we cannot prescribe a better plan of operations than that which is laid down by your President in his minute of the 30th March, which in such case we authorize you to carry liberally into execution, and even to qualify it by such variations as shall not subvert the general design of it, which we underſtand to be the reduction of ſuch countries as lie along the ſea coaſt, forming a line of territory with our preſent poſſeſſions on the continent, and defenſible againſt the incurſions of cavalry: and we further authorize and empower you, with the reſervation hereafter mentioned, to enter into any treaty or other engagement, with the Chief of the Guicawar family or others, for the above purpoſe, and on the grounds deſcribed on the aforeſaid plan; obſerving the following cautions, to which we require your ſtricteſt attention: that your engagements ſhall be offenſive only for the objects of your immediate operations, and in all other reſpects purely defenſive: that your engagements with the Guicawar family ſhall be with the head of it, and with him exclufively: that you ſhall not aſſume a mediation between the brothers, or take any part whatever in their domeſtic diſputes, further than to ſupport the party in alliance with the Company, and his poſſeſſions againſt foreign invaſion; and that you do not commit the dignity of the Company, or pledge the national faith in formal treaties with perſons of a rank or power unſuitable to ſuch a diſtinction.

We are ſenſible of the attention which you have ſhewn to our views with the Government of Berar, in joining the overtures lately made to Moodajee Booſla by Colonel Goddard, and in your reſolution to avoid whatever might again interfere with this negociation. We confeſs we at this time entertain little hope of his concurring with our deſigns: he will wait for proofs of our ſuperiority before he will hazard the conſequences of a decided connection with us; and every offer made to him, while he is under the influence of ſuch a policy, will but ſerve to increaſe his reſerve, as he will naturally conſtrue it to proceed from the conſciouſneſs of our inability to ſupport ourſelves without a foreign aſſiſtance; and this is an additional motive for our preferring a ſcheme of military operations practicable by our own force, and unincumbered with the weight of a timid ally. If, notwithſtanding, Moodajee Booſla ſhall have anſwered the letters which have been written to him by a declaration of a willingneſs to accept the proffered alliance, we ſhall leave it to be concluded under the inſtructions already given in charge to Colonel Goddard: if on the contrary, as we expect, he ſhall directly refuſe, or heſitate, or make new references to us, we have in ſuch caſe directed Colonel Goddard to break off the negociation; nor to reſume it, but on advances made to him by the Government of Berar, nor then, unleſs it ſhall be ſtrictly compatible with the ſtate of our other connections then ſubſiſting, and with your participation, in the manner which we ſhall preſcribe hereafter.

Although we think ourſelves ſtrictly juſtifiable, in refuſing to ratify even the ſmalleſt tittle of the treaty or convention of Worgaun, yet, from a fair review of your proceedings, we are compelled to regard the ſeparate agreement made with Madajee Scindia in a very different light: it was not a conceſſion extorted by the Maratta Government againſt its conviction of legal ſufficiency in thoſe who yielded it, but it was the price at which they purchaſed the ſafety of the army; and was ſo abſolutely their own ſpontaneous act, that it appears, that the Miniſters of Madajee Scindia were even corrupted to influence his acceptance of it. It is true, they had no authority to make ſuch a compromiſe, and we may therefore refuſe to ratify it, in ſtrict conformity to the letter of our own law; but we doubt whether this will avail us in the opinion of the world, or we can reconcile it to the obligations of juſtice and honour, which were thus pledged for the retribution of the moſt ſignal (though humiliating) act of kindneſs that a nation could have received from the bounty of an individual. We muſt therefore declare, that unleſs Madajee Scindia ſhall have forfeited his right by any ſubſequent act, he is intitled to the performance of this engagement, and we ought to ratify it.

We hope he may be prevailed upon to depart from the letter of this ſtipulation, and to accept of what he may deem an equivalent for it; and we authorize you to treat with him for ſuch a compromiſe, declaring on our behalf, that we diſavow the authority of Mr. Carnac and Colonel Egerton, to execute the engagement with him, which was executed by them; but that in conſideration of the ſignal ſervice afforded us by his mediation and influence at the time in which it was made (and make, as we underſtand) the pledged condition of that ſervice, we deem it in this conſtruction equal to a formal obligation, and therefore empower you to treat with him for the accompliſhment of it, in ſuch a manner as ſhall prove ſatisfactory to him, and more conſiſtent with our national credit than the literal performance of it; but if he ſhall inſiſt on the literal performance of it, and he ſhall not have forfeited his right to it by the renewal of hoſtilities againſt us, or by any breach of Government, if any ſuch exiſts between us, we ſee no alternative; it muſt be fulfilled. Appendix, No. 196.

Although the conduct of Madajee Scindia may not ſeem to confirm your opinion of his diſpoſition towards us, or rather of the political neceſſity which ſeems to incline him to inſure our future alliance, yet we think the arguments which you have aſſigned for this belief ſo well grounded, and it agrees ſo well with the knowledge which we ourſelves poſſeſs of his ſtate views and talents, that we entirely adopt it, nor do we find it difficult to reconcile the demands made on us under his influence by the Miniſters, and immediately by him, for the performance of the conditions of the convention of Worgaun with that diſpoſition, or with the obvious ſyſtem of policy which his preſent intereſt demands.

We ſuppoſe it probable that he will avoid any direct engagement with us, till the urgency of his affairs ſhall require it, or until he can gain the advantage of the negociation, by waiting for the firſt advances to be made on your part. If from the opportunities which you have of a nearer and more intimate knowledge of his perſonal character and neceſſities, you ſhall judge this concluſion to be well grounded, it will be adviſable to treat him with the ſame temporiſing and indeterminate conduct, and purſuing the plan of military operations which we have recommended, to wait for the offer of his alliance rather than ſolicit it. Propoſing this as a general caution, we authorize you to enter into ſuch engagements with him as ſhall not be contrary to any before concluded, and which you ſhall judge moſt adviſable; making your future ſecurity, peace, and an adequate revenue, your chief and indiſpenſable objects, and the grounds of your engagements with him.

To ſum up what we have written; our firſt deſire is to obtain peace on the terms propoſed by our inſtructions to Colonel Goddard of the 15th April, and it is only in the event of the failure of this deſign that we have formed the ſubſequent inſtructions, or will allow of their operation.

In theſe the plan of military operations recommended by your Preſident, is to have the firſt place with its dependant engagements with the Guicawars; the next in order is the negociation with Moodajee Booſla; and the laſt, the propoſed engagement with Madajee Scindia.

The execution of the projected treaty of peace with the Poonah Miniſtry we leave to the ſole charge of Colonel Goddard, according to the inſtructions which we have already given him.

The negociation and treaty of alliance with Moodajee Booſla we alſo leave to the ſole management of Colonel Goddard, on the authority of his inſtructions of the 16th November, until the period of their ſuſpenſion, by the refuſal or ſuch heſitation of Moodajee Booſla as he ſhall deem ſufficient to warrant his declaring the negociation ſuſpended. But in the future renewal of this negociation, and in all other negociations, treaties, and plans of military operations, it is our wiſh ſo to blend the powers of your Government with our own in the direction of them, and in every formal or occaſional inſtrument which they may require for their ratification, as to preſerve the credit and diſtinct reſponſibility of both, and to make both the pledges for the faithful obſervance of them; for this purpoſe we need not recommend that Colonel Goddard be conſulted, when his preſence, or the nature of the ſubjects will admit of it, on all meaſures which have a relation to our preſent inſtructions, as you have already been pleaſed to allow him a deliberative voice in your Council, and we are happy to find that you are ſo well ſatisfied with his conduct, and his ready diſpoſition to aſſiſt in the execution of your deſigns, as to leave us little occaſion to lay down a clearer line for the employment of the forces under his command, than that which we have already deſcribed.

We have directed Colonel Goddard to execute whatever ſervice you ſhall think it proper to require, which ſhall not be contrary to our inſtructions, or to any exiſting engagements; a caution which we hope will be unneceſſary, but with which we do not conſider ourſelves at liberty to diſpenſe while the principal reſponſibility reſts with us; and we muſt require, that for the formal repreſentation of this Government in any treaties or other engagements which you ſhall form in virtue of theſe inſtructions, Colonel Goddard do affix his ſignature thereto, without which we ſhall not allow them to be complete or valid.

We very readily and cheerfully acquieſce in the deſire which you expreſs to inveſt Colonel Goddard with the chief command of your military eſtabliſhment whenever that office ſhall be vacant, reſerving to ourſelves the right of recalling him to our ſervice in the event of any appointment from home by which he may be ſuperſeded in the command, and your intentions in conferring it upon him be thereby defeated. As he will by ſuch a determination become a regular member of your Government, according to the inſtitutions of the Company, and have an effective voice in your Councils, we do not conſider it neceſſary that he ſhould, in that capacity, be inveſted with a greater authority than any other member of your Select Committee; and we do therefore in ſuch caſe revoke the powers which we have given him to that effect, with this ſingle reſervation, viz.

That although he will be bound by the reſolutions of the majority of the body of which he is a member, yet we require, that in order to preſerve a formal diſtinction of the powers of this Government in the inſtruments which appertain to his miniſterial agency, he do affix his ſeparate and formal ſignature to it as the repreſentative of this Government.

Sir Eyre Coote delivers in the following minute:

Sir Eyre Coote—The Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay having referred to us the deciſion upon the conduct of the field deputies and commanding officers of their expedition to Poonah, to place Ragonaut Row in the Regency of the Maratta State during the minority of Madarow Narrain Peiſhwa, and to remove Nanna Furneſe, upon account of his apparently hoſtile diſpoſitions againſt us in favour of the French, I ſhall, in as few words as poſſible, give my ſentiments upon the conduct of theſe gentlemen, in as far as the papers ſubmitted to us can lead me to the truth.

The reſolution of the 21ſt of July was ſuſpended for various cauſes until the 12th October, when it was brought before the Select Committee by a member, who was afterwards appointed Preſident of the Committee of Field Deputies, urging its very material neceſſity to the very exiſtence of the Company upon that coaſt, adding "That the Government of Bengal had given them full "latitude to act, and had provided them with the neceſ- "ſary reſources to do it with vigour and effect." In this the Governor concurred, and the meaſure was enacted by them, forming a majority of the Select Committee; Mr. Draper diſſenting. The execution thus fell to the chief, not to ſay ſole management of the propoſer. It is to theſe two gentlemen therefore that we muſt look for the degree of its ſucceſs, if it ſhall appear that their powers were ſufficient to bring it to the intended iſſue; ſhould theſe prove ample, the whole weight of all the conſequences of a failure muſt fall upon them. Theſe conſequences were, the immediate loſs of the benefits expected by a completion of the expedition, the expence of the men and money in the attempt, the diſcredit of giving up our ally, the loſs of that ally, the ſhame of an unwarrantable retreat, the blemiſh thrown upon our national honour and military reputation; not to mention the favourable juncture this misfortune may afford to the French, who certainly have a very conſiderable power at the iſlands ready to make an attempt upon our poſſeſſions, which they otherwiſe would not think of doing with any propriety, in the ſituation that their affairs are now reduced to in India. Theſe conſequences are therefore of the moſt ſerious nature. If theſe gentlemen had powers to prevent them, let facts, taken from their own defence, ſhew how far their conduct was ſuitable to thoſe powers, and their powers to the object.

The Governor, by whoſe vote the meaſure was adopted, remained himſelf the majority of the Select Committee at Bombay; the Committee for appealing to for deciſion, for granting or revoking powers, in ſhort, for the grand regulation of the whole. The propoſing member appointed Preſident of the Committee of Field Deputies, and poſſeſſing a double voice, became arbiter of the meaſures that came within the authority delegated to the Field Deputies. Theſe two gentlemen who enacted the meaſure, thus retained in their own hands the complete and ſole direction of the whole in every point, grand or minute. The Preſident of the Select Committee at home, the Preſident of the Field Deputies abroad; ſhould the one want more powers, or meet with any difficulties whatever, he had but to appeal, and have; ſhould the other perceive any thing ſhort of his wiſhes, he had but to ſay, and it could be done.

It was impoſſible to be more powerful, but at the ſame time impoſſible to undertake more reſponſibility. They began by a clear, at leaſt a dangerous purchaſe of the ſhare of this power, veſted in the Field Deputies. The meaſure for appointing Field Deputies, (for every other name to that Committee muſt be a fictitious one) was in the moſt immedite oppoſition to the Company's poſitive and repeated orders: to elude which, the ſlimſy pretence of a falſe name was adopted. They were to all intents and purpoſes a Committee of Field Deputies; an office not only forbidden by thoſe under whoſe immediate orders the Select Committee were employed to act, but an office immediately exploded and reprobated by all Governments as the moſt fruſtrating clog that can be thrown upon any military operation, a reſtraint under which no man that has any jealouſy for his own military reputation, or any regard for the intereſts of his employers, ſhould or could act under; and of all commiſſions that ever were iſſued, there never could be framed a more deſpotic one to thoſe it was granted, and more injurious and humiliating to a commanding officer than the one in queſtion. The words are, "to conduct and concert all "operations, political and military, and obedience re- "quired from all officers and ſervants." This was ſo glaring, that even Colonel Egerton, who made no objections to the eſtabliſhment of Field Deputies, could not avoid oppoſing it, and proteſting againſt its being iſſued in general orders, as it would in fact annihilate his command; further, he complained of this to the Preſident at Bombay, who ſaw it ſo ſtrongly, that he wrote to the Field Preſident as follows: "Recommending to "him upon whoſe conduct ſo much depended, to wave "publiſhing it in general orders, as the promulgation "of ſuch a commiſſion in the army might bear the ap- "pearance of ſetting up an authority in the very camp "to ſuperſede that of the commanding officer; and alſo "agreed in moſt of the objections that the Colonel made "againſt the inſtructions as well as the commiſſion, "wherein he had ſtated, that the rights given by the "Company to their commanding officers are infringed."

The

The Governor added, that theſe points muſt have eſcaped himſelf and the "Field Preſident when paſſing the "orders at the Select Committee." In the anſwer that the Governor returns to the Colonel by the ſame diſpatch, he evades replying to his complaints, of which circumſtance he acquainted the Field Preſident.

Here their conduct ſtands in a ſtriking point of view; whether conſidered in its monſtrous partiality to one of two colleagues in a committee; whether in not contributing to that harmony which they confeſs needful, and had enacted in a ſeparate article of the commiſſion, for the diſpatch of the buſineſs they were ſent upon; whether in trampling upon the rights annexed by their ſuperiors to particular ſtations; or finally, whether in aiding to correct an error laid before them, and acknowledged by themſelves as an act of injuſtice, ariſen from omiſſion or ignorance, cauſing, as they are pleaſed to ſtate, diſſentions in the committee, to the detriment and delay of a public tranſaction of the moſt weighty nature. Thus confeſſing themſelves the authors of faults that they do not afterwards heſitate to charge others with, having the power to correct it, ſeeing the riſe and progreſs of the error, and its bad effect, yet evading to amend it. Nor ſimply this, for in a further letter to the Field Preſident, he expreſſes his great ſatisfaction at his concurring in the propriety of ſupporting theſe acknowledged faulty orders.

The Governor again writes to Colonel Egerton, "that "if any difference ſhould ariſe between him and the "Field Deputies, regarding his military rights, which "he is ſure can be but trifling, the opinion of the Field "Deputies muſt preponderate." Sure they can be but trifling, after having confeſſed that the commiſſion annihilate his command, and the opinions of the Field Deputies conſiſting in fact of the Preſident alone, to preponderate in a deciſion upon their own powers.

That ſame diſpatch he confirmed to the Field Preſident his caſting vote, and eluded filling up the vacancy cauſed by Mr. Moſtyn's illneſs, "relying ſingly upon "him;" who concurs in ſupporting the full powers of the commiſſion and inſtructions againſt every attack or objection that may be made againſt them.

Under theſe inordinate powers, nothing being left to the commanding officer, except the mode of pitching tents and forming the quarter guards, ſhall the Committee of the Field Deputies be exonerated of the blame of the delays in performing a march of 24 miles in 25 days? They who had the concerting and conducting of all military operations, might have concerted and conducted a more rapid march, without ever having borne military commiſſions: they might have diſcovered that 19,000 bullocks to 2,600 men was ſomewhat diſproportionate, poſſibly little tending to accelerate the progreſs of ſo ſmall a force; which indeed could ſcarce be deemed an eſcort to ſuch an equipage. They charge Colonel Egerton, and ſtate, that an attack upon the enemy's guns might have been of ſingular uſe; yet, as appears by the diary, never ordered or recommended it; nor even, as they did upon other occaſions when they wiſhed to ſave appearances, induce the Governor to write a letter recommending what they wanted the commanding officer to do.

Again, they complain of apprehenſions of want of proviſions; but it does not appear they ever took active ſteps to procure any, until they propoſed the unfortunate retreat; nor could it be, as Mr. Draper juſtly obſerves, want of incentive that deferred their activity, for they had been witneſſes to the loſs ſuſtained by the delays at the Presidency of three friendly Chiefs, who during that time were taken from their party; and having declared that the gain of fifteen days would have brought the army without oppoſition to Poonah, yet had they not had power ſufficient to regulate and controul the army; the Select Committee at Bombay might and ought, upon perceiving the unmilitary delays in the progreſs of the troops, to have recalled or changed thoſe who appeared blameable. But now we approach to the effect of theſe extraordinary Field Deputy powers, and the uſe they were put to. Appendix. No. 196.

A deputation of the members of Adminiſtration come forth from their ſeats in Government, with a declared purpoſe of benefitting and gaining credit and territory to their employers, veſted with the higheſt, even unwarrantable, powers to ſupport theſe purpoſes; at the head of a Britiſh army, well appointed, having a Prince by the hand to ſeat him in the regency of the empire, arrived within fifteen miles, one day's march from the capital he was to govern, where it was to be ſuppoſed were many friends, who were only until their arrival reſtrained from ſtanding forth, nay ſome of whom, to the amount of 4,000 horſe, had already come over to join their own army in uncommonly elevated ſpirits, as teſtified by all its officers, having eighteen days proviſion in hand; the enemy a depreſſed though numerous rabble; the chief leader among whom they knew was only keeping up the maſk of enmity, for his ſhot were ordered to be all thrown ſhort, the council of the foe having the day before ſent ſubmiſſion to Bombay, offering to pay the charges of the war, and gratify the protected ally.

In this ſituation, how did they exert the powers delegated to them for the object in view.

A retreat was ordered without conſulting the commanding officer of the army, Colonel Cockburn; who upon receiving the order, together with Captain Hartley, repreſented how dangerous it would be to attempt a retreat with troops who had never been accuſtomed to it. And failing in that, Mr. Holmes, a civilian, joined Meſſrs. Cockburn and Hartley, and propoſed treating with the Marattas where they then were, as better terms might be expected before the enemy knew any thing of our intention to retreat: but this met with the ſame fate as a propoſal made the day before; Ragonaut Row who ſolicited them to defer ſubmiſſion for one day, as he was treating with his friends among the oppoſed army, and might yet ſave all; but he was anſwered, that not an hour could be granted him.

After all this, Mr. Cockburn's opinion being then aſked by the Field Preſident, he anſwered, that he had not a doubt of carrying the army to Poonah, if ordered; but the reſolution for the retreat was not to be altered; fatal infatuation! The next day after the firſt ſtage of the retreat had been effected from Tellagoun to Worgaum, in deſpite of a fruitleſs attempt of them to prevent it, a carte blanche was ſent to the enemy, and they proceeded to give up, not only what was entruſted to their management in the preſent expedition, but they added all the acquiſitions made by the Bombay Preſidency during the reign of the preſent Peiſhwa, nay, they extend their conceſſions to this Preſidency, by ordering our troops to return; again they enter into a private treaty, of their own free will and accord, with one of the enemy, making further ſurrenders in conſideration of benefits ſaid to be received at his hands in the good and favourable terms of the general treaty. In the general treaty we acknowledge ourſelves to be the infringers of former treaties, although we ſet out in our manifeſto with declaring that we acted upon their infringements, and in the private treaty we acknowledge ourſelves defeated, although no ſuch defeat exiſted. In addition to this reward for ſuppoſed ſervices, they ſubmit to another humiliating act that equals the firſt: they, acting under a commiſſion in the king's name, bribe the Chubdars, the menial ſervants of the enemy, with a thouſand rupees, and others among them with 41,000 rupees, to purchaſe what they thought their own ſafety; and finally, give two gentlemen as hoſtages, for what they declare was out of their power to perform. The loſs of life or cruel ſufferings theſe hoſtages may be reduced to, they muſt be anſwerable for.

Is there any thing that we can do adequate to ſuch a caſe? The eyes of the nation are upon us; our feelings for our country's honour will be the meaſure of our own: our power extends to a removal from their ſtations; ſtations; removal from ſtation, ſetting loſs of character out of the queſtion, amounts only to a ceſſation of ſalary; and ſhall a mere ceſſation of ſalary be a requital for the facts here ſtated, if they ſhould prove true? No, let the acquittal or puniſhment ſuch an inveſtigation may bring on, become a national object. I propoſe that a public trial be recommended home; our martial law muſt decide upon the merits or demerits of the two commanders of the army, or ſuch other officers whoſe conduct upon this expedition may require elucidating. But nothing leſs than our national tribunals can acquit or puniſh the civil gentlemen engaged in it, who, by the exceſſive powers they took, preſerved the whole reſponſibility to themſelves.

I wiſhed to have ended here, but ſome further circumſtances remain unnoticed, not equally touching our country's welfare, but tranſactions among themſelves cloſing the above ſcene. When the Field Deputies returned to Bombay, the Field Preſident commenced his ſeparate juſtification, by throwing the whole blame of what had happened upon the bad conduct of the officers under them; by the delays they had cauſed in the progreſs of the troops, by the improper diviſion of the army at the retreat, and by the opinions given by them after the retreat; referring at the ſame time to their minutes of that juncture, to prove his own innocence.

To theſe points I ſhall give but a few words:

1ſt. The bad conduct in delays; it was in favour of the Field Deputies, as well as in the Select Committee at Bombay, to have corrected; therefore, if they were aware of the bad effects of ſuch delays, having the incentives they profeſſed for promptitude, they remain the more culpable for not altering it.

2d. Whatever the diviſion of the army may have been on the 12*th*, it is clear that the firſt ſtage of the retreat ordered, was effected, notwithſtanding the very early attack of the enemy; nor was the loſs great, conſidering the number of the foe, the length of the action, and the immediate quantity of baggage to be covered upon very unfavourable and broken ground.

3d. The opinions of the officers upon the ſtate that the fatal retreat had reduced the army to, from high ſpirits to dejection, if true, were juſtifiable; if falſe, the Field Deputies, being upon the ſpot for better information, ſhould not have been guided by them; the army was under the command of the Field Deputies.

4th. As for the defence the minute of that day affords, it appears to me to have quite a contrary tendency. It is aſſerted by Colonel Egerton to be an afterwork; and the language of the firſt part is ſo different from the other productions of that period, that it might with ſome afford a preſumptive proof of the truth of that aſſertion, which in fact is not fully removed by the evidence called to contradict it: however, letting this drop, for it is too trifling after what has preceded, I will only ſay, that if they really thought, as they pretend, that by continuing the retreat they might have regained ſafety inſtead of ſubmiſſion, they make themſelves doubly criminal for acting againſt their better knowledge, whilſt under no influence but their own will.

Mr. Moſtyn's death, and Ragoba's duplicity, have alſo been mentioned as cauſes for our failure.

Could Mr. Moſtyn's death give cauſe for a retreat, declared to have been ordered upon a report of a Commiſſary of proviſions? or could Ragoba's duplicity make eighteen days proviſion appear inſufficient to perform one day's march to Poonah? No, ſay they, but this duplicity (the bad effects of which we muſt ſuppoſe were only diſcovered the day of the retreat) cauſed him to ſtate more friends than he had, and prevented his managing thoſe he poſſeſſed to the beſt advantage. Admitting it to be true that he had miſmanaged his friends, it ſhould, when we were ſo far advanced, have produced an oppoſite effect to that of ordering a retreat; it ought to have ſtimulated us to redoubled vigour; had we marched into, and poſſeſſed ourſelves of the capital, which the commanding officer declares might have been done, there cannot be a doubt that the Chiefs who had engaged themſelves to Mr. Moſtyn, and many more would have joined Ragoba's party. All their excuſes are equally frivolous, for the Governor himſelf is obliged to condemn and lament the retreat.

Had Ragoba's friends been really ſo ill managed by him, as it is thrown out, the miniſterial party forming the whole ſtrength of the Maratta empire, would not have been ſo alarmed at the appearance of 2,600 men, as to be induced to make the ſubmiſſive offers abovementioned to the Governor. They muſt have feared a junction, and that of a very large diviſion of their party. Our backwardneſs may have made our friends ſuſpend action, but could not overſet or alter the principles or intereſted views that firſt induced them to an alliance with Ragoba. The Committee of Field Deputies when at Bombay, probably to ſupport their own conduct after what had paſſed, joined the Governor in a meaſure (Captain Hartley's promotion on the 1ſt February 1779) which might at any time prove fatal to military ſervice, but more particularly at that juncture, as it could not fail giving univerſal diſcontent. It was a meaſure that muſt make every man who feels as a ſoldier ſympathize with thoſe unhappy men of real military merit, who have the misfortune of ſerving under ſuch regulations.

I muſt look upon Colonel Goddard's arrival at Bombay, as a moſt fortunate circumſtance at this juncture; his diſtinguiſhed merits as an officer I need paſs no encomiums upon, as his actions ſufficiently declare them, and I think it abſolutely neceſſary in the preſent diſtreſſed ſituation that the military upon the Bombay eſtabliſhment are reduced to, that he ſhould have the rank given him of Brigadier General, in order to enable him to carry on the ſervice with more weight and dignity. It is not in the power of the Governor General and Council, or the Preſidency of Bombay, to appoint him Commander in Chief of the forces there, or to give him an effective voice in the Select Committee, as Colonel Egerton cannot be looked upon in any other light than Commander in Chief (though prevented from acting as ſuch) until the ſentence of a court martial or the Court of Directors, decide upon the charges laid againſt him.

Under theſe circumſtances, I have only to recommend that the Government of Bombay ſhall give Colonel Goddard a deliberate voice in their Committee; and conſult him upon all military and political points. And that we continue to him thoſe powers which he already poſſeſſes from this Government, and further inveſt him with ſuch others as we may find neceſſary for carrying on our views.

We are further called upon to give a deciſion on the meaſures which the Governor and Select Committee of Bombay now think neceſſary to be purſued.

The reſolution of the 21ſt July is at an end, Rajopaut Row being no longer in our power.

Scindia holds off, and declines engaging with us, which is the more to be lamented, as his enmity, which muſt now be deeply rooted in his mind, is owing to the deceitful and unworthy treatment he has received from us. The ſervices he has rendered us, and his ſtrong attachment to the Engliſh intereſt, make it a national conſideration to ſatisfy him by an equivalent to the benefit he might have expected from the poſſeſſion of Brouch which cannot be ceded to him upon the claim of a grant that the Field Deputies were not empowered to make.

Moodajee Booſla's claim is held forth as proper, on account of "deſtroying the Bramin uſurpation," and reſtoring the original Ram Rajah Government, which can only tend to unite, increaſe, and ſtrengthen the Maratta State. This very conſideration, however it may weigh with the Bombay Council, would prevent me, if no better can be urged, from ever concurring in it.

Our real intereſts are to keep theirs divided, always preventing overgrowth of power in any of their parties; thus endeavouring to hold the ſcale in our own hands, we remain ourſelves in a great degree the umpire. This is the freeſt road to the ſupport of our dignity and profit, as well as the ſureſt means of retaining undiſturbed what we now poſſeſs.

I therefore think that at preſent we ſhould not ſeek to renew a war, but negociate with the various Maratta intereſts an honourable peace, conformably to the directions already given Colonel Goddard upon that head. But if by refuſing this they force us to continue hoſtilities, I muſt in this caſe ſuppoſe a junction of all their parties, and of courſe an union of all their forces; and I do not think with Colonel Goddard, that his detachment, conſidering the ſtate it is now in, together with the Bombay troops, are equal to enſure ſucceſs in a conteſt with the united Maratta Powers; and I need not aſk any man who is verſed in the politics of this country, what would be the conſequences of a defeat. I do not doubt he muſt concur in my opinion, that it would endanger the whole of the Company's poſſeſſions.

Colonel Goddard has loſt near a thouſand of his original diſciplined men, and thoſe he has recruited are raw, unformed, and in no ſhape to be depended on. He has reported to the Select Committee at Bombay, "that one half of his Sepoys have refuſed to receive "their pay for the month of January, unleſs that for the "month of February is at the ſame time diſcharged; and "he ſeems to think, that this has proceeded from a diſ"poſition among the men to return home, if they could "furniſh themſelves with money enough to bear their "charges to their own country: however he was of opinion, "that he ſhould be able to put a ſtop to this ſpirit on "his return to camp." "But we (ſay the Select Com"mittee) have every reaſon to fear the increaſe of it."

Whatever ſway Colonel Goddard may have over his troops, there is no foreſeeing how far ſuch a diſaffection may carry them, not having a body of Europeans with them to infuſe a ſpirit of emulation, or to keep them in a proper degree of ſubjection.

Our utmoſt vigour ſhall therefore be exerted to ſupport our military reputation in this country, and by one united effort, put a glorious and ſpeedy end to the war: for however uncertain the ſucceſs of war may be, we ought to leave it as little to the reſult of chance as poſſible, conſidering the great ſtake we have to riſk; for which reaſon we ſhould alſo form alliances with the country Powers, eſpecially with Hyder Ally, whoſe more particular intereſt it is to join us in any hoſtile attempts againſt the Maratta State; and if a war ſhould be indiſpenſably continued, I would leave it to the commanding officer, who is reſponſible to us for his conduct, to adopt Mr. Hornby's plan, or not, as he may think moſt adviſable for promoting the diſtreſs of the enemy. In ſo far I may agree in it, though not, as Mr. Hornby expreſſes it, for the ſake of revenue; and as to the other ſimilar propoſals of ſeeking war for plunder, the honour of the nation and Company inſeparable from my own, will never permit me to ſubſcribe to.

They call upon us for thirty lacks between this and October, to ſave their poſſeſſions. While we have money or credit here, I never will let any of the Company's poſſeſſions ſuffer for the want of it; but the very motive that will induce me to ſend it, will prompt me to prevent its falling into hands that experience has proved will make ſo ill an uſe of it: therefore I will not conſent to any ſum being ſent, until I ſee it accompanied by a proper perſon, who ſhall be anſwerable to this Government that it be applied to the purpoſe for which it may be granted.

As Commander in Chief of the army, a reference upon ſo military a ſubject ſeemed to call for my particular diſcretion: this, added to the great variety of matter it afforded, and its weighty conſequences, will, I hope be ſufficient apology for the length of this minute.

(Signed) Eyre Coote.

Mr. Francis—I ought to apprize the Board that in the following minute I have not offered any opinion on the meaſures which may be proper for us to adopt hereafter, for effecting a ſolid peace on the Malabar coaſt, becauſe I looked upon that part of the general ſubject as already provided for, at leaſt diſpoſed of for the preſent, by the powers and inſtructions which we have given to Colonel Goddard. My reflections reply only to the facts already paſt, and which I underſtand to be referred generally to us for our judgment upon them. Appendix. No. 196.

Mr. Francis delivers in the following minute.

Mr. Francis—It is needleſs at this time to enter into a conſideration of the juſtice of our quarrel with the Maratta Government, or of the extent and quality of the powers under which the Preſidency of Bombay have acted in violating the treaty of Poondh. Thoſe queſtions have been ſufficiently diſcuſſed in the Governor General's minutes and mine, before Sir Eyre Coote's arrival.

The following obſervations are confined to the policy of the meaſure within itſelf, and on its own principles, and to the propriety of the means made uſe of to carry it into execution.

1ſt. It appears by the Bombay conſultations of the 10th December 1777, and by their letter to us of the 20th January 1778, that they were unanimouſly determined not to engage in any active enterprize in favour of Ragoba, unleſs they were ſolicited thereto by Saccaram, Moraba, Buthaherba, and Tookoojee Holcar, by a joint application under their own ſiccas and hand writing, and that this was a condition ſine qua non.

Yet on the 21ſt of July following they reſolved to march to Poonah with Ragoba, without having received any application from the perſons above-mentioned, or entered into any ſpecific engagements whatſoever with any of the Maratta Chiefs. After the expedition had failed, Mr. Hornby ſays, "It was evident, that there was not one Chief in the empire who would draw a ſword for Ragoba."

It follows therefore, that in undertaking to act without having previouſly ſettled terms of co-operation with ſome of the Maratta Chiefs, they departed from their own fundamental principles, and, as far as ſucceſs depended on ſuch co-operation, had no right to expect it.

2d. It further appears, by their proceedings of the 12th of October 1778, that when they took their reſolution in July, they reckoned upon the hopes of aſſiſtance from Moraba, Butcheba, and Tucoojee Holdcar, with 30,000 horſe; yet in October they determined to carry their plan into execution, when every expectation of ſuch aſſiſtance muſt have failed them, conſidering that the two firſt of the above Chiefs were under reſtraint, and the latter greatly ſuſpected.

3d. In July they appear to have relied on the aſſiſtance of Colonel Leſlie's detachment, and to have conſidered the ſecuring a junction with him as eſſential to the ſucceſs of their plan; for which purpoſe they then ſent him orders to march to Ziner; yet on the 12th of October, while our detachment was ſtill in Bundlecund (the ſame ſtation which it occupied in July) that is at ſo great a diſtance that a junction could not poſſibly have been effected before February following, they determined to carry their plan forthwith into execution.

4th. With thoſe facts before me, I have a right to conclude, that the Select Committee, in attempting to march to Poonah, have acted in oppoſition to their own profeſſed principles. I mean, that whereas at firſt, and up to the 12th of October, they appear to have thought certain conditions neceſſary, as well to juſtify their engaging in the meaſure in queſtion, as to inſure the ſucceſs of it, they at laſt plunged themſelves into the execution of that plan when every one of theſe conditions had failed them.

5th. Their ignorance of the real ſtate of the Poonah Durbar, and of the reſpective power and influence of the perſons who compoſed it, is a remarkable circumſtance, and ſhould ſerve as a future caution to the Company and to this Government, againſt truſting implicitly to any intelligence we may receive from that quarter. While the plan was in agitation, it ſuited their purpoſe to re-preſent Nana as the moſt powerful, and, to us, the moſt formidable of all the Maratta Chiefs; that he was devoted to the French, and had engaged to put them into poſſeſſion of Choul. Whatever his inclinations might be, of which we have no better evidence than of the reſt, it is clear that they were miſtaken in their opinion of his power. Mr. Hornby, in his minute of the 19th of February, ſays, "The lead that Scindia has taken in the "Adminiſtration, and the condition to which he has re- "duced Nana, to be no more than a creature of his, were "never thoroughly known till the facts diſcovered them- "ſelves on this occaſion; yet they are to be traced in "Mr. Moſtyn's and Mr. Lewis's advices ever ſince the "reſolution effected by Madjee Scindia's means in June "laſt, when Nana fled to him." On which Mr. Draper obſerves, "That he cannot enough lament that we have "ſo lately become acquainted with Scindia's being the "principal perſon in power notwithſtanding the reſi- "dence of Meſſrs. Moſtyn and Lewis at Poonah."

In the execution of the meaſure, the board, I think, will ſee ſuch errors at the outſet, as might have been alone ſufficient to defeat it.

1ſt. The appointment of field deputies, under the title of a committee for concerting and conducting all military operations. The ſucceſs of military enterprizes depends upon a unity of command, without which there can be neither deciſion or diſpatch. Debate and execution cannot move together; conſtant experience has ſhewn the bad effects of field deputations. The Company, in a former inſtance, ſeverely condemned the appointment of ſome gentlemen at Madras on a ſimilar ſervice, and no one argument is ſuggeſted to ſhew that ſuch an appointment was neceſſary on the preſent occaſion. If the Select Committee deemed their commanding officer unequal to the conduct of an expedition of threeſcore miles, they ought not to have employed him. To place a civil authority over the immediate execution of military operations might create many miſchiefs, and could correct none.

Mr. Hornby himſelf ſeems to have entertained the ſame opinion of the meaſure that I do. The commiſſion given to the committee requires the obedience of all the Company's ſervants, civil and military; yet Mr. Hornby, in his letter of the 23d of December to Mr. Carnac, ſays, that "in his opinion there can be no neceſſity for pub- "liſhing it, and that the promulgation of ſuch a com- "miſſion might bear the appearance of ſetting up an "authority in the very camp to ſuperſede that of the "commanding officer, and give ideas among the troops, "as well as to Colonel Egerton, very different from thoſe "of the Select Committee. He confeſſes that the words "to concert and conduct all military operations, are too "comprehenſive; that they eſcaped him at the time the "commiſſion paſſed, and he thinks muſt have eſcaped "Mr. Carnac alſo."

Conſidering that the body of the commiſſion itſelf does not exceed a few lines, it ſeems extraordinary that the eſſential part of it ſhould paſs unobſerved by thoſe who drew it up. But, whether it eſcaped thoſe gentlemen or not, Colonel Egerton has ſufficiently cleared himſelf from any concern in the meaſure; before he left Bombay he proteſted againſt being accompanied by field deputies; the commiſſion was framed after his departure, and he proteſted againſt its being publiſhed in the army as ſoon as he ſaw it.

2d. The immoderate quantity of baggage and train of cattle which attended the army, and which is ſaid to have amounted to nineteen thouſand, ſeems to have been unneceſſary for ſo ſhort a march, and wholly inconſiſtent with the plan of an expedition which could only have ſucceeded by rapidity and ſurprize.

3d. The allowing Ragoba to move with a ſeparate camp, inſtead of keeping him conſtantly under the eyes of the commander in chief, ſeems to me a capital miſtake. In conſequence of it, the motions of our army were made to depend on thoſe of Ragoba, who kept aloof when he thought fit, and was left at liberty to negociate with the enemy for himſelf, and in caſe of a misfortune, to betray us to them.

For theſe defects in the executive part of the plan, I deem the Preſident and Select Committee entirely anſwerable.

In reviewing the conduct of the expedition,

1ſt. It appears to me, that on the face of the accounts tranſmitted to us, the only queſtionable part of Colonel Egerton's conduct, while he continued in the command, is the ſlow march of the army from Panwell to the other ſide of the Gauts, by which much time ſeems to have been loſt; yet this makes no part of the Preſident's charge againſt Colonel Egerton; and if it had, the trial of it ſhould have been immediately by a court martial at Bombay; nothing but an examination of evidence on the ſpot could determine whether the delay was unavoidable or not. It is ſtrictly a queſtion of military ſervice, and ſubject to military juriſdiction.

2d. Colonel Egerton reſigned the command on the 6th of January. From that time he was no longer anſwerable, as commanding officer, for any thing done in the committee; the caſting voice veſted all power in Mr. Carnac. On the 1ſt of January Mr. Carnac ſpeaks of him "as totally overpowered by fatigue, and utterly unable to move about." On the 5th of January Mr. Hornby, in a letter to Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, ſays, "from the accounts I receive of Colonel Egerton's health, "I find I muſt look even at preſent to you, to your zeal "for the ſucceſs of your enterprize, and to your activity, "neceſſary to inſure that ſucceſs for the accompliſhment "of all our hopes in our preſent undertaking."

3d. On the 11th January, Mr. Carnac ordered the army to fall back, when Colonel Cockburn declared he had no doubt of carrying the army to Poonah. At that time Mr. Carnac's power was not queſtioned.

4th. On the 14th January Colonel Cockburn's opinion was required by Mr. Carnac, who diſſented from it, yet gave no poſitive order for the retreat. With reſpect to Mr. Carnac's powers, it is to be obſerved, that when they were firſt queſtioned by Colonel Egerton, on occaſion of Mr. Moſtyn's illneſs, a deciſion in ſupport of them was given by the Select Committee at Bombay. Mr. Hornby, in his letter to Mr. Carnac of the 27th of December, ſays, "the deciſion already ſent concerning your "caſting vote, can leave no further doubt on that ſub- "ject. I think it much more for the advantage of the "ſervice to rely ſingly on you."

Mr. Carnac himſelf tells Tookajee, that he had the Company's ſeal and full powers. He gave full powers to Mr. Holmes to ſettle terms with Madajee Scindia; and he executed the convention as an act of the committee; in which, whether Colonel Egerton concurred or not, Mr. Carnac's voice alone was deciſive.

With all theſe circumſtances in view, it remains to be determined, whether Mr. Carnac is warranted in affirming, that his authority did not extend "to the giving an "order to the army to march at all events." Be that as it may, it is certain he gave no orders for the retreat after the engagement.

5th. There could be no diſobedience of an order which never was given. But if Mr. Carnac had even deemed his authority competent to the caſe, he could not have directed the order to Colonel Egerton, who had reſigned the command eight days before, and whoſe continued ſickneſs made it impoſſible for him to reſume it.

6th. It appears that Colonel Cockburn and Colonel Dagon were called upon for their opinion reſpecting the practicability of a retreat; and that they agreed in their opinion: yet, that of Colonel Cockburn's is publiſhed alone, and Colonel Dagon's ſuppreſſed at Bombay, and withheld from the Governor General and Council. The myſtery of this proceeding can only be cleared up by a public trial on the ſpot, when Colonel Dagon's evidence may be called for.

7th. The deputation of Meſſrs. Farmer and Holmes to the Marattas, and the convention, are acts of the committee; mittee; the neceſſity of which it is poſſible, and I think only poſſible, might be ſupported by the actual poſition and circumſtances of the army, if we had the means of examining viva voce evidence to that point. But it is impoſſible to reconcile thoſe acts to the opinion of thoſe who thought a retreat practicable; and that it ought to be attempted.

8th. On the return of the army to Bombay, the Preſident exhibits a ſpecific charge jointly againſt Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, "for having refuſed "to take charge of conducting the army back to Bom- "bay." Theſe terms expreſs a direct diſobedience of orders. Were ſuch orders given, to whom were they given? and by whom were they diſobeyed? Theſe are queſtions of fact which can only be decided by a court martial. To decide them in any other manner, would, in my opinion, be equally irregular and unjuſt.

The charge once exhibited, ought t have been followed by an immediate arreſt and trial. Inſtead of purſuing that obvious and regular courſe, the Preſident holds out a menace to the parties, that if they will not decline all military duty, and ſubmit their cauſe to the determination of the Governor General and Council, he will move to ſuſpend them the ſervice; that is, unleſs two officers of the higheſt rank in that ſervice, formally accuſed by himſelf of the higheſt military offence, conſent to wave the right to a public trial, he will puniſh them without one. Many painful reflections occur on this proceeding: we ſee a charge preferred, and a trial refuſed; we ſee puniſhment ready to follow accuſation, without the intermediate ſteps which juſtice always takes on inquiry and proof: in ſhort we ſee the regular trial evaded, and the cauſe referred to a tribunal which has no juriſdiction over it; and which, if it were otherwiſe competent, could not try for want of the examination of viva voce evidence.

From ſuch appearances, what concluſion can ariſe in the minds of indifferent men, but that things have been done which would not bear the public eye, and that a trial is refuſed in order to conceal them; that a hope was entertained at Bombay of obtaining a deciſion here, which might be guided by other principles than thoſe of juſtice; and that the ſole object of the reference to this Government, was to ſave one party by a ſacrifice of the other?

Whether Meſſrs. Egerton and Cockburn are guilty, or not, or in what degree they are guilty, remains to be inquired; if under any influence of menace and authority, they really and bona fide evaded their claim to a court martial, they were very ill adviſed. Some allowances, however, ſhould be made for the ſituation of men ſo placed under the weight of power, and ſo treated as they were. At all events they diſavowed or retracted their aſſent to the reference long before it was made, and time enough to revert to and claim their original right, a public trial: no conditions, tending to deprive them of it, ſhould ever have been propoſed, much leſs ſhould ſuch conditions have been extorted from them by menaces.

(Signed) P. Francis.

Mr. Francis—I now beg leave to ſubmit ſome propoſitions purely to the conſideration of the Board, which I came prepared with, and which are conformable to the ſentiments expreſſed in the latter part of my minute. I mean, if the Board ſhould approve of them, they ſhould make part of our letter to Bombay.

1ſt. That we highly diſapprove of the reference made to us, to decide on the conduct of Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, over whom we have no juriſdiction, and that if we were otherwiſe competent to try the charge, the want of viva voce evidence to be examined upon oath, concerning many facts neceſſary to eſtabliſh the truth of it, would be an immediate bar to our proceeding.

2d. That the former charge exhibited by the Preſidency againſt Meſſrs. Egerton and Cockburn "for having "refuſed to take charge of conducting the army "back to Bombay," ought to have been followed by an immediate arreſt and trial It is a queſtion of fact, which could only be determined on the ſpot. Appendix, No. 197.

3d. That to prefer a charge, and to refuſe a trial, is in our judgment a proceeding wholly inconſiſtent with juſtice, and liable to many dangerous conſequences. A precedent of this nature if once permitted to paſs without condemnation, tends in the firſt inſtance to leave the character and ſafety of individuals at the mercy of men in power, and ultimately to weaken the hands of Government itſelf, by deſtroying that confidence which individuals have been taught to repoſe in the juſtice and good faith of Government, and which alone can engage them to act with ſpirit and vigour in the public ſervice.

4th. That the menace held out by the Preſident to the officers, againſt whom he himſelf had delivered a formal charge of diſobedience of orders, viz. "That if "they would not decline all military duty, and ſubmit "their cauſe to our determination, he would move to "ſuſpend them the ſervice," is in our opinion a high and arbitrary proceeding, and calls for the moſt public and ſolemn condemnation from this Board; that the claim of Meſſrs. Egerton and Cockburn to be tried by a court martial, was a claim of right, and accrued to them the moment a ſpecific charge was exhibited againſt them; that any attempts to induce men under a public charge to wave their right to a public trial, is equally inconſiſtent with the juſtice and dignity of Government; but that the intention of paſſing by all trial whatſoever, and of proceeding inſtantly from accuſation to puniſhment, ſo plainly expreſſed in the menace held out by the Preſident, is in our opinion highly criminal, and that as ſuch, we ſhall think it our duty to repreſent it to our ſuperiors.

5th. That, admitting that Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, whether ſurprized by the menaces of the Preſident, or induced by any other motive whatſoever, had at firſt ſubmitted to the conditions impoſed on them, yet having diſavowed or retracted ſuch ſuppoſed aſſent long before the reference to this Board was actually made, the advantage taken thereof was unjuſt in itſelf, and not to be reconciled to the fair and open purpoſes of public juſtice; that they were in full time to revert to their original right, and that their claim to it ought not to have been denied.

6th. That we are much concerned that ſo much time ſhould have been loſt by a uſeleſs and dilatory reference to us, of a queſtion which ought to have been tried upon the ſpot, where all the parties and witneſſes were preſent, and while the recollection of every particular was freſh in their minds: that however the right of Meſſrs. Egerton and Cockburn to a court martial is not weakened by this delay; and for this reaſon, as well as becauſe we think that many circumſtances relative to the late tranſactions at Bombay, and neceſſary for the Company's information, can only be brought to light by a public trial, we are of opinion that a court martial ſhould be immediately ordered for the trial of Meſſrs. Egerton and Cockburn, on the formal charge preferred againſt them by the Preſident.

APPENDIX, No. 197.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 31ſt May 1779.

THE Governor General begs leave to call the attention of the Board to the following paper, which is a tranſlation of one of the enclоſures of a letter received, within theſe few days, from Nana Furneeſe, and appears to have been delivered in the form, and for the purpoſe, of credentials, on the part of the military committee, or

of

of Mr. Carnac, repreſenting it, on the occaſion of the overture made for the treaty of peace when the army lay at Wargaum. As no mention is made of this letter in their diary, nor of any other of the correſpondence which paſſed between them and the Miniſters at the time in which the negociation paſſed, nor of the powers or orders given either to Mr. Farmer or Mr. Holmes, the Board will probably deem it incumbent upon them to require copies of ſuch inſtruments, and for that purpoſe to demand them from Mr. Horſley; or in the caſe of his not having it in his power to ſupply them, that they be required from the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, as eſſential to complete the proceedings of the military committee.

Copy of a Letter from John Carnac, Eſquire, Commander of the Engliſh army, ſent to the Preſence, after which Peace was eſtabliſhed, bearing date the 24th of Zehidja 1192 Hegira, and ſealed with the Company's ſeal.

Having given me full and complete powers from Bombay, they have ſent me here: I have therefore many things to treat with you privately about; if you ſend me a letter, I will diſpatch a gentleman to your preſence, who will repreſent every matter to you, by which you will become acquainted therewith. What ſhall I write more, but to deſire that you will preſerve friendſhip and favour?

Agreed, to the Governor General's propoſition, and ordered accordingly.

Mr. Barwell—The long detail of facts which has been tranſmitted by the Preſidency of Bombay, and which was ſo neceſſary for our information, contains much matter foreign to the proper objects of our diſcuſſion; for I regard not any points referred to us as proper for diſcuſſion, to which our orders cannot reach; the knowledge of them may indeed be eſſential for forming a juſt judgment of the ſtate of their Government, and in this light, and in this alone, ſhall I conſider all that is ſubmitted to us, touching the demerits of individuals; theſe appertain excluſively to the adminiſtration of the Governor and Council of Bombay, who certainly ought, whatever may be our opinion, to act upon their own powers: I ſhall therefore decline giving my ſentiments on any matter that belongs properly to their interior Government, and confine myſelf ſimply to the important ſubjects of peace and war, which fall under our cognizance.

1ſt. I think we ſhould wait for the effect of Colonel Goddard's negociations for peace.

2d. Should theſe negociations fail, the next conſideration is, in what manner to gain the greateſt poſſible advantages to the Company from a ſtate of war?

3d. We ſhould adopt Mr. Hornby's plan of military operations, and on the reluctancy of Moodajee Booſla, treat with Madajee Scindia, and direct Colonel Goddard to carry ſuch plan into execution?

4th. Whether we ſhall give Colonel Goddard a brevet of Brigadier General, a rank that will enable him to command the forces, even in caſe the ſuſpenſion of Colonels Egerton and Cockburn ſhould be remitted?

5th. Whether having diſclaimed the convention of Worgaun, we ſhall now gratuitouſly beſtow on Madajee Scindia, Broach, or an equivalent for Broach, as expreſſive of our ſenſe of his friendſhip for the ſervices he rendered our army in that convention?

To the ſecond quere, I am opinion, Colonel Goddard ſhould act under his preſent inſtructions, and a latitude be given him to decline further negociation with Mhadoojee Bouncello.

To the third quere, I am of opinion we ſhould adopt Mr. Hornby's plan, and engage the Guicawar to take part in a ſtate of war; and that Colonel Goddard ſhould be directed to give ſuch plan effect.

To the fourth quere, I am of opinion Colonel Goddard ſhould be honoured with the brevet of Brigadier General, as propoſed by the Commander in Chief.

To the fifth quere, I am of opinion, we ought to expreſs our ſenſe of Madajee Scindia's ſervices, and gain him, if poſſible, to our party.

Warren Haſtings,
P. Francis.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 7th June 1779;—preſent, the Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident; Richard Barwell, Philip Francis, Edward Wheler, Eſquires; Lieutenant General Sir Eyre Coote, K. B.

To Wm Bruere, Eſquire, Aſſiſtant Secretary, &c.

Sir,

On the diary of the Poonah Committee under the 13th January, you will find that a committee was then held to deliberate relative to overtures to be made for the peaceable return of the army; and two letters are noted as having been ſent, and one received, on the ſame day (as I conclude) on this ſubject, but no copies are entered: if any were preſerved, Mr. Farmer carried them away with him. On the 14th January Mr. Farmer was ſent to the Maratta Durbar, and the meſſage with which he was charged appears on the diary under that date. An account of his negociation is contained in the letters that paſſed between him and the committee, and I know of no letters, or writing of any ſort, that have paſſed between the committee and the Maratta Durbar, from the time Mr. Farmer was ſent until the concluſion of the convention. Mr. Holmes was deputed on the 15th to Madajee Scindia. The reſolution to ſend him, and the powers given him, are comprized in a minute of that day. I have always underſtood, that Mr. Farmer and Mr. Holmes acted under theſe minutes as their inſtructions and authority; nor have I copies of either in any other form.

With regard to the paper you have communicated to me, as copy of a letter from J. Carnac, Eſquire, &c. I can only ſay, that as I am entirely unacquainted with the degree of importance or authenticity allowed it by the Board, it is impoſſible for me to judge of the neceſſity or propriety of troubling them with any remarks on it.

I am extremely unwilling to intrude unneceſſarily on the Board, yet I hope they will pardon me, if, on a ſubject ſo important as their preſent proceedings are, to the Preſidency of Bombay, I take the liberty to repreſent through you, that, when the Select Committee requeſted, that I might be allowed to repreſent to the Honourable the Governor General and Council, ſuch particulars as may appear to me material to be attended to in their deliberations, they did not expect I ſhould be refuſed all information till the reſolutions of the Board were taken, and all deliberation at an end. I believe too a different procedure was obſerved on a former occaſion. I do not ground any claims on this, though I own it gave me hopes, that with talents far inferior to thoſe of the gentlemen who laſt waited on this Government from Bombay, I ſhould however have found my advantages from the candour of the Governor General and Council not leſs than his. I dare ſay the ſame is meant to be ſhewn me.

Calcutta, the 7th June 1779. I am, &c. (Signed) G. Horſley.

Ordered, That the above letter lie for conſideration.

The Governor General delivers in the following minute:

Governor General—As objections have been made to our entruſting the Select Committee at Bombay with any diſcretional powers, and as it is my earneſt wiſh, that on a ſubject of ſuch importance as the preſent ſtate of affairs at that Preſidency, our reſolutions may be unanimous, I hope to qualify and accommodate the different opinions which may have been formed on this point, by an expedient to be ſubſtituted in the place of the laſt clauſe of the draft which I have offered to the conſideration of the Board.

It

It is only in the caſe of war and negociation that we have authority to confer diſcretional powers on the other Preſidencies. To deprive that of Bombay of all ſhare in the conduct of meaſures which we cannot execute without their aſſiſtance, might check their zeal, and thereby expoſe us to the riſk of additional miſcarriage and diſgrace.

On the other hand it is aſſerted, that the uſe which they have already made of the powers which they have been allowed to exerciſe, hath deſtroyed their claim to a continuation of them, and would render us inexcuſable if with ſuch a warning we admitted it.

The following appears to me the only expedient for avoiding both extremes, and reconciling thoſe oppoſite conſiderations; viz. "That all negociations which have "no relation to the objects of Colonel Goddard's in- "ſtructions of the 16th November and 5th April, be "conducted and executed by the Select Committee, but "that no treaty concluded by virtue of this authority "ſhall be final, until it has been ratified by this Go- "vernment."

This limitation, while it precludes the evil conſequences incident to a full latitude of conduct, will ſtill preſerve to the Select Committee that reſpect and confidence from the native Governments of India, which are indiſpenſable to the exerciſe of the regular and conſtitutional powers veſted in them by the Company.

I cannot preſcribe a better line for the direction of their military operations, than that which I have already recommended.

A negative controul, limited to the points in which they are already bound, either by our expreſs orders, or by the obligations of public faith, is all that can be allowed to our officer, while he acts only in aid of their meaſures; nor can they complain of it as a ſevere or unreaſonable reſtriction, ſince it is in effect no more than a ſecurity for their ſtricter performance of what they ought to do without it.

Much depends upon our preſent reſolutions; much more upon their general tendency than on the rectitude or wiſdom of the ſpecific points contained in them. In effect, whatever opinion we may entertain of the integrity, knowledge, or ability of the men who have the actual charge of the Government of Bombay, it is on them that we muſt primarily depend for the retrieval of the loſſes which the intereſts of the Company, and the national honour, have ſuffered from the miſerable iſſue of the late ill-fated enterprize. While we debate, even while the materials which are to ſerve as the grounds of our deliberations are on their paſſage to us, the ſcene may be entirely ſhifted, and preſent a new face of affairs to the view of thoſe to whom we preſcribe in dark conjectures orders which they may be unable to execute, and which if too ſtrict may prevent them from availing themſelves of the advantages which fortune may offer to them; or they may involve them in additional difficulties inſtead of extricating them from the paſt.

Their preſent ſtate is ſuch, that without a vigilant attention to circumſtances and events as they ariſe, and a prompt application of them to their own occaſions, it will not be poſſible for them to raiſe themſelves above a degree of languid and burthenſome ſecurity. I will not add what, in my opinion, they are capable of effecting by great exertions, and a reaſonable latitude allowed them to act in, becauſe it would be impoſſible to convey that conviction to the minds of others which I feel impreſſed on my own, without hazarding conjectures on all the variety of combinations into which the ſtate of affairs preſented to us may be reſolved, and diſplaying an oſtentatious ſcheme of policy, which could yield no advantage and which it would therefore be imprudent to avow.

But whatever may be within their power, aided with the means which we have afforded them, or may yet ſupply, it is certain that we of ourſelves can do nothing; and if, either from an unſeaſonable reſentment or diſtruſt, we wholly diſable them from acting, or, which would in the event prove the ſame, allow them only to act and to think under an humiliating contract, no good conſequences can reſult from ſuch a policy; the worſt may attend it, and we alone ſhall ſtand accountable for them. Appendix. No. 197.

I will not examine whether the Select Committee of Bombay have or have not the power of beſtowing the chief command of their military eſtabliſhment on Colonel Goddard in the caſe of a vacancy, or of the continuance of the ſuſpenſion of Colonel Egerton: they are the moſt competent judges of the powers of their own conſtitution. I readily wave the propoſal of allowing the admiſſion of Colonel Goddard on their eſtabliſhment in favour of that made by the Commander in Chief, to grant him a brevet commiſſion of Brigadier General on our own, to which I give my hearty aſſent, in the perſuaſion that it would be attended with the ſame good effect.

With the propoſal which is the object of this minute, I ſubmit the following alterations in the draft which I have recommended of the letter to the Select Committee of Bombay; viz. 6th paragraph, the concluding ſentence, "nor to reſume it, but on advances made to him "by the Government of Berar; nor then unleſs it ſhall "be ſtrictly compatible with the ſtate of our other con- "nections then ſubſiſting, and with your participation "in the manner which we ſhall preſcribe hereafter," to be omitted.

14th paragraph. After the word "ſuſpended," let the following be added: "The future renewal of this "negociation we reſerve to be determined by our ex- "preſs orders, but without revoking the credentials and "inſtructions already granted to Colonel Goddard re- "ſpecting it. In all other negociations, treaties, &c."

15th paragraph. The concluſion of this paragraph beginning with the words, "and we muſt require," to be omitted, and the following ſubſtituted in its ſtead:

"And for the ſame reaſon we require, that all treaties "which ſhall be concluded by you in virtue of theſe "inſtructions, be referred to this Government for its "final ſanction and formal ratification of them, and "that a clauſe be inſerted in every treaty ſo concluded "to that effect," 16th paragraph to be wholly omitted.

Mr. Francis delivers in the following minute, and begs leave to obſerve, that it refers to the proceedings of the 24th ultimo, and not to the Governor General's minute above recorded.

Mr. Francis.—It is not poſſible that any member of this Board can be more weary of controverſy than I am, or more deſirous to avoid it. When the Board agreed to revert to the treaty of Poonah, we in effect endeavoured to reinſtate ourſelves in a poſition from which we never ſhould have departed. Without looking back to the ſteps by which that ground was loſt, I willingly joined in the attempt to recover it. I have no doubt that peace may be obtained on the terms of Colonel Goddard's preſent inſtructions, provided he enters heartily into our views; provided this Government itſelf be in earneſt in the purſuit of its profeſſed object; and provided we do not ſuffer ourſelves to be entangled in the deſperate ſchemes of the perſons who now conſtitute the Government of Bombay, or thwarted by their oppoſition. I deem the re-eſtabliſhment of peace on the Malabar coaſt to be eſſential, not merely to the proſperity of the India Company, but to their exiſtence; the ſum total of the Britiſh intereſt in India is involved in this queſtion. Let a war upon the coaſt be conducted how it may, the difference between conqueſt and defeat, in my judgment, is little more than the delay or acceleration of the ruin of all our reſources; nor is it clear to my apprehenſion, which of theſe two events will ſooneſt produce the effect I expect equally from both.

Taking the truth of their own repreſentations for granted, it is not eaſy to deſcribe a ſituation more completely deſtitute of all the means of ſupporting a war, than that of the Preſidency of Bombay. The annexed account ſhews, that during the laſt five years they have received little leſs than a hundred and ſixteen lacks of current rupees, directly out of the revenues of Bengal, yet their bonded debt accumulates daily, and now amounts to thirty-eight lacks.

By the month of October Mr. Hornby ſays their finances will be utterly exhauſted. In the interval they will want a ſupply of thirty lacks. Of this ſum the Preſident propoſes to borrow twenty, but doubts the poſſibility of raiſing ſo large a ſum; and if it could be borrowed, he ſays they have no funds to pay even intereſt.

Colonel Goddard, in his laſt letter of the 25th of April, tells us, "that it is impoſſible in that country, and "he fears in its neighbourhood, to find men fit to re- "cruit the vacancies which have happened in his bat- "talions ſince leaving the Jumna." But Mr. Hornby himſelf tells us, and we have every reaſon to believe it is true, that the Bengal Sepoys will not ſtay at ſo great a diſtance from their native country. He ſays, that "if they were to have no cauſe of diſſatisfaction on ac- "count of their pay, there is reaſon to fear their num- "bers will every day diminiſh by their going off to their "own country." Even before the late rupture with the Marattas, and long before the diſaſter which attended it, the Preſidency of Bombay told us, in their letter of the 7th December 1777, that "ſince their late acquiſitions "it was become very neceſſary, and they had accord- "ingly recommended it to the Company, to augment "the European corps; that notwithſtanding they gave "every encouragement, it was very difficult to raiſe "good Sepoys on that coaſt, and that it would require "ſo much time to raiſe and diſcipline a further number "of Sepoys, ſo as in the leaſt degree to be conſidered "as effective troops, that it would be much better in "every reſpect to ſend them a reinforcement of diſ- "ciplined Sepoys, if Europeans could not be ſpared."

We ſhould do well to conſider how long we can maintain a war on ſuch a footing before we engage in it. I will not ſuppoſe the caſe of new miſcarriages. Let it be admitted, that ſucceſs and conqueſt are as certain as the moſt ſanguine expectation can imagine: it does not follow, that the objects propoſed to be obtained by them are ſuch as we ought to aim at in our preſent circumſtances, or that victory will pay its own expences. By extending our territorial poſſeſſions, we create irreconcileable enmity in the minds of thoſe Powers whom we immediately rob of their property. We fill every other Indian State with jealouſy and alarm: and the territory we acquire comes waſted and depopulated into our hands. To defend a new line of frontier, new military eſtabliſhments muſt be formed; and thoſe eſtabliſhments muſt not only be paid for out of the revenues of Bengal, but the very men who compoſe them, raiſed and recruited here to ſupply a ſervice, which we know they will take the firſt opportunity of deſerting.

Such, in my conception, is the ſituation in which a ſucceſsful war againſt the Marattas alone will place us. But if our ſucceſs, or the apparent proſpect of it, ſhould compel them to call in the French to their aſſiſtance; if, rather than relinquiſh their country to us, they ſhould reſolve to make it the ſeat of war, let us conſider in what manner the conteſt is then to be maintained, and to what iſſue it may lead us. Nothing leſs than the extreme and inſtant neceſſity of ſelf-preſervation can ever reduce the Marattas to ſo deſperate a reſolution, as that of inviting an European army into their country; if once they are introduced, it may be a difficult taſk to remove them: the events of war in that caſe may not be ſo clearly at our command as they are thought to be at preſent: and let it be remembered, that on thoſe events, if they are forwarded by our acts, we ſhall wantonly ſtake the fate of our empire.

The queſtion does not end here. In the preſent ſtate of things, much more than the immediate intereſts of India may depend on the care and economy with which we conduct the Company's affairs. A regular return of wealth from the revenues of theſe provinces is undoubtedly expected at home. The nation now perhaps looks to Bengal, as to its laſt and greateſt external reſource: but, if this demand upon us from home were not ſo preſſing and ſo likely to increaſe, as I think it is, it is time for us to conſider, whether there be in Great Britain a fundamental force equal to the tenure of unbounded acquiſitions at this diſtance from the ſeat of empire; or whether we are not arrived at a point, at which common prudence dictates to us to fix, once for all, the limits of our dominion: if my judgment were to prevail, it ſhould be our object to contract them.

Theſe general conſiderations belong properly to the opinion which I mean to give on the principal queſtions before us, and will be found applicable to the ſubject.

To avoid a uſeleſs debate at the Board, I think the firſt queſtion ſhould be put generally, and decided by a majority of votes, viz. "Whether we ſhall or ſhall not "enter into a diſcuſſion and cenſure of the late tranſac- "tions at Bombay?" If it be determined in the affirmative, the Commander in Chief's minute and mine, will furniſh what I deem ſufficient materials for that part of our letter. To theſe, however, the other Members of the Board may propoſe ſuch additions or alterations as they think proper.

The ſecond queſtion, I ſhould think, to be decided in the ſame manner is, "whether we ſhould declare our opi- "nion to the Preſidency of Bombay, that Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn ſhould be tried "by a court martial, for the reaſons aſſigned in the pa- "ragraphs which I ſubmitted to the Board on Monday "laſt?"

The remaining queſtions brought before us by the Governor General's minute, require more care and deliberation than need be given to the condemnation of any thing that is paſt.

I think we ought, in the firſt place, to decide generally, whether we ſhall or ſhall not ſend any new inſtructions to Colonel Goddard, before we hear the reſult of thoſe we have already ſent: my opinion is, that we ſhould wait for advices from him, in reply to our letters of the 5th of April.

With reſpect to the propoſed inſtructions, I am againſt our engaging in, or giving our ſanction to the plan of military operations propoſed by Mr. Hornby.

Firſt, for the reaſon aſſigned by the Commander in Chief, in which I entirely concur, and which I beg leave to recite in his own words, viz. "As to the various "plans propoſed of ſeeking war for plunder, the ho- "nour of the nation and the Company, inſeparable from "my own, will never permit me to ſubſcribe to them." Secondly, becauſe if I thought that a war on this or any other plan, might at a future day be unavoidable, ſtill I would not, at the preſent point of time, hold out to the Preſidency of Bombay, the moſt diſtant idea of encouragement and eventual ſupport in the proſecution of ſuch meaſures, being thoroughly convinced from my knowledge and experience of the temper that predominates there, that it would furniſh them with means, of which I fear they might avail themſelves, to embarraſs Colonel Goddard's negociations with the Poonah Durbar, and to prevent a peace. By plunging the Company into a war, it is poſſible that a hope may be entertained of recovering perſonal credit; that inſtant difficulties may withdraw the Company's attention from things already done; and that, in the courſe of events, new queſtions may ariſe in which the conſideration of former miſcarriages and former miſconduct may be loſt. But theſe are motives of action which have no relation to the public ſervice; and which neither can nor ought to have any influence over our deliberations.

Thirdly, Becauſe the motive aſſigned for not cenſuring the late tranſactions with the ſeverity they deſerve, viz. "That it would be improper to add to the depreſſion "of men by whoſe agency we muſt defend and ſupport "the rights of the Company and the honour of the Britiſh nation," amounts to a declaration or admiſſion, that the ſame agency which has already produced ſo much diſhonour and diſtreſs, muſt ſtill be truſted and employed in the direction and conduct of the propoſed operations; but to this I can never aſſent. I ſee wiſdom, nor firmneſs, nor union in their Councils, and I have no reaſon to believe that their diſpoſition is pacific.

Fourthly, Becauſe I ſee no ground for apprehenſion that the Marattas will renew hoſtilities with us, even for the recovery of the territory ceded to them by the convention, provided we are content to ſtand upon the defenſive. They have no general principle of union among themſelves but that of ſelf-defence. Neither party however can now act againſt the other with effect before October; in that interval a peace may be obtained, if we on our part are heartily inclined to it: at all events we loſe nothing by waiting for the reſult of Colonel Goddard's negociations. If, in addition to his preſent inſtructions, it be thought adviſable to empower him to gain the friendſhip of Madajee Scindia, by an equitable compromiſe in lieu of the private engagements already ſettled with him, I ſhall readily agree to it, becauſe I think that, with prudent management, it may be the means of forwarding a general peace, without which I would not make any conceſſion.

I have heretofore ſtated my reaſons at large for objecting to the alliance propoſed to be accompliſhed with Moodajee Booſla by the deputation of Mr. Elliott, and Colonel Goddard's ſubſequent appointment to the ſame commiſſion: the plan having failed I ſhould be ſorry to ſee it reſumed. I dread the idea of leading our Government, which is now too great to act on any but ſimple principles, into a labyrinth of Aſiatic politics. Let us be contented with what we have; let us keep the peace; let us leave our neighbours to ſettle their differences among themſelves without our interpoſition; and I am thoroughly ſatisfied that no Indian Power will ever moleſt us.

To theſe general reaſons I cannot add a ſtronger argument than that which the Commander in Chief's minute has furniſhed me. He obſerves that "Moodajee Booſla is propoſed, becauſe his elevation will reſtore "the old Maratta Government, and thereby ſtrengthen, "aggrandize, and unite the Maratta empire, which "very reaſon ſeeming ſo ſtrong with the Council of "Bombay, if no better can be given, will prevent his "ever concurring in it." Even the Governor General's opinion comes ſtrongly in ſupport of Sir Eyre Coote's ſentiments and mine on this ſubject. He thinks that "Moodajee Booſla will wait for proofs of our ſupe-"riority before he will hazard the conſequences of a "decided connection with us." When that ſuperiority is obtained, we ſhall ſtand in no need of the connection; and if our ſcheme of military operations be not practicable by our own force, I agree entirely with the Governor in thinking, that we ſhall gain nothing by incumbering ourſelves with the weight of a timid ally.

Before we determine whether we ſhall ſend any farther ſupply of money to Bombay at this time, and to what amount, I deſire that the Accountant General may lay before us an account of the ſums already remitted to that Preſidency for their excluſive ſervice ſince April 1778; diſtinguiſhing the annual from the extra ſupply. Alſo a ſtate of the ſums remitted to Colonel Goddard, or drawn for by him ſince he ſucceeded to the command of the detachment. From theſe accounts we may be able to judge how far we are bound to comply with any new demands from Bombay; how long Colonel Goddard's preſent funds will laſt, and at what time it may be neceſſary to make him farther remittances for the pay of his army. At preſent I will not conſent to ſend a rupee to Bombay for the purpoſe of carrying on war, and making conqueſts; nor will I conſent to it at any time, but under the condition inſiſted on by the Commander in Chief, that means are taken to prevent the money falling into hands which experience has proved will make ſo ill uſe of it. A conſiderable part of the money which we ſent them laſt year to defray their neceſſary expences has been given to Ragoba and Scindia, nearly to the amount of £. 50,000. The truth is, they have dreamt too long of inexhauſtible wealth from Bengal; under the influence of this dream, they have embarked in ſchemes of the moſt dangerous nature, and waſted the Company's property with unexampled profuſion: it is high time that they ſhould be awakened from it.

31ſt May 1779. (Signed) James Miller, Act$_g$ Account^t Gen^l.

Governor General.—I am equally deſirous with Mr. Francis to avoid controverſy. This ſentiment I not only profeſs, but I will evince it by refuſing to bear a part in it. This muſt ſerve for my excuſe, if any excuſe is neceſſary, for declining a reply to Mr. Francis's minute, at the ſame time that I muſt declare my diſagreement not only with its general tenor but with many parts of it, which appear to me not ſo neceſſarily to ariſe out of the ſubjects immediately before the Board, as to be the continuation of former debates.

The ſentiments which have been expreſſed, by the ſeveral members of this Board, have led us into a wide field of debate, from which it is officially incumbent upon me to endeavour to withdraw our attention to ſuch preciſe points as may bring this buſineſs to a concluſion.

In my firſt minute, I communicated all the points of conſideration which were brought before us by the diſpatches lately received from Bombay; leaving it to the choice of the Board which of theſe we ſhould reject, and which we ſhould ſelect for the ſubjects of our inſtructions to the Preſidency of Bombay and Colonel Goddard; and I concluded with the propoſal of a draft of a letter to be written to the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, to which I have ſince made ſome very material alterations.

I now beg leave to call the attention of the Board to the

the motion which is thus regularly brought before them, and to requeſt that they will be pleaſed to decide upon it. The letter involves many diſtinct queſtions, which may be determined by an approbation, a diſapprobation, or an amendment of each paragraph, taken as a ſeparate queſtion. Perhaps it may be deemed more expedient to the diſpatch of buſineſs to propoſe diſtinct queſtions, and from the ſenſe of the Board collected upon theſe, to form the letter to Bombay, and ſuch other inſtructions as may depend upon them. I ſubmit to this mode, if the other members of the Board ſhall prefer it.

Reſolved, That the amended draft of the letter, propoſed by the Governor General to be written to the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, be entered in this place; that a copy thereof be delivered to each member of the Board; and that their opinions be collected upon every paragraph in the manner recommended in the preceding minute.

To the Preſident and Select Committee at Bombay.

Gentlemen,

1. We have received your letter of the 4th of April, with its enclоſures, by the hands of Mr. Horſly.

2. We do not think it neceſſary to enter on the review of your proceedings, but ſhall confine our preſent inquiries to the choice of ſuch means as may beſt conduce to retrieve their unhappy conſequences, leaving the paſt to the ſcrutiny of a higher and more effectual authority.

3. We muſt deſire to decline the reference which you have made to us, of the charge preferred by your Preſident againſt Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, as a point on which we have no juriſdiction, and which is cognizable only by your authority, either with the powers immediately veſted in your body by the Court of Directors, or through the regular trial of a court martial.

4. Having already given full powers to Colonel Goddard to negociate and conclude a treaty of peace with the Maratta Government, and having no cauſe to alter the terms which we have preſcribed in our inſtructions for that purpoſe, we have only to repeat, that we look to the iſſue of that commiſſion as our primary object, and the termination of all our political views on your ſide of India, if it ſhall prove ſucceſsful.

5. But if the Miniſters ſhall reject the propoſals which we have ordered to be made to them, and ſhall reduce us to the neceſſity of defending the rights and intereſts of the Company by an open war, we cannot preſcribe a better plan of operations than that which is laid down by your Preſident in his minute of the 30th of March, which in ſuch caſe we authorize you to carry literally into execution, and even to qualify it by ſuch variations as ſhall not ſubvert the general deſign of it, which we underſtand to be the reduction of ſuch countries as lie along the ſea coaſt, forming a line of territory with our preſent poſſeſſions on the Continent, and defenſible againſt the incurſions of cavalry. And we further authorize and empower you, with the reſervation hereafter mentioned, to enter into any treaty, or other engagements, with the Chief of the Guicawar family, or others, for the above purpoſes, and on the grounds deſcribed in the aforeſaid plan; obſerving the following cautions, to which we require your ſtricteſt attention: that your engagements ſhall be offenſive only for the objects of your immediate operations, and in all other reſpects purely defenſive: that your engagements with the Guicawar family ſhall be made with the head of it, and with him excluſively: that you ſhall not aſſume a mediation between the brothers, or take any part whatever in their domeſtic diſputes, farther than to ſupport the party in alliance with the Company, and his poſſeſſions againſt foreign invaſion; and that you do not commit the dignity of the Company, or pledge the national faith, in formal treaties with perſons of a rank or power unſuitable to ſuch a diſtinction.

6. We are ſenſible of the attention which you have ſhewn to our views with the Government of Berar, in joining the overtures lately made to Moodajee Boſla by Colonel Goddard, and in your reſolution to avoid whatever may again interfere with this negociation. We confeſs we at this time entertain little hope of his concurring with our deſigns; he will wait for proofs of our ſuperiority before he will hazard the conſequences of a decided connection with us; and every offer made to him, while he is under the influence of ſuch a policy, will but ſerve to increaſe his reſerve, as he will naturally conſtrue it to proceed from the conſciouſneſs of our inability to ſupport ourſelves without a foreign aſſiſtance; and this is an additional motive for our preferring a ſcheme of military operations, practicable by our own force, and unincumbered with the weight of a timid Ally: if notwithſtanding, Moodajee Boſla ſhall have anſwered the letters which have been written to him, by a declaration of a willingneſs to accept of the proffered alliance, we ſhall leave it to be concluded under the inſtructions already given in charge to Colonel Goddard; if on the contrary, as we expect, he ſhall directly refuſe, or heſitate, or make new references to us, we have in ſuch caſe directed Colonel Goddard to break off the negociation.

7. Although we think ourſelves ſtrictly juſtifiable in refuſing to ratify even the ſmalleſt tittle of the treaty or convention of Worgaum, yet from a fair review of your proceedings, we are compelled to regard the ſeparate agreement made with Mahdajee Scindia in a very different light. It was not a conceſſion extorted by the Maratta Government againſt its conviction of legal ſufficiency in thoſe who yielded it, but it was the price at which they purchaſed the ſafety of the army; and was ſo abſolutely their own ſpontaneous act, that it appears that the Miniſters of Mahdajee Scindia were even corrupted to influence his acceptance of it. It is true, that they had no authority to make ſuch a compromiſe, and we may therefore refuſe to ratify it, in ſtrict conformity to the letter of our own law: but we doubt whether this will avail us in the opinion of the world, or we can reconcile it to the obligations of juſtice and honour, which were thus pledged for the retribution of the moſt ſignal (though humiliating) act of kindneſs that a nation could have received from the bounty of an individual. We muſt therefore, declare, that unleſs Mahdajee Scindia ſhall have forfeited his right by any ſubſequent act, he is entitled to the performance of this engagement, and we ought to ratify it.

8. We hope he may be prevailed upon to depart from the letter of this ſtipulation, and to accept of what he may deem an equivalent for it; and we authorize you to treat with him for ſuch a compromiſe, declaring on our behalf, that we diſavow the authority of Mr. Carnac and Colonel Egerton to execute the engagement with him, which was executed by them; but that in conſideration of the ſignal ſervice afforded us by his mediation and influence, at the time in which it was made, and made (as we underſtood) the pledged condition of that ſervice; we deem it in this conſtruction equal to a formal obligation, and therefore empowered you to treat with him for the accompliſhment of it, in ſuch a manner as ſhall prove ſatisfactory to him, and more conſiſtent with our national credit than the literal performance of it; but if he ſhall inſiſt on the literal performance of it, and he ſhall not have forfeited his right to it by the renewal of hoſtilities againſt us, or by any breach of engagement, if any ſuch exiſts between us, we ſee no alternative; it muſt be fulfilled.

9. Although the conduct of Mahdajee Scindia may not ſeem to confirm your opinion of his diſpoſition towards us, or rather of the political neceſſity which ſeems to incline him to enſure our future alliance, yet we think the arguments which you have aſſigned for this belief, ſo well well grounded, and it agrees ſo well with the knowledge which we ourſelves poſſeſs of his ſtate views and talents, that we entirely adopt it; nor do we find it difficult to reconcile the demands made on us, under his influence, by the Miniſters, and immediately by him, for the performance of the conditions of the convention of Worgaum, with that diſpoſition, or with the obvious ſyſtem of policy which his preſent intereſt demands.

10. We ſuppoſe it probable, that he will avoid any direct engagement with us till the urgency of his affairs ſhall require it, or until he can gain the advantage of the negociation, by waiting for the firſt advances to be made on your part. If from the opportunities which you have of a nearer and more intimate knowledge of his perſonal character and neceſſities, you ſhall judge this concluſion to be well grounded, it will be adviſable to treat him with the ſame temporizing and indeterminate conduct, and purſuing the plan of military operations which we have recommended, to wait for the offer of his alliance rather than ſolicit it. Propoſing this as a general caution, we authorize you to enter into ſuch engagements with him as ſhall not be contrary to any before concluded, and which you ſhall judge moſt adviſable; making your future ſecurity, peace, and an adequate revenue, your chief and indiſpenſable objects, and the grounds of your engagement with him.

11. To ſum up what we have written; our firſt deſire is to obtain peace, on the terms propoſed by our inſtructions to Colonel Goddard of the 5th of April, and it is only in the event of the failure of this deſign, that we have formed the ſubſequent inſtructions, or will allow of their operation.

12. In theſe, the plan of military operations recommended by your Preſident, is to have the firſt place, with its dependant engagements with the Guicawars; the next in order is the negociation with Moodajee Booſla, and the laſt, the propoſed engagement with Mahdajee Scindia.

13. The execution of the projected treaty of peace with the Poonah Miniſtry we leave to the ſole charge of Colonel Goddard, according to the inſtructions which we have already given him.

14. The negociation and treaty of alliance with Moodajee Booſla we alſo leave to the ſole management of Colonel Goddard, on the authority of his inſtructions of the 16th of November, until the period of their ſuſpenſion, by the refuſal, or ſuch heſitation of Moodajee Booſla as he ſhall deem ſufficient to warrant his declaring the negociation ſuſpended. The future renewal of this negociation we reſerve to be determined by our expreſs orders, but without revoking the credentials and inſtructions already granted to Colonel Goddard reſpecting it; in all other negociations, treaties, and plans, of military operations, it is our wiſh ſo to blend the powers of your Government with our own in the direction of them, and in every formal or occaſional inſtrument which they may require for their ratification, as to preſerve the credit and diſtinct reſponſibility of both, and to make both the pledges for the faithful obſervance of them. For this purpoſe we need not recommend that Colonel Goddard be conſulted, when his preſence or the nature of the ſubjects will admit of it, on all meaſures which have a relation to our preſent inſtructions, as you have already been pleaſed to allow him a deliberative voice in your councils; and we are happy to find that you are ſo well ſatisfied with his conduct, and his ready diſpoſition to aſſiſt in the execution of your deſigns, as to leave us little occaſion to lay down a clearer line for the employment of the forces under his command, than that which we have already deſcribed.

15. We have directed Colonel Goddard to execute whatever ſervice you ſhall think it proper to require, which ſhall not be contrary to our inſtructions, or to any exiſting engagements; a caution which we hope will be unneceſſary, but with which we do not conſider ourſelves at liberty to diſpenſe, while the principal reſponſibility reſts with us. And for the ſame reaſon we require, that all treaties which ſhall be concluded by you in virtue of theſe inſtructions be referred to this Government for its final ſanction and formal ratification of them, and that a clauſe be inſerted in every treaty ſo concluded to that effect. Appendix. No. 197.

Warren Haſtings,
P. Francis,
Edwd Wheler.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 10th June 1779;—preſent, the Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident; Richard Barwell, Philip Francis, Edward Wheler, Eſquires; Lieutenant General Sir Eyre Coote, K. B.

Sir Eyre Coote delivers in the following opinion on the Governor General's amended draft of the letter propoſed to be written to the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, recorded in conſultation the 7th inſtant.

Sir Eyre Coote.

Paragraph 1ſt. Agreed.

2d. Agreed.

3d. Agreed; provided the following addition be made:—

"To which we recommend their being immediately "brought, not upon the limited charge given in by the "Preſident, which ſolely points to one part of their "conduct, but upon a general charge for miſconduct "upon an expedition that has failed."

The words "either with the powers immediately veſted "in your body by the Court of Directors, or—" I object to, knowing but of two powers over the military veſted in any Government in India, ſuſpenſion and a court martial.

Paragraph 4th. Agreed.

5th. To this I object.

As a military man, I would not venture my character in giving full applauſe, or implicitly adopting Mr. Hornby's plan of operations, knowing ſo little of the nature of that ſervice, when at this diſtance.

If by refuſing peace they force us to continue hoſtilities, I muſt in this caſe ſuppoſe a junction of all their parties, and of courſe a union of all their forces. And I do not think with Colonel Goddard, that his detachment, conſidering the ſtate it is now in, together with the Bombay troops, are equal to enſure ſucceſs in a conteſt with the united Maratta power. Our utmoſt vigour ſhould therefore be exerted to ſupport our military reputation in this country, and by one united effort put a glorious and ſpeedy end to the war; for however uncertain the ſucceſs of war may be, we ought to leave it as little as poſſible to the reſult of chance, conſidering the great ſtake we have to riſk. For which reaſon we ſhould alſo form alliances with the country Powers, eſpecially with Hyder Ally, whoſe more particular intereſt it is to join us in any hoſtile attempts againſt the Maratta State. And if a war ſhould be indiſpenſably continued, I would leave it to the commanding officer, who is reſponſible to us for his conduct, to adopt any part, or the whole of Mr. Hornby's plan, or not at all, as he may think moſt adviſable for promoting the diſtreſs of the enemy.

It is impoſſible to preſcribe (as is here propoſed) any military operations at this diſtance, the ſcene ſhifts while we debate upon it; what we now preſcribe may be utterly impracticable when this letter arrives. It muſt therefore be left to the commanding officer upon the ſpot, who is beſt qualified to avail himſelf of the ſituations that fortune may preſent to him. I therefore object to "preſcribe this plan to be carried literally into execution."

Paragraph 6th. I have no objection to, as it is only a remark upon a former meaſure.

Appendix. No. 197.

Paragraph 7th. I can never agree to give up what the grantors had no power to beſtow. Bengal may next be given away by the next unfortunate Bombay detachment, as properly as Broach in this. The queſtion is not the motive upon which it was ceded, but the power: if the want of power is an objection upon the terms of the general treaty, it muſt equally apply in the other. The motive can only operate to induce us to grant ſome equivalent in the one which there is no opening for in the other; and in ſo far to the 8th paragraph I agree.

But in both theſe laſt paragraphs, I object to the conferring the management of one part of the treaty with the Marattas upon Colonel Goddard, and the other to the Select Committee at Bombay. They have finiſhed their part already, as we have too fatally experienced; what remains to be done belongs to this Government, of which Colonel Goddard is the repreſentative Plenipotentiary at Poonah. If it is thought neceſſary, let his powers be entirely revoked; but permitting others to infringe upon them, can never be good policy, or promote diſpatch.

Paragraph 9th. This I agree to, provided the negociation be conducted by the ſame agent who is to treat with the Maratta State.

10th. "Purſuing the plan of military operations which we have recommended," ſeems to me but a fruſtrating concomitant with "waiting for the offer of his alliance." I doubt whether this would lead him to treat with us.

Paragraph 11th. Moſt fully agreed in.

12th. To this I object, as I cannot admit Mr. Hornby's plan to take place of that of the commanding officer; and ſecondly, an alliance with Madajee Scindia ſhould take place of that with Moodajee Booſla, becauſe the latter ſeems to be given up. We have but little hopes, and he waits "till we prove our ſuperiority decidedly."

13th. I fully agree in.

14th. After acknowledging the conduct of that ſame Government to have been of ſuch a nature, as to leave it to a higher authority to puniſh, it would be utterly inconſiſtent to blend the reſponſibility of the acts of the two Preſidencies. To this I can never aſſent, as in the miſerable ſituation to which they have reduced themſelves, I look upon the reſponſibility of future meaſures to lie ſolely with us, which the 15th paragraph confirms.

Governor General—As the General has objected to the indefinite term "Powers," in the third paragraph, I beg leave to ſubmit to his approval the inſerting of the words "of ſuſpenſion" following it; as this correction will limit the ſenſe of the Board to the ſpecific powers poſſeſſed by them.

The General approves of the correction.

Mr. Wheler—There are many points in the Governor General's amended propoſitions which I would aſſent to, and ſome of the alterations made to thoſe propoſitions by the Commander in Chief coincide likewiſe with my own ideas; but taking the paragraphs ſeparately, they ſtill remain blended with a variety of propoſals which I can never aſſent to. I ſhall quote only one inſtance: the Commander in Chief's amendment of the 3d article ſtill leaves it in the power of the Governor and Council of Bombay, either to ſuſpend Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, or to try them by a court martial. Was I to alter this paragraph, I ſhould urge the neceſſity of a court martial, as the only means of clearing up the ſuſpicions that at preſent hang over them. For theſe reaſons, and becauſe I have been favoured with the ſight of the draft of a letter prepared by Mr. Francis, which coincides more fully with my own ſentiments and the principles on which I have acted, I muſt object to every paragraph of the letter now before the Board, except the fourth and thirteenth.

Mr. Francis delivers in the following minute:

Mr. Francis—Having compared the Governor's amended draft of the letter to Bombay with the minutes in which my opinion on the different points before us is recorded, I find it unneceſſary to follow the paragraphs in the order propoſed by the reſolution, ſince there are but two in which I can entirely concur; I mean the fourth and thirteenth: nor do I ſee how it is poſſible to give a partial aſſent or diſſent to the remainder. I therefore object to the whole of the propoſed letter, except the fourth and thirteenth paragraphs.

But that the time and attention of the Board may not be any longer waſted in debates, which I think have no fixed point of view, and lead to no deciſion, and that I may not appear to condemn the plan offered by the Governor, without ſtating what I would prefer in its place, I beg leave to propoſe another draft of a letter to Bombay, drawn up on thoſe principles on which I think the Commander in Chief's ſentiments and mine are agreed, and preſerving the two paragraphs of the Governor's draft in which I concur.

The Board will obſerve, that I recede wholly from the idea of entering into a particular diſcuſſion or cenſure of the paſt conduct of the gentlemen of Bombay. In doing this, I mean to relieve the Board from a heavy taſk, not eſſential to the public ſervice, and to preclude a debate which if we were once to enter into, I fear would never end. So far forth I alſo meet the opinion of the Governor General and Mr. Barwell.

Propoſed Draft of a Letter to the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay.

1. We have received your letter of the 4th April, with its incloſures, by the hands of Mr. Horſly.

2. After peruſing theſe papers with the ſtricteſt and moſt deliberate attention, we have determined not to enter into a particular diſcuſſion or cenſure of the meaſures which have involved you in your preſent diſtreſſes. You muſt anſwer to a higher and more effectual authority than ours for the difficulties to which you have reduced the Government entruſted to your care, and for the unexampled diſhonour you have brought upon the Company's arms. We leave your conduct in the courſe of theſe tranſactions to be examined at home, as we doubt not it will be with the utmoſt ſeverity. If on our ſide it had been poſſible for us to ſelect any part of your proceedings either in the plan or execution of your meaſures, on which we could have beſtowed our approbation, we ſhould readily have done it.

3. Having already given full powers to Colonel Goddard to negociate and conclude a treaty of peace with the Maratta Government, and having no cauſe to alter the terms which we have preſcribed in our inſtructions for that purpoſe, we have only to repeat, that we look to the iſſue of that commiſſion as our primary object, and the termination of all our political views on your ſide of India, if it ſhall prove ſucceſsful.

4. The execution of the projected treaty of peace with the Poonah Miniſtry we leave to the ſole charge of Colonel Goddard, according to the inſtructions which we have already given him.

5. Until we ſhall be adviſed by Colonel Goddard of the reſult of his negociations in conſequence of his preſent orders, we do not think it adviſable to bind ourſelves, even by a conditional determination, to proſecute the war on the plan propoſed by Mr. Hornby, or on any other. Suppoſing that our views and wiſhes, which are all directed to an honourable peace, ſhould be defeated, it is not from a partial effort on your ſide of India alone, that we can form any reaſonable expectation of a deciſive ſucceſs againſt the united power of the Marattas; for in the caſe of war we muſt ſuppoſe their ſtrength to be united againſt us. We will not therefore precipitate a reſolution in the conſequences of which all India may be involved. We ſhall wait for advices from Colonel Goddard, and be determined by the lights and information with which he may furniſh us.

6. Having thus diſmiſſed the conſideration of what is paſt, and deferred our deciſion on future meaſures, we come come now to the only point in your diſpatches on which we cannot decline giving you a preciſe and formal opinion.

We diſapprove, and cannot admit of the reference, &c. &c. (in the terms of Mr. Francis's propoſitions mutatis mutandis, with the following addition at the concluſion) " or on ſuch other charges as the Preſident " and Select Committee may think fit to prefer againſt " them for their conduct in the courſe of the expedi- " tion."

With regard to the form and extent of the charge againſt Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, I have no objection to the terms recommended by the Commander in Chief.

Mr. Barwell—The reſolution of the 7th inſtant precludes the conſideration of the propoſitions made by Mr. Francis until the ſubject of that reſolution is diſmiſſed. I ſhall therefore, agreeably to the reſolution, proceed directly to give my opinion upon each paragraph of the letter propoſed by the Governor General to be written to the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay.

I approve of the firſt and ſecond paragraphs.

I approve of the third, and adopt the General's amendment and propoſed addition.

I approve of the fourth paragraph in the words of it.

I approve of the points in general propoſed to be effected by the inſtructions contained in the fifth paragraph, concurring with the Commander in Chief in his propoſition expreſſed as follows:—" And if a war " ſhould be indiſpenſably continued, I would leave it to " the commanding officer, who is reſponſible to us for " his conduct, to adopt any part or the whole of Mr. " Hornby's plan, or not at all, as he may think moſt " adviſable for promoting the diſtreſs of the enemy." And I agree with the Commander in Chief, for the reaſons he has aſſigned, that we ought not to preſcribe this plan to be carried literally into execution, but to leave a latitude of action to Colonel Goddard to avail himſelf of the ſituations which fortune may preſent to him.

I acquieſce in the 6th paragraph.

The ſeventh paragraph appearing liable to the conſtruction of allowing force to one part of the convention of Worgaum, and denying it to another, is objectionable. I ſhould not have propoſed an amendment, but as it has ſtruck a member of the council in this light, and as I conceive it to be meant, as it has already been declared by this Government, to diſclaim entirely and completely the acts of the military committee at Worgaum, I would recommend that it be ſo done in expreſs terms.

With reſpect to the 8th paragraph, I concur with the Commander in Chief, that to render the negociation entruſted to Colonel Goddard complete, it will be proper to include in the commiſſion he holds from this Government every point that ſhall become an object of negociation between this Government and the Maratta State, touching the unauthorized acts of the Bombay Committee at Worgaum; and I therefore propoſe with the Commander in Chief, that Colonel Goddard be inſtructed to expreſs the ſenſe in which this Government is pleaſed to regard the ſervices of Madajee Scindia at Worgaum, by offering him ſuch a gratification as may be afforded him by the Bombay Government, or for means which he may poſſeſs from the operations of war, in caſe peace is not concluded upon the inſtructions he is already furniſhed with. Theſe orders to Colonel Goddard will properly come in the place of the inſtructions of the eighth paragraph to the Bombay Preſidency, as neceſſary information.

I agree to the ninth paragraph.

I acquieſce in the propoſition of making Colonel Goddard the channel of any negociation with Madajee Scindia in the preſent conjuncture of affairs. I would recommend that the 10th paragraph be wholly omitted as unneſſential.

I agree to the eleventh, and I agree to the twelfth and thirteenth paragraphs. Appendix. No. 197.

I likewiſe agree entirely to the fourteenth.

I agree entirely to the fifteenth.

Governor General—Whatever reſolutions may be paſſed upon the various matters which the diſpatches received ſome time ſince from Bombay have brought before the notice of the Board, I moſt earneſtly recommend and entreat that they will inſtantly decide upon one, on the proper application of which the proſperity of the Company certainly does, and their very exiſtence may depend. The inſtructions ſent to Colonel Goddard preſcribe certain clear and ſimple conditions as the alternative of peace or war. There is no latitude for a long negociation; Colonel Goddard is to offer peace to the Maratta Government, on its agreement to revert to the ſtate in which we relatively ſtood by the treaty of Proonder; to renounce its claims for the convention of Worgaum, and to exclude the French for ever from its dominions. If they accept of theſe terms, there is peace; if they refuſe (and they muſt either accept or refuſe) war.

Let us ſuppoſe either of theſe events to have taken place, and to conſider in what ſtate they will place us. If peace is concluded, the object of our negociation is obtained, and we have nothing left to look for but the quiet arrangement of our affairs in their former channel, to which they will revert of courſe without our interference, and the return of Colonel Goddard's detachment, or ſuch a proviſion made for its ſervices as may ſuit a ſtate of peace, and the neceſſary defence of the Company's intereſts againſt any probable or expected attempts of the French. Theſe are points which do not preſs for immediate deciſion or deliberation, becauſe our reſolutions upon them, whatever they were, could not be carried into effect before many months were elapſed.

But the caſe is widely different if war be the reſult of our offers to the Maratta State: in ſuch a caſe, our ſafety may depend on inſtant action, and theirs on delay. Our troops may act immediately; theirs muſt wait for their accuſtomed ſeaſon, which never commences till the expiration of the Duſerra, or the end of September; and an advantage may be ſucceſsfully, and if I may be allowed to truſt to my own judgment, I will ſay, eaſily taken of the preceding interval, to occupy ſuch poſts, or to ſeize ſuch parts of their territory as may bring great diſtreſs upon them before they are in a capacity to reſiſt; and give us ſtrength and the means of proſecuting the war, when both parties ſhall be engaged in it, proportionate to their loſs of both.

I have certain intelligence, or ſuch as I deem certain, that Madajee Scindia is no longer in the neighbourhood of the capital, where it was ſuppoſed he would be compelled to remain for the ſupport of his influence, but was ſome time ſince arrived with his colleague Tuccojee Holcar, and Ragonaut Row, at Berhampore, on his way to the eaſtern frontier of the Maratta dominions; and it is the current and general report, that it is his intention to invade the dominions of our ally, the Nabob of Owde, after the expiration of the rains. Whether this report be derived from any ground of authority, or held out for intimidation, or it be only the part of a plan depending on a ſeries of contingencies, or ariſe from mere conjecture; it is a concluſion which we ought to credit, ſo far at leaſt as to be upon our guard againſt it, and even to prevent it.

For theſe reaſons, I am wholly againſt the draft propoſed by Mr. Francis, becauſe in the event of a decided war, it will bind our own hands while thoſe of our enemies are free; and it will leave the Preſidency of Bombay encumbered, and oppreſſed with the weight of that very force on which we depend for its preſervation.

I will never ſuffer the object to be loſt, for which the detachment now commanded by Colonel Goddard was firſt appointed. It was not to aſſiſt the deſigns of the Preſidency of Bombay in their execution, but to ſupport them in the conſequences of it. Though the detachment was for a while diverted from its deſtination on the ſuppoſition that the deſigns of that Preſidency had either wholly failed, or was relinquiſhed, yet it has ſince reverted to it, and is now preciſely in the ſituation in which it was originally meant to place it. I will not ſay what might have been the fate of Bombay had not Colonel Goddard moſt ſeaſonably arrived for its relief.

The queſtion is now, whether it ſhall anſwer the purpoſes of its deſtination? or whether, after ſo ſucceſsful a termination of an enterprize pronounced impracticable, it ſhall be wholly precluded from anſwering the ends of its appointment, and be converted to the means of completing the ruin of the Company's intereſts, which it was provided, and is ready to retrieve? If peace has attended the negociation intruſted to Colonel Goddard, theſe ends are attained, at leaſt in as great a degree as we are warranted to proſecute them: if the contrary, let it be employed to promote them. It will be but an ill excuſe for our forbearance, that we waited for regular and official information, if in the interval in which our troops might enable them to avert the dangers attendant on an actual ſtate of war, or to begin it with advantage, any fatal miſcarriage ſhould befal them, and through the want of authority to act. Hitherto the inſtructions given to Colonel Goddard, and the letter which accompanied theſe to the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, preclude the dangers of which I have expreſſed apprehenſion, ſince thoſe inſtructions and advices clearly preſcribe the circumſtances which are to place them in a decided ſtate of peace or war; and authorize them of courſe to act conformably to either ſtate. The arguments which I have uſed do not therefore ariſe from any neceſſity of giving them new inſtructions, or ſupplying the defect of thoſe which we have already given them: what I have ſaid applies ſolely to the propoſal made by a member of the Board, "to wait for advices from Colonel Goddard, and to be determined by the lights and "informations with which he may furniſh us," even in the ſuppoſed refuſal of the Maratta Miniſtry to accept of our offers of peace; or in other words, "to refrain "from committing hoſtilities, while we are threatened "with them and war is actually denounced againſt us."

The other propoſitions contained in Mr. Francis's draft, do not appear to me to be regularly before the Board, and the day is too far advanced to enter on new ſubjects of debate.

I now proceed to the queſtions which are before the Board.

To the firſt and ſecond paragraphs of the propoſed draft, I agree; and to the third I agree, with the amendment and addition propoſed by the Commander in Chief.

To the fourth I agree.

To the fifth paragraph I agree, with the amendment propoſed by the Commander in Chief.

To the ſixth I agree.

On the ſeventh and eighth, I can never depart from the opinions which I have expreſſed in theſe paragraphs; but I ſhall not oppoſe the ſentiments of the other members which tend to the ſame concluſion as my own, though differing in their principles.

I abide by the ninth paragraph as it ſtands; and,

I agree to the tenth and eleventh.

The twelfth is of no conſequence, and may be omitted.

To the remaining paragraphs I agree.

Sir Eyre Coote delivers in the following minute.

Sir Eyre Coote—Under the fulleſt conviction of the juſt praiſe given to Colonel Goddard, I beg leave to propoſe, and hope it will meet with the concurrence of this Board, that we join with the Government at Bombay in recommending him to the Court of Directors, for the appointment of Commander in Chief at that Preſidency upon the firſt vacancy.

And in the intermediate time, "I think it abſolutely "neceſſary, in the preſent diſtreſſed ſituation that the "military upon the Bombay eſtabliſhment are reduced "to, that he ſhould have the rank given him of Bri-"gadier General, in order to enable him to carry on "the public ſervice with more weight and dignity;" and therefore propoſe that a brevet commiſſion of Brigadier General for that ſervice be now granted him.

(Signed) Eyre Coote.

Mr. Francis delivers in the following minute:

Mr. Francis—I have objection to our recommending Colonel Goddard's conduct to the attention of the Court of Directors; but I would leave it to them to determine what reward he may deſerve. In particular I would not point out the ſucceſſion to the command at Bombay; becauſe I think it would look like pre-judging the event of Colonel Egerton's trial, ſuppoſing he ſhould be brought to a trial in conſequence of our recommending it, of which I have ſome doubt.

The Board have already given Colonel Goddard the rank of Colonel on the other ſide of India; and I do not think that the occaſion calls for our inveſting him at preſent with a higher rank: ſuppoſing he ſhould return to Bengal, the rank of Brigadier General, if he once holds it, will not permit him to act again in that which belongs to him on this eſtabliſhment; and I cannot conſent to ſuperſede officers ſuperior to him, merely becauſe they have not had the good fortune to be employed as he has been.

Excluſive of theſe conſiderations, I doubt whether we have a right to beſtow the rank in queſtion. There is no inſtance within my knowledge of ſuch a rank given in India. The Court of Directors, as I have always underſtood, have reſerved to themſelves the power of appointing general officers in their ſervice.

(Signed) P. Francis.

I agree, and ſubſcribe to the above opinion.

(Signed) E. Wheler.

Governor General—I heartily concur in both the propoſitions.

Mr. Barwell—I approve of both the propoſitions.

Reſolved, That a brevet commiſſion of Brigadier General be granted to Colonel Goddard for the ſervice on which he is now employed; which commiſſion ſhall ceaſe on his return, or on the return of the troops under his command, to either of the provinces dependant on this Government or the Government of Owde.

Ordered, That the Secretary do prepare a letter to the Preſident and Select Committee at Bombay, conformably the foregoing minutes.

Warren Haſtings,
Edwd Wheler.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 14th June 1779;—preſent, the Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident; Richard Barwell, Philip Francis, Edward Wheler, Eſquires; Lieutenant General Sir Eyre Coote, K. B.

The Secretary begs leave to lay before the Board the draft of a letter to the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, drawn up from the minutes of the 10th inſtant.

See page 31 Report.

Queſtion put.

Is the letter approved?

Sir Eyre Coote—I approve it.

Mr. Wheler—I do not approve of the letter.

Mr. Francis.—I do not approve of it.

Mr. Barwell—Any particular approbation of this letter on my part is totally unneceſſary. I am bound by the ſenſe of the majority to approve it. I think the queſtion irregular, becauſe it brings in a new mode on points already determined, to a ſecond deciſion. I muſt therefore take the queſtion to be, whether the letter conforms to the reſolutions of laſt council day? I think it does.

Governor General—I approve.

Reſolved, That the above draft of the letter to the Preſident and Select Committee at Bombay be immediately copied fair, and tranſmitted to that Preſidency.

APPENDIX, Nos. 198, 199, 200, 201.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, 14th June 1779.

MR. Francis delivers in the following minute:

I diſſent from and proteſt againſt the preceding letter, for the following reaſons, in addition to thoſe on which I oppoſed the meaſures now adopted at the time they were debated;

1ſt. Becauſe I deem it unbecoming the dignity of the Governor General and Council, and a moſt unmerited demonſtration of tenderneſs and partiality to the majority of the Select Committee of Bombay, with ſuch evidence of their miſconduct as we have before us, to paſs by the whole of their late proceedings without the ſmalleſt expreſſion of diſapprobation or concern; as if nothing were in queſtion, but ſome common and trifling occurence, by which neither the intereſts of the Company nor the credit of our arms had been eſſentially wounded. When the ſeparate opinions of the members of this Board ſhall appear before our ſuperiors, I doubt not they will think it an extraordinary circumſtance, that no part of the ſpirit which breathes through thoſe opinions ſhould be preſerved in the collective act of the Council:

2d. Becauſe, conſidering the claim of Colonel Egerton, and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, to be tried by a court martial, as a claim of right, I think we ſhould not have confined our interpoſition on this point to a cold and languid recommendation of ſuch trial; but ſhould have inſiſted upon its being granted in terms that could admit of no evaſion: much leſs ſhould we have weakened; even that recommendation, by referring to an alternative, of which the Select Committee may now avail themſelves, under colour of our authority. This, I conceive, is no time to remind them, that they have other powers veſted in them; that they are at liberty to wave all trial, if they think proper, and to puniſh the parties by an immediate and direct act of power:

3d. Becauſe, admitting it to be true, that Meſſrs. Egerton and Cockburn conſented at firſt to relinquiſh their claim to a public trial, and that they had no right to retract ſuch conſent once given; ſtill I think we ſhould not have paſſed over in ſilence the unwarrantable acts and declarations of the Preſident by which it was extorted from them. They who think leaſt favourably of the conduct of theſe gentlemen, ſhould conſider how far the precedent may be extended, and what ſecurity it leaves to the military ſervice in general againſt the arbitrary acts of a party, occaſionally prevailing in the council:

4th. Becauſe the ſeveral plans of alliance or co-operation, propoſed to be executed with the Guicawars, or with Madajee Scindia, or with Moodajee Boolla, muſt be offered and negociated after we ourſelves are actually committed by a declaration of war, and engaged in the proſecution of it. In ſuch circumſtances I conceive we ſhall treat with all or any of the above mentioned Chiefs for their aſſiſtance, under great diſadvantage. When once they ſee us engaged in a war, which at all events we muſt carry on, they will either ſtand aloof until they ſee the ſucceſs of our operations, or ſell us their aſſiſtance on terms which we ſhould not yield in any other ſituation:

5th. Becauſe no conſideration whatſoever is given to the caſe of the two gentlemen, who remain as hoſtages in the hands of the Maraттas, and whoſe lives may be hazarded by an abrupt declaration of war:

6th. Becauſe, excluſive of all other reaſons already urged againſt our precipitating the Company into a war with the Marattas, if that extremity can be avoided by any honourable means, I deem it inconſiſtent with the principle of Colonel Goddard's inſtructions of the 5th of April (in which the re-eſtabliſhment of peace is profeſſed to be our object) to ſend him orders, which leave no room for accommodation, and which ought to have accompanied the inſtruction, if the Board had originally been determined not to wait for the reſult of his negociations, nor even for an anſwer to our letter. I deem it uſeleſs, even in view to a proſecution of the war, ſince in all probability the advices we expect from Colonel Goddard may arrive in fifteen or twenty days; and though a rupture in that interval may be forwarded, and all means of reconciliation precluded, in conſequence of the preſent orders, our troops cannot take the field before September. No poſſible advantage can therefore be gained by this precipitation, unleſs it be thought an advantage to denounce war before we are able to act, to give the enemy the earlieſt notice of our intention to invade their country as ſoon as the ſeaſon will permit:

Laſtly, I am unable to reconcile it with the opinion of every member of the Board, except the Governor General. Of Mr. Wheler's ſentiments and mine, I preſume no doubt can be formed. Mr. Barwell ſays, he thinks we ſhould wait for the effect of Colonel Goddard's negociations for peace; but if we now decide the main queſtion of peace or war, the information which Mr. Barwell thinks we ought to wait for, can be of no uſe to us.

The Commander in Chief, in whoſe ſentiments I have entirely concurred, declares it to be his opinion, that we ſhould not ſeek to renew a war, but negociate with the various Maratta intereſts an honourable peace: that Colonel Goddard's detachment, conſidering the ſtate it is now in, together with the Bombay troops, are not equal to inſure ſucceſs in a conteſt with the united Maratta power; yet it is with this force alone that, under the preſent orders, we are to commence a war which will aſſuredly unite the whole power of the Marattas againſt us. No meaſures previous to a declaration of war are taken to divide them; no alliance formed; no general plan of operations propoſed: in ſhort, every thing that belongs to deliberation, and which ought to prepare and lead to a deciſion, is left to follow it. But if in the outſet of the conteſt, and before any meaſures can be taken to ſupport or co-operate with Colonel Goddard, the army under his command ſhould be defeated, and if the conſequences of a defeat ſhould endanger the whole of the Company's poſſeſſions, as the Commander in Chief very juſtly thinks they would, on what principle ſhould we juſtify a reſolution capable of producing ſuch conſequences, from which, at the preſent point of time, no immediate advantage can be derived, and to be carried into execution by a force which the Commander in Chief thinks is not equal to ſucceſs? The terms on which we are to engage in this war are very unequal, when the utmoſt we expect from a victory is ſome acceſſion of territory on the Malabar coaſt, and when a defeat may endanger the whole of the Company's poſſeſſions.

Appendix, No. 198.

Mr. Barwell—Mr. Francis has very accurately quoted my words, which are, "I think we ſhould wait the effect "of Colonel Goddard's negociation for peace," putting upon them the following conſtruction: "that if we how "decide the main queſtion, of peace or war, the infor- "mation which Mr. Barwell thinks we ought to wait "for, can be of no uſe." I beg leave to refer to the whole of the ſentiments I have expreſſed in the minute referred to; theſe are ſufficiently explanatory of the ſenſe of my words, by which I propoſed to have conveyed no other meaning, than that Colonel Goddard's negociations for peace muſt have produced their effect, and if that effect was peace, it precluded the operation of any orders we might judge neceſſary on the ſuppoſition of a war. But the conſideration of meaſures in the caſe of our being in an actual ſtate of war, I did not intend (as is apparent from from my minute) to ſuſpend, for information to be received from Colonel Goddard.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 28th June 1779;—preſent, the Honourable Warren Haſtings, Eſquire, Governor General, Preſident; Richard Barwell, Philip Francis, Edward Wheler, Eſquires. Lieutenant General Sir Eyre Coote indiſpoſed.

Read and approved the proceedings of the 21ſt inſtant.

The Secretary lays before the Board the following minute, which he has received from Sir Eyre Coote.

Sir Eyre Coote—Although I regret that I have been already induced to write more minutes ſince my arrival here than I did in all my former tranſactions in India, yet I find myſelf ſo particulary pointed at in the laſt paragraph of Mr. Francis's proteſt of the 14th inſtant, that I cannot now avoid ſaying ſomething, in reply to the aſſertions it contains.

Colonel Goddard is no where, in the letter to Bombay or to himſelf, limited to act (in caſe he ſhould be driven to the neceſſity of continuing the war) ſolely with the body of troops that accompanied him from Bengal, but left moſt fully to ſuch plans, whether alliances or otherwiſe, as his judgment may direct moſt to diſtreſs the enemy: and for this purpoſe the fulleſt plenipotentiary powers are granted him; ſuch powers as will inſure peace, if peace is to be granted upon any but diſhonourable terms, and upon thoſe I hope we never ſhall accept of it.

Upon the whole, ſo far from admitting that the reply to Bombay is contrary to the ſpirit of my minute of the 24th May, I think it moſt completely concurring with every point in it: and I muſt ſay, that if any one letter gave me more pleaſure to ſign than another, it was the one in queſtion, as, in my opinion, none could be better adapted to anſwer the public ſervice.

However, as I do not intend now or hereafter to devote my time to controverſial writing, I ſhall leave my conduct to the deciſion of my employers, to whom alone, with my country, I am anſwerable.

Ghyretty, (Signed) Eyre Coote.
June the 27th 1779.

Mr. Francis—This is the only minute of Sir Eyre Coote's which appears to be occaſioned by, or to have relation to, any thing ſaid by me. The only obſervation I ſhall venture to make upon it, and which I hope will not lead to any further debate, is, that although Brigadier General Goddard is not reſtricted to act ſolely with the force under his command, it appears from our letter itſelf, that we place but little dependence on any acceſſion of ſtrength which he may derive from alliances with the country Powers. With reſpect to Moodajee Booſla, we expreſsly ſay, "that we prefer a ſcheme of military ope-"rations practicable by our own force, unincumbered "with the weight of a timid ally." But our whole force, I mean that with which Brigadier General Goddard is to act, is avowedly not ſufficient to enſure ſucceſs.

Received the following letter from Mr. Horſley.

Honourable Sir, and Gentlemen,

The diſpatches I brought you from Bombay are very circumſtantial; yet the facts they refer to are ſo numerous, and the proceedings upon them ſo extenſive, that I cannot help fearing ſome particulars may be liable to be miſconceived. I take the liberty therefore of requeſting your permiſſion to have acceſs to your records, as far as they relate to the buſineſs I am charged with; and I hope you will allow me to repreſent to you any thing they may ſuggeſt as requiſite for your fuller information regarding the affairs of the Preſidency of Bombay.

The object which ſeems of the firſt importance to the Select Committee, is to eſtabliſh ſuch a degree of confidence between your Government and them, as may render the powers of both moſt efficacious for the general advantage. They aſſure themſelves that they ſhall find you equally diſpoſed to promote a ſpirit of harmony, and to aboliſh all appearances of an oppoſition of intereſts, which it will ever be their ſtudy to avoid, and which they are convinced can never really exiſt. While I am employed in cultivating ſuch ſentiments, and in removing any miſapprehenſions that might prevent or interrupt the good underſtanding between the two Boards, I know I am engaged in the manner moſt agreeable to the gentlemen whoſe commands I am charged with, and it will be in proportion to my ſucceſs in theſe endeavours, that the termination of my commiſſion will be eſteemed either fortunate for the ſervice, or honourable to myſelf.

Calcutta, (Signed) G. Horſley.
31ſt May 1779.

The Board do not think proper to allow Mr. Horſley an unreſerved acceſs to all their ſecret proceedings relative to the Preſidency of Bombay; but ſhall avail themſelves of the reference made to them by the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, to apply to him for information on any points of which their actual knowledge may be defective.

Ordered, That the Secretary do furniſh Mr. Horſley with copies of all letters to the Select Committee of Bombay, and of all the reſolutions of the Board, which have an immediate relation to that Preſidency in its Secret Department; and that he inform Mr. Horſley the Board will be very glad to receive from him any new lights upon the late tranſactions on the preſent ſtate of that Preſidency, which his knowledge of them may ſuggeſt, or which ſhall appear to him neceſſary; and to aſſure him, that that weight will be given to his repreſentations which is due to them.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 14th June 1779;—preſent, the Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident; Richard Barwell, Philip Francis, Edward Wheler, Eſquires; Lieutenant General Sir Eyre Coote, K. B.

Read the following letter from Mr. Horſley:

The Honourable the Governor General and Council.

Honourable Sir, and Gentlemen,

I did hope to have been permitted to attend you at your laſt meeting, to aſſure you, that the members of the Select Committee of Bombay, are unanimous in wiſhing to have the line of conduct reſolved on for them by your Board, laid down as clearly as poſſible; and that whatever it may be, whether for peace or war, or negociation, on which either may depend, they are determined to give every aſſiſtance in their power for the accompliſhment of your views.

I wiſhed to remind you, that the powers of the Governor General and Council had never been diſputed at Bombay, which while it ſhews the ſenſe of our Government as to the neceſſity of an union between the two Boards for the ſucceſsful management of the Company's affairs at our Preſidency, I hope will not render you leſs attentive to the ſame object; but on the contrary induce you to concert meaſures for forming ſuch an union of powers and intereſts, as the moſt effectual means of promoting the ſchemes of policy you may think proper to adopt.

Could I ſuppoſe you leſs convinced of the advantage of ſuch a conduct than the gentlemen at Bombay, I ſhould intreat you to conſider, whether you might not defeat your own intentions by rejecting the union the

Select Committee wiſh for and deſire, on no other terms but of the greateſt deference to the lead you are entitled to take in marking the points to which the joint endeavours of the two Boards are to be directed, and the principles on which they are to be purſued.

The ſentiments of every member of the Select Committee, which I can take upon me to anſwer for in the moſt unreſerved terms, are theſe:

That your Board has an unqueſtionable right to give them directions with regard to peace, war, and negociation:

That however the opinions of the Select Committee may at any time differ from thoſe of the Governor General and Council, yet they can only promote the welfare of their ſettlement by conforming to yours.

That it is in this way only they can hope to make the moſt of peace, or carry on war to advantage:

That therefore it is for their intereſt to co-operate with you on all occaſions, whether for peace or in war.

I hope, gentlemen, I may without offence ſay, that while they acknowledge your right to direct the principles on which the political concerns of the Preſidency of Bombay ſhall be conducted, they are not ignorant what their own rights are as to the actual and excluſive power of their Government.

Circumſtances are now ſo entirely changed, that it is to be hoped you will not ſuffer the memory of former diſagreements to be any impediments to the confidence you may be diſpoſed to place in the Government of Bombay. On the firſt opening of the Council General's commiſſion, the meaſures already taken at Bombay in Maratta affairs, fell under your ſevereſt cenſure, both as to the principles and execution. The juſtification which the Governor and Council might have derived from ſucceſs, even if they had no other, they were debarred from by the reſolutions of this Board: in this caſe what remained for them but to defend themſelves and their meaſures as far at leaſt as argument would ſupport them? The caſe is now very different: inſtead of having taken on their own authority any meaſures which they muſt now defend, they have referred every thing to you: they have poſtponed the exertions which in their opinion their actual ſituation authorized, which were the moſt neceſſary to their own affairs, and the moſt efficacious, as they thought, for ſupporting the ſyſtem of politics they underſtood you had adopted. This they have done for no other purpoſe, but that it might not be ſaid that they had prevented this Board from making its own choice, but that they might receive directions from you grounded on the fulleſt knowledge of the preſent ſtate of affairs; and preſerve from all riſk, that union and confidence which they conſider as ſuperior to all other advantages.

Unimformed as I am, I may perhaps trouble you on ſubjects on which my repreſentations are the moſt unneceſſary; and I would wiſh very much that this might be one of them: yet the general good of the ſervice, as well as the particular intereſts and rights of the Government of Bombay, appears much involved in the reſolutions you may take with regard to the powers you may think proper to continue to Colonel Goddard, or to confer a new one on him; and in the conſiſtency with them the powers reſerved to the Government of Bombay by Act of Parliament and ſpecially entruſted to the Select Committee by the Court of Directors, that I ſhould think myſelf wanting in my duty, if I did not intreat to be heard whenever theſe points may come under your conſideration, and before your reſolutions on them are taken.

I remain, &c. &c.

Calcutta, June 14th 1779. (Signed) G. Horſley.

No. 200.

Mr. Horſley being directed to attend, that the draft of the letter to Bombay may be communicated to him, is admitted and allowed to peruſe the letter.

Mr. Horſley—I wiſh to take the letter propoſed to be ſent to Bombay home with me: the great length of it, and the variety of the ſubjects on which it treats, renders me cautious of offering any thing ſuddenly for the conſideration of the Board; and the more ſo as there are ſeveral parts of it which I fear will appear to me more detrimental to the ſervice the longer I conſider them. Appendix, No. 200.

Agreed, That Mr. Horſley be permitted to carry the draft of the letter to the Select Committee at Bombay home with him.

The following letter to Brigadier General Goddard having been circulated and approved, it was written in cypher and diſpatched.

To Brigadier General Goddard.

Sir,

The Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay have tranſmitted to us by the hands of Mr. Horſley, a full and clear detail of their late proceedings, with their opinions on the preſent ſtate of affairs in that part of India, and the propoſitions of their Preſident for retrieving the unhappy conſequences of the defeat of that enterprize.

After the moſt attentive conſideration of theſe important ſubjects, we have formed ſeveral reſolutions on the meaſures to be purſued for re-eſtabliſhing the intereſt and credit of the Company. The moſt eſſential of thoſe meaſures we have determined to entruſt to your conduct: theſe we ſhall herein deſcribe to you, and give you ſuch clear information of our views as will enable you to carry them into effectual execution.

We ſhall alſo communicate to you ſuch parts of our inſtructions to the Select Committee, as will require your acting in concert with them, either deliberately or executively, or as have any relation to the objects more immediately committed to your ſeparate charge.

We have already given you full powers to negociate and conclude a treaty of peace with the Maratta Government; and having no cauſe to alter the terms which we have preſcribed in our inſtructions for that purpoſe, we have only to repeat, that we look to the iſſue of that commiſſion as our primary object, and the termination of all our political views on that ſide of India, if it ſhall prove ſucceſsful.

But if the Miniſters ſhall reject the propoſals which we have inſtructed you to make to them, and ſhall reduce us to the neceſſity of defending the rights and intereſts of the Company by an open war, we leave you a latitude of action, under the inſtructions of the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, to avail yourſelf of the ſituation which fortune may preſent to you: and if a war ſhould be indiſpenſably continued, we alſo authorize you to adopt any part or the whole of Mr. Hornby's plan, laid down in his minute of the 30th of March; or not at all, as you may think moſt adviſable for promoting the diſtreſs of the enemy.

Should this plan be carried into execution, we have laid the Select Committee under the following reſtrictions:

1ſt. That their engagements ſhall be offenſive only for the objects of your immediate operations, and in all other reſpects purely defenſive.

2d. That their engagements with the Guicawar family ſhall be made with the head of it, and with him excluſively.

3d. That they ſhall not aſſume a mediation between the brothers Futty Sing and Govind Row, or take any part whatever in their domeſtic diſputes, further than to ſupport the party in alliance with the Company, and his poſſeſſions againſt foreign invaſion.

4th. That they do not commit the dignity of the Company, or pledge the national faith in formal treaties with perſons of a rank or power unſuitable to ſuch a diſtinction.

We leave the proffered alliance with Moodajee Boſſla to

to be concluded under the inſtructions already given to you of the 16th of November; but we hereby direct, that if in his anſwers to the letters which were written to him by you and Mr. Hornby, or in any other letters which you may have received from him at the time of the arrival of theſe inſtructions, he ſhall have either refuſed or heſitated to accept the propoſals which have been made to him, or ſhall have made new references to us, you do in ſuch caſe declare the negociation at an end, and that you do on no account reſume it without our expreſs orders.

We likewiſe hereby authorize you to treat with Madajee Scindia, both on the ſubject of the ſeparate and ſecret agreement made with him by the military committee at Worgaum; and alſo in the event of a war, if you find him diſpoſed to our alliance to enter into ſuch engagements with him as you may judge to be for the advantage of the Company, and not incompatible with any treaty before concluded.

We think ourſelves ſtrictly juſtifiable in refuſing to ratify even the ſmalleſt tittle of the treaty or convention of Worgaum. Although we abſolutely diſclaim the acts of the committee, and deny their validity, and will not admit of any pretenſions founded on thoſe acts, yet they cannot cancel any rights which have their baſis in eſſential and intrinſic benefits reaped by our nation: this right we muſt acknowledge to be poſſeſſed by Madajee Scindia; and we therefore declare, that unleſs he ſhall have forfeited it by any ſubſequent act, he is entitled to a full compenſation for any diſappointment which he may ſuffer by our denial of the acts of the committee.

You will therefore expreſs to Madajee Scindia the ſenſe in which this Government is pleaſed to regard his ſervice at Worgaum, by offering ſuch a gratification as may be afforded him by the Government of Bombay, or from means which you may poſſeſs from the operations of war, in caſe peace is not concluded upon the inſtructions you are already furniſhed.

Although the conduct of Madajee Scindia may not ſeem to confirm the opinion which the Select Committee of Bombay entertain of his diſpoſition towards us, or rather of the political neceſſity which ſeems to incline him to inſure our future alliance; yet we think the arguments they have aſſigned for this belief ſo well grounded, and it agrees ſo well with the knowledge which we ourſelves poſſeſs of his ſtate views and talents, that we entirely adopt it, nor do we find it difficult to reconcile the demands made on us under his influence by the Miniſters, and immediately by him for the performance of the conditions of the convention of Worgaum with that diſpoſition, or with the obvious ſyſtem of policy which his preſent intereſt demands.

We ſuppoſe it probable that he will avoid any direct engagements with us until the urgency of his affairs ſhall require it; or until he can gain the advantage of the negociation, by waiting for the firſt advances to be made on our part. If from the opportunities you may have of a nearer and more intimate knowledge of his perſonal character and neceſſities, you ſhall judge this concluſion to be well grounded, we direct you to treat him with the ſame temporizing and indeterminate conduct rather than ſolicit it. Propoſing this as a general caution, you will make the future ſecurity of our poſſeſſions, peace, and an adequate revenue, your chief and indiſpenſable objects, and the grounds of our engagements with him.

To ſum up what we have written; our firſt deſire is to obtain peace on the terms propoſed to you of the 5th of April: and it is only in the event of the failure of this deſign, that we have formed the ſubſequent inſtructions, or will allow of their operation. This negociation we have committed to your ſole charge.

The ſeparate negociation with Madajee Scindia bears ſuch a connection with the foregoing, that we have thought it neceſſary to leave this alſo to your ſole charge.

We alſo truſt entirely to your management the negociation of the treaty of alliance with Moodajee Booſla, on the authority of your inſtructions of the 16th of November, until the period of its ſuſpenſion by the refuſal or ſuch a heſitation of Moodajee Booſla as you ſhall deem ſufficient to warrant your declaring the negociation ſuſpended. The future renewal of this negociation we reſerve to be determined by our expreſs orders, but without revoking the credentials and inſtructions granted you reſpecting it.

All other negociations, treaties, and plans of military operations not herein expreſsly committed to your ſole management, we leave to be formed and concluded under the regular powers of the Government of Bombay; and we hereby direct you to execute whatever military ſervice the Select Committee may think proper to require of you, and which you ſhall judge practicable; provided it ſhall not be contrary to our inſtructions or to any exiſting engagements.

Notwithſtanding the excluſive powers we have granted you for the purpoſe of negociating and concluding the treaties before ſpecified, we direct you in all poſſible caſes to avail yourſelf of ſuch advice and information as the Select Committee can afford you before you determine on the execution of any treaty ſeparately committed to your charge.

We obſerve, with the higheſt ſatisfaction, the approbation which the Select Committee of Bombay expreſs at your conduct, and the ready diſpoſition which you have ſhewn to aſſiſt in the execution of their deſigns. It is with pleaſure that we have reſolved to join with them, in recommending you to the Court of Directors for the appointment of Commander in Chief at that Preſidency, whenever there may be a vacancy; and, in the intermediate time, we think it highly expedient, that you ſhould hold the rank of Brigadier General, in order to enable you to carry on the public ſervice with more weight and dignity, for which purpoſe we have granted you a brevet commiſſion of Brigadier General, for the ſervice on which they are now employed.

(Signed) W. H.

Suppoſing this letter to be conformable to that already reſolved on to the Select Committee at Bombay, I acquieſce.

(Signed) P. F.

I acquieſce under the ſame ſuppoſition.

(Signed) E. W.

We have directed the Preſident and Select Committee at Bombay, to furniſh you with a copy of the cypher in which this letter is written, and which we requeſt you will take particular care of.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 21ſt June 1779.—At a Council, preſent, the Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident; Richard Barwell, Philip Francis, Edward Wheler, Eſquires. Sir Eyre Coote indiſpoſed.

Read the following letter from Mr. Horſley:

The Honourable the Governor General and Council.

Honourable Sir, and Gentlemen,

Had I been permitted to wait on you, and to make my repreſentations to you on the ſubjects on which I had deſired to be heard, previous to your taking your reſolutions, I was prepared to point out to you the great and inſurmountable objections which I thought lay againſt Colonel Goddard's ſeparate, independent, and plenipotentiary powers, as marked in ſuch of your letters to Bombay as I had then ſeen; but I could not be at all prepared for the great extenſion meant to be given to thoſe powers. Now, upon the firſt communication of the draft of your propoſed letter to the Governor and Select Committee of Bombay, for what purpoſe it is communicated, I muſt acknowledge, I am far from certain; though I ſhould flatter flatter myſelf that I ſhould not be laid under the neceſſity, either of deſerting the rights and intereſts of the Government, by which I am entruſted, or of hazarding my opinion and arguments againſt ſuch authority as yours, if the ſervice could receive no benefit: From the hard choice I am to make, I will therefore take the liberty of ſtating ſomewhat at large, though haſtily, the general objections I conceive to be againſt the powers you wiſh to confer on Colonel Goddard, as well as the particular parts of the propoſed letter to Bombay, which ſeem to me likely to prove detrimental to the public ſervice; I ſhall flatter myſelf to meet with your indulgence in uſing that freedom which a queſtion of right requires.

However unwillingly I may enter on this queſtion, yet I perceive it may have its uſe. Upon the information of a perſon ſo inconſiderable, that no contrariety of opinion can produce diſpute, or the moſt remote appearances of oppoſition, you will be able to judge of the differences you may give riſe to by the orders you are now about to ſend to Bombay. What I have to offer will be allowed its own weight and importance at leaſt; and in that caſe, I may perhaps have the ſatisfaction to think, that I have contributed to move the grounds of animoſities and contention, which might have had the moſt ruinous conſequences to the ſervice.

Permit me, on the other hand to hope, that your Board will make ſome allowance for the diſadvantage the Government of Bombay are under, on a ſubject of ſo great moment to them. The ſame arguments from them would certainly carry a force which I cannot pretend to give them; they would probably be able to offer more and better, and ſtate them more forcibly: at preſent however the taſk can only be performed by me, and it is my duty to execute it to the beſt of my ability.

I muſt however previouſly beg, gentlemen, that you will be pleaſed to recollect, that in claiming for the Government of Bombay the rights they hold under Act of Parliament, as well as by the ſpecial orders of the Court of Directors, and their plain and evident intentions, I do not take upon me to ſay, what lengths the Government of Bombay may think proper to go in ſupport of them: I know their moderation ſo well, that I am ſure the public welfare will be their firſt and principal care, however they may think their legal rights invaded, or with whatever diſreſpect they may conceive themſelves treated.

The general objections I take the liberty of offering to your conſideration on the ſubject of the powers you propoſe for Colonel Goddard, ſeparate from the Government of Bombay, independent of it, and plenipotentiary on the ſpecial concerns of that Preſidency, are, that they are illegal; that they are inconſiſtent with other eſtabliſhed and acknowledged legal powers; that they are inexpedient, and tend to produce the moſt dangerous confuſion in the Company's affairs.

The legal power of this Government over the other Preſidencies, I preſume is all comprized in one ſhort clauſe in the regulating Act, and is defined to be that of ſuperintending and controlling in the caſes of war, peace, and negociation, by granting or withholding their conſent and approbation of the meaſures of the other Governments. They have no direct agency at Bombay, the executive powers of the Government there being lodged, as before the Act paſſed, in the Governor and Council. The very words, "ſuperintendance and controul," in themſelves imply an intermediate power, and in this caſe the ſuperintendance and controul is ſaid to be ſo far, and in ſo much as is above expreſſed, that is, no farther and no more. The means by which the Governor General and Council may enforce their legal orders, even in caſe of diſobedience, are marked with the greateſt preciſion; they may ſuſpend the Governor and Council from their offices: it is not ſaid they may appoint agents of their own to carry their orders into execution. Five perſons nominated in the Act are intruſted with theſe powers of ſuperintendance and controul, which are limited not only by the expreſs words of the Act, but by the abſolute neceſſity impoſed by the diſtance at which they muſt be exerciſed. Can it be ſuppoſed that while other leſſer powers are ſo exactly defined, the greateſt of all, that of transferring the power of the whole Council General to one man, and exerciſing it on the ſpot by delegation, can belong to this Board, without the ſmalleſt mention made of it in the Act of Parliament? The Governor General and Council I believe would demur to yield the civil or military Government of Bengal, Bahar or Orixa, to any perſon who could produce no other authority than the orders of the Court of Directors for it. Yet it is eaſy to prove that the general authority of the Court of Directors would better ſupport a claim of this ſort, than the limited authority of the Governor General and Council juſtify an extenſion of it like that now propoſed. Appendix No. 200.

The Court of Directors are bound to furniſh his Majeſty's Miniſters with all information concerning the ſtate of their revenues, and all civil and military affairs of their Governments: the Governor General and Council are directed and required to pay obedience to all ſuch orders as they may receive from the Court of Directors: and the Governor and Council of Bombay are directed and required to pay obedience to the orders that they may receive from the Governor General and Council on certain particular ſubjects, and to a certain defined extent and degree. I do not find that his Majeſty's Miniſters, the Court of Directors, the Governor General and Council, or the Governor and Council of Bombay, can of their own authority appoint ſubſtitutes or deputies to exerciſe their great truſts. The only thing ſimilar to ſuch a power in the whole Act, is the right the Court of Directors poſſeſs to authorize the inferior Preſidency to act in peace, war, and negociation, without waiting for the conſent and approbation of the Governor General and Council; and this privilege given to the Court of Directors, who are ſpecially confined in the exerciſe of it to confer this extraordinary authority only on the legal agents of the Company at the inferior Preſidencies, affords one of the plaineſt and ſtrongeſt arguments of induction that can be, that the Governor General and Council cannot take from the Governors and Councils of thoſe Preſidencies their agency in their ſeveral Governments.

In ſhort, the expreſs words of the Act give the Governor General and Council a negative in the political concerns of the other Preſidencies, and as expreſsly ſay they ſhall claim no more; and the evident intention is, that while Bengal is conſidered as the moſt valuable of the Britiſh poſſeſſions in India, and has a preference given it ſuitable to its ſuperior importance; no one Government is to be left to the mercy of another, the members of which have perhaps no intereſt in its welfare or biaſſes contrary to it.

Give me leave, gentlemen, in this place to remark again to you, that the Governor and Council of Bombay, ſo far from ſtanding on their ſtrict legal rights, where they have conceived it for the good of the ſervice to yield a greater authority to your Board than the Act obliged them to do, have ſince the firſt eſtabliſhment of the Council General conſtantly allowed you to take the lead in their affairs, and have followed your directions with regard to war, peace, and all points of policy, for which I know only two reaſons that can be given; they might eaſily hope to gain your confidence, by making this ſacrifice to that jealouſy on your part with which the preſent intercourſe between the two Boards firſt began: or from a principle of moderation (which is not entitled to the leſs praiſe on account of the little ſhew ſo humble a virtue makes in the world) they are determined to yield every thing of their own, rather than riſk any intereſt of the public.

I muſt crave your patience, gentlemen, while this very painful ſubject leads me to point at the inconſiſtency of the powers you propoſe to confer on Colonel Goddard, with other eſtabliſhed and acknowledged legal powers.

Such are the powers granted by the Court of Directors to the Select Committee, who are evidently thereby ſet above the controul of any delegate from hence. The Select Committee do not ſay they are ſet above the ſuperintendance and controul of your Board; they have acknowledged your powers, and referred to them; yet I would wiſh it to be remembered, that they are ſo far ſuperior to the ſuperintendance and controul of Colonel Goddard, or any other delegate from hence, that were they diſpoſed to ſtart queſtions of right and power, perhaps the ſpecial orders of the Court of Directors (a caſe provided for by the Act) might bear an interpretation of ſtill greater latitude. I hope I ſhall not be miſunderſtood; I only wiſh to juſtify myſelf, and the Government for which I act, by ſhewing from example the difference between their claims and thoſe which men of unruly tempers might aſſert.

By the ſpecial appointment of the Court of Directors, the Select Committee is empowered to tranſact all political, military, and naval affairs, and likewiſe all ſuch as may require ſecrecy. Every perſon in the ſervice of the Company, or enjoying their protection civil or military, are enjoined implicitly to obey all orders of the Select Committee, under pain of ſuſpenſion from the ſervice, or of forfeiting the Company's licenſe and protection: and if the Select Committee ſhall think fit to ſuſpend any perſon or perſons from the ſervice, ſuch perſon or perſons ſhall not be reſtored otherwiſe than by the ſaid Committee, except by order of the Court of Directors. By the ſeparate, independent, and plenipotentiary powers granted by you to Colonel Goddard, he is to tranſact the moſt important of the political, military, naval, and ſecret affairs of the Preſidency of Bombay: he is inveſted with the independent command of an army within the limits of that Government; and yet at the ſame time, by the orders of the Court of Directors, he is enjoined to obey implicitly all orders of the Select Committee, under pain of ſuſpenſion from the ſervice, and of becoming incapable of being reſtored but by the Select Committee, or by the order of the Court of Directors.

Theſe orders, authorized as the King's Miniſters are to require all information concerning the government of this country, we can be certain were communicated to them. Could it have eſcaped them and the Court of Directors, and the many able men whoſe hands they muſt have paſſed through, if the eſtabliſhment of a Select Committee had been ſubject to inconſiſtencies like theſe? Could it be foreſeen and ſuffered, that the Commander in Chief of all his Majeſty's forces in India, as well as the Company's, might by the unlucky concurrence of the contrary authorities of the Governor General and Council and the Select Committee, be rendered ſubject to the controul of any ſervant civil or military, whom you might appoint your delegate? For the abſolute inconſiſtency of theſe two appointments, the Select Committee and your Bombay plenipotentiary, appears with double force from the terms of Sir Eyre Coote's appointment to the chief command of all the Company's forces in India; according to which, whenever he is preſent at any of the Company's ſettlements where there is a Select Committee, he muſt have a ſeat as ſecond at any ſuch Select Committee, and a vote on all queſtions and occaſions whatever. In conſequence of this order, I believe Sir Eyre Coote lately ſat at Madras in the Select Committee there; and I refer to yourſelves, gentlemen, whether you could then have conceived it poſſible, that he or the Board, in the powers of which his were at that time involved, could have been made ſubordinate to any perſon acting under deputed powers from hence? The reſpect due to his diſtinguiſhed rank and character, the memory of his former great ſervices, and his ſeat in the Council General, muſt no doubt add conſiderable weight to the ſentiments he might expreſs in the Select Committee; yet the actual conſtitutional rights of the Committee remain the ſame, whether he is a member or no; and while he is of the number, he is himſelf bound by the reſolutions of the majority. Now in this reſpect therefore the powers conferred on Colonel Goddard are greater than even Sir Eyre Coote's could be, if he were on the ſpot himſelf; for as he muſt be of the Select Committee, he could poſſeſs no powers ſeparate, independent, and plenipotentiary, within the limits of their Government.

If Sir Eyre Coote were now at Bombay, Colonel Goddard's military command would indeed be loſt in the Commander in Chief's; yet he would ſtill controul his General in the cabinet, if the powers he exerciſes are legal. But I correct myſelf. I believe there is no perſon in any branch of the ſervice, much leſs Colonel Goddard, ſo ſhameleſs as to act under ſuch powers; no one who would not carry all the wax and parchment from which he derived his authority, and lay them at the feet of the great man, to whoſe name and ſervices they were a reproach. But will a great Government, through choice, adopt meaſures which are only to be corrected by the ſenſe every individual muſt have of their inconſiſtency?

I have run through theſe two parts of my ſubject; I have choſen rather to enumerate heads of argument, than to extend my letter to a volume: by giving myſelf full ſcope, I wiſh to relieve myſelf as ſoon as poſſible from a taſk, where I find my judgment ſo much in oppoſition to the reſpect I owe you; for in ſpite of all my deference for your opinions, I muſt conclude, that as far as the Act of Parliament, and the orders of the Court of Directors, are legal obligations on your Board, in the ſame degree are the powers propoſed to be granted to Colonel Goddard illegal. That the ſenſe of his Majeſty's Miniſters and the Court of Directors, as far as they can be judged of from the orders to which they have given their ſanction, are on my ſide; becauſe thoſe orders are evidently contradictory and inconſiſtent upon other principles: that granting the powers propoſed to be given to Colonel Goddard legal (which would ſeem to me the moſt prodigal conceſſion that was ever made in argument;) yet the indecency and impropriety (pardon me the expreſſions, gentlemen) of this delegated authority, are ſo ſtriking with reſpect to the perſon who is unqueſtionably in the ſecond degree at leaſt of public truſt and authority here, and in general through him to your whole Board, as well as to another public body, which however inferior will ſtill I hope be thought entitled to ſome marks of reſpect or attention, that ſome further modification of theſe extraordinary powers, which I am yet unacquainted with, muſt be intended.

I did flatter myſelf, that in a time like the preſent, I ſhould not have ſeen ſo great an indiſpoſition as I have, from all union of powers and intereſts with us on the part of this Government. On the part of the Select Committee, I muſt declare, I do not know a ſingle inſtance, in which they have had any opportunity of expreſſing their inclination of joining themſelves to you, on your own terms, and for your own purpoſes, wherein they have been wanting. I think you cannot produce one yourſelves. However, Bombay muſt ſubmit: confidence and harmony cannot be brought about by the efforts of one party only. You will have all good wiſhes from our ſide of India, for the proſperous courſe of affairs, according to your own ſyſtem, for the ſake of the public, and we ſhall hope theſe at leaſt will give you no offence. The ſentiments of the Select Committee ſeem indeed to differ from yours (I am ſorry to ſay it) as far as things moſt oppoſite, as union and diſſention. The queſtion concerning the powers of this Government over that of Bombay, may be decided here in a quarter of an hour; but if the matter really comes into diſpute, the debate muſt be managed acroſs the continent of India, and in the mean time the ſervice muſt ſuffer. I ſhould have hoped you would have thought this a hazard, which it was worth ſome conſideration to avoid. You confide, and I can aſſure you very juſtly, that the Select Committee will make it an object of their's: perhaps they may even make no oppoſition to the powers aſſumed by your Board; yet can it be expected that they will unite thoſe they ſtill poſſeſs, cordially or confidentially with a body that treats them with every mark of diſtruſt? The ſlighteſt appearance of a ſeparation of intereſts between this Government and us, will probably have the worſt conſequences. The intriguing and ſubtle character of the Marattas is well known. No people are more quick-ſighted in remarking diviſions; on the uſe to be made of which all their own politics turn. They muſt perceive the moſt evident marks of it between you and the Government of Bombay: they will poſſibly preſume on it; and nothing is more likely therefore than this very circumſtance, to force you into a war you ſay you wiſh to avoid. The Marattas have not forgot how they made peace on their own terms before, when they were ready to have purchaſed it with any conceſſion we could have deſired. They account for this themſelves I believe on principles very different from thoſe of moderation, on which I preſume the Governor General and Council acted.

The attention paid you by the Government of Bombay in the moſt eſſential points, entitle them to expect ſome marks of it from you, with regard to their conſtitutional rights. They certainly hoped, that the confidence repoſed by you in Colonel Goddard, and that ſhewn him at Bombay, which while they thought due to his merit, they flattered themſelves would have been received here as it was meant, as the expreſſion on their part of their readineſs to give their confidence to any perſon on whom the Governor General and Council had beſtowed theirs: they hoped, I ſay, that this mutual confidence in the ſame perſon which they thought perfectly well placed, would ſerve as a bond of union between the two Boards. They expected that Colonel Goddard's deliberative ſeat in the Select Committee would enable them to inform themſelves conſtantly of the general ſentiments and principles of this Government from a perſon they believed well acquainted with them, more particularly and fully than they had ever yet been able; and to theſe they wiſh at all times to pay all manner of deference. But if a conduct of this ſort procures them no adequate return from thoſe with whom they have expreſſed the moſt unreſerved inclination to unite; if this Government refuſes all manner of connection with them but that of unlimited rule; if this ſuperiority is to be exerciſed with ſo little moderation, that it is to be granted away at all times, and to all perſons, I cannot tell what courſe is left for the Governor and Council, that is both ſafe and honourable for themſelves, and uſeful to the ſervice. They muſt either renounce and deſert their truſt, or they muſt engage in an oppoſition, which muſt have the moſt dangerous conſequences. The Governor General and Council I hope will do them the juſtice to acknowledge, that they forced them to this difficult alternative.

I muſt next preſume, gentlemen, to take notice of the particular parts of the propoſed letter to Bombay, which ſeem to me likely to prove detrimental to the public ſervice: I ſhould wiſh to leave as much as poſſible, what I have ſaid above to be applied generally to thoſe parts of the letter which refer to Colonel Goddard's powers; yet I foreſee I cannot enter on particulars without returning to the ſame argument. And in the firſt place give me leave to repeat the requeſt I made you in my laſt letter, that you would pleaſe to make the directions you ſend to the Select Committee on this and all other points as clear and expreſs as poſſible; in which reſpect I own there appears ſome deficiency to my underſtanding: and I fear extremely, that whenever affairs go amiſs, the Select Committee may fall under your cenſure for counteracting your deſigns, or miſapprehending your intentions, when they may perhaps be altogether ignorant that you had ever communicated either deſign or intention.

You are pleaſed to ſay, gentlemen, (par. 5.) that in caſe of war you leave a latitude of action to Colonel Goddard under the inſtructions of the Select Committee: I think the Select Committee will be very much at a loſs, obſerving how you have diſpoſed of their whole department in favour of Colonel Goddard, to know what ſubjects they are on which you chuſe that they ſhould give Colonel Goddard inſtructions; eſpecially when in the ſame paragraph they are informed, that you have left the latitude of action, not to them, but to Colonel Goddard That he is to avail himſelf of the ſituation which fortune may preſent: that it muſt reſt with him who is reſponſible to you for his conduct to adopt any part or the whole of Mr. Hornby's plan laid down in his minute of the 30th March, or not at all, as he may think moſt adviſable. Appendix. No. 200.

The Governor and Select Committee will wiſh likewiſe to be informed, whether in that emphatical parentheſis which informs them, that Colonel Goddard is reſponſible to you for his conduct, your meaning is, that he is not reſponſible to them. The Select Committee may perhaps think it proper to direct Colonel Goddard to publiſh in his army the orders of the Honourable the Court of Directors, which enjoin all the ſervants of the Company, civil and military, to obey the Select Committee within the limits of the Government of Bombay, and veſt immediately in them a power of ſuſpenſion, as you may have very juſtly obſerved in your letter. Leſt they ſhould do this, I muſt take the liberty to ſay, that I think it would be but common juſtice to Colonel Goddard, to inſtruct him what degree of obedience it is your pleaſure he ſhould pay to the orders of the Court of Directors if you expect him to diſobey them. If he receives a counterpart of your letter to the Select Committee of Bombay, that expreſſion implying, that he is to be under the inſtructions of the Select Committee, I ſhould ſuppoſe muſt be a very embarraſſing one to him.

In the laſt paragraph but one of your propoſed letter, you inform the Select Committee that you have directed Colonel Goddard to execute whatever ſervice they ſhall think it proper to require, which he ſhall think practicable, and which ſhall not be contrary to your inſtructions to any exiſting engagement. Permit me to obſerve to you, on this mark of attention to the Select Committee, that while your whole inſtructions are directed to one ſingle point, that is to ſay, to compel them to yield up their whole authority into the hands of Colonel Goddard; while they are removed from all charge and care of engagements either actually exiſting or likely to take place; and even refuſed all right of judging of the propriety of executing either in whole, or in part, or at all, a plan of operations propoſed by their Preſident, they cannot ſuppoſe you really mean, that they ſhall be judges of the propriety of any ſervice whatever.

I have ſaid that your inſtructions to the Select Committee are directed to one ſingle point, viz. to compel them to yield up their whole authority into the hands of Colonel Goddard. I think this is the light in which they muſt appear to any perſon who takes a general view of Colonel Goddard's charge.

He commands an army independently of the Government of Bombay within their Government; of courſe he pays, augments, and diminiſhes cantons, removes, or remains with his army, at his own choice and pleaſure.

The execution and negociation of the projected treaty of peace with the Poonah Miniſtry is given to his ſole charge; that is to ſay, a treaty, every article of which relates peculiarly or principally to the Preſidency of Bombay.

The ſeparate negociation with Madjee Scindia is left alſo to his charge, though the point on which this negociation turns, is on a claim of his to a poſſeſſion of the Preſidency of Bombay, acquired at a time when that Government was entirely independent of this, and of which, therefore, the Governor General and Council can have no more pretenſion to diſpoſe, than of the caſtle and iſland of Bombay.

If in the event of war Madjee Scindia ſhall be diſpoſed to take part with us (I preſume both Preſidencies are included in that word) Colonel Goddard is authorized to form our engagements with him.

The negociation and treaty of alliance with Madajee Booſla is left to the ſole management of Colonel Goddard. In this negociation and treaty too the Government of Bombay is eventually intereſted in its moſt eſſential concerns.

If the Poonah Miniſters ſhall reject the propoſals which are to be made to them, a latitude of action is left to Colonel Goddard. He is to avail himſelf of the ſituation fortune may may preſent. It reſts with him to adopt any part, or the whole of Mr. Hornby's plan of operations, or reject it altogether; and in fine, it is implied, that he is reſponſible only to your Board.

In all other negociations, treaties, and plans of military operations, you profeſs your wiſh ſo to blend the powers of your Government with that of Bombay in the direction of them, and in every formal and occaſional inſtrument which they may require for their ratification, as to preſerve the credit and diſtinct reſponſibility of both, and to make both the pledges for the faithful obſervance of them.

The members of the Government of Bombay will know how to judge for themſelves from the example before them, in what manner the powers of the two Governments are meant to be blended. I will not venture any obſervation on a paſſage in which (far as I am removed from truſts that awake ambition) I feel all the bitterneſs of the irony.

It is a matter of the utmoſt concern to me to be obliged to offer any objection againſt a reſolution of yours, which ſeems intended to diſtinguiſh Colonel Goddard, for whoſe character I have the higheſt reſpect, and whoſe merits I know to be no where more ſenſibly felt, nor his honour more heartily wiſhed than at Bombay. But I muſt acknowledge that I am utterly ignorant of the right by which you have thought proper to diſpoſe of the rank of Brigadier General ſpecially confined to our ſettlement; and I am the more alarmed at it, becauſe I do not ſee that the acquieſcence of the Governor and Council can be ſufficient to procure ſubmiſſion to it, even if they ſhould be diſpoſed to yield pre-eminence to you, in an inſtance wherein their authority is fully equal to your own, whatever your ſuperiority may be in other caſes. The military commiſſions granted by the Governor and Council of Bombay, and by the Governor and Council of Madras, are unqueſtionably of the ſame validity as yours, and the rank they give equally eſtabliſhed in the King's Company's troops. That they or the officers of thoſe Preſidencies therefore can ſubmit to this innovation, I own I think impoſſible. Had you been pleaſed to grant your brevet to Colonel Goddard, without limiting it to our eſtabliſhment, I am certain the diſtinction conferred on him would have been received with univerſal approbation at Bombay; but as the promotion appears at preſent, it will be underſtood only as a precedent for rendering all rank in our military ſervice precarious. The like partiality will be expected to be extended in favour of every officer of your eſtabliſhment, if this innovation is ſubmitted to; and this interpretation will be the more natural, as the independent command you have given to Colonel Goddard over your own troops, and his preſent rank, ſuperior to that of every officer on our eſtabliſhment except Colonel Egerton, will make your meaſure appear quite unneceſſary, except it be to anſwer ſome concealed purpoſe. In caſe of the arrival of any officer at Bombay of a rank that might entitle him to command Colonel Goddard, but for the local rank you confer on him, I do apprehend he would not give up his pretenſions out of reſpect to Colonel Goddard's brevet. The Governor and Council of Bombay will aſk, and I think the queſtion will deſerve an anſwer, whether you would admit the ſame right in them to give to one of their officers acting on detachment here a local rank which he did not hold in our eſtabliſhment; and if you would not, they would be glad to know on what you ground the diſtinction in your own favour? Of all the ſteps that could be taken, this appears to me that which is likely to be productive of the greateſt confuſion, animoſity, and a train of conſequences that will not admit of being tempered by the moderation of the Government of Bombay, which, in other caſes, may perhaps be expected to afford the ſame remedy.

The Governor and Select Committee had joined in a very earneſt recommendation to you of Colonel Goddard, for ſome diſtinction expreſſive of your and their ſenſe of his ſervices; I confeſs I ſhould have thought it a very ſtriking inſtance of your determination to unite with them in nothing, that a recommendation, which ſeemed perfectly agreeable to your own ſentiments, ſhould not ſeem to you even to deſerve the common civility of an anſwer, had I not been equally ſenſible that, while every diſtinction you are pleaſed to confer on Colonel Goddard is a ſpoil ſeized from the Government of Bombay, and from the ſervants of that Preſidency, it would have been extremely difficult to have made them any compliment on the occaſion, which would have looked ſerious.

Had you been pleaſed, gentlemen, from the firſt to have made the Government of Bombay the inſtrument in your plans of war, peace, and policy, as far as they were connected with our Preſidency, I believe you would have had no cauſe to repent it: and had you tried the force of recommendation, when there was reaſon to doubt of your authority to give orders, I am ſure you would not have found it leſs effectual. Even in the more immediate concerns of the Bengal Government, which it might be neceſſary to manage within the limits of the Bombay Preſidency, or where Bombay agents were eſtabliſhed the members of the Government, they would not have conceived you could have thought it an overſtrained mark of attention to their rank, truſt, and the conſequence neceſſary to be preſerved to them in their political connections with their neighbours, to commit the Company's intereſts to them in preference to inferior agents: but however this might be, they could hardly have expected to ſee the management of their own moſt immediate concerns wreſted from them; ſtill, I believe, they might have acquieſced with a ſort of cheerfulneſs, had this been done only by yourſelves, or in circumſtances of place and connection, which naturally threw their buſineſs into the hands of your agents. But when they ſee your itinerant commiſſions moving up and down and acroſs the continent, for no other purpoſe than to make or break treaties for them, or manage their affairs, which without preſumption they may ſuppoſe their ſituation, their experience, and their truſt, make them at leaſt as fit to manage themſelves, their right of the queſtion, I cannot ſay how far you may expect them to carry their moderation; but I think you cannot need be told what their feelings and thoſe of every man connected with them, are.

I know not what ſucceſs my repreſentations would have had; but if you had been pleaſed to have ſuffered me to be informed of the objects of your deliberations before your reſolutions were formed, I ſhould think it would have been no diſadvantage to have been acquainted how far the hopes and expectations of the members of the Bombay Government went, with regard to the meaſures you would adopt, in order to blend the powers of the two Governments.

I ſhould have repreſented to you, as I have now done, the neceſſity which I conceived there was for Colonel Goddard and his army being allowed dependant on the Government of Bombay.

With regard to the propoſed treaty with the Maratta Miniſters and the eventual alliance with Madajee Scindia, I ſhould have ſtated my reaſons for thinking theſe would, with moſt propriety, be committed to the Select Committee, or at leaſt, that their right to judge of the articles ſpecially relating to their ſettlement ſhould be reſpected. I am ſenſible that the event of both is important to each of the Preſidencies, and therefore that the Select Committee had no abſolute right to inſiſt on the management of them being left ſolely to their Board; and I could have informed you, that in caſe you determined not to allow the Government of Bombay to act for you, they were ſo well convinced of the detriment that would probably follow to the public ſervice, by employing ſeparate agents, and repoſed ſo entire a confidence in Colonel Goddard, that I had every reaſon to believe they would deſire him to charge himſelf with their intereſts as well as yours. Perhaps I might not have made you ſo ſenſible as I wiſhed of the difference between your ſeizing and the Select Committee yielding, but I ſhould have endeavoured it.

The management of the treaty with Madajee Scindia, for an equivalent in lieu of the gratification promiſed him at Worgaum, I confeſs, I ſhould have thought an inalienable right of our Government, as it is a ſubject of our own peculiar concern. I ſhould have wiſhed too that it might not be taken out of the hands of thoſe with whom it at preſent reſts, as Madajee Scindia's diſcerning that his claim received countenance from this Government, and is treated as a matter of ſo much importance by you, will probably make him more untractable, and leſs inclined to accept of moderate terms. I ſhould have urged that there ſeemed no reaſon to doubt of the intentions of the Government of Bombay to act agreeably to the ſentiments of your Board, ſince in fact Mr. Hornby had himſelf firſt prepared the meaſure of treating with Scindia for an equivalent, and expreſſed in very ſtrong terms his ſenſe of the difference which ought to be made between the Durbar and him. With regard to the ceſſions promiſed to each, give me leave, gentlemen, now to ſuggeſt to you, that in my opinion ſome caution ought to be given againſt yielding any thing to Scindia, till it is certain whether we are to have peace or war, and what part he reſolves to take. I ſhould wiſh, therefore, very much that this matter were left open for your future determination, if you reſolve ſtill to withhold your confidence from the Select Committee; becauſe highly as I know Colonel Goddard to be thought of, and however well inclined I left the members of our Government to him, yet on the footing you have put things betwixt them, I think it is impoſſible they can be on good terms; and in times of ill-humour and diſſention, I obſerve that ſecrets are generally ill kept among the diſcordant parties. In this caſe it is of great importance that Madjee Scindia ſhould not know what you have reſolved on. I ſubmit to you theſe reaſons for thinking this treaty, if left in the hands of the Government of Bombay, would be managed to better advantage, and be more likely eſpecially to anſwer the end of procuring the releaſe of our hoſtages. The gentlemen at Bombay would beſt judge with regard to the advantage of treating there or at Madjee Scindia's Durbar, and if at the latter would probably render it ſubſervient to the purpoſe above-mentioned, by employing Mr. Farmer in it, who I believe you, gentlemen, will think well qualified for ſuch a truſt. With regard to the negociation and treaty of alliance with Moodajee Bouncello, I might have acquainted you that I was perſuaded the Select Committee would be well ſatisfied to ſee them left in the hands of Colonel Goddard. The difference between theſe and the other ſubjects of negociation is very great. The Government of Bombay had never any intercourſe with the Court of Berar. The plan of an alliance with Moodajee Bouncello, was entirely your own; Colonel Goddard was deputed to him long before he arrived within the limits of our Government, and the intercourſe that has already paſſed between them is a good reaſon for continuing the negociation in the ſame channel. I ſhould indeed have thought that the reſpect with which public bodies commonly treat the rights of each other, would have rendered it adviſable to give ſome ſort of explanation of this kind to the Select Committee, and to have recommended it to them to have commiſſioned or inſtructed Colonel Goddard with regard to the particular intereſt of their Government, according to the principles you might determine on for them.

As to the plan of operations propoſed by Mr. Hornby, or any other that might be formed in caſe of war, I ſhould certainly have ſuppoſed they would have been left ſubject to the judgment and diſcretion of the Select Committee, whom I think you had ſeen as deſirous of receiving Colonel Goddard's ſentiments on all occaſions, and of regulating themſelves accordingly, as you could poſſibly deſire. I ſhould have made no doubt either of his general reſponſibility to our Government.

I ſhould have repreſented to you the probability of the Command in chief of the forces at our Preſidency being vacated, either by the ſentence of a court martial, or by a vote of ſuſpenſion, and that the Select Committee would probably think the office too important in the preſent times and circumſtances to remain vacant, or be filled by mere chance; I ſhould have wiſhed very much that Colonel Goddard were left free to accept of this appointment from the Governor and Council of Bombay, which he cannot now do, according to the ſeparate and independent powers you propoſe giving him, as they would be incompatible with his ſeat and voice in the Select Committee, which he would have of courſe, on being inveſted with the chief command of the Bombay troops.

Your letter to Bombay ſeems framed on very different principles; it is a flat refuſal of all union of powers and intereſts with the Government of Bombay. It places inſurmountable bars between the Select Committee and Colonel Goddard, and renders him and his army rather objects of apprehenſion and jealouſy than of hope and confidence; it ſeems to provide that the diſſentions ſhall ſpread as wide as poſſible. Every officer muſt, perhaps every private ſoldier and ſepoy may, become ſenſible of the perſonal injury offered to him in the inſtance of Colonel Goddard's brevet. That ill conſequences muſt follow is no very hazardous prediction; but that they are to be expected at a time when our ſituation and ſtrength is ſuch, as to give the faireſt proſpects of honourable peace or ſucceſsful war, is a circumſtance of which I cannot but feel the aggravation; and the only conſolation I ſee, if theſe are your ultimate reſolutions, is, that when it becomes a ſubject of inquiry how ſo great an undertaking as the march acroſs the continent of India, though performed with ſucceſs, came to fail in all the good effects that might have been expected from it, the cauſe will be as evident as the fact. That this enterprize, by the orders now propoſed to be given, was diverted from its public purpoſes, or directed to them but as ſecondary objects. That to diſplay and flatter that ſupremacy which this Government is pleaſed to aſſume, was made the firſt; and that purſued at the expence of diviſions, by which the joint force of the Preſidencies was ruined, which were foreſeen, and might have been eaſily avoided.

I flatter myſelf you will pardon the trouble I give you. The freedom I have uſed I hope will not give offence, ſince my only inducement to it is the opinion, that it may be uſeful to the ſervice either now or hereafter, that you ſhould be acquainted with ſentiments which are not thoſe of the members of the Bombay Government only, but I believe I may venture to ſay are adopted generally on our ſide of India; and unleſs you received them from ſome individual ſheltered under the humbleneſs of his ſtation, I thought it probable you might ſtill remain uninformed of them, ſince it would hardly ſuit with the decorum and gravity of a public body to enter into ſo minute a diſcuſſion, particularly if they could not entertain ſome hopes of being attended to, which ſoon after the receipt of the letter propoſed to be written to Bombay, I ſhould think very vain ones.

I beg you to believe, that if any expreſſions have eſcaped me that you may judge at all wanting in the reſpect I owe you, they have been entirely owing to accident, and the haſte in which I have been obliged to write this long letter, for fear yours to Bombay ſhould be ſent before mine was finiſhed. Permit me to hope for your acceptance of the ſame apology for all other errors and inaccuracies.

I have the honour, &c.

The Secretary lays before the Board a letter from Mr. Horſley, addreſſed to himſelf as follows:—

To William Bruere, Eſquire.

Sir,

I muſt requeſt you to return me my letter to the

Appendix. Nos. 201&202.

Honourable the Governor General and Council, dated the 18th inſtant, or that you will pleaſe to be at the trouble of making the following corrections in it before it is publicly read, which is all I want it for:

Towards the concluſion of the laſt paragraph but two you will obſerve theſe words: "That this mighty enterprize was directed to no fuller purpoſe, but as a ſecondary object." Inſtead of which I deſire to ſubſtitute the following:—"That this enterprize, by the orders now propoſed to be given, was diverted from its public purpoſes, or directed to them but as ſecondary objects."

Calcutta, June 21ſt 1779. I am, Sir, &c. (Signed) G. Horſley.

Agreed, That the Secretary be directed to make the propoſed alterations in the letter from Mr. Horſley.

No. 201.

Governor General—Although the letter to the Select Committee of Bombay is not entirely conformable to the line which I recommended, yet as the ſentiments which it contains come the neareſt to my own, I acquieſced in them preferably to the other opinions which were delivered upon the occaſion on which it was written; but I as little approve the arguments which Mr. Horſley has oppoſed to it, as I do the manner in which they were conveyed. Mr. Horſley has aſſumed one fact for the ground of his objections to our late reſolutions contained in the draft of the letter to the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay; namely, that the inſtructions intended to be given to Colonel Goddard, relate to the affairs of that Preſidency, and to points of duty eſſentially and excluſively appertaining to the Select Committee at Bombay, which by this conſtruction is ſubjected to the controul and authority of Colonel Goddard.

This conſtruction is neither warranted by the ſubjects of our letter, nor conformable to our intentions. The letter propoſed to be written to the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, comprizes two general ſubjects which belong eſſentially and excluſively to us. The firſt relates to the negociations for the renewal of the treaty of peace already concluded between us and the Maratta State, in which the Preſidency of Bombay has only dependant concern, and for the formation of a treaty with a Power with which that Preſidency hath not, nor ever had any connection; and the ſecond to the operations of Colonel Goddard's detachment, which, though deſigned for the protection and benefit of the Preſidency of Bombay, muſt yet in their effects involve the general intereſt of the Company to whatever purpoſes they may be applied. This force is our own, and therefore the right of directing its ſervices reſts unqueſtionably with us, and we alone are anſwerable for the uſes which are made of it. This ſingle remark appears to me to be a ſufficient reply to all the arguments contained in the long and elaborate letter from Mr. Horſley; and if it is conformable to the ſenſe of the other Members of the Board, it may be expreſſed as their general obſervation upon it, with the following reſolution, which I recommend. That the Secretary be deſired to inform Mr. Horſley, that they did not require his animadverſions upon their meaſures, although they ſhould have been pleaſed to have received from him any lights which he could have afforded them, and for which they were referred to him by the Preſident and Select Committee upon the ſubject of affairs of Bombay; that they have therefore thought it proper to repeal the reſolution which they paſſed on the 31ſt May, to furniſh Mr. Horſley with copies of all letters to the Select Committee of Bombay, and of all the reſolutions of the Board relative to that Preſidency in its Secret Departments; and that he has their permiſſion to return to Bombay whenever he has fulfilled the terms or objects of his miſſion.

Agreed to the Governor General's propoſitions; and ordered, that the Secretary do notify the ſame to Mr. Horſley.

APPENDIX, No. 202.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, 21ſt June 1779.

READ the following letter from Brigadier General Goddard:—

To the Honourable Warren Haſtings, Eſquire, Governor General, and Supreme Council.

Gentlemen,

I had the honour to tranſmit you an addreſs the 14th inſtant, which went by ſea under charge of Mr. Raitt, and will I hope have arrived ſafe before this can reach you. I am ſolicitous about your receiving that diſpatch becauſe accompanying it I have forwarded all the returns and paymaſter's accounts of diſburſements to the end of March, with other papers for your inſpection.

I have nothing material to communicate to you of the ſituation of affairs here, as they remain nearly in the ſame ſtate as when I wrote you from Bombay. If the Chiefs at Poonah have renewed their demands upon, or made any late propoſals to the Bombay Government, it is unknown to me, and for myſelf I have had no correſpondence with them ſince my arrival. According to the reſolutions I informed you I had thought it proper to adopt, I ſhall wait your inſtructions before I enter upon any meaſures whatever. I am in the mean time endeavouring to obtain the beſt intelligence of what is tranſacting around me, and conſulting the means moſt proper to be uſed in proſecution of the plan you may determine upon, whenever I can receive your orders.

By confirmed advices from Poonah, the diſſentions ſubſiſting among the leaders open a field for ſucceſsful intrigue, excluſive of any uſe that might be made of ſupporting Ragoba's pretenſions, the aſſiſting which would, it is probable from paſt experience, be the means of uniting parties rather than arming them againſt each other; and indeed, in his preſent ſituation, might be altogether impolitic, although the confinement of Siccaram, who was always ſuſpected of partiality to the intereſts of Ragoba, might give reaſon to believe that Nannah Furneſe had removed every object of ſuſpicion, and ſtrengthened his power beyond the dread of any future oppoſition. This appearance of ſecurity is in reality moſt deceitful, for his whole dependance is placed upon the ſupport of Scindia; and this Chief, beſides his known reputation for cunning and duplicity, has exhibited a recent and manifeſt proof of the arts by which he means to maintain his own influence in the Government, in the part he took and ſtill takes regarding Ragonaut Row, whom he preſerved from Nannah's reſentment, after the unfortunate iſſue of the expedition from Bombay had left him expoſed to the malice of his enemies, and whom he at this time retains in his own hands, to hold out in terrorem, ſhould he find the party to which he is at preſent engaged aſſume an independance dangerous to his own ambitious views. Ragonaut Row was ſent from Poonah, under the charge of ſome of Scindia's troops, and by the laſt intelligence was within a few miles of Burhampore, in the neighbourhood of which it is ſaid he is to reſide during the rains. It is difficult to reconcile the conduct of Scindia on this occaſion, upon any other grounds than what I have above ſuppoſed; his profeſſions to Ragoba have been moſt fair and flattering, and he has even gone ſo far as to give him hopes of befriending his cauſe. This, however, it is plain, he means nothing leſs than doing, and while he even ſuffers them to exiſt, his only motive is politically to check the dangerous preſumption for an adminiſtration at preſent ſubject to his controul, but when circumſtances might ſo far favour at a future period as to ſet his power at defiance.

With theſe principles of diſunion ſubſiſting among the Marattas, a more promiſing occaſion than the preſent cannot offer itſelf for interfering in their affairs; and though a plan of conqueſt ſo extenſive as the ſettling their Government, or diſpoſing of the chief authority in it, might not, after the opportunity lately loſt, be conſidered as political, or conſiſtent with the Company's intereſt; I am aſſured that the appearance of hoſtilities on our ſide will obtain a compliance from them of any demands you may think it neceſſary to make, either of territory or money, to reimburſe the expences of your armies upon the claim eſtabliſhed by the treaty of the Bombay Government with Ragonaut Row, or upon any other you may chooſe to found on their former breach of faith, and the hoſtile conduct of their ſubjects on my march.

I have hazarded theſe few remarks on the ſuppoſition only of a failure in your intended negociations with the Rajah of Berar, whom I ſtill hope, notwithſtanding the doubtful part his fears of the Miniſters after their victory at Julliagong may have led him apparently to take, an attention to his own intereſt, and the dread of your juſt reſentments, will fix firm in the meaſures he once I am perſuaded propoſed to adopt. I the leſs regret my want of power at this time to be fully explicit regarding Moodajee's preſent ſentiments, becauſe they muſt long ere this be clearly diſcovered to you; and ſince the return of his Vackeel, who went away inſtructed in every point neceſſary to be communicated to his maſter, I have received only one ſhort letter from the Rajah, wherein he repeats his anxious expectation of diſpatches from your Government by which his conduct will be directed. His ſilence towards me may perhaps be accounted for from the diſtance that now ſeparates us, and motives of fear leſt his letter ſhould be intercepted and fall into the hands of the miniſterial party, through whoſe country they muſt paſs.

It is neceſſary that I now ſay ſomething of the province of Guzerat, whoſe favourable ſituation, no leſs than fertility and extent, points it out as a moſt valuable and tempting acquiſition to the Company on this ſide of India. It is unneceſſary to trouble you with an account of its revenues and riches, as theſe muſt be well known to you. What I mean to explain, is the eaſe with which a conqueſt might be now made of it; and the obvious advantages will ſtrike you themſelves.

Futty Sing Guicawar, who at preſent poſſeſſes the greateſt part of the province, and ſhares it with the Marattas, although ſupported by their power, has yet but a very weak and declining authority, added to the claim of ſeniority by which an elder brother, ſtill living, diminiſhes the force of his uſurped title. Another brother, Govind Row, who holds Ahmedabad and its dependencies, has always been at variance with him, and is at this time by no means well inclined to his intereſts. This has been ſecretly intimated to me ſince my arrival. I am alſo well aware of the uſe that might be made of the Nawaub of Cambait. Many of the principal men of the province have beſides communicated their diſcontents and readineſs to join the forces of the Engliſh againſt Futty Sing. To theſe advances my replies, although tending to remove every belief of hoſtilities being intended againſt Guzerat, were calculated to give encouragement in the event of our troops marching into it.

From the circumſtances juſt mentioned, and other obſervations I have been able to make, I am perſuaded that the appearance of arms, without any actual exertion of their force, would be ſufficient to bring this province into the ſubjection of the Company; but ſhould it be found otherwiſe, it is ſo ſituated for the convenience of ſupplies and communication by water, that it might with eaſe be wreſted from the preſent poſſeſſor, and maintained againſt him, though the whole force of the Maratta empire was joined to his ſupport.

I beg to acquaint you, that I have received no letter from your Board of a later date than the 5th of February, which leads me to apprehend they may have been intercepted on the road.

I have the honour, &c. &c.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, 2d Auguſt 1779.

READ a letter from Brigadier General Goddard as follows:—

Gentlemen,

I have within theſe few days been honoured with the receipt of your letters of the 18th March, and of the 5th of April. A triplicate of the former, and duplicate of the latter, has only yet come to hand; I am therefore apprehenſive the originals may have met with ſome accident on the road, which has been the cauſe of your reſolutions not reaching me before. This delay cannot however be productive of any inconvenience, as you will have found by the letters addreſſed you from Bombay; and particularly by the contents of one wrote ſo recently as the 22d ultimo, that I had determined not to take any ſteps whatever, till I had received your final inſtructions upon a knowledge of the ſituation of affairs on this ſide of India, ſubſequent to the unfortunate failure of the Bombay enterprize.

As I am now fully informed of the objects you wiſh to accompliſh, I ſhall neglect no means conſiſtent with propriety and the honour of the Engliſh name, and conformable to the ſpirit of your orders, which can be conducive to reſtore that peace and good underſtanding betwixt the Marattas and the Government of Bombay you ſo much deſire, and eſtabliſh the alliance of that nation with the Honourable Company on a permanent foundation.

Having had no correſpondence with the Poonah Government ſince my arrival, I am the leſs able to form any certain conjecture of the conduct they will follow, when your friendly inclinations are communicated to them; but if a concluſion may be drawn from the general tenor of their behaviour ſince the ſuperiority they lately acquired, there appears ſome reaſon to ſuppoſe they will gladly embrace the opportunity now offered them of ſecuring the advantages fortune has given them, by entering into an alliance with the Engliſh.

The principal obſtacle that now ſtrikes me, will be the diſpoſal of Ragoba. It is not to be ſuppoſed they will conſent to reſtore him into our hands; and I do not at preſent conceive any other means by which his perſonal ſafety can be provided for. However, of this I ſhall be hereafter better enabled to judge; and I ſhall literally conform to your orders in making that an indiſpenſable engagement.

My preſent diſtance from Poonah, and ignorance of the real diſpoſition of the Maratta Court, rendering it improper for me to leave the army till that point is aſcertained, I have, as the only leading ſtep as I can now take, wrote a letter in the name of the young Peiſhwa; copy of which I beg to encloſe for your peruſal. I have at the ſame time addreſſed Nanah Furneeſe, the acting Miniſter, and at preſent poſſeſſed of all the nominal authority in the Maratta State.

I beg aſſure to you, I ſhall neglect no means of obtaining from the Poonah Court deciſive information regarding their real diſpoſition, which I will make a point of doing in time to communicate it to you, and receive your final inſtructions upon a knowledge of their ſentiments, before the ſeaſon of military operations arrives.

Should their reply be favourable to the pacific plan you have laid down, the clear time already preſcribed in your letter of the 5th April, has made me fully maſter of the views of your Government, which I ſhall conſtantly have in mind. And in the mean time I have wrote wrote to the Gentlemen at Bombay, to explain to me the ſituation in which the Proonder treaty now ſtands; and how far the ſeveral articles contained in it have been complied with.

It is at preſent unneceſſary to ſay more, than in a few words to aſſure you of the grateful ſenſe I have of the confidence you have repoſed in me, which I ſhall endeavour to evince the truth of by the unremitting ardour with which I ſhall proſecute the object you have directed my attention to.

Suffer me only to add, that ſhould obſtinacy or preſumption on one part, render my efforts ineffectual, every circumſtance in the ſituation of affairs concurs to promiſe an iſſue no leſs favourable to the intereſts of the Company by a recourſe to arms, than the mode you have adopted of negociation.

I ſhall not fail to communicate to you from time to time, the ſmalleſt occurrence of any conſequence.

I have the honour to be, &c.

No. 204.

Tranſlation of a Letter from Colonel Goddard to Pundit Purdhan Madharow Narain Peiſhwa; dated the 12th day of Jemmad-ul-owel, or 29th June 1779.

After the uſual addreſs and compliments, it proceeds as follows:—

At this time letters have arrived from the Governor General and Supreme Council of Bengal, in which they write, that friendſhip and good underſtanding has long ſubſiſted betwixt them and the rulers of the Maratta State; according to which a part of their armies under my command have marched in peace through your dominions; and differences having now ariſen betwixt your Government, and the Gentlemen of the Council at Bombay, they have appointed me to remove all cauſe of difference, and reſtore the harmony formerly ſubſiſting betwixt you; for which purpoſe they have made me their Miniſter, with full powers to conclude a treaty of alliance on their parts betwixt the Honourable Eaſt India Company and the Maratta Government, which ſhall be for the mutual intereſt and honour of both parties, and endure like the wall of Alexander to the lateſt generation. I ſend you encloſed a copy of the writing by which they have delegated theſe powers to me for your peruſal and ſatisfaction.

From the friendly inclinations expreſſed by my Government, and my own wiſhes to promote a good underſtanding betwixt you, I am alſo well aſſured that you, agreeable to the dictates of wiſdom, and a regard to the happineſs of mankind, will concur in the ſame amicable ſentiments, ſince it is a circumſtance famed throughout the whole world, that the Engliſh, as they are ſincere and open in their intentions, always continue firm, and perſevere in their enmities and friendſhips.

That no time may be loſt in laying the foundation of the terms of the treaty which is to unite the Engliſh and the Maratta nation, I hope you will immediately ſend to me a confidential perſon to whom I may communicate particulars.

A true tranſlation.

(Signed) Dalrie Watherſton, Perſian Tranſlator.

A letter was wrote at the ſame time to Nannah Furneſe as Miniſter, and to the ſame effect, but in more general terms, referring him to the Peiſhwa's letter for particulars.

APPENDIX, No. 205.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 8th July 1779.

PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident;

Richard Barwell, Philip Francis, Edward Wheler, } Eſquires.

Lieutenant General Sir Eyre Coote, K. B.

RECEIVED the following letter from Brigadier General Goddard:—

Gentlemen,

I had the honour to addreſs you the 2d inſtant, acquainting you with the ſteps I had taken in obedience to your orders of the 5th April, for negociating with the Poonah Government, which I hope will have reached you ſafe, and my conduct been honoured with your approbation.

The intention of this is to communicate to you as early as poſſible an event, extraordinary as unexpected, of which I have juſt received intelligence.

Ragonaut Row, whoſe ſurrender into the hands of the miniſterial party, ſeemed to have eſtabliſhed them ſecurely in their Government, and completed their ſucceſs over the forces of Bombay, has found means to eſcape from their power, and is arrived within a few miles of Broach; from the neighbourhood of which place he has wrote me, that, confiding in the friendſhip of the Engliſh, and truſting to me for protection, he had ſeized an opportunity of ſurprizing the party belonging to Madjee Scindia, who were conducting him to the northward of the Nerbudda, and that their leader, Hurry Bawajee, died a few days after of the wounds he received in the conteſt.

Upon receiving the firſt news of Ragoba's eſcape, I was alarmed at the conſequences it might be productive of, to the negociation now on foot with the Maratta leaders, and apprehenſive leſt the ſhewing him any countenance at this time, might be conſtrued into an act of hoſtility, inconſiſtent with the ſentiments I had ſo recently expreſſed to them in your name. But when I came to reflect more fully on the matter, I was convinced that it not only correſponded with the ſpirit of the inſtructions received from you, touching the proviſion for his perſonal ſafety, but that it might be reconciled to the Poonah Durbar upon every principle of juſtice and humanity, and that, in the preſent ſituation of affairs, it would be of the moſt important political advantage to get poſſeſſion of the perſon of Ragoba, as any conceſſion made hereafter on our ſide regarding him, would be an inſtance of moderation, for which we might exact a ſuitable return, and beſides the apprehenſion of his being ſupported by us in his claims on their Government, would make the Miniſters the more eager to come to an accommodation upon terms which it would then be left to us to dictate.

I have therefore conſented to Ragoba's ſolicitation, and aſſured him he ſhall find an aſylum in my camp, and perſonal ſecurity from all his enemies, and that I ſhall immediately write to you, and acquaint you of his fortunate eſcape, and receive your further orders how to act. I have not thought it neceſſary to be more particular with him till we meet; I have only cautioned him to reſtrain his people from committing any violence upon the ſubjects of the Maratta State, under the ſanction of the Engliſh name, as I ſhall not at preſent ſupport him in it.

I have not yet received an anſwer to this meſſage, but I think no time ſhould be loſt in communicating to you a circumſtance of ſo much importance.

I therefore now write you in this general manner, and ſhall defer particulars either till I ſee Ragoba, or till he ſhould have determined to come in to me, or throw himſelf again on the Government of Bombay; for although he has ſignified to me his wiſh for the former, there is no aſcertaining with certainty which ſtep he may take.

You

You may depend upon hearing from me ſpeedily.
6th June 1778. (Signed) Thomas Goddard.

Reſolved, That the following letter be written to Brigadier General Goddard:—

Sir,

We have received your letter of the 6th ultimo, both original and duplicate; but that dated the 2d, to which you refer, has not yet come to hand.

We entirely approve of the offer which you have made to Ragonaut Row, and direct that you continue to afford him the protection of your camp, ſo long as he ſhall continue to demand it, provided he ſhall not forfeit his right to it by any act of infidelity, or attempt to defeat the effect of your negociations, to which you will give your entire attention without regard to any other conſideration. For the reſt, we leave you to act under our inſtructions of the 5th April, in which we ſee no cauſe to make any alterations on account of this event.

READ the following letters from the Select Committee of Bombay:—

Gentlemen,

We have had the honour to receive in triplicate your letter of the 5th April, and Colonel Goddard having alſo announced to us your appointment of him as Miniſter from your Government, to treat with the Peiſhwa and Miniſters of the Maratta State; we ſhall, according to his deſire, give him every information in our power, that may be of ſervice to him in his negociation, and pay ſtrict attention to your orders reſpecting the commiſſion of hoſtilities.

Our diſpatch of the 4th April will have acquainted you of our having given permiſſion to Ghazudy Cawn to proceed to Surat, in order to take paſſage for Mecca; but we underſtand that owing to ſome difference between him and Chillaby, the owner of the ſhip bound to that port, he did not proſecute his pilgrimage, but ſtill remains at Surat. We beg leave to obſerve, that his removal to Bombay was perfectly ſatisfactory to him; and that upon his expreſſing a deſire to return to Surat, he was immediately accommodated with one of the Honourable Company's veſſels.

We learn by country intelligence, that Ragoba has made his eſcape from Madjee Scindia, in the neighbourhood of Berhampore.

P. S.—Encloſed is a duplicate of our addreſs of the 4th of April.

Gentlemen,

Encloſed is a duplicate of our addreſs of the 7th inſtant; the original of which was forwarded by the Swallow ſloop, built for the ſervice of your Preſidency.

The intelligence of Ragoba having effected his eſcape from Madjee Scindia, has been ſince confirmed by a letter from the Chief of Surat, with this further circumſtance, that he was directing his courſe to that city; and a ſubſequent letter from Colonel Goddard informs us of his ſafe arrival within the Honourable Company's protection. As this event may be productive of very important conſequences, we loſe not a moment in appriſing you thereof; and for this purpoſe we now diſpatch the Jappy Snow expreſs to Bengal; and, at the ſame time, to forward a packet for your Honourable Board, received from Colonel Goddard.

We encloſe copies of the letters, above noticed, from the Chief of Surat, and Colonel Goddard. That no ſtep of ours might tend to fruſtrate the negociation you have been pleaſed to commit to Col. Goddard, we immediately upon receipt of the former letter, ſent directions to Mr. Boddam to deſire Ragoba to ſeek an aſylum in ſome other place, as we could not conſent to receive him under protection, even till your pleaſure was known; but we at the ſame time intimated, that if Colonel Goddard ſhould think proper to receive him, it was a point that muſt be determined by his own judgment, and he muſt be reſponſible for the conſequences. Appendix. No. 206.

A copy of our letter to the Chief of Surat, on this ſubject, is alſo tranſmitted.

The circumſtances of Ragoba's eſcape are very unaccountable, and have much the appearance of connivance on the part of Madjee Scindia. It is ſaid he is accompanied with 4 or 5,000 men, and that he has brought all his guns with him, to the number of twenty.

We beg leave to notice to you, that one or two of your laſt letters, on political matters, have been addreſſed to the Preſident and Council, inſtead of the Committee.

If you ſhould make us any further remittances by bills on Surat, much time will be ſaved at this ſeaſon of the year, by ſending the bills under cover directly to the Chief and Council.

As ſeveral of our ſmall veſſels are now abſent on different ſervices, we have directed Mr. Horſly immediately to return the Jappy.

Letter from Colonel Thomas Goddard, to the Select Committee of Bombay.

Gentlemen,

The eſcape of Ragonaut Row from the power of the Miniſters, and his ſafe arrival within the protection of the Honourable Company, being a matter of the utmoſt importance to the negociation with the Maratta State, entruſted to me by the Governor General and Supreme Council of Bengal, I think it neceſſary to communicate this event to them as early as poſſible; and as the communication by land is moſt precarious, and at the ſame time very tedious, I am induced to ſolicit your aſſiſtance to forward the incloſed diſpatch immediately to Bengal by water, which will, I am hopeful, by this means reach them in leſs than a month from the preſent date, the paſſage being at this ſeaſon of the year, I underſtand, very quick and expeditious.

Honourable Sir,

I diſpatch this Pattamar expreſs to acquaint you, that this noon I received a letter from Mr. Bouchier, who is now on a viſit to Broach, adviſing me as follows:—

" Ragonaut Row and his family, with Imrut Row and " an army of about five thouſand horſe and foot paſſed " by Cabbeer Waik oppoſite to the great tree at Soiel- " terrah, about one o'clock this day; he was going on " towards Surat, and ſent over his Hircarrahs to know " where Mr. Gambier was, and has wrote to him. I alſo " underſtand a letter was alſo diſpatched to you expreſs " from Bawa Pier Ghaut this morning. I have not as yet ſeen any thing of the letter that Mr. Bouchier mentions to be ſent me from Bowa Pier Ghaut; but the Colonel has had letters from Ragonaut Row laſt night much to the ſame purport; and Ragonaut Row is expected at this place as to-night or to-morrow. I ſuppoſe he will throw himſelf under the protection of the Colonel. If he ſhould come to me, I ſhall get the Nabob to give him the gardens at Mahomed a Baug, and muſt requeſt you will ſend me ſuch inſtructions relative to him, as you and the Committee may think neceſſary on ſo extraordinary an occaſion.

Sir,

The Preſident has laid before us your letter of the 5th inſtant to him.

We can foreſee numberleſs difficulties and inconveniences ſhould Ragoba be again taken under our protection, even till we could receive the orders of the Governor General and Council on the ſubject; and that it might be an inſuperable obſtacle to any accommodation being effected with the Poonah Government by Colonel Goddard. We therefore direct that you do deſire Ragoba to ſeek an aſylum in ſome other place, as we cannot, circumſtanced as we now are, conſent to receive him. But it is neceſſary to apprize you that ſhould Colonel Goddard, to whom the negociation is committed, think proper to receive him, it is a point which muſt be determined by his judgment, and he muſt be reſponſible for the conſequences.

The Pattamars are ordered to uſe all poſſible expedition in the delivery of this letter.

Reſolved, That the following letter be written to the Select Committee of Bombay:

Gentlemen,

We have received your letters of the 7th and 12th ultimo by the Tappy.

Brigadier General Goddard has adviſed us, that in conſequence of an application from Ragoba, he has aſſured him of receiving protection in his camp; which we entirely approve, and have directed General Goddard to continue to afford it to him ſo long as he ſhall demand it, provided he ſhall not forfeit his right to it by any act of infidelity, or attempt to defeat the effect of his negociations, to which he will give his entire attention without regard to any other conſideration. PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident;

Richard Barwell,
Philip Francis,
Edward Wheler, } Eſquires.

Lieutenant General Sir Eyre Coote, K. B.

READ the following letter from Brigadier General Goddard:—

Gentlemen,

I had the honour to inform you in a letter of the 6th inſtant, of the eſcape of Ragonaut Row from the people who were placed over him by Scindia, and his arrival in the neighbourhood of my camp. He has ſince repeatedly ſolicited permiſſion to come and receive my protection, which I have granted him; and this morning he paid me a viſit with his adopted ſon, Amrut Row, a young man of about 17 years old, and Badjerow, a child of four years, born to himſelf ſince the adoption of the former.

I have already in general terms ſuggeſted to you the advantages which it appears to me may be derived from this unexpected event, and that you may be at no loſs reſpecting the probable conſequences it may have at this time, on account of the line of conduct I have laid down, I beg leave to aſſure you that I ſhall proſecute the negociations for peace with the ſame ardor and aſſiduity as before it happened; and that from the nature of the circumſtance itſelf, as well as the alarm it has given at Poonah, I have reaſon to believe the Maratta Miniſters will not only be more diſpoſed by it to adopt pacific meaſures, but will alſo be glad to accept of ſuch terms as you ſhall dictate to them.

In your letter of the 5th April, you have directed that the proviſion for Ragoba's perſonal ſafety alone be made an indiſpenſable engagement, and this you did when himſelf and family were in the power of his enemies, whoſe intereſt and object it would have been to remove him. Now that the ſcene is totally changed, that affairs on this ſide of India are reverted to the ſame ſituation in which they were before, in the inglorious convention made at Tilliagony, which the Government of Bombay have themſelves diſavowed in the firſt inſtance, and which you alſo have directed me in your inſtructions to propoſe to the Miniſters, as a leading article that is to determine the alternative of peace or war: their relinquiſhing any claim to it appears an argument founded on reaſon and ſound policy, that we ſhould avail ourſelves of the favourable opportunity that now preſents itſelf, from the poſſeſſion of Ragoba's perſon and family, but above all from the preſence of your forces under my command; and the invincible acceſſion of ſtrength it gives the arms of the Engliſh in the country, to conclude a treaty with the Maratta nation upon terms the moſt honourable and beneficial to the Company, and which from the ſuperior advantages acquired by it may enſure to them a permanent and undiſturbed poſſeſſion of their territories on this ſide of India.

I do not doubt, but when the intelligence of Ragoba's eſcape ſhall have reached you, you will have immediately diſpatched freſh inſtructions for my further guidance.—Theſe may arrive along before the ſeaſon for military operations begins; and in the mean time, admitting the Miniſters are open to negociation, I ſhall adhere literally to the propoſals you have already entruſted me to make, uſing only the latitude you have given me reſpecting Ragoba, to demand ſuch conditions in his favour as the nature of his preſent ſituation will admit of, and by theſe means I ſhall be able to protract the negociation, without materially interrupting it, until I can receive your final pleaſure.

The advantageous points, which the poſſeſſion of Ragoba's perſon puts it in our power to inſiſt upon, in addition to theſe you have preſcribed, appear to me,

1ſt. The payment of the debt due from him to the Company.

2dly. The reimburſement of the expences of the Bengal army; and,

Laſtly, The ceſſion in perpetuity of Baſſein, Choule, or

or thoſe places which were agreed to be delivered up by him, in the late treaty he made with the Bombay Government.

In return for theſe conceſſions on their part Ragoba might relinquiſh all pretenſions to the Peiſhwaſhip, or to the direction of affairs in the Maratta State, and ſit down contented with a proviſion from the Sircar, adequate and proportioned to his rank and birth, but poſſeſſing no public poſt or employment under Government. The viciſſitudes of fortune Ragoba has felt, and the critical ſituation from which he has lately eſcaped, would eaſily reconcile theſe conditions to his acceptance: beſides that, if conſiſtent with the objects of your political views, he muſt of neceſſity acquieſce; he has made no particular overtures to me ſince his arrival, but has thrown himſelf entirely upon your Government, to which I have referred him for every thing, venturing at preſent to aſſure him only in your name, of perſonal ſafety and protection.

It becomes neceſſary now, that I ſhould endeavour to explain to you the circumſtances by which an event ſo extraordinary as Ragoba's eſcape was effected; and as I derive my knowledge of it principally from himſelf, and the people affected to his intereſts, it may be in ſome meaſure ſuſpected of partiality; at any rate the conduct of Scindia on this occaſion ſeems almoſt inexplicable.

To him the ſurrender of Ragoba's perſon had been made by the Committee; and he, from reaſons of policy, which I have accounted for in a former letter, took upon himſelf the management of all buſineſs with Ragoba afterwards. I cannot help being of opinion, that the Brahmin has proved too artful a politician for the ſoldiers, however contrary it is to the characteriſtic of the latter to be overcome by the weapons of deceit, which he is famed for practiſing ſo well.

Scindia had preſerved every appearance of ceremonious reſpect, even ſo much as to leave him the troops who had accompanied him from Bombay, and all his artillery except two field pieces, which he requeſted from him. With this force of his own, conſiſting of about 1500 horſe and foot, with above twenty pieces of ordnance, Ragoba marched from Poonah towards the northern Jaghiers, where Scindia had agreed to pay him an allowance of 12 lacks of rupees yearly, attended only by about 4000 horſe belonging to the latter Chief. Many cauſes of diſcontent aroſe upon their route to the Nerbudda, owing to the improper behaviour of Hurry Bowajee, who commanded Scindia's people, and was entruſted with the conducting Ragoba; for on the requiſition made by the latter for his ſtipulated allowance, he put off the payment under various pretences, and failed in aſſiſting him with proviſions, forage, &c. for his troops. Ragoba alſo received advice, that Scindia had ſeized upon and put to death two of his principal Jemidars, and had detained in confinement many of his Mutteſuddies and people, contrary to a promiſe he had made, that they ſhould be ſent after him. To theſe ſeeds of reſentment on the part of Ragoba, he learnt that Scindia's Chief, ſuſpicious of ſome deſigns, had wrote to his maſter for a reinforcement; and he further adds, that credible information had been given him of the intention of Scindia to confine his perſon in ſome fortreſs in the northern diſtricts. The plan therefore of his eſcape, was, I am well convinced, pre-concerted, though he pretends to ſay that accident effected it; for that on their arrival at the Gaut of Burwa upon the Nerbudda, as his artillery was conducting to the river in order to croſs, the road led near Hurry Bowajee's tent, and the latter alarmed and ſuſpecting ſome treachery, ordered his people to fire, which they did; afterwards the action commenced, in which he came off victorious, and the troops of Bowajee fled, who was himſelf wounded, in endeavouring to make his eſcape more than a mile from where the tumult firſt aroſe, and died a few days after of the wounds he there received. I have been as particular as I could be in the detail of this circumſtance, becauſe I make no doubt it will be repreſented by the miniſterial party in the blackeſt colours they can invent, to colour perhaps, their own cruelties hereafter. Appendix. Nos. 208&209.

The conduct of Madajee Scindia ſtill remains a myſtery, and the little precaution he ſeems to have taken on this occaſion to ſecure the perſon of Rogoba, is a ſubject of great aſtoniſhment.

By accounts from Poonah ſince the news of this tranſaction reached them, the Chiefs are greatly incenſed with him, and have declared they muſt conſider him as reſponſible for the loſs of Ragoba; ſo that it is probable at any rate this event will tend to increaſe their mutual jealouſies and diſſentions, and lead to the more ſucceſsful accompliſhment of your views regarding the Maratta Government.

I beg to encloſe for your peruſal a letter I have wrote to the Peiſhwa and Miniſters on the ſubject of Ragoba's eſcape.

After the uſual addreſs, and recapitulating the contents of the former letter, it proceeds thus: "At this time Ragonaut Row has come to me, and from him I learn that a Sirdar from your Government had been ſent to accompany him with a force, and that on the road they fought together on account of ſome miſunderſtanding, ariſing from the improper conduct of your Sardar, who died of the wounds he received, and the people with him fled; after which Ragonaut Row ſet out towards Surat, and has encamped in the neigbourhood of my camp, where I have detained him, ſince he is a principal Sardar of your nation; and now that I am negociating with you, we can adjuſt whatever is proper and eligible reſpecting him. Copy of a Letter from the Chief at Broach to the Select Committee of Bombay.

I DISPATCH this expreſs to adviſe you of Ragonath Row's arrival with a large party of men at Occlaſſer the night before laſt. He has with him his wife and ſon, and his adopted ſon Amurath Row, and by the beſt accounts I can get, 1800 or 2000 horſe, and 1000 muſket Sepoys. I have had a conference with him, and the account he gave me of his eſcape was, that at a place called Chollee Mahaſu, about 200 coſs to the eaſtward, he being then under an eſcort of 2000 of Scindia's, and an equal number of Holcar's people; and finding by a letter that luckily fell into his hands, that they were carrying him to a fort at Janſee, he had found means to bring over to his ſide Holcar's people, and with their aſſiſtance had attacked and routed Scindia's, and wounded the commanding officer Govind Hurry, who was ſince dead, and from thence had made the beſt of his way with the forces who had eſpouſed his party to this country. He ſaid that as he had once more the good fortune to eſcape from his enemies, and get to his friends the Engliſh, he hoped they would retrieve his affairs; and doubted it not, as he had received many preſſing invitations from Colonel Goddard to come to him. What Ragoba's real intentions intentions are, I have not yet been able to discover, but on the whole, think he has a great desire to go to Colonel Goddard, from whom he seems to expect much service; but at the same time I believe, that if he thought his business could be effectually done by your Honour, &c. without his throwing himself into the hands of Colonel Goddard, he would prefer much the putting the management of his affairs under your directions. I do not hear that any of the Baralhyes are in pursuit of him, nor does he seem under any apprehensions of them at present. I have offered him good accommodation at a large garden near the river, and close under our wall, for himself and a suitable number of his people; but he chuses, for the present at least, to remain with his cannon at Occlasier. I shall be glad to receive as soon as possible any instructions you may think necessary to be given me for my conduct as to Ragoba, and have the

Gentlemen,

Enclosed is a triplicate of my letters to you, which I wrote to advise the arrival of Ragoba at Occlasier, and this intended merely to acquaint, that having received answers much to his satisfaction from Colonel Goddard, he is, notwithstanding all my arguments to make him remain here till I received your orders, gone to join the Colonel at Surat. Ragoba told me that he had certain advices of the Boralhyer having detached a large force to endeavour to take him, and that made him much more earnest to join the Bengal army, which he thinks all in all sufficient to protect him and destroy his enemies. I beg leave to assure your Honour, &c. that whatever I thought could conduce to the good of my employers on this occasion, I have both said and done in respect to Dada Saheb; and I sincerely hope his escape from the Baralhyes, and coming again into the Company's hands, will be productive of material benefit to them.

Gentlemen,

Since my letter of the 6th instant, informing you of the escape of Ragoba from the power of the Ministers, and his safe arrival within the Company's authority, I understand that he has visited and been received by Mr. Gambier at Broach.

As this event cannot but be intimately connected with the conduct of the negociation committed to me by the Government of Bengal; I am concerned at the circumstance of Ragoba's having been acknowledged by any person holding so public and distinguished a station under you, because it may preclude me from pursuing any particular line I might think consistent with the instructions of my Government, and it may besides be diametrically opposite to the spirit of them, and be the means of rendering my endeavours to execute their commands in the important charge with which they have intrusted me, abortive and ineffectual.

I need not observe to you, Gentlemen, the propriety there would have been if the application made by Ragoba, in the first instance, had been immediately and altogether referred to me, because I am sensible you will concur in the opinion, that exclusive of the political reasons I have given above, it has a mark of respect due to the Supreme Government of India, that any overture from a member or subject of the Maratta empire should have been previously received by their Minister.

As I am, however, persuaded that Mr. Gambier must have acted on this occasion without any particular instructions from your Committee, and as it is probable he may not have been informed of the nature and extent of my appointment from Bengal at the Court of Poonah, I am led to request you will be pleased to signify it to him, and to the gentlemen composing your Council both at Surat and Broach, in order that nothing may hereafter happen from an inattention to that circumstance which might impede and counteract the interests of the public service, or to be considered as disrespectful to the character I bear of the Representative of the Supreme Council of India with the Maratta States.

I beg to remind you of the subject of a letter I wrote you the 24th ultimo, to which I have not yet been favoured with an answer.

Extract of a Letter from the Chief and Council at Surat to the Select Committee, dated 14th June 1779.

And yesterday afternoon the Chief received a letter from Colonel Goddard, copy of which is enclosed. In reply thereto, the Chief acquainted Colonel Goddard, that agreeable to his request, the Nabob's house at Mahomed Baug was ready for Ragoba's reception whenever he chose to occupy it: but that as great inconveniencies might arise from Ragoba's bringing with him into town any great number of followers, he desired the number might be limited to three or four hundred.

The Chief has acquainted us that Ragoba had himself applied to him for permission to reside at the house at Mahomed Baug, and that in consequence the Nabob had, at the Chief's desire, prepared it for his reception.

Copy of a Letter from Colonel Goddard to the Chief at Surat.

Ragonath Row having made his escape from the hands of the ministerial party, by surprizing and defeating a party of Moodajee Scindia's people, who had been placed over him, has solicited the protection of my camp, which I have granted him in the name of the Bengal Government, till they shall be pleased to signify their pleasure respecting him; I have therefore to request your assistance in accommodating him and his family with the house of Mahomed Baug, belonging to the Nabob of Surat, in which place he has expressed a desire to reside during the rainy season, and as this has now commenced, and Ragoba is besides in a very indifferent state of health, which renders his remaining in tents not only uncomfortable but at present dangerous, I am anxious, an d hope the gardens may be ready for his immediate reception.

Honourable Sir, and Gentlemen,

I was honoured with your commands of the 10th instant, last night; the Pattamars give the reasons for their not making greater dispatch, was owing to the badness of the roads from the rain.

You will have been fully acquainted by the general advices of the 14th instant, of the step Ragonath Row had taken in soliciting the protection of the Bengal camp, and that the same had been afforded him by Colonel lonel Goddard. He now reſides at the gardens of Mahomed Baug, in conſequence of an application both from the Colonel and Ragonath Row, to procure the ſame for his family's accommodation during the monſoon, and in conſequence came into town for that purpoſe the 15th inſtant. He is now entirely under Colonel Goddard's protection, with whom every tranſaction will paſs and all reſponſibility reſt. I ſhall in no reſpect interfere, but ſolely act in any good offices from the application that may be made by Colonel Goddard.

APPENDIX, No. 210.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, 2d Auguſt 1779.

Letter from General Goddard—18th June 1779.

Gentlemen,

I HAD the honour to write you the 12th inſtant, acquainting you with the eſcape of Ragoba, and his reception in my camp. He has at this time ſolicited me to forward an addreſs to your Government from himſelf; which I have done myſelf the pleaſure of tranſmitting to the Honourable the Governor General.

In a long conference I have had with Ragoba ſince my laſt, he has explained many circumſtances relative to his ſituation preceding the late event, that diſcover more particularly the views of the ſeveral parties in the Maratta State than the intelligence I before obtained from other channels leſs informed in theſe points; though at the ſame time they tend to confirm in general the opinion I have already given in a former letter, of the ſentiments of the principal leaders. He affirms, that the proſpect of a foreign invaſion is the only bond which unites Nana Furneſe and Madajee Scindia; and if that was once removed, the latter would ſoon proſecute his ambitious projects of making himſelf ſole and abſolute maſter of the Maratta State, otherwiſe they will be found to act in concert with each other. With reſpect to the ſentiments of Tookajee Holcar, he is aſſured of their being amicable towards himſelf, and attributes the whole of the late conduct of that Chief, to his fears of Madajee Scindia and the Miniſters, remarking, that Tookajee's character is noted for exceſs of timidity and irreſolution.

He aſſigns as the reaſon for his chuſing to deliver himſelf into the hands of Madajee Scindia, the implacable enmity he knew was borne him by Nana Furneſe, and the neceſſity there was of his being at that time ſacrificed for the ſafety of the Engliſh army. This meaſure was, he ſays, reſolved on with the concurrence of the committee, the morning preceding that night when the fatal retreat was attempted; and as Madajee Scindia had attempted to ſend in a perſon next day, to treat upon the terms of a peace, he is convinced, if that ruinous ſtep had not been taken in the interim, they might have obtained conditions far more honourable and advantageous, than thoſe they were at laſt compelled to accept. It appears indeed moſt probable from the circumſtance of the troops having met with no repulſe at that time, and the joy the Miniſters would receive at being delivered from an enemy whom they could not but conſider as formidable, that the concluſion of Ragoba is juſtly founded.

From the ambitious deſigns of Madajee Scindia, Ragoba knew that he ſhould find in him a protector from the reſentment of the Miniſters; and here his policy was not deceived, for that Chief took upon himſelf the management and conduct of his buſineſs, and an agreement was made between them in writing, that Ragoba ſhould receive an allowance of 12½ lacks of rupees per annum, and ſhould be put in poſſeſſion of Janſee, with a tract of country in its neighbourhood, and the diſtrict of Bundlecund, from whence he was to draw that amount, excluſive of every expence attending the collections and government of the country. On pretence of this, Scindia was conducting Ragoba acroſs the Nerbudda, when he found means to make his eſcape in the manner I have deſcribed in my former letters; and for the reaſons I have alſo hinted at, that Madajee Scindia had broken through many parts of his agreement, by putting to death ſome and confining others of his principal officers and adherents; and that added to his own knowledge of the treachery and ambition of this Chief, Ragoba was credibly informed, he intended to act a perfidious part, and ſecure his perſon in the fort of Janſee. Indeed it is not to be doubted, but this was his intention, and however a general view of this tranſaction might give room to ſuſpect that the eſcape of Ragoba was connived at by him, the poſitive declarations of the former, and a minute attention to the circumſtance that attended it, removes every idea of that having been the caſe. Appendix. No. 210.

I come now to that part of the converſation with Ragoba, which more relates to his own particular intereſts, and the future hopes he ſtill derives from the ſupport and friendſhip of the Engliſh; before I enter upon which, it may not be improper to aſſure you, that although I wiſhed him to declare his ſentiments without diſguiſe or reſerve, I gave him no encouragement beyond his own perſonal ſecurity, and that of his family; or that might make him believe he would be aided in his pretenſions upon the ſovereignty of the Maratta States, or receive any further aſſiſtance from your Governments, than what a ſincere wiſh to reſtore peace and tranquillity to the affairs of the Decan, founded upon principles of juſtice and equity, might dictate. He began by extolling the truth and bravery of the Engliſh nation, which had raiſed them to be the Sovereigns of Hindoſtan; and particularly magnified the arms and councils of Bengal, which had been crowned with uninterrupted victory. Confiding in theſe, he had come once more to throw himſelf upon their protection, and would ſubmit to whatever fortune they might think proper to allot him; as it was from their favour and aſſiſtance alone, that he could derive any hope of future ſucceſs. He acknowledged, that when the Bombay troops took the field, he had aſſured that Government, that his ſtandard would have been joined by numerous partizans, which proved not to be the caſe; but in this matter he was himſelf deceived. At the ſame time he added, that he is of opinion, if the army, inſtead of retreating, had puſhed forward with vigour, many who were inclined to his cauſe, would have been encouraged to come over to him. Another reaſon he aſſigned for the backwardneſs of thoſe who ſecretly favoured him was, the tenor of the treaty made with the Bombay Government, eſtabliſhing his authority in the State, by which it was made merely of a temporary and nominal nature, while the marks of real Sovereignty, the title of Peiſhwa, and the privilege of having the Sicca ſtruck in his name, was conferred upon another. His undeterminate and unſettled ſyſtem, while it held the minds of men ſuſpended betwixt their hopes on one ſide, and their fears on the other, muſt, he ſaid, naturally deter them from declaring themſelves, however ſtrong their inclinations, till ſome deciſive blow was ſtruck to turn the balance of the former.

He talked much, but in general terms, as I did not think it proper to queſtion him particularly on that head, of the ample conceſſions he was ready to make in favour of the Engliſh, if they befriended his cauſe; and from the nature of the circumſtance itſelf, there is not a doubt, in the event of ſuch a meaſure being adopted, but the advantages would be all our own. He added a circumſtance reſpecting the Nabob Nizam Ally Cawn, that in his late route towards the Nerbuddah, a ſecret emiſſary came to him from that Prince, preſſing him to make his eſcape from Auruñgabad by any means in his power, and he would protect him againſt the Maratta Miniſters. The cauſe of this conduct in Nizam Ally Cawn is, ſome late late offence he has received from that party, who in the former war with Ragonaut Row ceded to him a tract of country, upon condition of his aiding them in it, and ſince getting Ragoba's perſon into their hands; though they have not actually taken any hoſtile ſteps for its recovery, yet they have made known their intention of reſuming it the firſt opportunity. The policy therefore of Nizam Ally Cawn muſt be, to find them employment, which may divert their attention from that object, and leave him the undiſturbed poſſeſſion of the country before ceded to him, by alarming their fears of being attacked from a foreign quarter; and on this preſumption, and the reſentment he may be ſuppoſed to feel for the injury intended him, Ragoba ventures to declare, that Nizam Ally Cawn will not join the miniſterial party, but be ready to act againſt them.

With reſpect to Hyder Ally, he has been at conſtant variance with the preſent Poonah Adminiſtration for ſome years, and has frequently aſſiſted Ragoba with ſums of money, for the ſupport of himſelf and family.

I have been thus minute in laying before you the particulars of Ragoba's converſation, that you may be clearly and completely informed of his ſentiments, with the foundation on which he builds his future proſpects, and while you derive from their deſcription a more ample knowledge of the weak and diſtracted ſtate of the Maratta Government, adopt ſuch further meaſures as your wiſdom ſhall dictate as beſt ſuited to improve any advantage that may be derived from the late reſolution.

I have the honour, &c.

Camp, near Surat, 18th June 1779. (Signed) Tho^s Goddard.

P. S. Since writing the above, I have received intelligence from a perſon at Poonah, whoſe authority I can depend upon, that the conſternation there, on account of the eſcape of Ragonaut Row, is exceſſive, and is augmented by ſome late conſiderable encroachments Hyder Ally has made upon the ſouthern boundaries of their dominions, ſo much ſo, that they are preparing to arm againſt the approach of ſo dangerous an enemy.

This is alſo confirmed by intelligence from Bombay, which I think it neceſſary to communicate to you, that the Peiſhwa and Madjee Scindia have wrote letters to that Preſidency, adviſing them of their intentions to march and puniſh Hyder; and expreſſing a wiſh for ſettling their mutual diſputes, and that the perſon intruſted with that diſpatch may be ſent forward to your Government. I mention this, becauſe it ſhews in how altered a ſtyle they ſpeak, from the language uſed by them after their late victory, and proves the juſt grounds of the preſent apprehenſions that fill their minds. I may now expect to hear from the Miniſters myſelf every day, and to have an opportunity of writing you in the moſt full and ſatisfactory manner: in the mean time, as the circumſtance of Ragoba's eſcape may induce you to make ſome additions to the inſtructions already given, I ſhall protract the concluſion of any thing deciſive in the negociation with the Durbar, until I can hear from you; and I am of opinion it will require ſmall effort on my part to effect this, as cauſes of delay will I apprehend ſpontaneouſly and neceſſarily ariſe of themſelves.

Letter from Ragonaut Row: received the 28th of July 1779.

When I quitted Bombay with an Engliſh force, and the Engliſh retreated from Tellegong and I went to Tocoje Holcar, and Madajee Sindea at that time, I executed whatever engagements thoſe Chiefs choſe to impoſe on me, and they on their part entered into engagements with me. They gave me a country of 12 lacks and a half of rupees excluſive of the Talook of Jhanſee with the Selcundee and charges of the forts and Mahals, and engaged to give me a further country to the amount of 10 or 15 lacks of rupees. Madajee Sindeah gave me a body of his own forces, under the command of a Chief named Hurry Bâwâjee, through whoſe haughtineſs and diſinclination towards me many articles on that part of Sindeah were not fulfilled by him. For example, two of my people, one named Raceſe Mahomed, a Jemautdar of Gardees, the other Curruck Sing, a Jemautdar of Peons, whom he took from me on an engagement, that he ſhould not touch their lives, but keep them cloſe priſoners; theſe he put to death, and others of my people, whoſe liberty was ſtipulated for in the treaty, he nevertheleſs kept in confinement. Thus they were guilty of ſeveral breaches of engagements. It was my wiſh to have repaired to your preſence, but as this would have been a violation of treaty, I was obliged to decline it.

When the engagements were violated by them, in confidence of your ſteady friendſhip and regard, I chaſtiſed the troops of Sindeah, and by forced marches reached Surat, and waited on Colonel Goddard who is here on your part. The reſtoration of my affairs now reſts with you, and I have no doubt but you will call my faithleſs ſervants who have ruined my affairs and thrown the whole country into confuſion to a ſtrict account, and will reeſtabliſh them on a firm footing; for this purpoſe it is expedient that you iſſue orders to Colonel Goddard for my reſtoration.

APPENDIX, No. 211.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, 2d Auguſt 1779.

THE following minute from Sir Eyre Coote having been circulated, the minutes which are entered after it were delivered by the members of the Board.

Sir Eyre Coote—Having lately received ſome advices mentioning preparations at the French iſlands, for a deſcent upon ſome of our poſſeſſions in India, particularly Bombay, to which I the more readily give ſome credit, knowing that that Preſidency and the Circars are the leaſt ſecured; I am induced to propoſe that the Governments of Fort Saint George and Bombay be recommended to reinforce the army under General Goddard with the following proportion of troops, which, from the laſt returns, I think they may with propriety comply with: viz.

From Madras.

1	Battalion of Europeans,
3	Ditto Sepoys,
50	Artillery.

From Bombay.

300	Europeans,
2	Battalions of Seapoys,
100	Artillery.

As the works of Pondicherry are now deſtroyed, the quota from Madras may the more eaſily be ſpared. The troops they have at Mahé, 1100 Sepoys, one company of grenadiers, and 50 artillery, may immediately embark to join General Goddard; the reſt may be completed from the ſouthern ſtations, and will certainly be with him before any operations of the enemy can be commenced.

The forces of Madras and of this eſtabliſhment are, in my opinion, fully ſufficient to protect our poſſeſſions on this ſide of India; moreover, we are in daily expectation of a great addition to our ſtrength from Europe. I therefore alſo recommend that drafts be ſent from hence to complete the original number of General Goddard's detachment.

The advantages we may expect to derive from this propoſed reinforcement will be the ſecurity of Bombay againſt any attack of the French, by having ſo ſtrong an army in the field, the expediting of the much deſired peace with the Marattas (if this is not already accompliſhed pliſhed) and the rendering our force on the Malabar coaſt of ſuch reſpect as to check any deſigns which either the Marattas or Hyder Ally (the only country Power from whom we have any thing to dread on that ſide of the continent) may be inclined to form of taking part with our national enemies.

On the whole, I ſubmit this plan as the means which in my judgment will inſure the peace and ſafety of all our poſſeſſions; for while we have ſo reſpectable a force in that quarter where we may expect the firſt efforts of the French, we may be certain that it will confine their attention to it, and prevent them from diſturbing our more valuable territories in the other part of India.

(Signed) Eyre Coote.

Mr. Francis—I move that the Commander in Chief may be requeſted to inform the Board of the particulars of the intelligence he has received from the French iſlands, and the authority on which it is founded. The Board have yet no materials before them to judge of the propriety of the meaſure recommended.

(Signed) Philip Francis.

Mr. Barwell—The cautionary meaſures propoſed by Sir Eyre Coote, appear to me ſo well calculated for the ſecurity of the Company's poſſeſſions, that I am induced to give them my immediate and hearty concurrence.

(Signed) Richard Barwell.

Governor General—I agree moſt heartily to the propoſal made by the Commander in Chief.

(Signed) Warren Haſtings.

Mr. Wheler—Seen, and will endeavour to prepare my opinion againſt the next meeting of the Board.

(Signed) Edward Wheler.

Sir Eyre Coote delivers in the following minute:

I muſt own I feel myſelf not a little injured by Mr. Francis's requiſition; and will venture to ſay, that a ſimilar inſtance cannot be found upon the Company's records, and that it is unknown in any ſervice for a Commander in Chief, or any general officer, to be called upon to ſupport his opinion and aſſertion, by giving up the authors of his ſecret intelligence upon which theſe may be founded. I therefore peremptorily refuſe it; and if the opinion I have given on the 27th ſhould not guide the Board in the mode of defence propoſed for Bombay, I hope I ſhall ſtand exonerated ſhould any fatal conſequence happen to that place.

(Signed) Eyre Coote.

Mr. Francis—Nothing can be perſonally of leſs moment to me, than whether my propoſition be carried or not. As a member of the Government, I think it my duty to oppoſe the eſtabliſhing a precedent, which I deem inconſiſtent with the forms and ſpirit of our inſtitution. Every member of this Board has an equal right to be informed of the facts or grounds on which a reſolution is taken. No ſeparate excluſive truſt is veſted in any one of us, nor is any one of us at liberty to delegate the truſt veſted in him to any one of the other members: but if, as in the preſent inſtance, I am not to know what the intelligence is on which the Board reſolves to act, nor by what authority ſuch intelligence is ſupported, I certainly am no judge of the neceſſity or propriety of the meaſures ſaid to be founded upon ſuch intelligence, and am ſo far forth deprived of the exerciſe of the truſt repoſed in me by Parliament. I did not mean however that the Commander in Chief ſhould give up his authors, if it was neceſſary to conceal them.

For theſe reaſons, which I hope will not be thought to imply diſreſpect to any member of the Board, I adhere to the motion.

Mr. Wheler—I muſt join Mr. Francis in expreſſing my wiſhes, that Sir Eyre Coote would be pleaſed to communicate to the Board the intelligence he has received, of preparations making at the French iſlands, and upon which he founds his preſent motion to reinforce General Goddard; becauſe I think, that before the Board paſs their determination on a ſubject which may affect the ſafety of the Britiſh poſſeſſions in India, they ought to have every information before them it is capable of. Appendix No. 211.

I entirely agree with Sir Eyre Coote, that it is poſſible the French may be induced to make ſome attempts on our poſſeſſions in India, with their forces from the iſlands; and if they have a conſiderable body of men there more than ſufficient for the purpoſes of defence, I hardly ſee any other uſe to which it can be applied.

I agree likewiſe with Sir Eyre Coote, that Bombay is likely to be the object of their attack; becauſe if they acquire that place, they will at one and the ſame time have a port for their fleet, docks, and allies in their neighbourhood, whom we have every reaſon to ſuppoſe are, by repeated provocations, made our enemies. But I confeſs it does not occur to me, how the ſending a reinforcement to General Goddard at Surat, and weakening Bombay itſelf, by detaching the greateſt part of the garriſon, can contribute to the ſafety of that place.

To illuſtrate this further, I need only take a view of the ſituation of Bombay, that of General Goddard's army in reſpect to it, and the mode of attack to which Bombay is open. It is certain, that this attempt can only be made by ſea, and equally ſo, that the French ſhould for this purpoſe have either a ſuperior fleet to ours, or expect to find the garriſon of Bombay ſo weak, that it muſt fall before our fleet could relieve it from any other part of India. And if they do reſolve on this attack, it is hardly within the bounds of probability that we can receive any intelligence of it, or the Governor of Bombay, before the fleet and army are within ſight, conſequently the place will be inveſted by ſea and land before any ſuccours can be thrown into it. How the garriſon of the iſland of Bombay is to be relieved by troops under General Goddard after this event, I do not underſtand; more eſpecially as I am informed that it would be attended with great difficulty, and much time, to march the troops from Surat to the neareſt part of the continent oppoſite to the iſland of Bombay.

I conclude therefore, that the troops at Surat can be of no ſervice in caſe of an attack on Bombay; and that we ought therefore, ſo far from ſending troops to the former place, to bring down if poſſible the troops that are there into the neighbourhood of Bombay, for which I am told the iſland of Salſette is very convenient. Nor do I conceive that, even if it ſhould hereafter be expedient to act againſt the Marattas, the ſituation of our troops will be at all altered for the worſe, but rather amended.

On the ſecond queſtion, of ſending troops from the coaſt.

When I conſider the great extent of country they have to cover and defend; the ſmall number of Europeans they have for that purpoſe; the low ſtate of their finances; the neighbourhood of powerful enemies in Hyder Ally and the Nizam; and the probability of the French force being employed, either againſt the Circars, or to act in concert with the former, I am equally againſt weakening or detaching the force of that Preſidency.

On the third queſtion, of ſending drafts from hence, to complete the original number of General Goddard's detachment, I ſee many, and what appear to me, inſurmountable difficulties.

Such reinforcement muſt conſiſt of native troops, Sepoys, who if prevailed on to embark, the ſeaſon of the year renders the voyage next to impracticable.

By land the difficulties are equally great: the army under General Goddard was near a year in performing its march, though he met with no oppoſition; I do not conceive that a detachment of drafts will be more likely to march with ſafety acroſs India, than General Goddard's detachment, but rather that they will be expoſed to greater difficulties; in the mean time, the expence is certain and enormous, and the money muſt be drawn directly from, and ſpent out of, Bengal.

I am equally at a loſs to judge how the army, propoſed to be tranſported from the coaſt of Malabar, is afterwards wards to be maintained there, or by what means remittances can be effected to support such an army, and the expences of a war on the Malabar coast; but I am confident that these remittances would, if practicable, prove the ruin of the Company's valuable possessions on this side of India.

I am therefore equally against this, as the other propositions, and give it as my opinion, that the true and only line of policy to be observed in the present state of affairs in India, is, to concentre our troops on the Malabar coast to the neighbourhood of Bombay, which I deem the surest means of preserving that place against the attacks of the French, and that we should push whatever advantages we actually possess, to their proper objects of obtaining a lasting peace on that side of India.

General Coote—I entirely agree with Mr. Wheler, with regard to the situation our army should be placed in for the security of Bombay. When I proposed reinforcing General Goddard, for the defence of that valuable settlement against the French, I could not have the smallest idea, that our army was to remain where it now is; and the very mode of reinforcing it with part of the Bombay troops, is a sufficient proof that it was not my plan in any respect. The preservation of Bombay is the first object. The best method of defending it, I will venture to say (and appeal to the opinion of the first officers in Europe) is by an army in the field, so stationed, as to be able to give the garrison immediate succour, either by throwing fresh troops into it from time to time, or engaging the besieging enemy.

The situation that Bombay is now in, from the best intelligence I have received (and I may say I have intelligence that I can depend upon) is such as renders it, in my opinion, absolutely necessary that something should be done for the preservation of it; public as well as private reports from Europe mention a French armament being destined, and actually sailed for the East Indies.

By the last accounts from the Cape, a 74 gun ship put in there, with a greater number of sick on board than could be supposed to have arisen from her complement of men, and the report was, that they were all the sick of a squadron to which she belonged. A 74 gun ship sailed into the Mauritius when our cartel ship was lying off the harbour. This ship, before the man of war arrived, was under orders to go to the island of Bourbon, there to remain till they dismissed her; but immediately after the arrival of the 74 gun ship, a party of French was sent on board in order to assist in weighing her anchor more expeditiously, and she receiving orders from a 36 gun frigate (lying close by her, and which had been placed there as a guard upon her) to sail due north, till such time as the frigate fired a gun; she sailed 20 leagues in that direction, and, in the middle of the night, the ship fired a gun and then she shaped her course for Madras, so that it is very natural to suppose, at least the seafaring gentlemen whom I have conversed with on the subject, think that she was ordered to shape that course, to prevent her falling in with any French ships that might be bound for the island. When I was at the Cape they most undoubtedly had 5 or 6,000 regular troops at the islands; and I am well informed, that they have been since reinforced, but with what numbers I do not know; I am likewise informed, that the Duc de Lafun's legion is on board the fleet which I suppose is come to Mauritius; part of them perhaps may be left behind at Senegal, for it is a part of the same fleet, if not the whole, which took Senegal. As to the protection of Bombay it can receive none but what we give it. It cannot come from Sir Edward Hughes, nor the forces under his convoy; they were not arrived at the Cape when the last accounts came away, though expected there. The troops he brings out are raw troops, and will require some time for refreshment at the Cape; the least that can be allowed is six weeks; they must go the outward passage and make Ceylon, after which they cannot get to Bombay, supposing them determined to make the trial, till after Christmas; therefore that settlement, in case of an attack from the French, must either defend itself, or submit to the enemy. It is my business, as the Commander in Chief in India, to propose such measures for the defence of the Company's settlements, and to recommend the disposal of their strength in such manner as will most effectually contribute to that end. When I have done this I have done my duty. It is with the Boards, wherever I may have the honour of sitting, to determine the propriety of my propositions.

Mr. Francis—The question is much altered by the explanations with which the Commander in Chief has favoured the Board. If it be intended that Brigadier General Goddard shall move down with his force from Surat to Bombay, and take the most advantageous position which his judgment shall point out to him for covering Bombay against an invasion, I approve of the idea, and join in it; but I beg leave to say, that this intention does not appear upon the face of the motion. No orders are proposed to Brigadier General Goddard to move from his present station, nor any general instructions recommended to him, upon the supposition that the French may appear upon that coast. From the terms of the motion, I should conclude that the reinforcement was to proceed from Bombay to Surat, and there to join General Goddard; understanding the motion in that sense, I must confess, I thought it liable to the same objections, which have been stated by Mr. Wheler; if it is not so, there can be no difference of opinion on this part of the proposition. The Commander in Chief is undoubtedly the best judge, whether the force which he means to draw out of Bombay will be more usefully employed for the purpose of defending that place, by joining Brigadier General Goddard's army in the field, that is in a station calculated to cover Bombay, or by being kept in the body of the place. On this point I submit to the Commander in Chief's authority. I agree that the Madras troops now at Mahé shall proceed to Bombay, or to the neighbourhood of that place, and there join General Goddard, but not to Surat. With respect to any further detachment from the forces of Madras, I must declare that my opinion entirely concurs with that of Mr. Wheler, and that if I recede from it, it is solely from the confidence I place in the superior judgment of the Commander in Chief, who assures us that the forces of Madras and of this establishment, are fully sufficient to protect our possessions on this side of India, after making the detachmen in question to the other coast. With respect to our reinforcing Brigadier General Goddard's army by drafts from hence, I am sorry that such a measure should be found necessary, because I deem it a very great addition to the weight and difficulty of maintaining a war on the Malabar coast. I should acquiesce however if the mode of conveying the drafts from this to the other side of India were stated and ascertained: I foresee great difficulty in the attempt; and no probability that our Sepoys, supposing them arrived at their destined station, will continue to serve for any length of time at so great a distance from home. The desertions I fear will at least keep pace with the supplies, and the operation will be endless.

Agreed to the motion of the Commander in Chief, for reinforcing the army under General Goddard.

Governor General—The first duty of this Board upon the subject now before us, and the first express object of the Commander in Chief in his minute, is to provide for the defence of Bombay in the event of an invasion from the French; so far the opinions of the Board seem to be united, and perhaps we shall agree in what I now recommend to that effect, viz. That in our advices to Brigadier General Goddard, we inform him of the substance of the present resolutions: that our designs in endeavouring to furnish him with this addition of strength, is to enable him to give such effectual assistance and support to the Government of Bombay in the case of a French invasion, as may defeat it: that therefore he must regard this as his first object, until there ſhall be no longer any actual ground of apprehenſion from the French; and make ſuch a diſpoſition of the detachment under his command, as to inſure his co-operation with the garriſon of Bombay; at the ſame time that he is not to withdraw his attention from the other points which we have given him in charge. This I propoſe for that part of our inſtructions to him, which relates to the ſubject immediately before the Board. For the other ſubjects contained in his letters, theſe conſiſt chiefly in matters of information, which require no reply, but in his letter of the 12th June, there are three points propoſed by him for his negociations with the Adminiſtration at Poonah, which require ſome order of the Board upon them. From the advantage which he conceives we have derived from the eſcape of Ragonaut Row, and from our having obtained the poſſeſſion of his perſon from the weak and diſtracted ſtate of the preſent rulers and partizans of the Government at Poonah, and from the encroachments which Hyder Ally has lately made upon their borders, General Goddard ſeems to be of opinion that the Miniſters are neither in a ſtate to ſupport a new war againſt us, nor of courſe to refuſe their aſſent to any reaſonable demands which may be made on them as the conditions of peace. The points which he propoſes to be demanded from them are theſe, viz.

1ſt. The payment of the debt due from Ragonaut Row to the Company.

2d. The reimburſement of the expences incurred by the expedition under his command; and, 3dly. The ceſſion of Baſſein, Chowl, and the other places which were agreed to be ceded by the laſt treaty with Ragonaut Row.

I do not think it neceſſary, nor would I propoſe that he ſhould be expreſsly enjoined to make theſe or any other ſpecific demands, beſides thoſe which he has been poſitively commanded to make in his inſtructions of the 5th April; neither do I ſuppoſe that theſe inſtructions can be deemed to preclude him from gaining any other advantages which a fortunate concurrence of circumſtances might enable him to obtain: in anſwer therefore to this part of his letter, I would recommend that it be written to him, that we ſtill abide by the letter of our inſtructions of the 5th of April, which are to form the rule of his conduct in all his negociations with the Adminiſtration at Poonah; but that if it ſhould be in his power to obtain greater advantages for the Company, and he ſhall not have concluded a treaty with that Government at the time of his receiving the preſent diſpatches, we authorize him in ſuch caſe to uſe his endeavours for that purpoſe; and particularly approve of the three points recommended in his letter of the 12th June: that we think it moſt probable, either that the Maratta Government will have accepted of the firſt offers which were made to them long before the probable receipt of this letter; or that either depending on their own ſuperior ſtrength, or expecting the arrival of a French armament, they may have refuſed to relinquiſh any part of their pretenſions derived from the convention of Worgaum. In the firſt caſe, it is not likely they will yield to any new demands on our part, if they have thought themſelves in a capacity to enforce their own; but in the latter we conceive it not improbable, either that a diſappointment of their expectations, if theſe ſhould not be ſpeedily realized, or the effect of their mutual jealouſies, produced by ſuch expectations, may induce them not only to wiſh for peace, but even to ſolicit it, and to offer large conceſſions to obtain it: and it is on this ſuppoſition principally, that we approve of his looking to the further acquiſition of the terms which he has recommended to us.

Mr. Barwell—I have already given my opinion upon the propoſition of the Commander in Chief: I did not limit that opinion to any partial object, but had in view the general intereſts of the Preſidency of Bombay, and a final ſettlement with the Maratta Government. I approve entirely of the inſtructions now propoſed by the Governor General, which ſeems not to have omitted any point to which it is neceſſary General Goddard ſhould give his attention; none ſtrike me at preſent; ſhould any afterwards occur to my recollection, I leave to myſelf a latitude for extending theſe propoſed orders.

Mr. Francis—At a time when the French are expected to attack Bombay, every reaſon which heretofore induced the Board to wiſh for a ſpeedy accommodation with the Marattas, muſt acquire additional ſtrength.

I am ſorry that any circumſtance foreign from the immediate execution of his inſtructions, ſhould have engaged Brigadier General Goddard's attention, or diverted it from the object we have ſo urgently recommended to him.

His reſolving to protract the concluſion of any thing deciſive in the negociation with the Durbar until he can hear from us, is unauthorized, and may be attended with fatal conſequences. If a peace be not concluded before the expected arrival of the French on the Malabar coaſt, we may be morally certain, that we ſhall then have both the French and the Marattas to contend with. The entrance into India, which has been happily ſhut, will again be opened to our natural enemies. The Marattas will be ready to receive and aſſiſt them; and if once they get a footing upon the continent, their being driven out again will depend upon the event of a new conteſt, in which we are far from having a certain proſpect of ſucceſs. For theſe reaſons I would direct Brigadier General Goddard to adhere literally to his inſtructions, and cloſe with the Marattas as ſpeedily as poſſible. As to the views now held out to us by Ragoba, or any new advantages ſuppoſed to be attainable by our having him with us, I would poſitively order Brigadier General Goddard not to engage in them on any account. Ragoba is a deſperate ruined man, whoſe ſituation may make it indifferent to him what terms he conſents to, or what promiſes he makes; but he has no power, and can perform nothing. In the mean time the negociation with the Durbar, which it is ſo much our intereſt to conclude, will be protracted; the French may arrive from the coaſt; the Marattas of courſe will take advantage of that circumſtance, and either refuſe to treat with us at all, or inſiſt on conditions which they would not pretend at the preſent moment. With reſpect to Ragoba, I would adhere to the orders given to Brigadier General Goddard in our laſt letter of the 8th July; viz. "We entirely approve "of the offer which you have made Ragonaut Row, "and direct that you continue to afford him the pro- "tection of the camp, ſo long as he ſhall continue to "demand it; provided he ſhall not forfeit his right to "it by any act of infidelity, or attempt to defeat the "effect of your negociations, to which you will give "your entire attention, without regard to any other "conſideration."

"For the reſt we leave you to act under our inſtruc- "tions of the 5th of April, in which we ſee no cauſe to "make any alterations on account of this event."

Governor General—If I have not been ſufficiently underſtood, I ſhould have thought it unneceſſary to have added an article to General Goddard's preſent inſtructions, had he not himſelf ſuggeſted doubts where I think he ought to have entertained none. I have propoſed to refer him to his preſent inſtructions for the ſole rule of his conduct, and have only ſaid what I believe agrees with every member of the Board, that if he can obtain better terms in addition to thoſe we have already preſcribed, he may do it; but we do not enjoin it, nor is he to ſuffer the great object of the negociation to be ſuſpended or impeded by the proſecution of any other views. Much might be ſaid in anſwer to the other parts of Mr. Francis's minute. I wiſh to avoid a debate: I ſhall therefore only briefly obſerve, that it is not with the Maratta State that Brigadier General Goddard has to treat, but with the partizans of a Government diſtracted and totally deprived of its conſtitutional form and powers; and that the event ſuppoſed of the arrival of a French armament, while our negociations with them were in ſuſpenſe, would be more likely to excite a decided diviſion among them, and to throw the principal ſtrength of the Maratta nation into our own hands, than to unite it againſt us; when it is remembered, that the firſt invitation of the French proceeded from the firſt member of the civil Government at Poonah; and muſt, if ever it takes place, give him an aſcendency over the men who now rule by the ſword.

Mr. Wheler—I agree to the Governor General's propoſition, as it now ſtands explained.

Sir Eyre Coote—I agree to the Governor General's propoſition.

Mr. Francis—Undoubtedly General Goddard will not refuſe any extraordinary advantages that may be offered to him; the danger is, that while he is purſuing them he may miſs the opportunity of concluding upon the terms already preſcribed to him.

Agreed to the Governor General's propoſitions; and reſolved, that the following letters be written to Fort St. George, to Bombay, and to General Goddard:

Gentlemen,

From the accounts which have been lately received of the ſtrength of the French at the iſlands, we have reaſon to apprehend that an invaſion is intended againſt the Preſidency of Bombay: we therefore deem it of the utmoſt importance to provide for the ſafety of that ſettlement, by reinforcing the army commanded by General Goddard with a reſpectable body of troops, and to direct him to grant the moſt effectual ſupport and protection in his power to the Government of Bombay for defeating any hoſtile attempts which may be made againſt them.

The Commander in Chief has informed us that one battalion of Europeans, three battalions of Sepoys, and 50 artillery may be ſpared from your eſtabliſhment, now the works of Pondicherry are demoliſhed, without any riſk or inconvenience to the ſervice; and that the reſidue of the forces under your Preſidency will be ſufficient for the protection of your poſſeſſions; beſides which, as you may daily expect a conſiderable addition of ſtrength from Europe, we earneſtly recommend it to you, to iſſue immediate orders to the officer in command of the forces at Mahé to detach from thence as great a number of men as he can ſpare at this time to join General Goddard without delay, and the remainder of his forces when Mahé ſhall be diſmantled. We alſo requeſt that you would be pleaſed to complete the reinforcement recommended by the Commander in Chief to be ſent to General Goddard as expeditiouſly as poſſible from the moſt convenient ſtations of your army; allowing him to fix the rendezvous.

We are, &c.

Gentlemen,

From the accounts which have been lately received of the ſtrength of the French at the iſlands, we have great reaſon to apprehend that an invaſion is intended againſt your Preſidency; we deem it therefore of the utmoſt importance to provide for its ſafety, by reinforcing the army commanded by General Goddard with a reſpectable addition of troops: we ſhall direct him to be prepared for the expected event, and to make it his firſt object to afford you the moſt effectual ſupport and protection in his power, for defeating any hoſtile attempts which may be made againſt you.

The Commander in Chief has informed us, that one battalion of Europeans, three battalions of Sepoys, and 50 artillery, may be ſpared from the Fort St. George eſtabliſhment; and that you can likewiſe contribute 300 Europeans, two battalions of Sepoys, and 100 artillery for this ſervice, without any inconvenience or diſtreſs to the garriſons where your army is now ſtationed. We have written to the Preſident and Select Committee at Fort St. George on the ſubject of their ſupply; and earneſtly recommend it to you to iſſue immediate orders for your quota of the reinforcement to be aſſembled, and to join General Goddard at ſuch place of rendezvous as he may appoint, without delay.

We are, &c.

To Brigadier General Goddard.

Sir,

We have to acknowledge the receipt of your letters of the 12th and 18th from your camp near Surat.

We receive great ſatisfaction from the circumſtantial intelligence which they contain reſpecting the ſtate diſſentions, and probable views of the different parties exiſting in the Maratta Government. We do not diſapprove of your endeavouring to obtain the additional conceſſions propoſed in your letter of the 12th June; nor did our inſtructions of the 5th April (though reſtricted to certain points) preclude you from availing yourſelf of any occaſion which might be preſented to you, to exact other conditions by which the intereſt or influence of the Company might be certainly promoted, provided they did not impede or retard the accompliſhment of your original commiſſion. In this ſenſe, and with theſe proviſions, we repeat that we ſhall approve of the addition of the demands recommended in your letter of the 12th June, to thoſe which we have already preſcribed in our original inſtructions, if you ſhall not have concluded a treaty with the Maratta Government before the receipt of this letter.

From advices which have been lately received of the ſtate of the French forces at Mauritius, and from other concurring cauſes, we have reaſon to apprehend that an attack has been meditated againſt the ſettlement of Bombay: we have therefore thought it expedient to apply to the Preſidency of Fort St. George and Bombay, to reinforce the army under your command as ſoon as poſſible by detachments from their eſtabliſhments, conſiſting of the following corps and numbers:

From Bombay,
300 European infantry,
2 Battalions Sepoys,
100 Artillery.

From Fort St. George,
1 Battalion of European infantry,
3 Battalions Sepoys,
50 Artillery.

We have deſired the Select Committee at Fort St. George to iſſue immediate orders for the march of as great a part of their quota from Mahé as can be immediately ſpared, and for the others to join you when the works are demoliſhed: the remainder of the number will be detached from the moſt convenient ſtations of their army.

We mean further to recruit your corps with ſuch a number of Sepoys drafted from Bengal, as may be requiſite to augment it to its original complement.

Our deſign in endeavouring to ſupply you with this additional reinforcement of troops is to enable you to give ſuch effectual aſſiſtance and ſupport to the Government of Bombay in the caſe of a French invaſion as may defeat it; you muſt therefore regard this as your firſt object until there ſhall be no longer any actual ground of apprehenſion from the French; and make ſuch a diſpoſition of the detachment under your command, as will inſure your co-operation with the garriſon of Bombay; at the ſame time you are not to withdraw your attention from the other points which we have given you in charge.

We have acquainted the Preſident and Select Committee at Fort St. George, and at Bombay, that you will fix the places of rendezvous for the junction of theſe troops with your army; we therefore deſire, that you will make him acquainted as early as poſſible with the ſituation which you ſhall judge the moſt convenient for that purpoſe.

We are, &c.

Approved. (Signed) W. H.

Mr. Francis—I cannot approve of the firſt part of this this letter, for the reaſons aſſigned by me in the courſe of this debate: with reſpect to the ſecond part, I ſtill think that ſuppoſing the apprehenſion of Bombay's being attacked to be founded on fact, Brigadier General Goddard ought to be ordered to remove from Surat towards Bombay.

The Commander in Chief having delivered into the public department a liſt of officers recommended by him to fill the vacancies in General Goddard's detachment, the following minutes paſſed in conſequence.

Mr. Francis—I beg leave to aſk the Commander in Chief, in what manner, and by what route the drafts are to proceed to join General Goddard?

Sir Eyre Coote—By land.

Mr. Barwell—The queſtion aſked by Mr. Francis ſpeaks that ſolicitude which I feel as ſtrongly as he does for the ſucceſs of this meaſure, ſo important to the recruiting General Goddard's detachment; but this ſolicitude inſtead of having influenced me to propoſe the queſtion urged by Mr. Francis to the Commander in Chief, has impoſed ſilence upon me. I truſt in the military knowledge of the Commander in Chief, and in the political conduct of the Governor General, to controul and influence the Indian Princes to convey the propoſed recruits to Brigadier General Goddard's camp; and I make no doubt, that when the meaſure is ripe for execution, and ſuch precautions taken as to enſure a probability of ſucceſs, timely information will be given to the Government. If it ſhould become a queſtion, whether in policy or prudence the plan of ſupplying thoſe recruits is proper, I think this a very improper time to urge the queſtion propoſed by Mr. Francis. It allows the operation of various acts, which the want of unanimity in our councils may encourage the ill-diſpoſed to oppoſe againſt the ſucceſs of the beſt concerted military and political plan; I could therefore wiſh the queſtion might reſt upon the preſent anſwer given by the Commander in Chief, and wait the fullneſs of time for a more particular reply. I am equally concerned with Mr. Francis, and equally anxious for the proſperity of the Britiſh dominions, and I can ſolemnly affirm myſelf totally unacquainted with the minute parts of the plan of furniſhing theſe recruits; indeed I do not think they can have been perfectly digeſted, and where they are liable to variation from the political views of the different States through which the recruits may paſs, I ſee not the leaſt advantage at this juncture that can ariſe from an expoſition of the ſteps that ſhall be taken to enſure the junction of theſe troops with General Goddard's detachment, but much miſchief: I therefore wiſh it may be left to the Governor General and Commander in Chief to communicate particulars as ſoon as ſuch communication ſhall not ſubject the meaſure to be defeated.

Mr. Francis—Mr. Barwell is at liberty judge for himſelf. In the execution of the public duties of my ſtation I ſhall be guided by my own judgment. In reply to the obſervations contained in the preceding minute, all that I ſhall ſay is, that there is no Select Committee in this Board, nor any ſeparate truſt veſted in any of its members excluſive of the reſt. I do not mean to aſk any further queſtions on the ſubject: it is ſufficient for me to know, that the party of recruits is to proceed by land. As to the poſſibility of keeping the meaſure a ſecret, I deny it: a detachment of troops cannot move from any part of theſe provinces, without its being publicly known which way they are going. I ſhall deliver in writing my opinion of the meaſure as I now underſtand it, and will not take up the time of the Board any longer at preſent.

Mr. Barwell—I would not be miſtaken in what I have ſaid on Mr. Francis's queſtion. I never meant to aſſert that the meaſure was to be a ſecret, but that it was proper and neceſſary the means of executing it ſhould remain ſo, and remain with thoſe executive members of Government, to whoſe particular province the anſwering a vote of the Board depends. I do not ſuppoſe this Council competent to direct the Commander in Chief the particular manner an army is to be led into the field. They are reſponſible only for their reſolution, which orders that army on ſervice; he for the proper meaſures of executing that ſervice. The reſolution for the drafts is paſſed; it remains now to be executed in the moſt expeditious and beſt manner. Appendix. No. 212.

Governor General—I muſt decline taking any part in the preſent debate, meaning to offer my ſentiments upon the expediency of the meaſure to which it alludes, whenever it ſhall be brought formally before the Board, which I hope will not be till the inſtant of its execution.

APPENDIX, No. 212.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 13th September 1779.

PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident;
Edward Wheler, Eſquire,
and
Lieutenant General Sir Eyre Coote, K. B.
Mr. Barwell and Mr. Francis indiſpoſed.

The Governor General propoſes the following draft of a letter to be written to Brigadier General Goddard, being an anſwer to the firſt part of his letter, dated the 24th June, and recorded in public department conſultation, 2d inſtant; the other part thereof, reſpecting remittances, having been already replied to.

Sir,

Although the inſtructions which we have already given you, are ſuch as would enable you to decide the event of peace or war, on the anſwer which you might receive from the Miniſters at Poonah to the advances which we have made to them for the renewal or confirmation of the treaty of Poonah; yet as we were willing to allow them as much time for their deliberations as could be ſpared from the ſeaſon of action, in caſe that contrary to our expectation they ſhould reject our offers of peace, and to leave you at full leiſure as circumſtances would admit for obtaining the object of our inſtructions by negociation; we did not reſtrict you to any ſpecific period of time for demanding their anſwer or making your declaration thereon.

We ought to conclude that by this time, or at leaſt by the time of the receipt of this letter, the Maratta Miniſtry will have accepted or rejected our propoſals, and conſequently a ſtate of declared peace or hoſtility will have enſued. But as there is a poſſibility that they may have found means to protract the negociations, and you may ſtill remain in a ſtate of ſuſpenſe, we direct you in this caſe to repeat our offers to the Peiſhwa and Miniſters, and to demand their final determination upon them in the ſpace of twenty-four hours from their being preſented; declaring at the ſame time, that you ſhall conſider their refuſal or the delay of their anſwer beyond the time, as a declaration of war, and act accordingly.

You will ſend this requiſition to Poonah by ſome perſon of approved fidelity and firmneſs, that the orders which you may give in conſequence of the above may be punctually executed.

For the reſt, we refer you to our former orders.

Fort William, the 13th September 1779. We are, &c.

Sir Eyre Coote—I appprove of the draft.
Mr. Wheler—I object to it.

Agreed

Appendix. No. 213.

Agreed to the above draft of a letter to Brigadier General Goddard; and ordered that it be tranſcribed fair, and ſent to him immediately.

Reſolved, That the following letter be alſo written to Bombay:

Gentlemen,

We have kept you fully adviſed of the inſtructions under which Brigadier General Goddard has been ordered to act in his negociations with the Poonah Government for a renewal or confirmation of the treaty of Poonah: and although we have every reaſon to ſuppoſe from the powers with which he is inveſted, that the reſult will have been a formal determination on war or peace with that Government before the arrival of any directions which we can now ſend him; yet it is poſſible they may have found means to protract the negociation; and as in that caſe we think they will have had full time allowed them for deliberation, if they were at all inclined to eſtabliſh an amicable connection with us, we have this day ſent injunctions to General Goddard to repeat our offers to the Peiſhwa and his Miniſters, and to demand their definitive anſwer within the ſpace of 24 hours; declaring their refuſal or delay beyond that time, to be equivalent to a declaration of war, and that he ſhall act accordingly.

If he ſhall be reduced to this extremity, we recommend it to you to grant him every aid in your power, and to endeavour by every means that may be neceſſary to render his ſucceſs ſpeedy and effectual.

Fort William, We are, &c.

APPENDIX, Nos. 213 and 214.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 16th September 1779.

PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident;

Edward Wheler, Eſquire,
and
Lieutenant General Sir Eyre Coote, K. B.
Mr. Barwell and Mr. Francis indiſpoſed.

READ the following letter from Brigadier General Goddard.

Gentlemen,

I have not done myſelf the honour of addreſſing you ſince the 24th ultimo, in hopes of receiving the expected anſwers from the Poonah Durbar, which are at length arrived, and I have enclоſed copies of them to the Honourable the Governor General.

Although they breathe throughout manifeſt inclinations for peace, I think it neceſſary to prepare you for a different event, and to ſtate certain caſes that may happen; ſoliciting your particular inſtructions how I am to act under them.

When the confidential perſon ſaid to be diſpatched from the Durbar arrives, which I do not ſuppoſe will be before the end of this month, I ſhall make known to him the terms you have directed me to propoſe, as preliminary articles; to which if he conſents, on the part of his Government, every remaining point will be eaſily accommodated; however from that known practice of the Maraттas, and the delay they introduce in all public tranſactions, I have reaſon to apprehend this man will have no full powers from his court, and that of courſe he muſt refer me for an anſwer to my propoſals to the Peiſhwa and Miniſter; in which caſe it will be the latter end of Auguſt or beginning of September before I can know their final ſentiments, ſhould they then pleaſe to communicate them; though it appears to me moſt probable they will wiſh to protract the negociation by ſome evaſive reply, and attempt to amuſe us with the proſpect of a peace, till the ſeaſon is too far advanced to effect any thing material in the field.

To obviate the inconveniency this would cauſe, I have in my preſent letter to the Peiſhwa and Miniſter, propoſed to them, that ſhould the conditions I have to offer on the part of my Government be conſented to by them, they will ſignify the ſame to me, and ſettle the mode of an immediate interview betwixt the Miniſter and myſelf, as the only means by which an end can be ſpeedily and ſucceſsfully put to the preſent buſineſs. If they heartily concur in the wiſhes for a peace, it will be ſhewn by their compliance with this propoſal; and ſhould they decline it, even admitting they do not object to the terms of the treaty itſelf, it would be a mark of diſingenuity that might give the moſt ample room to ſuſpect the ſincerity of their intentions.

Although I have already requeſted your orders how I am to act, in caſe the Miniſters ſhould diſcover an inclination to amuſe with ſtudied and unneceſſary pretexts for delay, let me again entreat you will be pleaſed to give me your particular inſtructions on this head, and explain how far it is your intention, upon a conviction of their duplicity and deceit, I ſhould make known to them your juſt reſentment of their behaviour, the hoſtile part I am authorized to take, and the particular meaſures I am further to purſue, in conſequence of the political advantages that may ſuggeſt themſelves from the ſituation of affairs already ſubmitted to your conſideration.

As it may appear ſtrange, when the Peiſhwa and Miniſter have expreſſed themſelves in terms of the higheſt friendſhip to the Engliſh, and have conſented to my deſire of ſending a confidential perſon to receive my propoſals, that I ſhould ſtill entertain the idea of their views being of a hoſtile nature towards us, and be ſo particular in obtaining your conditional inſtructions for my guidance, I think it neceſſary to explain the reaſons why my ſuſpicions prevail of their inſincerity, which excluſive of the argument furniſhed by the character univerſally given the Maraттas of a cunning and treacherous nation, are principally occaſioned at this time by the intelligence I have received from moſt credible authority at Poonah, that the perſon ſent by the Miniſter is intended more as a ſpy to communicate to his maſter what is tranſacting, than as a Vackeel to negociate; that Nanna is making every poſſible preparation for war, and is ſoliciting for that end the ſeveral Powers in his neighbourhood to join againſt the Engliſh. A copy of a letter recently written from Nizam Ally to him, in reply to an application of the above nature, has been ſent me from Poonah, which I have tranſmitted to the Honourable the Governor General. I alſo underſtand that three French letters have been received through their agent Neamut ulla Cawn at Poonah, but their contents I cannot learn. All theſe circumſtances, added to the reluctances with which the Miniſter will be brought to relinquiſh the advantages claimed by the late treaty, make me wiſh to be prepared for the reverſe of what I hope may happen taking place.

With reſpect to what the Peiſhwa and Miniſter have mentioned relative to Ragonaut Rovz, I before addreſſed them particularly on the ſubject of his reception, copy of which letter I have tranſmitted for your peruſal: I have reaſon to think they will be far from reſenting my treatment of that Chief, from the purport of a letter this inſtant received from the Peiſhwa; copy of which I have forwarded to the Honourable the Governor General; in which, after mentioning the ill effects Ragoba's arrival had occaſioned in the Sircar, and bordering upon Guzerat, he takes notice of the means I had uſed to induce his collectors to continue in them without apprehenſion of being moleſted, and recommends them to my further care and protection.

When I received your orders of the 5th of April to open a negociation with the Poonah Durbar, I applied to the Government of Bombay for every information they could

could give me regarding the ſtate in which the treaty of Poorunder then ſtood, and how far the ſeveral articles of it had been complied with by the Miniſters. To this requiſition I have ſince received a full and ſatisfactory reply; and among other papers which they encloſed for my peruſal, was a copy of a letter from the Select Committee of the Honourable the Court of Directors, dated Auguſt the 31ſt, 1778, and received ſince the concluſion o fthe laſt fatal expedition.

The purport of this letter being known to you, I ſhall only beg leave to remark, that as it contains ſentiments and even directions the moſt friendly and favourable for the intereſts of Ragonaut Row, the part I have taken in affording him protection, excluſive of the immediate political advantages attending it, will, I flatter myſelf, prove in every reſpect acceptable to you, and conſiſtent with the views of the Honourable Company.

I am alſo the more anxious to receive your orders reſpecting the terms to be ſtipulated in his favour at the preſent negociation, which I make no doubt you would wiſh ſhould be as honourable and as advantageous as poſſible.

I have the honour to be, &c.

Camp near Surat, the 15th July 1779. (Signed) Tho^s Goddard.

Read the ſeveral papers mentioned in the above letter as being ſent to the Governor General, which are entered in the Perſian correſpondence.

Read a letter from the Peiſhwa, and Nana Furneſſe the Miniſter at Poonah, to the Governor General, which is alſo entered in the Perſian correſpondence under date.

From Nanna Purnaveeſe; received 14th September 1779.

I have already addreſſed you on the ſubject of the bad conduct of the Governor of Bombay in non-execution of the treaty which Colonel John Carnac, &c. Engliſh Chiefs, of their free will and accord, inſtigated by the ſentiments of friendſhip, executed under the ſeal of the Company, and delivered to the Sircar through the channel of Toocojee Row Holcar, and Madajee Row Scindeah; and alſo ſtated to you the affair of the hoſtile conduct of the Chief of Bauncote, who in violation of a treaty concluded under the Government of the deceaſed Seremunt Nanna Saib and Row Pundit Purdhaun, prohibited the paſſage of the grabs of the Sirkar; and having ſeized two of them laden with grain, ſunk them at ſea, and ſent a grab of war with military ſtores againſt the fort of Soorundurk, belonging to the Sirkar; which having cannonaded and made war on the Sirkar, he applied by letter to the Governor of Bombay. I further related in this letter the particulars of the evil deſigns of Seremunt Dada Saib, and of his having contrived by artifice to eſcape from Hurry Babajee, a Chief who was ſent to guard him; and of his having taken the route of Surat and Broach, with other particulars; which I doubt not you have received and underſtand. But I ſhall now repeat, for the greater ſecurity, that Seremunt Dada Saib Ragonaut Row, after the concluſion of peace between John Carnac, &c. Engliſh Chiefs on the one part, and the Chiefs of the Sirkar on the other, and the execution of a treaty under the ſeal of the Company, came here, and agreeable to engagement ſet off for the Talook of Janſey; on the way upon the banks of the Nerbudda, diſregarding every obligation laid on him by the treaty, he by artifice got Hurry Babajee, who was ſent with a party to eſcort him, into his power, and changing his route, ſet out for Surat: this you have doubtleſs heard.

You are inveſted by the illuſtrious King of England, and the Engliſh Company, with the ſupreme authority. The Governor of Bombay ſtill continues to purſue the ſame line of improper conduct as formerly, and acts in direct oppoſition to the engagements concluded by John Carnac, &c. Engliſh Chiefs; notwithſtanding that all your letters, from the concluſion of peace to the preſent time declare, that no deviation ſhall take place in the common friendſhip; and that the good faith of the Engliſh, which is univerſally acknowledged, ſhall never receive a blemiſh. To what cauſe then am I to attribute the violations of treaty and bad conduct of the Governor of Bombay?

Appendix. No. 213.

I have lately received a letter from Colonel Goddard to this effect: that he has received letters from the Nabob Amaud-ul-Dowlah; that for the adjuſtment of the diſputes which have ariſen between the Chiefs of Bombay and the Maratta Chiefs, to the deſtruction of that friendſhip and harmony which had ſo long ſubſiſted between the two States, to remove all cauſes of enmity, and to re-eſtabliſh friendſhip on a ſolid baſis, full powers had been given to him, that a truſty agent on the part of the Sirkar ſhould be ſent, as he has many particulars to communicate. This letter was accompanied by a copy of commiſſion given to Colonel Goddard under the Seal of the Company and ſignatures of the Supreme Council of Calcutta, for my inſpection.

Be pleaſed, Sir, to conſider maturely and with equity, the cauſes of enmity between the Governor of Bombay and the Chiefs of this Government; they are two-fold. In the firſt place, Col. John Upton, your Ambaſſador, when peace was concluded, and the treaty executed, although I repeatedly pointed out to him the neceſſity that ſome perſon of credit on the part of the Governor of Bombay ſhould join in it, declared to me, that Amaud ul-Dowlah Bahadre was inveſted with the ſupreme power by the King of England and the Company, and that his orders were binding on the Chiefs of all the Engliſh ſettlements. Secondly, Colonel John Carnac Bahadre, and other Engliſh Chiefs, with the advice and concurrence of the Governor of Bombay, in concert with Seremunt Dada Saib, tranſported themſelves into the neighbourhood of Poonah, and were in the end obliged to return to Bombay, overwhelmed with ſhame for their fruitleſs attempt.

Theſe are the two points which have excited the enmity of the Governor of Bombay. No other cauſe has been given from this quarter; and no breach of friendſhip has taken place on our part.

The Government of Bombay's preſent plan is, by a miſrepreſentation of facts, to excite doubts in your breaſt, although there is nothing in this world which I value equally with friendſhip and ſincerity of heart. I therefore requeſt that you will not give credit to the repreſentations which he may make to you with a deſign to create a breach in our friendſhip. My eyes are turned to the candour and good faith of the Engliſh nation; it is therefore incumbent on you to iſſue poſitive orders to the Governor of Bombay, that conformably to treaty he deſiſt from affording the Engliſh protection to Seremunt Dada Saib, that he refuſe him all kind of ſupport, and, agreeable to John Carnac's treaty, relinquiſh all the places belonging to the Sirkar, create no diſturbances in the Government territories, and make it a point with the chief of Bauncote, whoſe character is univerſally infamous, that he, according to eſtabliſhed cuſtom, leave the paſſage free to the veſſels of the Sirkar.

Theſe meaſures will promote the eaſe and happineſs of the people, and augment the friendſhip between the two States.

As you are known to be poſſeſſed of penetration, juſtice, and honour, it was unneceſſary to point out theſe ſteps. I have written the above particulars merely for your information. Let your meaſures be guided by equity, and the approved maxims of Government. Fortune and empire are the gifts of God.

From the Peiſhwa; received the 14th September 1779.

Your agreeable letter, expreſſive of ſincere friendſhip, and intimating that you have heard by various channels, and have alſo received ſome little and imperfect intelligence relative thereto from the gentlemen of Bombay; that they have, without the knowledge or authority of the Company, engaged in meaſures deſtructive of the friendſhip and harmony which ſubſiſted between the two States, and concluded a treaty highly diſadvantageous; but that you cannot form a judgment reſpecting the rectitude of the conduct of the Bombay Chiefs, until you obtain more complete and authentic intelligence, that there is no alteration in your friendſhip, and that you have now inveſted Colonel Goddard with full powers to re-eſtabliſh the friendſhip and connection between our States, with other particulars which I underſtand arrived, and from a peruſal of it I received the greateſt pleaſure.

I have very frequently given you information of the bad conduct of the Governor of Bombay, and of his diſregard to the ſtipulations of the treaty. I have on every occaſion ſteadily preſerved my friendſhip and engagements with the Engliſh nation, and placed implicit confidence in the ſeal of the Company; and ſince the Chiefs of Bombay have, in diſobedience of orders, engaged in meaſures without your knowledge in open violation of the duties of friendſhip, why are they not brought to puniſhment by the European laws?

When John Carnac and others of the Engliſh Chiefs, in concert with Dada Sahib, lately come to this quarter, I received a letter from the Governor of Bombay, informing me that that meaſure was determined on with the concurrence of the Governor General, and all the members of the Supreme Council of Calcutta. When John Carnac made propoſals for peace through the channel of Tocojee Row Holcar and Madajee Row Sindeeah, and delivered to the Circar a treaty under the ſeal of the Company, a letter was received from him, declaring, that he poſſeſſed full powers from the Company's Chiefs over all matters, and, notwithſtanding their hoſtile acts, I, actuated only by ſentiments of friendſhip, gave them an eſcort, who conducted them in ſafety to Bombay; yet to this day the Chiefs of Bombay have not performed any of the conditions of the treaty, or paid any attention to their engagements. I place the utmoſt confidence on the ſeal of the Company, and the acts of the Company's Chiefs, and entertain no ſentiments but thoſe of friendſhip and ſincerity, which are qualities ſuitable to illuſtrious perſonages.

You alſo wrote that I ſhould give no place or encouragement in my territories to the French nation; on the peruſal of which I was filled with aſtoniſhment. If you are poſſeſſed of friendſhip and candour towards me, what ſhould induce me to cultivate the friendſhip of the French? When a perſon on their part came formerly here, induced by friendſhip for you, I complied with your deſire, and ſent him away. If this matter has been miſrepreſented to you by perſons who are the diſturbers of the common friendſhip, and by their falſe colouring has created ſuſpicions in your breaſt, there is no remedy; there is no alteration in my friendſhip, and your letters are filled with aſſurances to the ſame effect. Write therefore in poſitive terms to the Chiefs of Bombay, that they execute the terms of the treaty without the leaſt failure; that they give no protection to the enemies of the Sirkar, nor excite any diſturbances. Dada Sahib, who has again broken his engagements and gone towards Surat and Broach, you formerly directed them to ſhew no countenance to. I now requeſt that the moſt poſitive orders may be ſent on this ſubject to all the Engliſh Company's Chiefs, forbidding them ever to protect him with their influence.

I have received a very friendly and candid letter from Colonel Goddard, encloſing a copy of the commiſſion which he has received from you and the Supreme Council of Calcutta, and deſiring that I will ſend a truſty perſon to confer with him; and I have accordingly diſpatched a Vackeel to him.

Be pleaſed to give expreſs directions to Colonel Goddard to carry the treaty into execution, and to give orders for that purpoſe to the Chiefs of Bombay, and they muſt not give an aſylum to Dada Sahib, it being prohibited in the treaty, nor pay attention to his repreſentations. I am at all times deſirous of friendſhip.

From Nanna Purnaveeſe; received 14th September 1779.

Of the ſame tenor.

Encloſures in a Letter from General Goddard; dated the 15th July, received the 14th September 1779.

No. 1. Copy of a Letter from the Peiſhwa Pundit Purdhaun Sewac Madho Row Narrain, to Colonel Goddard.

Your agreeable letter, full of friendſhip and candour, and informing me of your having received letters from the Nabob Amaud-ul-Dowlah, Governor General, Mr. Haſtings, and all the members of the Supreme Council of Calcutta, to this effect, that between the Maratta Chiefs and the Chiefs of the Engliſh nation, who are famous throughout the univerſe for their fidelity and ſteady adherence to treaty, the bands of friendſhip have long ſubſiſted, and that they have now inveſted you with full powers for the purpoſe of confirming and giving additional ſtrength to the ties of mutual friendſhip and connection; and you therefore requeſt that I will ſend a truſty perſon on my part. This letter, together with copy of your commiſſion, I have received, and the peruſal of it affords me the higheſt pleaſure.

As I out of a regard to friendſhip, and from a reliance on the ſeal of the Engliſh Company, which the greateſt of the Chiefs of the Engliſh nation hold in the higheſt reſpect, have no other view than friendſhip and regard; you will therefore pay regard to the acts of the Company's Chiefs, and to the ſeal of the Engliſh Company which is affixed to the treaty; and thoſe individuals, who without the knowledge of the Company have diſobeyed the orders under which they acted, and engaged in improper meaſures, it is expedient to puniſh according to the European laws.

Look with the eyes of friendſhip and equity into the matter, and ſee who has been guilty of the violations of treaty, and from what motives the enemies of the Sircar were protected under the Engliſh power, quarrels raiſed, and inſults offered.

I have lately received letters from Mr. Haſtings, expreſſed in the terms of the warmeſt friendſhip, informing me of the powers with which you have been inveſted; and agreeable to your deſire, I am about to diſpatch a perſon of truſt to you; he will ſoon arrive: whatever you have to ſay, ſay it to him, and write in ſuch terms to the Chiefs at Bombay, that they faithfully perform the terms of the treaty, and not protect by the Engliſh power any inſurgents of this Government, or create any diſturbances.

I formerly wrote you that Dada Sahib Ragonaut Row was proceeding to that quarter, and that you ſhould not afford him the Engliſh protection; and I now repeat my deſire, that in regard to our friendſhip and intimate union, you will not, as ſpecified in the treaty, give an aſylum to Daba Sahib, or afford him any ſupport. Send a pair of Coſſids before to ſecure the road, and conduct my Vackeel to you. I am well acquainted with your wiſdom and penetration.

For the ſecurity and protection of my territories which lay in your neighbourhood, that the Ryots may not be diſtreſſed or alarmed on account of Ragonaut Row, and that weak and bad men may be prevented from joining with him, I have ſent an army towards Goondrebarry. I write this for your information.

No. 2. Copy of a Letter from Balajee Pundit, commonly called Nanna Purnaveeſe, to Colonel Goddard.

Your agreeable letter, expreſſive of ſincere regard, and intimating your having received letters from the Nabob Amaud-ul-Dowlah, Governor General, Mr. Haſtings, and all the members of the Supreme Council of Calcutta, to this effect, &c. (the ſame as the foregoing.)

No. 3. Copy of a Letter from the Nabob Nizam-ul-Dowlah to Nanna Purnaveeſe, in reply.

I have received your Arzie, and underſtand its contents, to wit, that the evil-minded Engliſh, having given their protection to Seremunt Dada Sahib, and afforded an aſylum to the turbulent Gauzi ul dien Khan, and collected magazines of military ſtores, have entered the path of hoſtility with the moſt malignant deſigns; and from the invitation which you have given to me, I underſtand it to be your deſire that a formidable army of mine, under the command of one of my moſt renowned brothers, ſhould be ſent to act in concert with your forces and thoſe of Madho Row Sewae, againſt that puſillanimous race, and to root them out. As it is the ſeaſon of the rains, my forces, agreeable to eſtabliſhed cuſtom, have received their diſmiſſion, and are gone to their reſpective homes, and cannot be now recalled; particularly at this period, when from the exceſſive heavy rains, and the badneſs of the roads in conſequence, and the inundations of the rivers, the journey could not without difficulty be performed by Coſſids the moſt acquainted with it; I have therefore determined, that as ſoon as the rains are at an end, I will ſend a diſtinguiſhed Chief with a reſolute army, and good train of artillery, or if I find it poſſible, I will repair in perſon to you, and rouſe that bad race from their dream of ſecurity, and overthrow all their ambitious deſigns: you will therefore, depending on my friendſhip for Pundit Purdhaun, which is univerſally known, and regarding my intereſts as the ſame, begin your march with the forces and artillery of the Sircar, taking care to have very large cannon with you, in conjunction with Madho Row Sindeah and Subahdar Holcar, about the time when I ſhall ſet out, and contrive your marches ſo that we may meet in the Zillah of Kajeſtabunyaud, and then purſue ſuch meaſures as we ſhall deem adviſable. It is ſaid by Molana Nizamee, that when two hearts are united, they are able to break a mountain in pieces, and diſſipate the moſt numerous bodies.

For further particulars I refer you to the letters of Sooraje Bund and Kiſhen Row Billaul.

Whatever further plan you may form, make me acquainted therewith, and I will write my ſentiments thereon.

No. 4. Copy of a Letter from the Peiſhwa Pundit Purdhaun Madho Row Narain to Colonel Goddard.

I ſome time ago informed you by letter, that Seremunt Dada Sahib, after the concluſion of the peace between the two States, through John Carnac, &c. Engliſh Chiefs, ſet out from hence for his reſidence at Janſey, and in the way, after croſſing the Nurbudda, got Hurry Babajoe, who was appointed to eſcort him, into his power, and changing his route, proceeded towards Surat: this letter has doubtleſs reached you.

I have juſt learnt that he is arrived at Surat, and has injured and moleſted the territories of the Sirkar in the neighbourhood of Gojeraut; and that you hearing this, have taken meaſures to ſatisfy the Gomaſtahs of the Sirkar. As the ties of friendſhip between me and Jelladut Jung Bahadre are firmly knit, and you likewiſe are poſſeſſed of friendſhip and attachment to this Sirkar, and as you have likewiſe received letters from the Governor to promote the increaſe of friendſhip between us; it is therefore incumbent on you, in conſideration of this friendſhip, to provide for the ſecurity of thoſe territories, and to ſupport the Gomaſtahs of the Sirkar.

No. 214.

Reſolved, That the following reply be written to General Goddard.

Sir,

We have received your letter of the 24th July; for an anſwer to which we refer you to the contents of ours, dated the 13th inſtant, and to the tenor of our former inſtructions; but that you may be at no loſs with reſpect to the plan of your future conduct, we think it proper to direct, that you conform literally to thoſe orders, in all caſes where they are expreſs, and that in any other where no proviſion is made, or an option left you to uſe your own diſcretion, you adhere, as nearly as poſſible, to the ſpirit of them, without waiting the reſult of further references to us. Appendix. Nos. 214&215.

We obſerve, with ſome degree of pleaſure, the notice taken by the Maratta Government in their letters to you, of the liberal attention which you had ſhewn to the intereſts of that State, in the protection given to their Aumils in Guzzerat, againſt the irregularities of Ragoba's dependants; and we recommend a continuation of the ſame kindneſs and moderation in all your conduct towards them.

The Miniſters have complained to us of violence offered to ſome of their veſſels, in their paſſage along the coaſt; and of an attack made on their fort of Soorundurk, by the Chief of Bencoote; for the particulars of which we have written to the Preſidency of Bombay.

Fort William, We are, &c.
the 16th September 1779.

Ordered, That a copy of ſuch parts of the Peiſhwa, and Nana Furneſſe's letter, as relate to the oppoſition made to the free paſſage of the Maratta veſſels at Bancoote, and the attack of the fort of Soorundurk, be ſent to the Preſident and Select Committee at Bombay: and that they be required to tranſmit a full and clear explanation of the facts alluded to.

The following letter is accordingly written to the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay:

Gentlemen,

In a letter which we have lately received from the Government of Poonah, we are adviſed of acts of hoſtility, committed in the name of the Engliſh, by a perſon ſaid to be Chief of Bancoote, who is accuſed of ſeizing two grabs, belonging to the Marattas, off the Malabar coaſt, and of ſending a force to attack the fort of Soorundurk; we encloſe an extract of the letter, as far as it relates to this complaint; and as we have not received any communication from you of the facts alluded to, which could enable us to give a ſatisfactory anſwer to it, we requeſt that you will furniſh us with an explanation of the particulars.

We are, &c.

Fort William, Warren Haſtings, the 16th September 1779. Edwa Wheler.

APPENDIX, No. 215.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 25th October 1779.

PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident;

Philip Francis, Edward Wheler, } Eſquires.

Mr. Barwell indiſpoſed.

Sir Eyre Coote gone to viſit the different ſtations of the army.

READ the following letter from General Goddard:

Gentlemen,

I did myſelf the honour to addreſs you the 15th ultimo, acquainting you with the letters I had received from the Maratta Government, conſenting to ſend a confidential perſon to me, whoſe arrival I expected towards the end of July. In this hope I was however diſappointed; for, by delaying a month on the road, he did not reach Surat until the 14th inſtant. He received his firſt audience on the 15th, and as it was my object to bring the matter to a point as ſpeedily as poſſible, for which which he ſeemed equally inclined with myſelf, in the ſecond conference, which happened the day following, I fully explained to him the friendly ſentiments of your Honourable Board, and the propoſals you had authorized me to make to the Poonah Government. In order to give you the cleareſt idea in my power of the ſtate of the negociation, and enable you to form a judgment of the Miniſters' inclinations, I have taken the liberty of encloſing, for your peruſal, the particulars of the converſation I had with the Vackeel, on the ſubject of my embaſſy to his maſter, which, together with a few remarks I ſhall here ſubjoin, from obſervations made on the man's behaviour and expreſſions, will, I am hopeful, convey to you the moſt full and ſatisfactory information.

I am of opinion, in the firſt place, that the miniſter is perfectly diſpoſed to make a peace with the Engliſh; but the confidence and ſpirits ariſing from his late ſucceſs againſt the Bombay troops, had, it is plain, given him hopes of obraining one, upon terms very different from what I have propoſed: and on that account he will not be eaſily reconciled to the ſacrifice demanded from him, of relinquiſhing his claim to all thoſe advantages acquired by the late convention with Mr. Carnac: I therefore expect, notwithſtanding the poſitive declaration I have made, of the neceſſity there is that he agrees to this preliminary article previous to the ſettlement of any treaty, that he will endeavour to ſtipulate for certain conceſſions to be at the ſame time made on the part of the Engliſh: it appears to me probable that he will demand the perſon of Ragonaut Row to be delivered up; but as this would be totally inconſiſtent, and impoſſible to be complied with, I ſhall abſolutely decline conferring on it, or any other point whatever, till the preliminary articles are firſt fully agreed to.

I hope the particulars I have already condeſcended upon with the Vackeel, which appear in the encloſed journal, as they were intended to ſhew the ſincere intentions of your Government, and to remove any cauſes of doubt or apprehenſion the Miniſter might have reaſon to entertain, will not be conſidered by you as in the leaſt derogatory, and prove the arduous zeal with which I have, and ſtill ſhall continue to proſecute the object of a peace, ſo ſtrenuouſly recommended in your inſtructions.

There appear two very powerful motives why the Miniſter is at this time ſolicitous for a peace; the one is acknowledged by the Vackeel in the wiſh expreſſed by his maſter to be at full liberty to oppoſe and check the progreſs of Hyder Ally; and the other, of no leſs force than the former, ariſes from the differences that ſubſiſt betwixt Nana Furneſe and Madajee Scindia. Though the name of the latter was not publicly introduced by the Vackeel, it was mentioned in the courſe of converſation; and he made no ſcruple of ſaying, that Nanna was exceedingly incenſed againſt him for his late conduct reſpecting Ragoba, and wiſhed for nothing more than to get him into his power. This ſpeech of the Vackeel's is corroborated by a variety of other reports; and it is certain, that Scindia has lately made ſome conſiderable requiſition of the Miniſter, which the other is by no means inclined to comply with. He has not either viſited Poonah ſince the eſcape of Ragonaut Row, though invited and preſſed by the Miniſter to go there.

As theſe ſeveral circumſtances all conſpire in favour of my preſent negociation, I ſhall ſo far pay attention to them in the proſecution of it, as to uſe them to proper advantage without materially interrupting or preventing the concluſion of the treaty you have entruſted to my management. It is needleſs to obſerve to you, ſince it will appear in the accompanying proceedings, that Nanna Furneſe is the only oſtenſible perſon who, with the name of Miniſter, ſtands forth on this occaſion to negociate on the part of the Peiſhwa and Maratta State. The authority which was before divided amongſt a number, ſeems now, ſince the confinement of Moraba and Saccaram Bapoo, to be ſolely centered in himſelf; and the only controul he has to apprehend, is from the overgrown power of Scindia, and the other military officers of the Government.

I have noticed in the diary now ſent you, that no overtures reſpecting Ragoba were made by the Vackeel on the part of his maſter, and the reaſons which occurred to me on that head. I judged it proper, in relation to this ſubject, to repeat to him what I had before written to the Peiſhwa; and to expreſs my ſatisfaction at the proſpect there now was of finally adjuſting all paſt difficulties, in an eaſy and amicable manner; but as I am hopeful of receiving letters from your Board every day in conſequence of the news of Ragoba's eſcape, I was happy at his ſilence on a ſubject that ſaved me the neceſſity of making any particular declarations, and did not therefore wiſh to preſs him any further on that ſubject.

As regular Dawkes have been placed all the way to Poonah, I may receive anſwers to the letters now diſpatched to the Miniſters in eight days. They muſt however arrive in twelve days time; when it may be known with a degree of certainty, what the reſult of my negociations may be. In the mean time ſhould any thing occur worth communicating, I ſhall not fail to addreſs you.

I have endeavoured in the preſent addreſs, and the encloſed paper, to be as full and as explicit as poſſible. You will perceive, that after condeſcending upon particulars in the moſt ample manner, in order to ſatisfy every poſſible doubt and apprehenſion, I have propoſed to him the two preliminary articles; upon the acceptance or refuſal of which my future negociation muſt depend. Should he give his full conſent, I am perſuaded the remaining points to be diſcuſſed will be eaſily ſettled; but ſhould he, which I muſt confeſs there is ſome reaſon to ſuppoſe he may, reject the firſt of them, it will not be in my power to treat further. In this caſe you muſt be ſenſible how anxiouſly I ſhall look for the conditional inſtructions I before entreated you would furniſh me with, and how neceſſary they will be for my further guidance and direction.

I have before repeatedly addreſſed you reſpecting the ſupplies of money; on which ſubject I have not been honoured with any letter from your Board, ſince the one of the 16th February, encloſing a bill of exchange for three lacks on the Gomaſtah of Gopaul Doſs. Uncertain as to the event of my negociation, and foreſeeing the probable occaſion there might be of all the treaſure collected on this ſide of India the next cold ſeaſon, I have endeavoured to avoid being obliged to uſe any part of it towards defraying the expences of the detachment till after the rains; but I have, contrary to my inclination, been neceſſitated to receive from the Company's treaſury at Surat, four lacks of Surat rupees; as the merchants of this place, after the greateſt trouble and difficulty, could only furniſh me with money for bills drawn upon you in their favour, amounting to three lacks and forty-four thouſand rupees.

The rate of exchange at which theſe bills are granted, is 100 Morſhedabad Sicca rupees for 93 Surat rupees, which is two per cent. worſe than was given the merchants of this place before; and one per cent. better than Gopaul Doſs's Gomaſtah received, for reaſons aſſigned in a former letter, but which is, upon the whole, when every circumſtance comes to be conſidered, as favourable as could have been expected.

I have the honour to be, &c.

Head Quarters, Camp near Surat, 16th Auguſt, 1779. (Signed) Tho. Goddard.

Subject of the Conferences betwixt Colonel Goddard and the Vackeel from the Government of Poonah, Auguſt the 15th 1779.

Lutchman Row, Vackeel on the part of the Maratta Government, having arrived, together with Nehab Chund Mounchy, Mounchy, a confidential perſon, and in a manner connected with him in that embaſſy, and having received their firſt audience they produced letters from the Peiſhwa Madhurow Narrain, and the Miniſter Nanna Furneſe, addreſſed to me, and importing that they had ſent Luckman Row, a perſon of underſtanding, and poſſeſſing their full confidence, to whom they begged I would truly communicate whatever I wiſhed to ſay.

As the expreſſion uſed on this occaſion implied no powers to treat or conclude being veſted in them, I firſt demanded of Luckman Row, if his Government had employed him in the ſame ample manner the Supreme Council of Bengal had authorized me to ſettle and agree in their name, as they would ſee from my original credentials then produced; or if not to the extent given me, how far they were empowered to treat?

In reply to this, they obſerved, that their orders were to receive whatever I had to propoſe to them, that though they might not poſſeſs powers to agree to every point, there were ſome which they were entruſted to conſent to on the part of the Miniſter, and whatever was of a nature contrary to theſe muſt be referred to him; to which they added, more than eight days would not be required to obtain an anſwer, as Dawkes were ſtationed all the way to Poonah.

Willing to bring matters to as ſpeedy a concluſion as poſſible, I aſked the ambaſſador if he would enter upon buſineſs immediately, or if it was his inclination to defer it till the next meeting? It was therefore ſettled that the conferences ſhould be deferred till next day, when the buſineſs ſhould be particularly entered upon and diſcuſſed; but as in the courſe of converſation many things were generally touched upon, from which ſome judgment may be formed of what may be expected during the progreſs of the negociation, I ſhall note them down with the remarks that occur.

The Vackeel, after declaring in the name of his Government, the ſtrongeſt inclination to live upon terms of friendſhip with the Engliſh, added, that an alliance had ſubſiſted for many years between the two States; that at the time of Narrain Row's being put to death by Ragonaut Row, and the purſuit of the latter by Siccaram Baboo, Nanna Furneſe, and other confidential Chiefs, to puniſh ſo atrocious an act, Mr. Moſtyn, then Reſident on the part of the Bombay Government, was left behind at Poonah; that he took advantage of their abſence, and was guilty of many underhand practices; and having fled to Bombay, the Engliſh ſeized the opportunity of the ſecurity of the Maratta Government to poſſeſs themſelves of the iſland of Salſette; that afterwards Ragoba marched to Surat and was joined by Colonel Keating with an army of the Engliſh. He obſerved, that the Governor General and Council of Bengal, highly diſpleaſed with theſe proceedings, had ſent Colonel Upton to ſettle the differences that had aroſe betwixt the Miniſters and the Bombay Council.

Reſpecting this treaty he ſaid, that on Colonel Upton's firſt arrival, the Miniſters told him that treaties of peace were then ſubſiſting betwixt the Maratta State and the Government of Bombay; let us adhere to that; what occaſion to make a freſh one? Colonel Upton in reply ſaid, That the treaty he would enter into with them ſhould be of ſo ſtrong and binding a nature, that it ſhould laſt to the lateſt generation. They then propoſed that ſome perſon on the part of the Bombay Government ſhould be preſent; to which Colonel Upton objected, ſaying, it was by no means neceſſary; that however a letter was received from the gentlemen of Bombay, declaring themſelves bound by whatever Colonel Upton might conclude on the part of the Engliſh.

Reſpecting Salſette, he obſerved that on demanding reſtitution of that iſland, Colonel Upton told them that he could not agree to that without the authority of his Government. It was ſettled therefore that a reference ſhould be made to the Governor General and Council, and both parties mutually abide by their deciſion. This man ſays, that Colonel Upton aſſured them in the moſt ſolemn manner that that place ſhould be reſtored.

Appendix. No. 215.

The above is the ſubſtance of what was mentioned by the Vackeel in the firſt day's conference. I only replied in general terms, that it was the ſincere wiſh and intention of my Government to perpetuate that friendſhip he talked of as ſubſiſting betwixt the Engliſh and Marattas; and ſince his maſter profeſſed to be directed by the ſame ſentiments, I made not the ſmalleſt doubt but we ſhould ſoon agree upon the means by which that might be effected: that what I had to propoſe was ſolely with a view to accompliſh that end, in the manner beſt calculated for the mutual honour and intereſt of both parties, totally to remove all doubts and animoſities from the minds of either, and eſtabliſh in their room the moſt perfect and good underſtanding and friendly confidence.

Little more paſſed at this time, but the Vackeel's begging leave to aſk one queſtion, which was, if the ſeal of the Company was not always to be conſidered as ſacred? adding, that all his Government deſired was, that juſtice might be done them on this occaſion. The Vackeel then took his leave.

From what the Vackeel has dropped to-day, I plainly perceive he means to lay the ſtreſs of his argument upon the following circumſtances: the treaty concluded by Colonel Upton, notwithſtanding which the Government of Bombay entered into a war with the Marattas, and the little ſecurity the Peiſhwa has therefore, that in caſe of a peace being now concluded, they will not again commence hoſtilities. What he alludes to, ſpeaking of juſtice, muſt be the terms of the late convention, by which the Bombayers deſervedly ſuffered.

Though I mention Vackeel, the perſon oſtenſibly ſo does not carry on the conferences. The conducting the buſineſs of this negociation is wholly left to the Nehal Chund, who ſeems to be a man of acuteneſs and abilities and behaves himſelf with great propriety and judgment.

Auguſt 16th 1779.

The conference of this day, after the ſeveral compliments, began with the Vackeel's reviving the ſubjects of the preceding one, regarding the detention of Salſette; the injuſtice of which he founded on the mode by which it had been ſurpriſed. As this, and ſome other circumſtances he was about to mention, happened previous to the treaty of Poorunder, when all paſt diſputes were finally adjuſted, I thought it neceſſary to ſtop his further proſecution of theſe ſubjects, by obſerving that referring thus to ancient feuds and differences, were we to indulge it mutually, would lead to an endleſs train of argument, and carry us further from the point we wiſhed to attain, an honourable peace, than we firſt ſet out; that for my own part, if I looked back to any thing it ſhould be to our former friendſhip; and that I conſidered whatever had paſſed previous to Colonel Upton's treaty, to be no longer the ſubject of conſideration and debate. I then aſked him, if his Government did not think themſelves bound by the articles of that treaty? He replied, they did, till the late engagements made with Mr. Carnac at Worgaum.

I then thought it proper to open myſelf more fully to him, and explain the ſentiments of my Government, and the propoſals they had empowered me to make; which I did in the moſt ample manner, uſing the ſeveral arguments contained in the plan I had prepared for my guidance in this negociation, to prove the propriety and juſtice which dictated them, and the mutual advantage that muſt be the inevitable conſequence of their being accepted.

Regarding the propoſal of receding from the pretenſions the Marattas had acquired by the engagements made with Mr. Carnac at Worgaum, the Vackeel obſerved, that the ſeal of the Company, the ſame ſeal which had been uſed in the treaty of Poorunder, was in poſſeſſion of that gentleman; that he had aſſured him, that whatever he agreed to under the impreſſion of that ſeal, muſt be binding upon the Engliſh; and that they themſelves, ſenſible of the ſacred light in which we held it, had fully truſted to the faithful performance on our part of all Mr. Carnac's engagements, conſiſtent with which belief they had been guided by the moderate conduct they had purſued.

I replied, they judged rightly of the force in which we conſidered an agreement entered into under the ſeal of the Company, from which it was never known that the Government of Bengal had in the ſmalleſt degree departed; that they had not done ſo in this inſtance, and they could not, conſiſtent with their own honour, the important intereſts committed to their charge, and the dignity of the Engliſh name, conſent that a treaty ſolemnly entered into and inviolably obſerved by themſelves, ſhould be ſet aſide without their ſanction and authority.

To this the Vackeel pertinently remarked, that his maſter could not help being of opinion, from what had formerly happened when the Bombay Government poſſeſſed themſelves of Salſette, and the arguments now uſed, that had the late attempt proved ſucceſsful, a very different judgment would have paſſed upon their conduct.

I obſerved, the Government of Bengal had never interfered with the Maratta affairs, previouſly to the ſettlement made by Colonel Upton; that of courſe the occurrences preceding that period could not be admitted in compariſon of the preſent inſtance.

I then exemplified the juſtice of the ſentiments of my Government, by ſuppoſing an inſtance of a ſimilar nature was to happen in the Maratta State, would the Peiſhwa, who had entruſted the care of his provinces to one of his Sardars, conſent to relinquiſh them to another perſon, becauſe the Chief in whom he had confided had been conſtrained to enter into an agreement for that purpoſe, from his having purſued a conduct contrary to the orders, or at leaſt without the authority of his maſter? I pointed out to the Vackeel, that the Governor General and Council of Bengal were ſupreme in all matters of Government, and that particularly reſpecting peace or war with the ſeveral States of Hindoſtan, the ſole power was veſted in them. I then told him to adviſe his maſter, if he put any value on the friendſhip of the Engliſh, to embrace the propoſal now made him; that excluſive of its juſtice and propriety, which I had fully explained, his acquieſcence in it would be the ſtrongeſt proof he could give of his wiſhing to remain on terms of amity with us; and that unleſs he did agree to it, I could not, conſiſtent with the orders and inſtructions of my Government, conſider him as a friend and ally of my nation.

His concluſive reply on this ſubject was as follows: that he acknowledged the arguments I had advanced were not without reaſon, but that by their conſequence his maſter was deprived of that juſtice which he alone ſolicited and expected; that it was true he had no cauſe of complaint againſt the Governor General and Supreme Council of Bengal, though their name was uſed as a ſanction to the manifeſto publiſhed by the Bombay Government and Ragoba; ſince, I had declared it was done with their authority: but ſtill he ſaid his maſter and the Miniſter were of opinion, that the ſeal of the Company, into whatever hands entruſted, ought to be conſidered by us as inviolable, and that the Governor General and Supreme Council of Bengal would ſhew the ſacred regard in which they held it, by adhering ſtrictly to the terms of the late convention with Mr. Carnac; ſince, although it might be attended with loſs to themſelves, it would alſo be a laſting proof of their conduct being influenced by the moſt rigid principles of juſtice and good faith.

I then repeated all the arguments I had before uſed, with aſſuring him in the end, that as my Government conſidered the propoſals they had empowered me to make, to be entirely conſiſtent with juſtice, and for the mutual intereſt and honour of both parties, I had not the ſmalleſt doubt but the Peiſhwa and Miniſter would alſo upon mature deliberation and reflection view them in the ſame light, and give their conſent accordingly; ſhould it unfortunately be otherwiſe, I was under the neceſſity of telling him that I was not empowered to treat with the Maratta State until this condition ſhould be acceded to; and requeſted he would intimate this to his maſter.

With reſpect to the ſecond preliminary article relating to the French; the Vackeel gave me every aſſurance on the part of his maſter that words could expreſs, promiſing to acquieſce in whatever might be propoſed for the ſatisfaction of the Engliſh, in adjuſting that point. He denied the connection his Government had been accuſed of holding with that nation, and juſtified their behaviour to Monſieur Saint Lubin in the following manner:

When the diſputes firſt commenced betwixt the Engliſh and Marattas, intelligence of it was carried to the French King, who judging this a favourable opportunity, ſent Monſieur Saint Lubin with letters to his maſter. The cuſtom of all monarchs, and particularly where the embaſſy came from ſo diſtant a kingdom, betwixt which and the Maratta State no enmity exiſted, ſurely intitled Mr. Saint Lubin to a reception. From this conſideration only, he was permitted to viſit the Durbar, and received with every proper ceremony and reſpect; but when it was known to the Miniſter that theſe circumſtances had given offence to the Bengal Adminiſtration, Saint Lubin was immediately diſmiſſed. The man affirms, that no part of the propoſals made by the French were attended to; that no agreement whatever was concluded; and that even afterwards, when it was certain that the Engliſh were marching from Bombay to ſupport Ragoba, and Saint Lubin wrote to encourage the Miniſter with promiſes of being protected by the French, his offers were rejected, and he was told in reply, that the Engliſh and Marattas were ancient friends, and though temporary differences might ariſe betwixt them, they would ſoon be reconciled, and did not deſire the interference of any foreign Power.

Notwithſtanding theſe poſitive declarations, and the ſpecious language uſed by the Vackeel, the proofs of the Miniſter's former connection with the French ſeems to be perfectly clear, and the emiſſaries of that nation have, and ſtill continue to labour very ſtrenuouſly, to prevail with the Marattas to unite with them againſt the Engliſh. But though I am perſuaded that a correſpondence is at preſent carried on betwixt them, I am ſtill of opinion that the Miniſter, finding by repeated experience the folly of truſting to their promiſes of aſſiſtance, will wiſh to depend no longer upon ſo precarious a ſupport, and readily and ſeriouſly agree to ſhake off all connection with them.

In ſpeaking of the mutual advantage that would reſult to the Engliſh and Marattas from a ſincere and firm friendſhip, the Vackeel obſerved, theſe two were the only powerful States now left in Hindoſtan and Decan, and that unleſs the Marattas were the enemies of the Engliſh, the latter would meet with no one to oppoſe their arms, nor could any other Power but the Engliſh contend with the Marattas.

On this occaſion, he ſeemed to have forgot the progreſs made, and the encroachments ſtill making by Hyder upon the Maratta dominions; though in the courſe of our converſation, he obviated this circumſtance, by declaring that the march of the army from Bombay had put a ſtop to the operations againſt Hyder laſt ſeaſon; but that it was the intention of the Miniſter firſt to conclude a peace with the Engliſh, and afterwards recover the country wreſted from them by Hyder; hinting at the ſame time a hope of being aſſiſted by the Engliſh in this buſineſs.

My reply to this was in general terms of friendſhip, intimating, that where a ſincere and firm alliance ſubſiſted liſted betwixt two nations, they would ever conſider the enemies of one another as their own.

Although, till the aſſent of the Miniſter was given to the two preliminary articles I had propoſed, I could not treat upon the remaining part of the treaty, I judged it proper to aſſure him, that as it was the deſire of my Government to eſtabliſh an honourable and laſting peace with the Maratta State; I was convinced the points now left to be diſcuſſed would be attended with no difficulty, and that I ſhould readily agree to whatever was juſt and equitable reſpecting them.

He obſerved of Jamboojeer, that when aſſignments were given upon it of the twelve lacks, it was ſettled that a perſon ſhould be ſent to ſuperintend the collections of that Pergunnah on the part of the Marattas, but the Government of Bombay afterwards refuſed to admit him. With reſpect to this, I told him it could make no difference, as the annual amount of its revenue had been regularly carried to the account of the Maratta Circar, charged with the ſums for the payment of which it had been given over, and that it was better that no perſon had reſided at Jamboojeer from the Marattas, ſince differences could not but have ariſen, which were now happily avoided.

He ſaid of Veriow, &c. ceded to the Engliſh by the Guicawars, that Futty Sing had wrote, acknowledging that he had no power to grant Sunnuds of thoſe places without the authority of the Peiſhwa; that his letter had been ſhewn to Colonel Upton, and, according to the treaty, theſe diſtricts ought to have been reſtored.

I remarked, that as theſe letters of Futty Sing muſt have been produced to Colonel Upton previous to the ſigning of the treaty, wherein it is ſtipulated that they ſhould be given up when proofs were brought to the effect he mentions, it was plain that theſe letters were not then judged ſufficient authority, and as no further proofs had been ſince adduced, my Government conſidered the right of the Engliſh to the poſſeſſion of thoſe places legal and unqueſtionable.

It gave me a good deal of ſurprize, that both in this conference and that of the preceding day, no overture whatever was made by the Vackeel reſpecting Ragonaut Row, nor his name mentioned by him, but in general terms when relating circumſtances that had happened. This ſilence regarding a perſon who cannot but be the principal object of their negociation, I muſt aſcribe to the deſire of Nanah, and his inſtructions given to the Vackeel accordingly, to obtain a confirmation and performance of the engagements made with Mr. Carnac, by which Ragoba would again be delivered into their hands.

A true copy of the conferences.

Sir Eyre Coote gone to viſit the different ſtations of the army.

READ a letter from Brigadier General Goddard as follows:

To the Honourable Warren Haſtings, Eſquire, Governor General, &c.

Gentlemen,

I have been honoured with your two letters, of the 14th June and 8th July; the former of which, on account of the expected cypher from Bombay not arriving before, I did not obtain an explanation of till within theſe few days. With reſpect to the ſubject of the latter, the ſeveral letters I have had the honour to addreſs you ſince that of the 6th June to which yours is an anſwer, will have fully ſatisfied you in every part of my conduct that might have been affected by the injunction contained in it relative to Ragoba; and I hope you will find cauſe to approve of the line I have hitherto laid down to be obſerved towards that Chief, as conſiſtent with your pleaſure now ſignified to me. Appendix, No. 216.

Many of the political points expreſſed in your letter of the 14th June, will have been in a good meaſure diſcuſſed and explained by the contents of thoſe I have already written you. I think it neceſſary however at this time to be as full upon them as I poſſibly can, and to ſum up in one view what may have been at different times communicated to you.

To begin then with what more immediately relates to the negociation for peace. In my letter of the 10th ultimo, I gave you an account of what had paſſed at the conference, I had held with the Maratta Vackeels, the opinion I had thence derived of the inclinations of their Government, and the hopes I had of receiving poſitive anſwers to the propoſals tranſmitted to the Miniſters in twelve days at fartheſt. Twice that period has elapſed without receiving any reply whatever; this delay may have been occaſioned by artifice or deſign in the Miniſters, or it may be attributed to ſome diſturbances which I know have happened on the road to Poonah, and make it probable our correſpondence has been intercepted. At any rate I have thought it expedient to obviate all in my power any inconvenience ariſing from further delay, and with that view have diſpatched Lalla Neſſaul Chund (one of the Maratta agents, by his own deſire and concurrence) expreſs to his maſter, fully informed in every particular. He has undertaken to return in twenty days at fartheſt, ſo that I have reaſon to expect to be ſoon able to give you certain information of the event of my commiſſion at the Court of Poonah. In the mean time I will acquaint you with ſuch particulars as have occurred in the courſe of my negociation, from which any concluſion may with probability be drawn of the views of Government, and of its ſucceſs or diſappointment.

I before told you of my firm opinion that Nana was inclined to make a peace, nor have I yet ſeen any cauſe to alter that opinion; on the contrary, I am perſuaded that whatever obſtacles may be thrown in the way, will originate from Madajee Scindia. This Chief, notwithſtanding the ſentiments entertained of his favourable diſpoſition towards the Engliſh by the Gentlemen of Bombay, appears to me their moſt inveterate foe, and I ſhould expect much ſooner to ſee a particular connection with the Miniſter than with him. Their relative ſituation to each other is this: the one with the name of Miniſter, and the ſhare of authority is almoſt entirely under the controul of the other, who poſſeſſing in Jaghire, ſome of the firſt provinces of the empire, receiving a moſt princely revenue, and at the ſame time having it in his power from circumſtances to ſucceed in obtaining new demands from the Miniſter, whenever he finds it for his convenience to make them, enjoys every ſubſtantial advantage he can wiſh for, and has in reality the direction of every public buſineſs of the State. It is eaſy to ſee, in this point of view, which of them has moſt reaſon to be ſatisfied with his ſituation, and whoſe intereſt it is to wiſh or endeavour at any change. Scindia gave remarkable proof of the independence he has aſſumed, by keeping poſſeſſion of Ragoba's perſon himſelf, although the Miniſter was earneſt for having it delivered up to him, and even offered a crore of rupees in exchange. Nanah may be ſaid to owe every thing to Scindia. It was by his aſſiſtance he roſe ſuperior to the blow that had been ſtruck at Poonah in the beginning of laſt year; through his means he annihilated the remaining influence of Morabah and Siccaram, and fixed himſelf alone in the ſeat ſeat of Government. Theſe ſervices might merit the moſt grateful return; but the ſentiments that would dictate this, do not belong to a politician, and Nana is one. He fears the power of Scindia, and it is now the only remaining check to his views of abſolute rule, he earneſtly wiſhes, and is led to entertain hopes of being able to free himſelf from that alſo. I have enumerated theſe arguments to prove that it can never be the intention or inclination of Scindia, while the Government exiſts in its preſent form, to wiſh for any alteration, or connect himſelf with the Engliſh in order to effect it. This is further evinced by his having never made any overtures to me ſince the power given me to treat with the Maratta State became known, and by the aſſurances given me by Ragoba, that he had no hope or dependance whatever in Scindia, who would then only be induced to take an active part in his favour when he found he either actually had or was likely to ſucceed without his aſſiſtance.

To ſuppoſe that we can offer advantages to him ſuperior, or indeed adequate to thoſe he at preſent enjoys, does not, from the above ſtatement, ſeem reaſonable or conſiſtent; and when we further reflect, that by uniting himſelf with us in admitting into the empire a rival, from whoſe jealouſy and power he would believe he had every thing to ſuſpect and fear, I am perſuaded you will be of opinion, that no ſeparate alliance can, under the circumſtances I have deſcribed, be entered into with him.

My negociation has been entirely with the eſtabliſhed Government of the Maratta State, as you will have perceived, by the accounts tranſmitted you of it; and I have underſtood the ſeparate convention with Scindia, and the releaſe of the hoſtages, as neceſſarily included in the Miniſters conſent to relinquiſh all claims upon the treaty of Worgaum. Should this preliminary article be agreed to, with the advice and concurrence of Scindia, it muſt take place in all its parts, and ſhould the Miniſter be inclined to comply with it, contrary to the inclination of the other, it might prove the occaſion of a rupture between the parties, in which caſe both would be equally ſolicitous for the countenance and aſſiſtance of the Engliſh.

From the circumſtances above ſtated, and becauſe the negociation with the Miniſter is ſo far advanced, I have thought it moſt conſiſtent with the object of your inſtructions on this head, not to commence any excluſive intercourſe with Scindia, until the anſwers which may arrive from Poonah, or other cauſes of convenience may point it out, for the intereſt of your affairs to do ſo; when I ſhall ſtrictly adhere to the mode you have been pleaſed to lay down for my guidance in conducting it.

With reſpect to an alliance with Moodajee Boonſla, the anſwers I have received to all my letters, written ſince my arrival at Surat, and particularly to one, informing him of the commiſſion you had been pleaſed to entruſt me with at the Court of Poonah, as they contain nothing but general expreſſions of friendſhip, and earneſt wiſhes for the accompliſhment of a peace with the Marattas, ſeem to warrant my conſidering the negociation at Nagpore ſuſpended until ſuch time as you ſhall be pleaſed to honour me with your inſtructions for its reſumal.

Permit me to repeat the declarations I have before made, of exerting myſelf in the moſt ſtrenuous degree to obtain the object you continue to hold forth as the termination of all your political views on this ſide of India; nor am I without hope of being able to overcome the difficulties which have preſented themſelves to counteract it; as it has been my firſt endeavour to convince the Miniſter of the ſincere wiſh you entertained of peace, and the mutual benefits that muſt reſult from it, without ſuffering him to encourage the moſt diſtant idea that you could be induced to make any diſhonourable ſacrifice for the attainment of it.

My moſt arduous taſk has been to reſtrain Ragoba's followers, who after accompanying him to this place, looked for a reward of their ſervices, little in his power to give. Some of them diſperſed through the villages neighbouring to Surat, committed depredations upon the ſubjects; which at ſo critical a juncture as this, when every act committed by Ragoba's people, though neither by his authority or that of the Engliſh, would naturally be attributed to both, might have proved of the moſt fatal conſequence to your intereſts. To obviate this evil, and to enable Ragoba to diſcharge the moſt burthenſome and uſeleſs, and ſatisfy the principal people, whoſe higher demands could not be cleared off altogether, I have found it neceſſary to advance him ſince his arrival in the beginning of June 50,000 rupees per month, with which ſupply he alſo ſupported the expences of his family, the whole of which are now with him.

Previous to Lala Neſhaul Chund's departure, at his own earneſt ſolicitation, that he might be able to ſatisfy his maſter on the point he had moſt at heart, I judged it requiſite to inform him in general of the intentions of the Engliſh regarding Ragoba, as far as I thought my inſtructions warranted, and ſeemed to render neceſſary at this time for facilitating the object of peace. I aſſured him they would never conſent to any reſtraint being uſed towards his perſon: that he muſt be permitted to reſide wherever he might chooſe, with a ſufficient allowance from the Maratta State, and that on theſe conditions he ſhould not be ſuffered to carry on any improper correſpondence, raiſe any commotions in their dominions, or if he did, he ſhould forfeit the allowance from them, and the friendſhip of the Engliſh.

I had previous to your letter conſulted the Select Committee on the ſubject regarding their Preſidency in my negociation, and had received every ſatisfactory information; which circumſtance I communicated to you in a former letter. Let me now aſſure you, that I ſhall continue to avail myſelf of their advice and information, in executing the truſts ſeparately committed to my charge: and ſhould all my endeavours for peace prove ineffectual, and a war become neceſſary, I ſhall chearfully and zealouſly co-operate with them in every plan that may be determined on for the intereſt and honour of the Company, and execute whatever military ſervice they may require conſiſtent with your inſtructions, and the proviſions you have been pleaſed to make for my guidance. It is alſo with particular ſatisfaction that I can at this time take upon me to aſſure you of the prepared and ſerviceable ſtate of the troops under me, complete in military ſtores, artillery thoroughly repaired, and provided with every requiſite for taking the field, and entering upon ſervice immediately.

I have ſo often had occaſion to expreſs my acknowledgment for the diſtinguiſhing marks of your favour, that I want words to declare at this time my grateful ſenſe of the new honours you have been pleaſed to confer upon me. I am conſcious how unequal language would prove, to convey the full idea of thoſe ſentiments of gratitude you have inſpired me with: I ſhall therefore not attempt the deſcription, but truſt to the zeal, perſeverance, and undeviating attention with which I ſhall labour to promote the honour and intereſts of the Company, for your future teſtimony of my having exerted all my abilities and endeavours to merit the reward you have ſo liberally beſtowed.

APPENDIX, Nos. 217, 218—220.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, 29th November 1779.

READ the following letters from Brigadier General Goddard:

To the Honourable Warren Haſtings, Eſquire, Governor General, &c. Supreme Council.

Gentlemen,

I have been honoured with your letter of the 2d Auguſt, and feel myſelf particularly happy at the ſatisfaction faction you expreſs in the receipt of my addreſſes of the 12th and 18th June; I beg to aſſure you that I ſhall pay the ſtricteſt attention to the additional inſtruction you have been pleaſed to give me reſpecting Ragoba, in my negociation with the Maratta Miniſters, and ſhall uſe them only under the latitude you have thought proper to confine me.

At preſent, on account of the anſwer to my propoſals ſent by Nehal Chund, the Maratta agent, not having yet arrived, the buſineſs muſt remain a few days in ſuſpenſe; and indeed from the nature of the intelligence communicated to me from Poonah, which I have reaſon to conſider moſt authentic, the reply I may expect to the offers already made, will in all probability be ſuch as to preclude me from the opportunity of renewing the old or making freſh demands.

I have in a former letter mentioned to you the ambitious views of Scindia, and the jealous apprehenſions entertained of that Chief by the Miniſter's conſiderations of mutual intereſt, have been the only bond of their union, as the one found himſelf too weak to maintain his authority without the aſſiſtance of the other; and Scindia again, though not daring to take the power into his own hands, derived from the weakneſs and dependance of the Miniſters ſufficient reſources to gratify his avarice and ambition in their full extent. Nana Furneſe, ſince the complete triumph he obtained laſt year, and the removal of the Chiefs, who before ſhared the nominal Adminiſtration with himſelf, has diſcovered an inclination to ſhake off all further ſubjection to Scindia, which is not unknown to the latter; ſo that it would appear an open quarrel between them is almoſt unavoidable. We muſt endeavour to trace the cauſe why this event, ſo natural to expect, has not yet happened. The cloſe connection of Scindia with Holkar, and the fear of their united forces, together with the ſtrong party the influence of theſe Chiefs has created in the State, muſt deter Nanah from publicly declaring his enmity; and till he does that, and the rupture becomes avowed and open, Scindia will not unite himſelf with the Engliſh, or take part in any reſpect againſt the preſent eſtabliſhed Government.

The ſecret wiſhes of Nanah ought, one would think, to have induced him to make a peace with the Engliſh at this time, which would be ſo much for his own intereſt, and not by entering into a war, give that weight to his rival which his military ſtrength muſt ever claim in time of neceſſity. It appears, however, he has taken a contrary part. He has made conceſſions to Scindia to bind him to his ſervice; and has prevailed on him to viſit Poonah, where they are in concert, making every preparation for hoſtilities, and ſettling the plan for the enſuing campaign. We muſt therefore look for another key to his conduct; and this I conceive to be the proſpect the Miniſter has of aſſiſtance from the French. The promiſes made him of the arrival of their armaments, and the confirmed belief this opinion has received from our moderate and pacific propoſals, which they it is probable attribute to our apprehenſions of being attacked by the French in combination with themſelves.

I am happy at the proſpect of the acceſſion of force you have been pleaſed to make under my command; and have, in obedience to your directions, written to the Preſidencies of Fort Saint George and Bombay, fixing upon the general rendezvous at Surat; to which place I have entreated the former to ſend their proportion of troops with all poſſible expedition. The convenient ſituation of Surat, open to a communication by ſea ſo near Bombay that diſpatches or ſuccours may at any time be ſent to and from it, and in addition to theſe, the firm footing it gives us on the Continent, where, in caſe of the arrival of a French armament, the preſence of the army would be an effectual check upon the Miniſter Goicawar to prevent their forming a junction with the invaders, have determined me in the choice of it. And I hope you will from theſe, and another conſideration, which it is unneceſſary to mention, approve of the meaſure.

I think it proper to encloſe for your peruſal extract of a letter from the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, on the ſubject of your reſolution of the 14th June, and of my anſwer to it. I make no doubt they either have or will make known theſe ſentiments to you themſelves; and my intention in communicating them at preſent, is principally to point out to you the fair proſpect there is, that no difference in opinion will retard or injure the public ſervice, and my fixed determination to avoid every ſubject of conteſt and contrariety of intereſt whatever.

I have only to add, that although the ſpirit of this letter may ſeem to breathe an approaching war, I would not be poſitively underſtood in that ſenſe; for although the intelligence I have received, and other circumſtances which have come to my knowledge, are ſuch as to juſtify theſe ſuſpicions, I do not think myſelf authorized to deliver a decided opinion, till I hear from the Maratta agent whom I ſent to Poonah; and a very few days muſt furniſh me with the knowledge to be derived from his intelligence.

I have the honour to be, &c.

No. 218.

Gentlemen,

I have the honour to acknowledge your letter of the 13th ultimo. The letters I have from time to time tranſmitted you, giving an account of the ſituation of affairs here, and of the progreſs and proſpect of my negociations with the Maratta Miniſters, will have been ſufficient to explain to you the doubtful and uncertain ſtate in which it was found when your letters arrived. It may not however be amiſs to mention ſome further particulars that ſerve to juſtify the ſuſpicions ſuggeſted to you in my laſt letter, and which I cannot help ſtill entertaining, of the hoſtile and perfidious inclinations of the Miniſter, and at the ſame time prove the fair and ſufficient opportunities given him of preventing the evils of a war, and, ſhould he longer perſiſt in the ſame deſigning conduct, the juſt and neceſſary grounds on which we are compelled to undertake it.

I will take no notice of the authentic information, both public and private, ſent me of the hoſtile intentions of the Maratta Chiefs; it is ſufficient that I at preſent remark ſuch parts of the Miniſter's behaviour, as may lead to a diſcovery of his real deſigns. When the confidential perſons firſt arrived from him, I communicated through them without loſs of time the propoſals you had directed me to make on the part of your Government, and ſoon afterwards from an apprehenſion that by truſting entirely to an epiſtolary correſpondence, he would have it in his power to practiſe the art of delay, ſo common a part of Maratta politics, I reſolved to diſpatch Nehal Chund, one of the agents of Poonah, fully and minutely inſtructed in every point neceſſary to reconcile him to, and promote the ſucceſs of my negociations; with this I acquainted you in a former letter; the man faithfully promiſed to return himſelf, or tranſmit an anſwer in twenty days. When your letter of the 13th ultimo reached me, twice the ſtipulated period had elapſed, and in the courſe of this delay, although repeated advices had been received from the Miniſter by Lutchmanrow, the remaining agent, he communicated to me no information by which I could ſuppoſe the propoſals were agreed to, on the contrary, he gave me to underſtand the reverſe, by telling me, that frequent conſultations had been held upon the ſubject of my propoſals, and that particular anſwers had been prepared to each, which would be ſent by Nehal Chund; he had alſo at two different periods intimated to me that this man had received his audience for leave of his maſter, and would ſet off for Surat immediately. This declaration he repeated on the morning of the 18th to me more confidently than before; but upon my interrogating him closely, he acknowledged that he did not expect he would leave Poonah till after the celebration of the Dusserah, which would happen on the 19th, so that by calculation of the supposed letters, mentioning his having been dismissed, he must have afterwards remained at Poonah at least fifteen days.

From the manifest duplicity and artifice this behaviour of the Maratta agent discovered in his master, and from a consideration of the circumstances above enumerated, as well as of the distance to Poonah, being near 150 coss, the difficulty and delay to which one person would be subjected in travelling it, which might be productive of future political inconvenience; conscious also that the object you had in view would be equally well answered at the point to which matters are now brought, and which could not be known to you at the time you wrote, if I pursued a different mode of putting the sincerity and friendship of the Ministers to a test than that contained in your letter of the 13th ultimo. I adopted the following, which I hope will meet your approbation.

On the morning of the 18th instant, when Lutchmanrow the Maratta Vackeel waited upon me, and communicated to me the circumstances respecting Nehal Chund's leave and departure, as mentioned above; I declared to him the doubts I could not but entertain of the hostile inclinations and designs of his master from the delay that unnecessarily arose in transmitting the answer to proposals by Nehal Chund, as well as the evasive excuses given by himself regarding it. That notwithstanding these just grounds for suspicion, the English were still ready to shew their sincere inclinations for peace, and grant every indulgence they possibly could consistent with a regard to their own honour and safety, and that therefore I would wait 15 days more, in which time he said a letter might arrive in reply to one he would dispatch that instant, at the expiration of which, if Nehal Chund did not arrive, or a satisfactory answer to the proposals I had transmitted by him in the name of my Government, I should consider this delay as a declaration of war, and act accordingly.

I at the same time delivered Lutchmanrow letters for the Peishwa and Minister, and to the same effect. The period to which I have thus limited them expires the 3d November, and as so many days yet remain to that date, I am not without the fullest hopes that the emissary Nehal Chund will previously arrive; at the same time, I see great reason to apprehend that the proposals I made to the Minister, if acceded to by him, will be complied with only upon conditions that it may not be in my power to give my consent to.

I shall not fail to write you upon the earliest information I can obtain relative to this business; and have the honour to be,

With the greatest respect, &c. &c.

To Brigadier General Goddard.

Sir,

We are sorry to observe that you have made so large an allowance as fifty thousand rupees a month to Ragoba, or indeed any allowance. We do not think he has any claim of this nature upon the Company, and the orders we had given you respecting him were merely confined to protection. We therefore positively direct that the allowances do cease from the receipt of this letter.

If Ragoba's influence is so far sunk that he cannot procure for himself the necessaries, we cannot consent to supply him with the superfluities of life, nor can we see how the Company's affairs will be benefited by an intimate connection with a man from whose influence no advantages can be derived; and we already find so many difficulties in answering the demands made upon our treasury for the necessary and unavoidable expences of your detachment, that we cannot agree to authorize any unnecessary disbursements.

Bengal Secret Persian Correspondence.

Letter from Governor General to Ragonaut Row, 19th August 1779.

I HAVE been favoured with your two letters, and perfectly understand the contents.

The first of them I understand to have been written under circumstances which having been since totally changed, it is unnecessary to reply to it further than to inform you, that letters having been written to me at the same time, containing the same demands but in fuller terms, I have replied, in conformity to the resolutions of this Government, by a total disavowal of the convention of Worgaum, as made without any authority from this Government, and refused to abide by a tittle of the terms contained therein.

It will be my constant rule, as it has been the unvaried practice of the Rulers of the English Government, to adhere most rigidly to the faith of public treaties.

You must have learnt from your Vackeels here, the anxiety I was under for your personal safety from the time of the unfortunate event which put you into the power of your enemies, until the joyful tidings reached me of your safe arrival at the English camp at Surat. The satisfaction this news gave me is not to be expressed. I was particularly pleased that this was brought about by your own prowess and magnanimity, as well as that you made choice of the English army as an asylum. Letters have been written to General Goddard approving of the protection he afforded you. To him whom you will regard as myself I must refer you for further particulars. Regarding me as a sincere friend ever anxious for your welfare let me frequently have the pleasure to hear from you.

Bengal Secret Consultations, 29th November 1779.

Extract of a Letter from the Honourable the President and Select Committee of Bombay to Brigadier General Thomas Goddard; dated September 17th 1779.

WE likewise have received advices from the Governor General and Council, dated the 14th June and 8th of July; wherein they communicate to us the line of conduct they have taken respecting this Presidency, and the powers and instructions they have given to you.

Though we think those powers an absolute infringement of the rights immediately inherent in us; yet from our regard to the public service, which must suffer injury by any contest between us and the Governor General and Council, we have determined, first making due reservation of our rights, not to oppose the operation of their orders, but shall unite with you with the same confidence and cordiality as before in promoting the success of whatever measures circumstances may render it necessary to adopt.

In

In like manner we conſider the elevated military rank they have given you, confined to the ſphere of our juriſdiction, as another point in which our rights are invaded; yet as it has taken place, we feel pleaſure in this diſtinction being conferred upon you, and congratulate you upon it.

Extract of a Letter from Brigadier General Thomas Goddard to the Honourable Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay; dated September 29th 1779.

Whatever may be your ſentiments regarding the reſolutions taken by the Governor General and Supreme Council, and the line of conduct they have been pleaſed to preſcribe for our mutual guidance, it affords me the higheſt ſatisfaction that no injury can thereby happen to the public ſervice, from the declaration you have made of uniting with me, with the ſame confidence and cordiality as before, in promoting the ſucceſs of whatever meaſures circumſtances may render it neceſſary to adopt. Allow me on my part to repeat the aſſurances I have already given of being wholly guided in my conduct by a fixed regard to the intereſts of the company and of your Government, and cheerfully concurring in every operation that may conduce to this uſeful and deſirable end.

I beg to offer my ſincere thanks for the congratulations you have made me on my late appointment; and on this ſubject, without preſuming to enter, in the moſt diſtant degree, into any ſort of argument on the propriety or legality of the meaſure, I cannot but obſerve, that as the flattering encomiums you were pleaſed to beſtow upon my conduct muſt have proved a powerful recommendation in my favour to the Government of Bengal, of which I am myſelf fully ſenſible, they ſeem alſo on this occaſion to have been influenced by the ſpirit of that paragraph reſpecting me, contained in your Preſident's minute, which in all its parts has ſo juſtly merited and received their attention and approbation.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, 6th December 1779.

Read a letter from the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay.

We cannot but moſt ſenſibly feel the invaſion upon the rights and powers immediately veſted in us by the Honourable Company, and thus illegally, as we conceive, tranſferred to General Goddard, by your inſtructions of the 14th of June; your charging him excluſively with the immediate intereſts of this Preſidency, with the power of making peace or war for us at his own choice, and with an army under his own independent command, to proſecute whatever meaſures he may think proper to adopt, are inſtances of delegated authority both unconſtitutional, and in the higheſt degree injurious to the rights abſolutely inherent in us, under the ſubordination due to you by Act of Parliament. Thoſe rights, gentlemen, being eſtabliſhed on fixed and aſcertained grounds, it is needleſs to enter into a detail or argumentative defence of them; we muſt appeal to a higher power to reſtore to us the free exerciſe of them; and in the mean time, from our regard to the public ſervice which muſt ſuffer injury in the conteſt, we ſhall not oppoſe the operation of your orders; though we ſtill hereby make a ſolemn reſervation of our rights thus violently infringed, and which are not in the ſmalleſt degree impaired or leſſened by our conceſſion in this inſtance.

As Moodajee Bountello is a Power immediately connected with your Government, we have no deſire to interfere in the negociation with him, further than the intereſts of this Preſidency may be affected thereby or render neceſſary, even though it may be carried on within the limits of our own authority.

We have ever treated General Goddard with the confidence and attention due to his ſtation and merits, and of our own motion invited him to our councils: nor ſhall we now be leſs ready to conſult with him on any meaſure that may have a relation to your inſtructions; though this does not appear very material, as he is placed independent of our reſolutions. Appendix. No. 222.

Though any diſtinction that could with propriety have been conferred on General Goddard would have given us pleaſure, your granting him an elevated rank, confined to the ſphere of our juriſdiction, is another of the points wherein we think our rights invaded, and may be productive of many bad conſequences, which we ſhall be very glad may not happen; our opinion of General Goddard's merits, as an officer, and our reſpect for you, would no doubt have led us to entruſt to him the conduct of all military operations, had the opinion been left to us; but as he is totally independent in this point, the extenſion of power in conferring ſuch an appointment appears as inexpedient as it is unauthorized.

We ſhall to the beſt of our comprehenſion obſerve your directions in the points where any degree of agency is left to us. The reputed head of the Guicawar family is totally inſane, and diſordered in his mind; and the priority of right to the executive office of Government has been long diſputed between the two brothers, Futty Sing and Govin Row, one claiming as the elder born, the other as ſon of the wife of firſt rank; but the pretenſions of the former have been generally ſupported by the Poonah Durbar.

We have no account of the ſtate of General Goddard's negociation; but we encloſe copy of a letter we ſent him at his deſire under the 3d of July, giving an account of the ſtate of the treaty of Poorunder, and the articles which remained unperformed.

We are with reſpect,

Bombay Caſtle, the 6th September 1779. (Signed) Wm Hornby.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 29th November 1779.

PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident,

Richard Barwell, Philip Francis, Edward Wheler, } Eſquires.

Lieutenant General Sir Eyre Coote abſent on a viſit to the different ſtations of the army.

READ the following letter from Fort Saint George.

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

We had the honour to receive your letter of the 2d Auguſt, acquainting us with your reaſons for thinking the French at the iſlands meditate an attack on Bombay, and requeſting in conſequence that we would detach one battalion of Europeans, three battalions of Sepoys, and fifty artillery men, from the forces belonging to this Preſidency, to join the army commanded by Brigadier General Goddard, whom you ſhould direct to grant the moſt effectual ſupport in his power to the Government of Bombay, for defeating any hoſtile attempt which may be made againſt it. Fort St. George, 20th October.

We ſhall always be led by inclination, as well as duty, to co-operate with you to the utmoſt of our power, in any plan you may adopt for the ſecurity of the Company's poſſeſſions; but in the preſent caſe, we hope there will be no neceſſity for ſuch great ſuccour to aſſiſt the gentlemen at Bombay, even ſhould they be attacked, ſince we underſtand their force is very equal to their protection againſt any attempt that can be made by the French in their preſent ſtate; and we are inclined ourſelves to this opinion, becauſe having written to Bombay in the month of July, to inform the Preſident and Council of the intelligence we had received relative to the intentions of the French, they do not in their anſwer expreſs the leaſt apprehenſion of the inſufficiency of their force; and we ſhould ſuppoſe further, that had they any doubt on this head, they would have detained the Aſia man of war, which was ſent from England purpoſely to aſſiſt in their defence, and which they allowed to leave Bombay in the month of Auguſt, to join the Admiral at this place.

But after all, we conceive the French at the iſlands will not be in a condition to fit out an armament againſt Bombay, without conſiderable ſupport from France; and as far as we can learn from private intelligence, their nation is too much preſſed both in Europe and in the Weſt Indies, to ſpare any reinforcements for this country.

Brigadier General Goddard, in a letter to General Sir Hector Munro, dated the 15th Auguſt, after mentioning that he is authorized to make a requiſition of the force at Mahé writes as follows: "At preſent it is impoſſible "for me to ſpeak with any certainty of the effect of my "negociation with the Maratta State, or whether I may "have occaſion for this reinforcement or not; but I "ſhall make it my care to have every thing prepared for "the tranſportation of the troops; I hope you will pre-"viouſly furniſh the officer who is in charge of them "with ſuch directions as may prevent any cauſe of delay "in their embarkation, ſhould circumſtances ſo fall out "as to render their junction neceſſary."

We have likewiſe a letter from our Commandant at Mahé, incloſing a copy of one from the Governor of Bombay to him, in which he writes: "Brigadier General "Goddard acquaints me, that he has been adviſed from "Bengal, that the troops under your command at Mahé "will be inſtructed to obey his requiſition to join his "army, ſhould he not ſucceed in his negociations with "the Marattas."

From theſe letters we ſhould conceive, that the object of the reinforcement was principally to ſupport General Goddard's negociations with the Marattas, and this is certainly a matter of ſo much importance that we are diſpoſed heartily to concur with you in promoting it. We have ſent directions to Colonel Braithwaite to obey any requiſition that may be made by Brigadier General Goddard for the troops at Mahé, which conſiſt of one company of European infantry, one company of artillery, ſix companies of grenadier, and eight companies of battalion Sepoys. We think it proper to mention, however, that we are under ſome doubt, whether the Sepoys will voluntarily embark on this new ſervice, ſince they have been abſent from the coaſt nine months; and though they went to Mahé (by ſea) with uncommon alacrity, and have behaved remarkably well there, they have expreſſed an anxious deſire to return to the coaſt; and Colonel Braithwaite ſome time ago ſaid, that if they were detained from it much longer he was apprehenſive that a conſiderable number might deſert. We are inclined, notwithſtanding, to believe they will be prevailed on to proceed if the ſervice requires it; but ſhould they not, we have deſired the earlieſt notice may be given us, that we may replace them with an equal number which can be ſent from our northern garriſons to Anjengo in a very ſhort time, and embarked from thence.

As to any further reinforcement than the above, we are apprehenſive our ſituation will not admit of it, at leaſt for the preſent. The non-arrival of the fleet leaves us at great uncertainty concerning the King's troops, and the ſeaſon being now too late for the ſhips to come on the coaſt, we are at a loſs where or when to expect them. We muſt obſerve likewiſe, that the conduct of Hyder Ally makes it abſolutely neceſſary for us to be as much as poſſible on our guard. The language he holds in his correſpondence, and the great preparations he is making for war, manifeſt a ſtrong intention to break with the Company; and we believe he only waits a favourable conjuncture which may ſoon happen. A war with Hyder, let the event be ever ſo ſucceſsful on our part, would diſtreſs the Carnatic beyond meaſure, and prove a moſt expenſive burthen on the Company. We ſincerely hope therefore, that General Goddard may conclude a treaty with the Marattas and thereby free the Company from the neceſſity of engaging with the two moſt powerful States of India at the ſame time, which will probably be the caſe if he fail in his negociation. Should we be at peace with the Marattas, Hyder will be afraid to diſturb us; for, excluſive of our ſtrength, which he would then have no hopes of reſiſting, the determined enmity which the Marattas bear him, would induce him rather to court our friendſhip than to provoke us into hoſtilities; and this is preciſely the ſtate wherein only we can expect to preſerve that general tranquillity in the Carnatic, which is ſo neceſſary at all times, but eſpecially at this juncture.

We earneſtly requeſt you will be pleaſed to ſend by the firſt proper conveyance the five lacks of rupees which were promiſed us in Auguſt laſt, and which are much wanted to anſwer our extraordinary demands.

We have the honour to be, &c.

Fort Saint George, 30th October 1779. (Signed) John Whitehill, &c. Select Committee.

Agreed, That the following reply be written to the Preſident and Select Committee of Fort Saint George.

Gentlemen,

We have received your letters, dated the 6th, 7th, and 30th October.

The Honourable Company's ſhip Ganges arrived the 13th, and the General Barker the 14th inſtant, and have brought with them the French recruits mentioned in your letter of the 6th October.

Your detention of the recruits conſigned to this Preſidency by the Honourable Court of Directors, has been a very ſerious diſappointment to us; the reaſons which you have aſſigned for this act is not ſatisfactory; a courſe of three weeks, during which the recruits were or might have been on ſhore at Fort Saint George, was ſufficient, with proper refreſhment, at leaſt to have put them into ſuch a train of recovery as to have fitted them to undertake the remainder of their voyage to this port; and the additional argument which you allege, namely, that you have not received any liſt of them, was and ought, as we conceive, to have been underſtood as a proof that they did not appertain to your Preſidency. Your ſcruples excited by this uncertainty, might have been eaſily removed by the reflection that you had already a number of our recruits of the laſt ſeaſon, more than equal to that of the preſent importation, and that the latter might therefore have been ſpared without any diminution of the proportion altogether aſſigned to you.

We feel this loſs the more ſenſibly becauſe it has fallen on us at a ſeaſon in which it could not be retrieved in the ordinary way for many months to come; and of this you yourſelves ſhould have been aware, when you promiſed to ſend us our full proportion of the recruits arrived and coming in the fleet, as ſoon as you were acquainted with their deſtination. This promiſe affords but too much ground for the apprehenſion that you propoſe in like manner to detain all the remaining recruits which have been deſigned for this Preſidency.

We were greatly diſtreſſed by the like detention of our recruits the laſt year; but yielded to the apparent neceſſity, which was then urged a plea for it, and confided in your promiſe to reſtore them as ſoon as the ſiege of Pondicherry was concluded; notwithſtanding this promiſe and our demand for them in letter of the 4th February laſt, they are ſtill withheld from us.

Our full complement of European ſoldiers is conſiderably below the proportion which it ought to bear to the native troops of this eſtabliſhment, and with all the ſupplies which it has hitherto been in the power of the Company to ſend us, we have rarely exceeded one-half even of that complement; but if you avail yourſelves of the advantage which your ſituation puts into your hands, of intercepting our recruits on their way to us, you eventually hazard the loſs of all the Company's poſſeſſions in this country, and of their exiſtence with them.

Such a diminution of our proper ſtrength is at this time particularly diſtreſſing, and may be attended with inſtant danger; it will either impoſe upon us the neceſſity of ſupplying the deficiency by new levies of native troops, and increaſing the proportion between them and our European ſoldiery, or of leaving our means of defence indequate to the extent of our territory and connections, or the many calls to which we are become liable, for the maintenance of the Company's general political ſyſtem, and the ſupport of our part in the war with France, and the Maratta State, which we now regard as inevitable.

From theſe conſiderations, it is indiſpenſably incumbent on us to demand, in the moſt peremptory manner, and we do accordingly ſo require you, immediately to ſend us all the recruits, both of the laſt and of the preſent ſeaſon, who were deſigned by the Court of Directors for their ſervice on this eſtabliſhment, and whom you have detained; and that no doubt may remain, either of their identity or deſtination, we encloſe you authentic copies of the liſt of the military who were paſſengers on each ſhip, as far as our lateſt receipts of them. As the preſent ſeaſon will not admit of theſe being tranſported by ſea, we ſhall ſend officers by the General Barker, to receive charge of them, and to conduct them to Calcutta, either directly by ſea or by marching them firſt to Ganjam, as ſhall be deemed moſt adviſable; and we deſire that you will cauſe them to be delivered over to ſuch officers immediately on their arrival, and grant them every requiſite aſſiſtance for conducting the men in ſafety to the place of their deſtination.

We are ſorry that you deemed it inexpedient to furniſh the detachment under the command of General Goddard at Surat, with the reinforcement of troops which we required; but we hope that your orders to Colonel Braithwaite, to join him with the forces under his command, will prove effectual.

Fort William, We are, &c. &c.
29th November 1779.

Reſolved, That the officers be directed to hold themſelves in readineſs to proceed by the General Barker, to Fort St. George, there to receive charge of all the recruits belonging to this Preſidency, and to conduct them to Fort William, either directly by ſea, or by land to Ganjam, in order to proceed from thence in veſſels which will be provided for them.

Ordered, That all the officers belonging to this eſtabliſhment, who are at preſent at Fort St. George on leave of abſence, do return to Bengal by this opportunity.

APPENDIX, No. 223.

Bengal Perſian Correſpondence.

Intelligence from Naigpore; dated the 21ſt of Jammadeaſſanie, 7th of July.

ADVICES from Poonah ſay that when the news of the near approach of Dewajee Pundit, the Vackeel of Modajee Bhoſila, was received by Nanah Purnaveeſe, he propoſed to go out and meet him, together with Sewal Madho Row. When Dewajee heard it, he immediately ſent a meſſage to him, deſiring that he would not give himſelf that trouble, on account of him who was at all times his ſervant. On this Nanah laid aſide his deſign, and ſent Hurry Pundit Purkeah, to meet and conduct Dewajee to him: Hurry Pundit accordingly went and met him, and on the 8th of Jemmadeaſſanie (24th June) they arrived at Poonah, and went to the houſe of Naroo Pundit. The day afterwards he waited on Sewal Madho Row, and was very kindly received. Appendix. No. 223.

The forces of Sindeah and Holcar purſued Ragonaut Row a great way, but could not overtake him; he got ſafely to Surat. The ſaid Chiefs ſent directions to their forces, to canton eight days journey on this ſide of Goujeraut, and that other forces ſhould be ſent to join them.

It is reported here, that the Engliſh forces being joined, are encamped 16 coſs on this ſide of Surat. There is the proſpect of hoſtilities in two or three months. Colonel Goddard is returned from Bombay, and joined the army.

We hear that Modajee's Vackeel, who was with the Engliſh at Surat, has left them, and joined Dewajee Pundit at Poonah.

From Maha Rajah Modajee Bhoſila: dated the 4th Rujjib, 19th of July; received the 6th of October 1779.

I have been favoured after a long ſilence with your two agreeable letters, written after the arrival of Beneram Pundit, and your becoming acquainted with the particulars of the paper in his charge; and received the greateſt pleaſure from the peruſal of them. You write that they are long, and breathe forth the ſentiments of friendſhip, wiſdom, and judgment; but that the great object of them all being entirely at an end, it is unneceſſary to recapitulate the ſubſtance of them: that having fully underſtood the contents of the paper delivered to you by Beneram Pundit, you had, agreeably to my deſire, returned it to him; that from the contents of it you underſtand it to have been meant to convey a clear and explicit information of my intentions to relinquiſh the plan propoſed by you, which my friendſhip would not allow me to make known to you by an abrupt declaration, otherwiſe it was unneceſſary to have written volumes on a ſubject which required no more than a ſingle line: that what is paſt is paſt; and that of the deſigns which you had formed, you ſhall relinquiſh all future thoughts, but that of my paſt kindneſs in the ſervices I rendered the Engliſh army on their arrival at Hoſhungabad, in ſending a perſon of rank and truſt to wait for them, and in furniſhing them with proviſions and whatever they ſtood in need of, and in ſhewing them all the dues of hoſpitality, you ſhall ever retain a grateful remembrance; and that you ſhall be happy to make every ſuitable return to theſe obligations whenever any future occaſion of my affairs ſhall demand it: that you have written to Major Camac to remain within the borders of Bengal, and not to proceed any further, but have not recalled him to Calcutta, not having determined what part of your army he ſhall join, which will depend on future contingencies.

The pleaſing contents of theſe letters which though written under the veil of obſcurity, yet at leaſt declare your ſteady adherence to the friendſhip and connection eſtabliſhed between us, I fully underſtand.

With theſe letters there was none from Beneram Pundit, who is acquained with the moſt ſecret negociations between us, nor have I yet received the paper I entruſted to him; but this is of no conſequence, it will arrive.

Since on becoming acquainted with the contents of the paper I ſent you, you totally relinquiſhed your deſigns, and regarded it as a clear and explicit anſwer, and giving up all your views, confined yourſelf ſolely to the preſervation of friendſhip between us, it would be equally uſeleſs and improper in me to repeat to you my ſentiments, views, and intentions, with reſpect to future affairs, and would even carry the appearance that I was acting a deceitful part, watching my own opportunity, and promoting the cauſe of my countrymen; yet, the ſtrict ties of friendſhip, candour, and confidence, which have taken place in the courſe of our laſt year's correſpondence,

Appendix. No. 223.

(during which ſpace I have received more than an hundred very friendly letters from you) will oblige me to the performance of what I conceive an indiſpenſable duty of friendſhip, viz. to communicate to one's friend the conſequences which are likely to attend any particular meaſure, and the advantages or diſadvantages attendant thereon, whether ſuch friend chooſes to pay attention thereto or not.

The caſe ſtands thus: as on the deceaſe of the incomparable Mr. Elliott all our views remained under the veil of ſecrecy, you ſent for Biſſember Pundit to a private audience, and entruſted the points of Mr. Elliott's commiſſion, which were of the moſt delicate nature, to him, to be written to me, and informed me, that thoſe were the ſecret matters which were intended to have been verbally communicated to me by the late Mr. Elliott; and that, having maturely conſidered them, I would adopt meaſures to carry them into effect, and write to you for whatever was required for that purpoſe.

On peruſing this letter in private, I perceived the moſt extenſive deſigns and views of univerſal conqueſt. In the firſt place I found it impoſſible with my pen, which is a mode the ſecrecy of which cannot be depended upon, to expreſs my aſſent or diſapprobation, and ſecondly, I conceived beyond the abilities of Vackeels to negociate an affair of ſuch importance, as the views of every perſon are enlarged or contracted according to their characters and rank in life, and therefore earneſtly wiſhed, agreeable to your intimation, to ſend my Miniſter Dewagur Pundit twelve days journey towards Cuttack, and that it might ſuit you to come and meet him, that ſo all points might be clearly ſettled in a conference without the interference or knowledge of a third perſon. As this, by reaſon of a variety of cauſes, did not take place on either ſide, I was under the neceſſity of committing thoſe important matters to writing, under the ſanction of the Mighty God, (who reads the hearts of his creatures, and from whoſe omniſcience nothing, however ſecret, can be hid) in which I paid the ſtricteſt attention to the rights of the illuſtrious family on the Rauze, and acknowledging my obedience due thereto, propoſed meaſures, which I judged indiſpenſably neceſſary for the re-eſtabliſhment of the affairs of the Rauze.

Theſe propoſals, conſidered as the production of the moſt complete knowledge in the myſteries of Government, were well worthy of approbation: it is probable that the reader of it to you did not lay the ſtreſs he ought to have done on the important objects it contained, to carry conviction to your mind; or Beneram Pundit did not repreſent my propoſitions to you in their real and proper colours.

What is to be done? I cannot convey my ſoul into the body of another; or perhaps, learning from the newſpapers the ill-concerted plans of the Chiefs of Bombay, you have ſuffered yourſelf to be led by your indignation thereat, from the paths of equanimity and ſound policy; and conſidering it is inconſiſtent with your magnanimity to accept of the aſſiſtance of your friends, you rejected the propoſitions I tranſmitted you, and regarding the expences of that plan as entirely unneceſſary and fruitleſs, determined to depend ſolely on the bravery and magnanimity of the Engliſh!

What can I ſay? or to what end ſhall I ſwell my letter, on this ſubject? Were I preſent with you, I would, from motives of the ſincereſt friendſhip, ſet the matter before you in its true light, and point out to you the imminent dangers attendant upon theſe meaſures; and you would, I am convinced, give your aſſent thereto. Had my ambition the wings of an eagle, one flight would bring us together, when every point would be cleared up.

Although the Marattas are in poſſeſſion of near 300 forts, built of ſtone, furniſhed with all kinds of warlike ſtores, and can in caſe of war collect into one body near 200,000 cavalry; beſides the Nabob Nizam-ul-Dowlah, and others alſo, who are all alarmed at the incroachments of the Engliſh into the Decan, and are waiting a favourable opportunity to repel them; and although their mode of making war, and activity is ſuch, that they will in one night gain a diſtance of 50 coſs, both eating and ſleeping on their horſes; haraſſing an oppoſing army on all quarters, and cutting off all its convoys and ſupplies, making the moſt furious attacks on it whenever they find an opportunity; retreating and returning to the charge; laying ſtratagems by pretended flight to draw parties of the enemy to purſue them, and then rallying and cutting them off, by which policy they have defeated all the Chiefs and Rajahs of Hindoſtan, to wit, Sefoe Dhayeath, Hadah, Cotchouana, and Ranna, &c. as alſo the powerful Ameers, in a multitude of battles, and reduced all thoſe countries to their ſubjection, and have at all times afforded their aſſiſtance to the king; yet notwithſtanding all this, the Engliſh propoſe, without having made preparations or collected the neceſſaries of war, to overcome them by a trifling effort, and to reduce them to obedience. This is really aſtoniſhing.

You write that one line was ſufficient to have given an anſwer to the propoſed deſigns, and that there was no neceſſity to have written ſo voluminouſly, that is to ſay, "your forces are arrived at Hoſhungabad, my troops ſhall join them, and ſhall ſettle the buſineſs."

This cauſes me real ſurprize, and the end of it would have proved a parallel to that of the plan of the Engliſh at Bombay.

To oppoſe a mountain, a mountain is requiſite, what effect would be produced by throwing pebbles at it? Should a perſon attempt to extinguith a raging fire, which had ſeized on a jungle of reeds, by throwing on it a handful of water, ſhould we not be induced to ſmile at his vain attempt, when nothing leſs than an ocean of water would be ſufficient? Perſons experienced in the affairs of war and ſlaughter, and ſkilled in the maxims of ancient States, make the conſiderations above recited the guide of their conduct: by the bleſſing of God you are known to have great experience in buſineſs. Regard what I have above written as dictated ſolely by warm friendſhip; and on conſidering maturely, you will approve thereof.

As I had received your letter, informing me that you had given up all thoughts of proſecuting this buſineſs, but remained firm in your friendſhip, and repeating your obligations to me, and had likewiſe got letters from Colonel Goddard and Mr. Wathersſtone, aſking my advice with reſpect to the meaſures to be adopted, which was accompanied by a letter from the Governor of Bombay, I judged it adviſable to diſpatch Dewagur Pundit to Poonah; which I accordingly did. He arrived there in ſafety, and had ſeveral conferences with the Prime Miniſter, Nanah Purnaveſe, who is a man of great wiſdom, and ſteadily attached to his word and engagements. In the courſe of theſe, he repreſented my integrity and good faith, and took an opportunity to mention in a proper manner, the apprehenſions conceived with reſpect to the French.

As letters from Colonel Goddard, addreſſed to Row Pundit Purdhaun and Dewagur Pundit, informing them of the powers with which he was inveſted from the Company to make peace with the Marattas, and aſking Dewagur Pundit's advice, as to his future meaſures, had been received at Poonah, anſwers were returned thereto. The ſubſtance of Dewagur Pundit's reply, and the one which he cauſed Pundit Purdhaun to write, you will fully learn from another letter which relates the whole, as written me by Dewagur Pundit.

You will therefore write to Colonel Goddard to make peace, a meaſure highly proper, which will be the means of eſtabliſhing tranquillity in the country, removing all cauſes of apprehenſion from the deſigns of the French, and preſerving the faith of treaty to the lateſt poſterity.

I wiſh to act as the guarantee to this treaty between Pundit Purdhaun and the Engliſh Chiefs, that it may be inviolably preſerved.

You

You will therefore regard all theſe meaſures which I have taken, as the moſt convincing proofs of my friendſhip and attachment to the Engliſh, and will ſend me an immediate anſwer; for which I am very anxious.

Poſtſcript.

With reſpect to what you mention of my not having given an anſwer to Major Camac, the caſe was this: Coſſids belonging to Colonel Goddard, brought a letter addreſſed to Major Camac from Burhanpore; which Coſſids requeſted a letter from me to Major Camac; but it being night, they departed without my leave.

This proves the ignorance of the Coſſids.

Had I received a letter from Major Camac, I ſhould have returned a proper anſwer to it.

What you now write, with reſpect to your having ſuſpended his march forward, is highly proper.

2d. Poſtſcript.

The note encloſed in your letter, was deſigned for the preſervation of ſecrecy, by informing me of the impropriety of communicating ſuch matters to Ramkaunt; but that I was the beſt judge of my own affairs. The circumſtance is this: after the deceaſe of Mr. Elliott, Ramkaunt was the only one of his followers who made his appearance before me; and as a perſon ſent by you, of whatever rank or condition, is dear to me, I regarded him equally with Beneram Pundit.

Actuated by ſincere friendſhip, I regard my own intereſt as beſt promoted by your advice: ſuch advice is good as is founded on the welfare and intereſt of one's friend, not on ſelf intereſt.

From Moodajee Bhooſila; received the 31ſt October 1779.

Your friendly letter informing me of your having recalled Major Camac, &c. (here follows a repetition of the particulars of the Governor's letter of the 12th of May) arrived in a happy hour; and by its contents afforded me the greateſt pleaſure.

Your unreſerved communication on the ſtate of affairs, and of your views and ſentiments, which is a proof of ſincere friendſhip, gave me the greateſt ſatisfaction, and increaſed my attachment to you.

Some time ago, on the receipt of letters from my Miniſter, Dewagur Pundit (whom I had thought proper before Colonel Goddard marched to Surat, to diſpatch at the deſire of the Miniſters to Poonah) which letters contained the particulars of the converſations he had had with Nanna Purnaveeſe; in which, actuated by friendſhip, he had uſed every argument to convince him of your diſtinguiſhed virtues, and particularly of your ſincerity and good faith, and of the ſteadineſs of the Engliſh nation; as well as what he heard from Nannah Purnaveſe, what he ſaw of the ſtate of the Maratta armies, forts, &c. and of the meaſures which appeared to him moſt eligible to be purſued in future. I ſent them, accompanied by his reply to your letter, to Calcutta; from which you muſt have gained a compelte knowledge of every matter. Thoſe letters were dictated ſolely by friendſhip to the Engliſh, without regard to any other conſideration.

On the receipt of your laſt letter, I diſpatched it, together with your letter addreſſed to him, to Dewagur Pundit: and likewiſe wrote to Row Pundit Purdhaun and his Miniſters, what I judged moſt expedient to induce them to adhere to the Engliſh friendſhip.

In the mean time letters were received at Poonah, by Pundit Purdhaun, Nanna Purnaveeſe, and Dewagur Pundit, adviſing them, that he had been inveſted by the Governor General and Supreme Council of Bengal with full powers to negociate and conclude a treaty of peace and friendſhip with the Marattas; and that as it was his wiſh to eſtabliſh a good underſtanding, and to remove every ground of quarrel and diſpute, he deſired that a perſon of truſt might be deputed from thence to negociate with him, having no doubt but that on his arrival, all matters would be amicably ſettled; that he himſelf would repair to any place that ſhould be fixed on for an interview, where every thing might be perſonally adjuſted: a letter to Pundit Purdhaun was likewiſe received from you, expreſſing your deſire for an amicable accommodation. All theſe letters agreed in ſubſtance with thoſe from this quarter; in conſequence of which long conferences were held between Nanna Purnaveeſe and Dewagur Pundit, on the mode of re-eſtabliſhing harmony and friendſhip; the full particulars of which you will learn from the letters of Dewagur Pundit. A perſon of truſt was deputed on the part of Pundit Purdhaun to Surat, to negociate with Colonel Goddard, and Dewagur Pundit wrote his ſentiments very fully to the Colonel; you will therefore write to Colonel Goddard ſuch inſtructions as you judge expedient to remove all grounds of diſputes and hoſtilities. The earneſtneſs and zeal with which, prompted by my friendſhip to you, I have all along acted, and ſtill act in this buſineſs, and the conſtant and unreſerved communications which I have made to you on every event, you are, I doubt not, fully ſenſible of; an equal return of confidence on your part, in communicating your ſentiments to me, will be highly advantageous; and I doubt not but you will therefore let me frequently have the pleaſure to hear from you on this ſubject, as well as reſpecting your health.

Your permiſſion to Beneram Pundit to go to Benares for the recovery of his health, was very proper. I underſtand what Beneram writes, and ſince I began this letter, I have received two other letters from you of the ſame tenor as your former ones, to which I have fully replied both before and in my preſent letter. Beneram Pundit has orders to return to you as ſoon as his health ſhall be eſtabliſhed. The recal of Major Camac into the provinces of Bengal was highly proper and expedient.

What you have repeatedly written on the ſubject of caution and profound ſecrecy, I perfectly underſtand; all men of wiſdom, and more particularly rulers of a State, will preſerve their ſecrets in an equal, nay, even in a ſuperior, degree, to their lives.

As Mr. Elliott died in the way, and there was no perſon left but Ramkaunt who was acquainted with the languages, and was in fact intelligent and well verſed in buſineſs, for which he had great abilities, I thought it adviſable to join him with Beneram Pundit; and to theſe two alone I communicated both verbally and by letter whatever I had to ſay to you; but except theſe two, no one has been made acquainted with any part of our deſigns, nor ſhall any one in future.

APPENDIX, No. 224.

Bengal Perſian Correſpondence.

Tranſlation of a Letter in the Hindoſtanny Language, from Lalla Takur Doſs: dated the 21ſt of Shabaun, 3d September 1779; received the 12th October 1779.

I HAVE been honoured with your gracious letter accompanied by Karetahs, from the Nabob Governor and yourſelf, addreſſed to Madho Row Sindeah, and Mhatah Sada Shinkur, Moonſhey. I cauſed the Karetah to be delivered to Pateel Sahib by the ſaid Moonſhey: Pateel Sahib ſent it to Nanna Purnaveeſe, who returned it five days afterwards in a letter from himſelf. Pateel Sahib having peruſed the letter, tore it, and gave orders to prepare an anſwer.

Appe Sabajee was ſome time ago ſent from hence to Poonah, to receive his diſmiſſion from Nanna Purnaveeſe to repair to Calcutta; but on the arrival of Dewagur Pundit at Poonah, by his advice his commiſſion was ſuſpended. Some time afterwards Pateel Sahib declared it as his opinion, and that he would ſend a meſſage through Apajee, that Lalla Takur Doſs ſhould be joined in commiſſion with Apajee, and ſent to Calcutta; on this, Mhata Sada Sinkur ſaid, "As this meaſure will not meet with the approba-

"tion

Appendix. No. 224.

" tion of the rulers of the Raje, if it is reſolved to eſta-
" bliſh a firm and perfect friendſhip, let the correſpon-
" dence with the Calcutta Chiefs on this ſubject be con" ducted through me, who am an old and experienced
" ſervant:" Pateel Sahib hearing this, continued ſilent. The Moonſhey related all theſe particulars to me; and added, that his diſpoſition was ſuch, that there was no depen-dence on him; that he was puffed with pride, and an arrogant opinion of his own abilities: and that it was to be apprehended, that after propoſals ſhould be made he would not abide thereby, which would draw the greateſt diſgrace on him.

You write, that whatever acts are done by Colonel Goddard are valid, and will be ratified: this I underſtand. The Colonel has accordingly entered into a correſpon-dence with Pateel Sahib and Nanna Purnaveeſe; and a Vackeel is gone to Surat, on the part of the Peiſhwa. Pateel Sahib, under the influence of avarice, ſubmits entirely to the authority of Nanna Purnaveeſe; who has the ſole direction of affairs. The Chiefs have publiſhed a declaration, that they will make war againſt any one who ſhall enter this country.

Some time ago intelligence having been received of the arrival of an Engliſh fleet at Bombay, a Vackeel on the part of Nanna Purnaveeſe, and Apajee on the part of Pateel Sahib went with preſents to Bombay, where they were to continue; but have ſince returned hither with the preſents.

Colonel Goddard has written ſeveral letters to the Peiſhwa and Nanna Purnaveeſe; the two firſt to the fol-lowing effect (See Modajee's laſt letters). In the third he propoſes an interview, by which all points might be ſettled, to which anſwers have been returned. If an in-terview is ſettled between the Colonel and Nanna Pur-naveeſe, Pateel Sahib will likewiſe repair to it.

Nanna Purnaveeſe is ſatisfied, that the Engliſh Chiefs would make their own terms, upon condition that they deliver up Ragonaut Row to him, or keep a ſtrict watch over him.

Nanna Purvaneeſe ſends frequent invitations to Pateel Sahib to repair to Poonah, who conſtantly replies, that he is coming; but the fact is, that he is employed in pre-paring a place of ſtrength for his own ſecurity, and his people have all orders to the ſame effect. After this is completed he will go to Poonah.

Nanna Purnaveeſe is deſirous of ſending Pateel Sahib to the Carnatic, and Hurry Pundit againſt Ragonaut Row; and although Pateel Sahib diſapproves of the deſigns, yet there is great reaſon to believe that Nanna Purnaveeſe will ſend him thither.

Goolzar Khan, formerly an officer of the Peiſhwa, but who is now attached to the intereſt of Ragonaut Row, has connected himſelf with the Kellahdar of Ajeer: has raiſed 10, or 12,000 horſe, and invaded Khandaſe; and levied large contributions on the villages under the Peiſhwa's government: he is alſo conſtantly augment-ing his army. In conſequence of this, Pateel Sahib wrote to the forces ſtationed in the neighbourhood of Burham-pore, who were formerly ſtationed with Ragonaut Row, to take meaſures to reduce Goolzar Khan: this body, conſiſting of 4 or 5,000 horſe, were defeated by Goolzar Khan: Nanna Purnaveeſe, receiving advice of this, diſ-patched the brother of Bhum Row Panſa, with 7,000 horſe and foot againſt him, who likewiſe received a de-feat. Afterwards Baharee Rutt Sindeah, with a good army, on the part of Pateel Sahib; and on the part of Nanna Purnaveeſe, a body of Gardies, French, &c. were ſent againſt him. In the two aforementioned engage-ments, great numbers on this ſide were killed, and Goolzar Khan's people have taken poſſeſſion of their houſes, and placed guards in them. Goolzar Khan is making vigorous efforts to continue the war; and it is ſaid that Ragonaut Row has ſent a party of forces and ſome artillery to his aſſiſtance.

Baboojee Holcar is lately arrived in this diſtrict from Hindoſtan; levied ſeven lacks of rupees on the city of Indorſe; and removing all Tocojee Holcar's officers, is making large contributions on the country, and raiſing forces: he is connected with Ragonaut Row.

It is reported that Amrut Row, the adopted ſon of Ragonaut Row, is gone on a negociation to Bombay.

Nanna Purnaveeſe has ſent a body of his forces to take poſſeſſion, and ſecure the ghauts and roads on the ſide of Tellegong.

All the Chiefs here to outward appearance are united in the ties of friendſhip: but in reality after the faſhion of Hindoſtan, the greateſt hatred and jealouſy prevails amongſt them all. In fact troubles exiſt in every quarter. Hyder Naig, Nizam Alty Khan, &c. as well as the Maratta Chiefs, are all making the greateſt preparations.

Dewajee Pundit, the Dewan of Modajee Bhoſila, lately arrived at Poonah, and entered into engagements with Nanna Purnaveeſe, with whom he is in high favour. Dewa-jee repreſented to Nanna Purneveeſe, as follows: " What " have all thoſe men done for you, on whom you have " expended lacks of rupees for their ſervices? Had you
" aided me with money and a body of forces, the affairs
" of the country would long ere this have been ſettled
" on the beſt footing; and the large ſums due from
" Bengal on account of the Chout would have been re" covered. I am at all times a duteous ſubject of the " Sirkar, and the ſums above mentioned were the " property of the Sirkar; but as you never once gave me
" the leaſt hint that it was your wiſh, we were under
" the neceſſity of entering into a ſpecious friendſhip
" with the Engliſh, and accordingly directed our Vac-
" keels to conciliate the good will of the Engliſh.

Nanna made anſwer—" Write to Modajee to raiſe
" troops; as whatever may happen, our intereſts are
" one; but ſhould he fear that the Engliſh in con-
" ſequence of his increaſing his forces would be diſ-
" pleaſed at him, let him write to them, to conciliate
" their friendſhip, a meaſure which I myſelf am like-
" wiſe contriving to effect."

Dewajee aſſented thereto; at the ſame time ob-
" ſerving, The Engliſh nation is a thorn in our ſide,
" replied, which it is neceſſary to get rid of." Nanna
" I am not inattentive thereto, and ſhall leave no means
" untried for that purpoſe."

Modajee Bhoſila has a Vackeel with Pateel Sahib, and a conſtant correſpondence is kept up.

Pateel Sahib, hoping to prevail on the Kellahdar of Ajeer to deliver up the fort for a ſum of money, means ſhortly to ſend him a Kellaat.

Of the two Surat gentlemen who were hoſtages, with Pateel Sahib, for the performance of the treaty, one was left at Poonah on account of ſickneſs; he is now arrived at the camp; he is allowed near 40 ſervants, 15 Talin-gas, and from Pateel Sahib has 26 horſemen to keep up his dignity.

They are both treated with the greateſt honour and attention, and are ſuffered to amuſe themſelves with hunting, in company with the horſemen. You are ac-quainted with one of theſe gentlemen by name, Farmer.

The Dewan of theſe gentlemen went on ſome buſineſs to Poonah: Nanna Purnaveeſe ſuſpecting that he came as a ſpy, threw him into priſon; which when Pateel Sahib heard, he wrote to Nanna Purnaveeſe, and obtained his releaſe from confinement, and return to the camp.

From the day when Ragonaut Row eſcaped from the hands of Pateel Sahib, the latter has appeared very much aſhamed, and alſo greatly apprehenſive leſt Nanna Purnaveeſe ſhould entertain ſuſpicions of him; and when the time of payment of the ſums ſtipulated arrives, ſhould diſpute the claim on the plea that he let Ragonaut Row go.

Nanna Purnaveeſe threw into priſon the private intel-ligence writer, whom the gentlemen at Surat ſent to Poo-nah; and the Engliſh in return, as ſoon as they heard it, im-priſoned a perſon who was at Surat on the part of Nanna.

Letters have been received here from Timur Shah's Vackeel, at Shajehanabad to this effect: that Timur Shah at the invitation of the King Shah Allum is coming to Hindoſtan to drive out the Europeans and ſettle the affairs of the country: if you are deſirous of friendſhip with him ſend an Arzie to him. Pateel returned for anſwer to Timur Shaw's Vackeel, I am coming into Hindoſtan, and on my arrival will inform you of my ſentiments.

To-day being the 21ſt of Shabaun, (3d of September) a Shakka from his Majeſty, and a letter from the Nabob Abdulaed Khan were received. Thus much I have learnt of their contents, that Rajah Baboo Pundit, on the part of his Majeſty, and on the part of Abdulaed Khan, Rajah Ram Cuſhmeery, have been diſpatched with Kellaats for the Decan Chiefs.

As long as Nanna is at the head of affairs, Pateel Sahib will reply to the Karetahs you tranſmit me, with deceit and artifice; no confidence ſhould be placed in him, for he has no idea of good faith and integrity.

APPENDIX, No. 225.

Bengal Secret Correſpondence.

From Dewagur Pundit; received 31ſt October 1779.

ACKNOWLEDGING the receipt and recapitulating the contents of the Governor General's letter of the 12th of May.

This letter reached me in a happy hour at Poonah, afforded me the greateſt pleaſure, and made me acquainted with every matter.

Your unreſerved communications on the late events, and of your ſentiments, is a moſt pleaſing proof of that friendſhip which is ſo firmly eſtabliſhed between you and the Maha Rajah my maſter, and was highly proper, it having increaſed our regard for you an hundred-fold.

I have already written you volumes between the time of Colonel Goddard's arrival at Hoſhungabad, to his departure for Surat; in which I touched on the improper meaſures adopted by the Bombay Chiefs for the ſupport of Ragonaut Row; the inexpediency of the march of Major Camac; the multitude of the forces of Decan; their mode of conducting war; the conjunction of the Nabob Nizam-ul-Dowlah, &c. with them in their hoſtile intentions; together with my ſentiments on the meaſures you ought to adopt in future; to which I was induced by my ſteady and ſincere friendſhip for you; which alſo led me to inform you and Colonel Goddard of my intention to repair to Poonah: and after my arrival there, and having had frequent private conferences with the Miniſters, I diſpatched a letter for you to my maſter, containing a full and particular account of theſe conferences; of my unreſerved ſentiments thereon; of the real ſtate of affairs in Decan: and of the expediency at all events of peace and friendſhip with Row Pundit Purdhaun; which letter you have doubtleſs received before this time, together with letters from my maſter, and are fully acquainted with the contents. You have likewiſe undoubtedly, by this time, been made acquainted with the repeated letters of advice which, prompted by friendſhip, I wrote to Colonel Goddard, and the anſwers which he returned to me, to Pundit Purdhaun, and his Miniſters; to wit, that by letters from Calcutta he had been inveſted with full powers to negociate and conclude a peace with the Marattas; that he encloſed a copy of his commiſſion, and it being his wiſh to introduce a friendly intercourſe, and to remove all cauſes of diſpute or quarrel, he propoſed that a truſty perſon ſhould be ſent to negociate with him on the part of Pundit Purdhaun; and that in conſequence of this letter Nanna Purnaveeſe had diſpatched a truſty agent with letters to him.

In the mean time another letter was received from Colonel Goddard, ſaying, that as much time will be loſt in the journey backwards and forwards of a third perſon, he earneſtly wiſhed for a perſonal interview; and that he would repair to any place which ſhould be fixed on for that purpoſe. The Miniſters in anſwer thereto, with the advice of Scindeah, Holcar; and other Chiefs, wrote to Colonel Goddard, preſſing him in the moſt friendly terms to repair thither. It is highly probable, that ſhould Colonel Goddard come, all cauſes of quarrel and hoſtile acts contrary to treaty will be entirely removed, and all matters be conducted in future with friendſhip, integrity, and good faith; which will be productive of happineſs to the people, and of innumerable other advantages. Actuated by the moſt zealous friendſhip for you which poſſeſſes my whole heart; I employ every degree of wiſdom, penetration, and foreſight with which the Almighty has endowed me, and to which you give ſuch liberal praiſes for the accompliſhment of this deſirable end. My journey to Poonah was ſolely with the view of eſtabliſhing friendſhip between you and Row Pundit Purdhaun. Appendix. No. 225.

Your late letters to my maſter and me, in which, prompted by your friendſhip, you unreſervedly communicated to us the ſtate of affairs, and your determination to preſerve peace, as long as it can be done with honour to your Government, being ſent me from Naigpore, I in ſeveral private conferences with Nanna Purnaveeſe, preſſed the contents of them on him in the moſt forcible manner; and your letters to Pundit Purdhaun, expreſſing your deſire to preſerve the former treaties, arriving at the ſame time, and agreeing exactly with your aſſurances to my maſter and to me, I ſeized the opportunity of enlarging confidently to Nanna Purnaveeſe on the ſubject of your diſtinguiſhed virtues, your magnanimity, foreſight, and penetration; your ſkill in the myſteries of Government; your good faith, candour, and integrity; your adherence at all times to juſtice: your exemplary piety; your deliberation in reſolving in any meaſure, and your ſteadineſs in the purſuit of it; and in ſhort, on every one of thoſe great qualities which I have become acquainted with in the courſe of our correſpondence, and from the relation of the Vackeels who have paſſed between us. I alſo propoſed to him a mode of re-eſtabliſhing peace and friendſhip, from which the moſt important advantages would accrue. To this he replied,—

" It has ever been a maxim with ſkilful Rulers of States, " that the preſervation of peace and friendſhip with their " powerful neighbours, is infinitely preferable to war and " contentions; the one ſecuring peace and happineſs, " and the other bringing diſtreſs and calamity to the " people whom God has committed to their care; and " that whoever injures them, and from worldly motives " quits the paths of integrity and good faith, and there- " by plunges them into misfortune, will ſurely feel the " reſentment of God, their peculiar protector.

" Theſe conſiderations have ever kept me in awe, in- " ſomuch that I never ſuffer the treaties out of my ſight, " and daily call myſelf to an account; and I have the " greateſt attachment to all ſuch as make integrity " and good faith the rules of their conduct, and with " ſuch wiſh to be connected. The praiſes which you " give to the Nabob Amaud-ul-Dowlah, and which I " have likewiſe heard from other quarters, are due to " his virtues. But hear what I have to ſay to this ſub- " ject, and reply thereto. It is this:

" By reaſon of the vicinity of their ſettlements, and " the traffic carried on to the iſlands by boats laden with " the merchandize of all nations, the ties of friendſhip " were knit between the family of Pundit Purdhaun " and the Engliſh Chiefs, an intercourſe of letters and " vackeels eſtabliſhed very early, and alſo ſeveral trea- " ties concluded between them on certain conditions. " In the time of the troubles excited by Ragonaut Row, " when he took refuge with the Engliſh at Bombay, by " the deputation of Colonel Upton, who came from Cal- " cutta with full power to negociate, notwithſtanding the " exiſtence of ancient treaties, ſeveral articles which " may be found in the treaty were added. Of theſe new " articles then concluded reflect impartially, and declare " on whoſe ſide has the breach ariſen.

Appendix, No. 225.

" The arrival of a trader of the French nation to diſpoſe of merchandize here, was conſtrued into a deputation on the part of his nation; and letters written on " the ſubject, although there was not the leaſt truth in " the ſuppoſition or grounds for it. Notwithſtanding " this, ſolely from my deſire to oblige the Engliſh " Chiefs, I hove that merchant diſgracefully from the " Durbar, although the meaſure was quite contrary to " every maxim of Government, intending thereby to " give them complete ſatisfaction. When ſuch marks " of friendſhip were ſhewn on this part, their liſtening " to the perſuaſions of Ragonaut Row, and conceiving " the greateſt advantages might be derived from him, " their furniſhing him with warlike ſtores, a large train " of artillery, and a formidable army, and precipitately " advancing to Boregaut, and marching from thence, " ſpreading the flames of war around, can ſurely " never be reconciled to integrity and good faith: yet " notwithſtanding this, in the midſt of a furious war, " when the Bombay Chiefs made propoſals for peace, " and certain conditions being mutually agreed to, " and Ragonaut Row delivered into our hands, they " requeſted to be allowed to return to Bombay with " their followers, we furniſhed them with an eſcort for " their ſafe paſſage, and with every thing that could af- " ford them convenience, and ſhewed them every in- " ſtance of kindneſs. At the time when the Bombay " Chiefs began hoſtilities, repeated letters, with an ac- " count of theſe tranſactions, were written to Calcutta. " Since the Nabob Amaud-ul-Dowlah has authority over " all the ſettlements, how could the invaſion of the " Bombay Chiefs be of their own accord?"

To this I replied—All theſe hoſtile acts were highly diſapproved by the Nabob Amaud-ul-Dowlah; and all the meaſures adopted by the Gentlemen of Bombay, were contrary to the advice and inſtructions of the ſaid Nabob and his Council; and of this aſſertion the following is a proof, that the army which was arrived at Hoſhungabad remained on the banks of the Nerbudda, whilſt theſe hoſtile tranſactions were carried on almoſt in their very ſight, and never made the leaſt attempt to join the Bombay Chiefs. Nanna Purnaveeſe anſwered, " Had it happened that our army had been defeated by " that of Bombay, and all matters had ſucceeded to their " wiſh, would they or would they not have received the " higheſt commendations from the Council of Calcutta, " for their ſervices and the advantages they had pro- " cured? If this meaſure was really undertaken with- " out the approbation of the Nabob Amaud-ul-Dowlah " and his Council, why does he not, ſince he has the " power of confirming and diſmiſſing in all the ſettle- " ments, puniſh the Chief of Bombay for his diſobedience " of orders and contempt of authority, which would carry " conviction with it? As the Nabob Amaud-ul-Dowlah " has, in a late letter which I have received from him, " expreſſed his intention to adhere to treaty, and has in- " veſted Colonel Goddard with full powers to negociate " and ſettle all points in an amicable manner; and as " letters have likewiſe been received from the ſaid Co- " lonel, propoſing the renewal of engagements, and de- " ſiring that a truſty perſon may be deputed to confer " with him on ſeveral points; and declaring, that in re- " ceiving Ragonaut Row, he has no improper deſign, " but has done ſo ſolely from a conviction that it was for " the common intereſt, as it would prevent him from " exciting troubles in any other quarter, and offering to " repair in perſon to any place that ſhall be fixed on for " an interview, where the ſentiments of each party may " be made known and diſcuſſed, and all points amica- " bly ſettled. I have in conſequence diſpatched a truſty " agent with a friendly letter to him, and preſſed him in " the warmeſt terms to come hither;—ſhould he come, I " am ready to ſettle all matters agreeable to treaty. I " ſhall not be the cauſe of a breach of friendſhip, for I " regard the union of the two States as productive of " innumerable advantages to both. Do you write to " this effect to Colonel Goddard, and to the Nabob " Amaud ul-Dowlah."

I have accordingly written to Colonel Goddard and to Mr. Watherſtone, pointing out to them the advantage of peace, and the expediency of their repairing here; and actuated by the warmeſt friendſhip to you, I have, though highly diſagreeable to me, taken on myſelf the part of a news-writer, to make you acquainted with every tranſaction and occurrence here; and I have no doubt but you will regard it as a moſt convincing proof of my zeal and attachment to you. You will, I hope, write inſtructions to Colonel Goddard to re-eſtabliſh a friendly connection, to adhere to treaty, and to give no aſſiſtance to Ragonaut Row; for in my judgment, ſuch a friendly connection will be the cauſe of happineſs and numberleſs advantages to both parties.

1ſt Poſtſcript.

The ſum of this voluminous letter is briefly this: The ſole adviſer and manager of the affairs of Row Pundit Purdhaun's Government is at this time Balajee Pundit; a man poſſeſſed of firmneſs beyond all the other Miniſters of this State; he is intelligent, penetrating, and true to his word; and ſo faithful an obſerver of his engagements, that he would never deviate in the leaſt inſtance from them, although by ſo doing he had a proſpect of the greateſt acquiſitions of territory or wealth, or even could he thereby enter into immediate poſſeſſion of ſuch advantages. After long conferences and arguments with him, he ſaid to me, " The " good faith of the Engliſh Chiefs, on every occaſion, " is ſo well known, that it becomes a proverb through- " out the country. The Nabob Amaud-ul-Dowlah, who " is a perſon of integrity, truth, and upright conduct, " and poſſeſſes authority to regulate the meaſures of all " the ſettlements, and of confirming and diſmiſſing the " Chiefs of them, writes in his late letter, that he is " ſteady to the treaty concluded through Colonel Upton, " who had full powers from the Governor General and " Council for that purpoſe. This aſſertion ſurprizes me; " and my aſtoniſhment increaſes when I ſee the Engliſh " of Bombay acting in direct violation thereof; and the " ſaid Nabob taking no means to puniſh them, or to " ſhew his reſentment for their diſobedience and con- " tempt of his authority, yet writes me, that he con- " tinues firm to the treaty of Colonel Upton. What " can I ſay to this, or in what light can I regard it? As " the proſperity and well-being of a State depends on " a ſtrict adherence to its engagements, no advantage " will ever be gained by a Chief from the breach of " them; nor will any of his meaſures in ſuch caſe be " crowned with ſucceſs."

I replied, the Engliſh will never deviate from the treaty concluded by Colonel Upton. To this Nanna Purnaveeſe anſwered, " Colonel Upton's treaty is here, con- " ſider it, and you will ſee that ſome of the conditions " of it we fulfilled, and others have been eluded, and " ſtill remain in diſpute." When the treaty was produced, I perceived that there were ſeveral points on which he had a right to demand ſatisfaction, and which appeared evident breaches of treaty; and that to leave them in their preſent unaccomplished State, would effectually prevent the eſtabliſhment of a ſincere friendſhip, it being primarily neceſſary to clear the path of all thorns and obſtructions, which being done, every matter might be ſettled to the ſatisfaction of both parties; my friendſhip to you, therefore, will not ſuffer me to expreſs my approbation at theſe points being left unfulfilled, and I ſhall therefore point out to you the ſeveral particulars to which I allude, and which are theſe ſtated by Nanna Purnaveeſe.

When, notwithſtanding the exiſtence of ſolemn and ancient treaties, they took the opportunity of the abſence of the Miniſter, who was gone towards Burhanpore to make themſelves maſters of Salſette by ſtratagem; I would aſk, how this can be reconciled to the faith of treaty, and upon what grounds they acted?

When it was made an article in the treaty, that they ſhould not afford an aſylum to any of the dependants of the Raje, much leſs give them aſſiſtance; in what light ſhall we conſider their reception of Ragonaut Row; the encouragement they gave to him, and the war which they entered upon under his directions? and what can be ſaid on ſuch a ſubject?

In oppoſition to this conduct on their part, in diſregarding an article of ſuch material conſequence, that the violation of it entirely deſtroyed the treaty, and neceſſarily produced the moſt violent tumults and diſorders, I merely from a deſire to oblige the Nabob Amaud-ul-Dowlah, acted contrary to every maxim of Government, in refuſing countenance, and violently expelling from the Durbar, a creditable merchant of the French nation, who came hither to trade, although there was not the ſmalleſt mention in the treaty prohibiting Chiefs of the French Nation being received here. Let theſe two circumſtances be fairly weighed in the balance of juſtice, and ſee which ſcale predominates. Colonel Upton, who was inveſted with plenipotentiary powers from the Governor and Council inſerted in the treaty, that no aſylum ſhould be given by the Engliſh to Ragonaut Row: notwithſtanding which, the Governor of Bombay takes every meaſure to ſupport his cauſe, and will not diſcontinue his violation of treaty. See and conſider then, on whoſe ſide does the blame fall.

In the affair of Shaſhtie, which is a peculiar hereditary poſſeſſion of ours, all the acts of the Government of Bombay are clearly oppoſite to juſtice and good faith. As the Nabob Amaud ul-Dowlah is well verſed in the maxims of Government, and had we not demanded the reſtoration of it, it would have been a proof of the greateſt weakneſs and imbecility; we referred the determination of the matter to him—Let me aſk you what equity he ſhewed in the deciſion.

The Governor of Bombay, regarding the various treaties contracted between Row Pundit Purdhaun, and the Miniſters of the King of England, as the play-things of children, taking Ragonaut Row with him, repaired in an hoſtile manner to Boregaut; we delayed entering on hoſtilities for a full month, on the principle that the ſaid Chief would certainly, in the mean time, receive orders from Calcutta, forbidding him to proſecute ſo unjuſtifiable a war; but when they advanced beyond the Gauts, we were remedileſs, but we conſtantly wrote to Calcutta a full account of the tranſactions and events. Conſider this matter with impartiality, and declare on which ſide were the flames of war excited.

The declaration in their letters to your maſter and you, that they are deſirous to abide by and preſerve the engagements, as far as they can with honour, is highly right and commendable. As they wiſh to ſupport their own honour and dignity, by promoting the proſperity and ſucceſs of the affairs of their State, it is likewiſe equally incumbent upon them to keep in view the honour and dignity of the Raje of Row Pundit Purdhaun, which has ever been ſo illuſtrious, that it is needleſs to dwell on the ſubject. If the honour and dignity of both States are regarded as one, and their intereſts as the ſame, they will inviolably preſerve the faith of engagements, and promote the daily increaſe of friendſhip, and not when the circumſtances of the times ſhall render it expedient, ſpeciouſly to enter into engagements at the ſame time that they ſecretly mean to lay in wait for an opportunity of breaking them to their own advantage. As the Nabob Amaud-ul-Dowlah poſſeſſes integrity and good faith, let him maturely conſider the above articles and be himſelf the judge; let him make compenſation for the non-performance of terms which cannot be now fulfilled, and write to Colonel Goddard on the advantages of an union between the States, and directing him to proſecute it; and I, on my part, am ready to join therein with the utmoſt good will.

Actuated by the warmeſt friendſhip to you, I have committed to paper whatever occurred to me in the peruſal of the treaty, what I heard from the Miniſters, and what my own judgment, free from partiality, pointed out, together with my ſentiments thereon. Appendix. No. 226.

2d Poſtſcript.

Reſpecting the recal of Major Camac, &c. literally the ſame as what the Rajah ſays on thoſe ſubjects.

3d Poſtſcript.

Colonel Goddard formerly wrote, that he was coming for the ſake of a meeting, at which all points ſhould be cleared up, and every matter finally adjuſted. In conſequence thereof, the Miniſters preſſed him in the warmeſt terms to come; in anſwer to which, Balajee Pundit Purnaveeſe has lately received a letter from the Colonel, that he has freely conferred on all matters with the agent who was ſent to him from Poonah, who has written a particular account thereof, that if he receive an anſwer thereto, and any mode of accommodation is determined on, he will repair to any place between Surat and Poonah, to have a meeting there with Nanna Purnaveeſe.

Nanna Purnaveeſe gave the letter into my hands, which I found to contain what I have written above. As he formerly of his own accord wrote that he would come hither in perſon to ſettle all matters, which was earneſtly wiſhed at Poonah, and now wrote in the manner before recited, Nanna Purnaveeſe ſaid to me, "it was his own "propoſal to come hither, and now he heſitates, what "is to be ſaid on this ſubject; there is no ground for "heſitation. I am of a diſpoſition abounding with can-"dour and integrity, and never violate the faith of "engagements; notwithſtanding their repeated breaches "of treaty, I am ready to accommodate matters through "Colonel Goddard; and will never, as long as atten-"tion is ſhewn to the honour and dignity of this family, "relinquiſh my hold of their friendſhip." From all that I have heard from the Poonah Miniſters, it appears they are inclined to peace; it is therefore incumbent on you to accommodate matters in an amicable manner.

It was my intention to have ſtaid here till after the arrival of Colonel Goddard, and his interview with the Miniſters, and to have ſettled all matters perſonally, by ſuch a treaty as ſhould not in future have been expoſed to the ſmalleſt deviation, and afterwards to have returned to Naigpore; but on the receipt of the letter from Colonel Goddard, which made it appear very uncertain if he would come, and at any rate that there would be a conſiderable delay; and as moreover it is a cuſtom in my family at the ſeaſon of the Duſſarah, to dedicate ten days and nights to the honour of God, and as I wiſh to pay the greateſt attention to this duty, which draws down bleſſings on me for the reſt of the twelve months, I am about to ſet out for Naigpore: you will therefore write to Colonel Goddard, if you judge proper, to purſue the line of peace, and to come hither to an interview with the fulleſt confidence and ſecurity, and will regard me at all times as your moſt warm and zealous friend.

APPENDIX, No. 226.

Copy of a Letter from Dewagur Pundit, Modajee's Dewan, to General Goddard, encloſed in his Letter of the received the November 1779.

I HAVE received your agreeable letter which you diſpatched at the ſame time with your reply to Row Pundit Purdhaun, but which by accident did not reach me till fifteen days afterwards; and received the greateſt pleaſure from its contents.

Induced

Appendix. No. 226.

Induced by regard to you, and the intercourſe which has ſubſiſted for ſome time, I wrote to you in a ſtyle dictated by friendſhip. After which you wrote me, that in the preſent ſtate of affairs my journey to Poonah was a very eligible and well-judged meaſure, and highly pleaſing to you; and expreſſed your wiſh, that as I was perfectly acquainted with the negociations carrying on, and with your ſentiments, and was privy to the repreſentations made by Mr. Watherſtone, that I would ſtate the facts to Row Pundit Purdhaun and Nanna Purnaveeſe, and remove all doubts and ſuſpicions from their minds, being convinced that I was earneſtly deſirous of promoting peace and friendſhip between your State and that of Row Pundit Purdhaun, by every means in my power. You add, that the confidential agent diſpatched by the ſaid Row will ſhortly reach you, and that as the ſending Mr. Watherſtone would occaſion much delay, you had judged it beſt not to diſpatch him, but that after the arrival of the deputies, if it can be ſo managed, you will repair in perſon to this quarter, and will have a meeting with the Miniſter Nanna Purnaveeſe at any place which ſhall be fixed on for that purpoſe, and in my preſence ſettle the terms of a mutual peace and friendſhip. With regard to Ragonaut Row, you write that you have kept him with you, but not as conſidering him the enemy of this State; that your motives for detaining him have been that by ſo doing you ſhould promote the common intereſt. My friend, my coming to Poonah was ſolely from friendſhip and attachment to the Nabob Amaud-ul-Dowlah, and regard for you; that by my endeavours all miſunderſtandings and heartburnings might be removed, and the ties of friendſhip ſo firmly knit, as to ſtand every future ſhock. For this purpoſe all particulars were explained to Mr. Watherſtone, and alſo written to Calcutta; to repeat them would be therefore ſuperfluous.

The conduct of the negociations with the Maratta State, and of the correſpondence with Pundit Purdhaun and his Miniſters, for the eſtabliſhment of friendſhip and alliance; the propoſal that a perſon of truſt ſhould be deputed, and the reſolution of repairing hither in perſon after the arrival of ſuch deputy, to remove by a perſonal interview all cauſes of miſunderſtanding; the reſtoring the affairs ruined by the conduct of the Bombay Chiefs, and by that means acquiring immortal honour in the eyes of all the Engliſh Chiefs, were not acts of a common ſtamp, or to be undertaken by every one: you alone were equal to them, and by the bleſſing of God every point will be ſettled. All your plans are maturely digeſted, and conſiſtent with ſound policy, and I who am at all times your ſincere friend and well-wiſher, in my conferences with the Miniſter Nanna Purnaveeſe, have not forgotten the ſmalleſt tittle of your diſtinguiſhed virtues, but have placed them in the cleareſt point of view; and ſhould you come here and have an interview with the Miniſters, every matter will be ſettled in the moſt ſatisfactory manner.

No obſtacle remains, and every thing is for good faith and a ſteady adherence to treaty, as you will more fully learn from the letters tranſmitted to you from Row Pundit Purdhaun, and his Miniſter Nanna Purnaveeſe. After the arrival of Row Pundit Purdhaun's deputy, you will doubtleſs determine to repair hither, that by means of a perſonal conference, all matters may be completely ſettled without the intervention of Vackeels or letters; you will ſuffer no kind of delay to ariſe, which may obſtruct the execution of a meaſure which has been already ſufficiently weighed, and is ripe for accompliſhment, and of the very firſt importance.

I ſtated to Nanna Purnaveeſe in the ſtrongeſt terms what you write reſpecting Ragonaut Row, and convinced him of the propriety of your meaſures.

A Karetah and letters from the Nabob Amaud-ul-Dowlah, addreſſed to the Maha Rajah my maſter, and to me, which were tranſmitted to Naigpore by the way of Cuttack, were ſent from thence to me at Poonah; the purport of which is, that he is ready to confirm the ties of friendſhip and a mutual good underſtanding with Row Pundit Purdhaun, in any manner that ſhall not bring diſhonour on the Engliſh Government. In anſwer thereto, with the approbation of Nanna Purnaveeſe, I have written what was required for the preſervation of friendſhip, and of the faith of treaty, and I doubt not but you have received inſtructions from Calcutta, conformable thereto. In a word, you will regard me at all times and in all places as ſincerely and unchangeably attached to you, and ready to fulfil every duty of friendſhip. May you ever enjoy peace of mind, and undiſturbed felicity!

Poſtſcript.

After I had made myſelf acquainted with the exact ſituation of affairs, and in long conferences with Nanna Purnaveeſe diſcovered his views, I wrote an anſwer to the Nabob Amaud-ul-Dowlah's letter, propoſing means for the removal of all paſt miſunderſtandings, and the eſtabliſhment of a firm and laſting friendſhip for the future, which I ſhall tranſmit to him on my arrival at Naigpore, with a letter from my maſter. I encloſe you copy of this letter for your information, which will give you a clear inſight into every matter. If you can, write to me frequently, and ſend your letters with expedition on the ſtate of affairs, as it will be attended with great advantages you will not neglect to do ſo. Since writing the above, letters from Calcutta to the ſame effect with the former ones addreſſed to my maſter and me, have been received. This is for your information.

Poſtſcript.

As ſince my arrival at Poonah matters have been ſo far adjuſted, that all doubts, miſunderſtandings, and ſuſpicions have been removed from the breaſt of the Miniſter, and he has diſpatched Luchmun Row, the ſon of Gobind Row Purnaveeſe, to you, with letters expreſſive of his friendly diſpoſitions, and waits impatiently for your arrival, which he looks forward to with the greateſt pleaſure, knowing that it would be the means of adjuſting all points, and of giving ſtability to the treaty, by diſregarding which the Chief of Bombay has thrown every thing into confuſion, and brought matters to their preſent paſs; and as he has provided a place at the diſtance of two coſs from the city, and erected tents, pavilions, and every thing neceſſary for your honourable reception there, he means to give you a meeting. I make no doubt, that laying aſide the medium of agents and letters, which only procraſtinate buſineſs, you will without delay repair hither in perſon, when all matters may be adjuſted and finally ſettled in a conference; and the ſuſpicions which the bad conduct and repeated breaches of faith on the part of the Bombay Chief have given birth to, in the mind of Nanna Purnaveeſe, may, by your integrity and good faith, which is founded on the good faith of the Governor Amaud ul-Dowlah and his Council, be entirely removed.

As my negociations have ſo far removed all obſtacles to friendſhip, that on your arrival, by the bleſſing of God it may be eſtabliſhed on the firmeſt baſis, and no doubt or ſubject of conteſt now remains, I have deſired permiſſion of the Miniſters to return to Naigpore to celebrate the Duſarah, as is my invariable practice, and ſhall ſhortly ſet out. Do not attribute my departure to any other reaſon than what I have aſſigned, or ſuppoſe, that after having engaged in negociations to effect a conciliation, at the time when they were nearly effected, and you on the point of coming hither, that I would quit Poonah except from neceſſity; my tongue is the faithful interpreter of the ſentiments of my heart, and the Miniſter Nanah Purnaveeſe alſo poſſeſſes the ſame diſpoſition, and ſhould you come to Poonah will receive you with every mark of honour and reſpect, will ſhew you all the rites of hoſpitality, faithfully adhere to his engagements, and pay every degree of attention to your words

words, which are in fact the words of the Nabob Amaud-ul-Dowlah and mine. He will alſo make you acquainted with his own propoſals, by which time I ſhall have finiſhed my buſineſs at Naigpore, and impatiently expect letters from you and Nanah Purnaveeſe; by theſe means both your affairs and mine may be properly executed. Be ſatisfied therefore with my departure, for whenever I may be wanted I am not far off, but ſhall be ready on notice given me by the Miniſter. Another circumſtance which renders my departure abſolutely neceſſary, is the news I have received of my wife's illneſs. I have mentioned this to remove every kind of doubt from your breaſt, and you may depend upon it. Regard me always near you.

APPENDIX, No. 227.

Extract of general Letter from the Court of Directors to the Governor General and Council of Bengal, 14th May 1779.

Par. 1. BY the Eagle packet we have received your advices relative to the meaſures taken for eſtabliſhing an alliance with the Rajah of Berar. At preſent we ſhall only remark, that the undertaking appears to us contrary to the Company's former policy, to our engagements with Ragoba and Nizam Ally, and doubtful reſpecting any reaſonable proſpect of advantage to ariſe therefrom to the Company. Theſe are our general ideas on a ſummary view of your proceedings; but as the ſubject is important, it ſhall have an early and impartial conſideration, and our further ſentiments and orders thereon ſhall be communicated to you by the ſhips which remain to be diſpatched ſo ſoon as convoy ſhall be ready to ſail for their protection. In the mean time we encloſe a tranſcript of inſtructions ſent over land by Colonel Capper to Bombay, dated the 31ſt of Auguſt 1778, concerning Ragoba, copy whereof, and alſo a packet for you, were tranſmitted by the ſame conveyance, which we hope you have received; and that the injunctions contained in the letter to you of that date have been duly obſerved.

APPENDIX, No. 228.

Extract of general Letter from the Court of Directors to Bombay, dated 27th May 1779.

Par. 45. HAVING already acknowledged the receipt of your Secret Letter of the 29th December 1778, we have only to obſerve, that as your proceedings ſeem conſiſtent with our former engagements to Ragoba, and your treaty of the 24th of November conformable to that concluded with him in 1775, your conduct on the occaſion has our approbation.

46. Before the receipt of your letter we had been informed by our Governor General and Council, of the appointment of Mr. Elliott to treat with the Rajah of Berar; your letter acquaints us with the death of that gentleman, and likewiſe that the Governor General and Council did not intend to appoint any other perſon to ſucceed him, until advices from the Rajah ſhould enable them to determine concerning the expediency of the meaſure.

47. We obſerve by an article of Mr. Elliott's inſtructions, that in caſe he ſhould have reaſon to believe you had commenced any negociation, or entered into engagements for the reſtoration of Ragoba, he was to ſuſpend his negociation until ſuch event ſhould have been verified by authentic information from you, and from Mr. Moſtyn; and therefore we earneſtly hope, that upon your negociation and treaty with Ragoba being communicated to our Governor General and Council, they would concur with you in giving full effect thereto, and deſiſt from entering into any new connections, which might ſet aſide or counteract your recent agreement with Ragoba. Appendix. Nos. 227 to 229.

48. We expect the greateſt economy and frugality has been obſerved in the diſburſement of money, and expenditure of ſtores, on Ragoba's account; and in this ſtage of the buſineſs can only direct, that the moſt effectual meaſures be taken for procuring a certain and early reimburſement of all charges incurred by the Company, on account of your preſent undertaking in his favour.

51. We tranſmit for your information ſuch parts of our preſent letters to Bengal, as relate to the payment of your bond debt, and to the intended negociation with the Rajah of Berar.

APPENDIX, No. 229.

Extract of a Letter from the Nabob Wallah Jah. Received 21ſt September 1779.

THE hoſtile meaſures of Hyder Ally Khan towards the Engliſh, his warm attachment to the French, and his endeavours to induce the French to make war on the Engliſh, I have clearly ſeen for theſe twenty years paſt, and I have repeatedly given my friends intimation thereof, and have at ſeveral convenient opportunities collected magazines, and propoſed to my friends that we ſhould rid the country of an incendiary, who, whilſt ſuffered to remain, would ever be the cauſe of trouble, and that there would then be no future cauſe to apprehend the French intrigues in Hindoſtan, and the perpetual tranquillity of the country would be inſured; but the artful profeſſions of the ſaid Khan ſerved him as a veil to ſcreen his real deſign.

War breaking out in Europe between the Courts of Great Britain and France, we loſt no time in getting poſſeſſion of Pondicherry, which Hyder Ally was prevented from ſuccouring by ſeveral reaſons. At the time when the ſiege was opened, he was employed againſt the fort of Chattuldurk, the Chief of which was his moſt conſiderable opponent; he was alſo ſo ill with a fiſtula as to leave little hopes of life. The Maratta army was on that ſide of the river Kiſtna, and to crown all, it was the ſeaſon of the rains. By theſe reaſons alone he was prevented giving aſſiſtance to the French. Afterwards, when the Engliſh determined to reduce Mhye, he did every thing in his power to deter them from the attempt, and abſolutely forbad them to attack it, ſending publicly hoſtile meſſages and letters to them. All theſe particulars I have already written you an account of, and the Governor and Council here, and Sir Eyre Coote, are well acquainted therewith. Hyder Ally was prepared to ſupport the French; but for the Engliſh to begin hoſtilities againſt Mhye, not doubting but the French would be able to hold out until a reinforcement ſhould arrive from Mauritius, when he would join them, and throw the blame of the breach on the Engliſh. By the bleſſing of God, through the valour and activity of the Engliſh, Mhye was immediately reduced; and the news of the attack and reduction by the Engliſh reached Hyder at the ſame time. Vexed and boiling with indignation at this intelligence, he immediately marched with his veteran and numerous army againſt Kurpah, a dependency of the Carnatic, and reduced it; and throwing Abdul Huckkeem Khan, the Fougedar of that place, with his whole family, into a diſgraceful confinement, he ſent them to Serungpatam. He then ſent a numerous body of forces againſt the Zemindar of Winkutgerry, who is a Ryot and Aumil of mine, to demand in a haughty ſtyle a large ſum of money, who ravaged that country. As from Mullewar to Pulnar is dependent on the Carnatic, he ſent bodies of his horſe to infeſt the borders, and obliged the Naibs of the diſtricts to ſubmit to contributions, by threatening them with an invaſion. The Ryots being alarmed, neglected the cultivation of the lands, and numbers of them fled from their habitations.

Appendix. No. 229.

Hyder Ally waited in hopes that, provoked by these insolences, I should be induced to take some step which might give him a plea to invade my dominions; he also looked for the arrival of a French force from the Mauritius, with which he was determined to join and make open war against us. Being disappointed in this expectation, he expressed himself in terms of the highest displeasure to the French Vackeel, and to the French gentlemen who went to him from Pondicherry and Mhye, saying, "Your forces are not yet arrived; you have "broken your engagement with me; had I confided in "you, and commenced hostilities, the whole burden of "the war would have been left on my shoulders." It was at this time that he dispatched a French gentleman on a ship of his own to the Mauritius, to require forces to be sent him from thence, engaging to pay their expences. As soon as I heard of this circumstance, I made it known to my friends. This intelligence, which I first learnt from newspapers, is now confirmed by the relation of Captain Fenwick, who saw Hyder Ally's ship at the Mauritius. From this it is evident, that the French forces will be received into Hyder Aly's dominions, and from thence, in concert with him, will invade the Carnatic.

Hyder Ally, by the reduction of Kurpah, has encompassed the Carnatic, and opened for himself a road into the Circars of Guntore, Ellore, and Rajimundery, and by means thereof no intelligence from the other side of Kurpah can reach the Carnatic but with his permission. From several newspapers received from Hyder Ally's camp, and by the letters from my officers, which mention, that large bodies of his cavalry are assembled on the borders of my country, and that they are taking every means to facilitate the march of an army, by clearing the roads; it appears clearly that his designs are hostile towards us. I have never entertained the ambition of possessing myself of another's country; my sole views, from the first, have been to secure the tranquillity of my own country, and to root out all the friends of the French, who are our enemies. The favourable opportunity which once presented itself, is lost for the present, until by the favour of God, and the good fortune of the English nation, to whom the Almighty has ever been propitious, a glorious peace is made with the French in Europe; it is highly expedient to preserve tranquillity in this part of the country, because my friends, by the return of Ragonaut Row into their protection, will once more be engaged in a war with the Marattas.

The conduct of the Nabob Nizam Ally Khan, in his negociations with Mr. Hollond, carries an unfriendly appearance, since he has positively refused to dismiss the French from his service, and, on the contrary, has settled a lack of rupees per month, for the pay of that body, together with 5000 country infantry attached to them; and, placing the greatest confidence in them, makes them the advanced body of his army. He is also desirous of contracting a friendship with Hyder Ally Khan and he is engaged in a strict treaty of friendship with the Poonah Ministers; and any marks of support shewn to Ragonaut Row, will increase his disinclination to the English. Induced thereto by the sincerest friendship, I have communicated my sentiments to you without reserve.

Postscript.

As, by the favour of God, you, my friend, and your Council, are possessed of wisdom, and a knowledge of the true interests of this country, and have invariably shewn a desire to the utmost of your power, to preserve the tranquillity of the country; and I, on my part, actuated by the sentiments of friendship, have made it my constant rule to communicate to you my sentiments on the measures most conducive to the interests of the Company and English nation, and now repeat, that since matters, are in this state, that enmity is declared with the Marattas at Poonah, and the Nabob Nizam-ul-Dowlah is ready to take an adverse part, and Hyder Ally Khan, who bears an invincible hatred to the English, is on the eve of hostilities, and all these Powers, notwithstanding their dislike to each other, have united, for the purpose of opposing the English; it therefore appears to me advisable that a determinate system be immediately adopted. I will give you such particulars relative to these three Powers as have come to my knowledge, and you will then act as you shall deem best, to bring the quarrel with them to a happy conclusion

Peace with the Marattas will at once procure the end desired; for if this takes place, the Nabob Nizam-ul Dowlah will be laid under the necessity of relinquishing his enmity, and the Marattas will join the English to chastise Hyder Ally Khan. It is not in the power of the Nabob Nizam-ul-Dowlah to join in friendship with the English, in opposition to the Marattas, nor would an union with him, if it could be effected, prevent a war with the Marattas.

In the first place, Hyder Ally Khan would never enter sincerely into friendship with the English. The particulars of his hostile conduct I have frequently communicated to you, and you have also seen them. It is therefore unnecessary to repeat them afresh. An union with Hyder Ally Khan would only serve to augment the enmity of the Marattas and Nizam-ul Dowlah; if therefore a speedy accommodation is made with the Marattas, it will put an end to the designs of the two other inimical powers; of those of Nizam ul-Dowlah, by the awe which the junction of the English and Marattas will occasion him; and of those of Hyder Ally by the chastisement he will receive from their joint forces.

I have received certain advice that Hyder Ally Khan has sent an agent to Poonah to solicit the Maratta friendship, who presses the Poonah Ministers to keep up their enmity to the English, and proffers his master's zealous assistance, and offers the payment of 40 lacks of rupees to settle his former accounts, and an annual peishcush of 11 lacks of rupees, and to restore the country on the other side of the Burmudder, which he wrested from them. The Marattas have not yet agreed to the terms, nor have they refused. They wait, meaning if a firm peace is concluded with the English, in conjunction with them to chastise the said Khan, or if the English should not choose to enter into that scheme, to execute it in conjunction with Nizam-ul-Dowlah; but if peace should not take place, then they will through necessity agree to the terms proposed by Hyder Ally. I have accordingly received repeated intimations on this subject from the principal of the Marattas, to the end that I might bring about a firm friendship between them and the English, and enter into an engagement that I will join in the chastisement of the common enemy, alluding to Hyder Ally Khan.

I have written this for your information. I enclose you copy of a letter which I have lately received from the Nabob Bassalet Jung, from Adoonie, informing me of the distress he is under by reason of the non-arrival of Colonel Harper with the English forces, and the open enmity declared against him by the Nabob Nizam-ul-Dowlah and Hyder Ally Khan, by reason of his connection with the English, and their having forbid him to relinquish Murtezzanagur, or hold friendship with the English; he also sends me copies of letters, which he has received from those Chiefs, which I likewise send to you. From these you will clearly perceive the hostile designs entertained by Nizam-ul-Dowlah and Hyder Ally Khan, against the English and Bassalet. The Nabob Nizam ul-Dowlah has therefore given the fort Maccool with a jaghier, in lieu of Kurnole, to Rummust Khan, the Talookdar of that place, to satisfy and induce him to come to him. The said Talookdar not being able to support himself against Hyder Ally Khan, agreed to the terms proposed to him, and sent off his family; he continued himself at Kurnole till the 26th of Rujjib, but I do not know if he is still there, or has since left it. The Nabob Nizam-ul-Dowlah has determined to send Lally, a Frenchman,

han, with 6000 Sepoys, 300 Europeans, and 1000 cavalry, to Kurnole, and has given the ſaid Talook in jaghire to the French, which has greatly ſtrengthened their power. It is a conſtant cuſtom to ſend the troops into cantonments during the rainy ſeaſon, but this year they have not been ſuffered to depart, but kept together in a ſtate of readineſs.

APPENDIX, No. 230.

Letter to the Governor General from the Nabob Nizam ul Mulk Bahadar; received 3d December 1779.

AT the time when Ragonaut Row took refuge at Bombay, and the Chief of that place made preparation for his ſupport, induced by the conſideration of the ſolemn engagements which through the Council of Madras has been formed between my Government and the Engliſh Company, I wrote you information, that in the treaty ſubſiſting between me and the Engliſh Company, amongſt many other articles, this was one—That the enemies of this Government were the enemies of the Engliſh; and their enemies mine: and that Ragonaut Row in conſequence of the friendſhip and connection between my Government and that of Row Pundit Purdhaun Madho Row Narain, was my enemy; and therefore the protection given him in Bombay, and the meaſures adopted for his ſupport by the Chief of that place, was highly improper and unaccountable to me. In reply to this you wrote me, that the faith and engagements of the Engliſh Company were inimitable, and that no breach of the treaty eſtabliſhed through the Council of Madras, ſhould take place in any quarter; and that the Engliſh Company were in friendſhip with Row Pundit Purdhaun in the ſame manner as with me; and had not the leaſt idea of breaking thoſe ties on account of Ragonaut Row. Implicitly relying on the candour of your profeſſions, I waited to ſee the effects of them; but every ſubſequent event has been in direct oppoſition thereto, and every act of which I have been a witneſs, in breach thereof. Witneſs the endeavours uſed by the Chief of Bombay for the ſupport of Ragonaut Row, and the vigorous exertions he has made to give them effect; the conſequences of which are well known. As it was my firm reſolve to adhere ſteadily to my former engagements, and to abide by your declarations, I withheld my aſſiſtance from Row Pundit Purdhaun againſt all ſolicitation, though bound by the laws of friendſhip to have afforded it to him; and before the troubles actually broke out, I wrote very fully to the Poonah Miniſters urging the ſtrongeſt arguments to them, and thereby effected the diſmiſſion of the French Ambaſſadors, who were at that time at Poonah endeavouring to eſtabliſh a friendſhip between that nation and Row Pundit Purdhaun and my Government, before they had been able to effect any thing; nor would I give any countenance to the advances which they likewiſe made to me. Yet I underſtand that notwithſtanding all this, the Chief at Bombay has formed new deſigns for the ſupport of Ragonaut Row; and that the ſaid Row, upon expectations, has again repaired to Surat; and that Colonel Goddard who is come to Surat from Calcutta, is likewiſe joined with the Bombayer, or in the ſame deſign; moreover, Mr. John Hollond is lately come to me on the part of the Governor of Madras; and excluſive of other propoſitions of the moſt dangerous tendency, deſires that the Paiſcuſh of Rajomundury, and other Circars, may be totally given up by me. And it further appears to be the wiſh of the Governor of Madras to obtain poſſeſſion, if it can be quietly done, of the Circar of Murtezzanagur, which my brother Armeer ul Oruah Sujah ul Mulk Bahadar holds in virtue of a treaty concluded by the Engliſh Company. As the propoſitions are unreaſonable, and contrary to treaty, and cannot but be attributed to unjuſtifiable views, I have anſwered Mr. Hollond, that ſuch propoſitions are inconteſtable proofs of a hoſtile diſpoſition; that if it is determined to break the treaty, it matters not to me; let them prepare to carry their deſigns into execution; and whenever they think fit to take the field, that I am prepared for all events that may happen; and thank God that the breach of treaty falls on them. Mr. Hollond has accordingly tranſmitted an account of all theſe particulars to the Governor of Madras; we ſhall hereafter ſee what anſwer he will return. By the bleſſing of God you, Sir, are endowed with an enlightened underſtanding and clear penetration, and are at the head of all the Engliſh ſettlements; I have therefore judged it proper to communicate all theſe matters to you, and ſhall likewiſe write you whatever may hereafter occur. Knowing me anxious for your reply, loſe no time in tranſmitting it to me.

APPENDIX, No. 231.

Poſtſcript of a Letter from the Nabob Wallaw Jaw. Received 21ſt September 1779.

AS by the favour of God, you my friend and your Council are poſſeſſed of wiſdom and knowledge of the true intereſts of this country, and have invariably ſhewn a deſire to the utmoſt of your power to preſerve the tranquillity of the country; and I on my part, actuated by the ſentiments of friendſhip, have made it my conſtant rule to communicate to you my ſentiments on the meaſures moſt conducive to the intereſts of the Company and Engliſh nation; and now repeat, that ſince matters are in this ſtate, that enmity is declared with the Marattas at Poonah, and the Nabob Nizam-ul-Dow'lah is ready to take an adverſe part; and Hyder Ally Khan, who bears an invincible hatred to the Engliſh, is on the eve of hoſtilities; and all theſe Powers, notwithſtanding their diſlike to each other, have united for the purpoſe of oppoſing the Engliſh. It therefore appears to me adviſable that a determinate ſyſtem be immediately adopted. I will give you ſuch particulars relative to theſe three Powers as have come to my knowledge, and you will then act as you ſhall deem beſt, to bring the quarrel with them to a happy concluſion.

Peace with the Marattas will at once procure the end deſired; for if this takes place, the Nabob Nizam-ul-Dowlah will be laid under the neceſſity of relinquiſhing his enmity, and the Marattas will join the Engliſh to chaſtiſe Hyder Ally Khan. It is not in the power of the Nabob Nizam-ul-Dowlah to join in friendſhip with the Engliſh, in oppoſition to the Marattas, nor would an union with him, if it could be effected, prevent a war with the Marattas.

In the firſt place, Hyder Ally Khan would never enter ſincerely into friendſhip with the Engliſh. The particulars of his hoſtile conduct I have frequently communicated to you, and you have alſo ſeen them; it is therefore unneceſſary to repeat them afreſh. An union with Hyder Ally Khan would only ſerve to augment the enmity of the Marattas and Nizam-ul-Dowlah; if therefore a ſpeedy accommodation is made with the Marattas, it will put an end to the deſigns of the two other inimical Powers, of thoſe of Nizam-ul-Dowlah, by the awe which the junction of the Engliſh and Marattas will occaſion him, and of thoſe of Hyder Ally, by the chaſtiſement he will receive from their joint forces.

I have received certain advice that Hyder Ally Khan has ſent an agent to Poonah to ſolicit the Maratta friendſhip; who preſſes the Poonah Miniſters to keep up their enmity to the Engliſh, and proffers his maſter's zealous aſſiſtance, and offers the payment of 40 lacks of rupees to ſettle his former accounts, and an annual peiſhcuſh of 11 lacks of rupees, and to reſtore the country on the other ſide of the Burmudder which he wreſted from them. The Marattas have not yet agreed to the terms, nor have they refuſed. They wait, meaning if a firm peace is concluded with the Engliſh, in conjunction with them them to chaſtiſe the ſaid Khan; or if the Engliſh ſhould not chuſe to enter into that ſcheme, to execute it in conjunction with Nizam-ul-Dowlah; but if peace ſhould not take place, then they will through neceſſity agree to the terms propoſed by Hyder Ally. I have accordingly received repeated intimations on this ſubject from the principal of the Marattas, to the end that I might bring about a firm friendſhip between them and the Engliſh, and enter into an engagement that I will join in the chaſtiſement of the common enemy, alluding to Hyder Ally Khan.

APPENDIX, No. 232.

Copy of a Letter from Brigadier General Goddard, to the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay.

Gentlemen,

SINCE my addreſs of the 29th, I have received a piece of material information from Poonah, which I have reaſon to think may be relied upon, and therefore communicate it to you without loſs of time.

The particulars of it are, that the Miniſter and Scindia, in conjunction with Hyder, Nizam Ally, and Moodajee Booſla, mean to make a general attack upon the Engliſh, at their ſeveral ſettlements, and have entered into, and ſealed written agreements for that purpoſe.

However the probability of their executing literally a plan of this nature, may be ſuſpected, I can now ſcarce entertain a doubt of the hoſtile views of the Miniſter; and as the ſeaſon for military operations opens immediately after the Deeſſora, to which feſtival a ſhort period now only remains, I beg to repreſent the neceſſity of having the army put into a condition for inſtant and active ſervice, by collecting ſuch force as may be ſufficient, either to attack ourſelves, or to reſiſt the attacks made by them. For theſe reaſons, I requeſt to urge the expediency of bringing up the troops from Mahé, without loſs of time, and to propoſe that the detachment from your Preſidency be alſo ordered to join me immediately.

It will be abſolutely requiſite, to provide againſt future exigencies, that a magazine of military ſtores be prepared, as contiguous to the ſcene of operations as poſſible. I therefore hope you will give orders for collecting a ſufficient quantity at this place, as well as at Broach, to anſwer any demands I may find it neceſſary to make; and ſhould there be any field artillery in either of thoſe garriſons, which can be ſpared from their neceſſary defence, let me requeſt that you will be pleaſed to authorize the Chiefs to deliver them up to my requiſition, ſhould I find it neceſſary, for the good of the ſervice, at any time hereafter to have them with me.

I ſhall write more fully very ſoon: and have the honour to be, &c. &c.

Extract of a Letter to General Goddard.

Sir,

We yeſterday received your letters of the 29th and 30th ultimo, and immediately diſpatched your packets for Madras and Colonel Braithwaite.

We can ſcarcely give credit to the information that has been given you of the combination formed againſt the Company's ſettlements. It may have been fabricated at the Durbar, now at this criſis of your negociation, to try what effect it may have upon your meaſures. Such artifices form no inconſiderable part of Maratta politics. But as you acquaint us you can ſcarcely entertain a doubt of the hoſtile views of the Miniſters, we ſhall be prepared to give you all the ſupport in our power, in caſe it may be requiſite.

We are, &c. &c.

APPENDIX, No. 233.

Bengal Perſian Correſpondence.

From the Nabob Wallah Jah. Received 17th October 1779.

I HAVE already informed you of the diſtreſſed ſtate of my own affairs, the importunities which I labour under from my creditors, and the connection of Tulkajee with the French, Dutch, and Hyder Ally Khan. It now appears by evident tokens that the preparations of the French to diſturb the tranquillity of the country are completed. The French have Vackeels with Nizam ul Dowlah, and Hyder Ally Khan, and a Sirdar at the head of a body of men with the Marattas; and by means of their connection with theſe ſeveral Powers, are employing every art to bring them into an entire compliance with their views; the Tanjoreans they are ſure of, as they are ſtrictly connected with the French, and will as ſoon as the diſturbances commence, ſupply them with all kinds of ſtores and neceſſaries. Hyder Ally Khan is in alliance with them to ſupport them with his troops, money, and the whole produce of his country. I alone who have from the beginning uniformly partaken of the proſperity and adverſity of the Engliſh nation remain in every ſituation their firm ally; but the injury done to my rights in the Tanjore country (on which the Company iſſued their orders without being acquainted with the real circumſtance of the caſe, and which Lord Pigot oppreſſively carried into execution in ſo improper a manner) has been highly deſtructive to my credit.

APPENDIX, No. 234.

Intercepted Letter from Nejifkhan to General Bellecombe without date.

I FORMERLY wrote to you the ſtate of affairs here, and tranſmitted to Mr. Chevalier through the channel of Mr. Viſage and Roy Manick Chund, an engagement, which I learn from Mr. Chevalier's letters he received and forwarded to you. I underſtand that at that time you were at Mahé, and are ſince returned to Pondicherry. I have communicated all matters to Mr. Viſage, and Roy Manick Chund; agreeable to what they will write you, ſend an army here without delay. Now that you are returned here, it is improper to delay the commencement of hoſtilities. Be fully ſatisfied with reſpect to me, and communicate to me the affairs of that quarter. Roy Manick Chund is firmly attached, and acts the part of a good and zealous ſervant. Let me frequently have the pleaſure to hear from you.

Intercepted Letter from Nejifkhan to Mr. Chevalier, without date.

On the late intelligence of news from Europe, and that you, my friend, though deſtitute of forces in Bengal, had exerted ſuch bravery and execution as to eſcape ſingly from the country of your enemies, and were ſafely arrived at the place of your deſtination; I was greatly rejoiced, and offered up thanks to God. You are well acquainted with all the affairs of this quarter, any delay will now be highly impolitic. I am ready according to my engagements. You muſt form your plan without delay.

I have fully communicated on the ſtate of affairs with

Mr. Viſage and Roy Manick Chund; having, conformably to what they will write you, ſpeedily formed your plan, make me acquainted with it. Manick Chund is with me; write me fully by the Dawk. I am come to Akberabad, and have ſummoned all the Chiefs under me to repair hither, and wait only for you. Every delay is impolitic; let me have immediate advices from you.

Bengal Secret Perſian Correſpondence.

From the Nabob Vizier. Received 16th June 1779.

I wiſh not to dwell on the ſtrict ties of friendſhip, and the ſolemn treaties which have ſubſiſted for ſo long a time between the illuſtrious Engliſh Chiefs and my family, ſince they are ſo well known as to make the repetition of them totally unneceſſary. In fact, there is not the leaſt diſtinction of intereſts, and our ſucceſs, proſperity, and advantage are in common. On this account I conduct all the affairs of my Government agreeable to the advice and concurrence of the Engliſh Chiefs.

Copy of a letter which I have juſt received from Litafut Ally Khan Bahadre, and of a letter which he wrote to his Vackeel Niſſar Ulla Khan, I encloſe for your peruſal and information, and that of my friends Intezam-ul Dowlah, General Sir Eyre Coote, Bahadre, Sciful Moulk, and the other gentlemen of the Council: from their peruſal you learn the particulars depending on the favour of God, and the friendſhip of the Engliſh Chiefs. I ſuffer no thought of any one elſe to diſturb my mind; but I am perfectly ſatisfied, and at eaſe.

But you are wiſe and penetrative; reflect on the tendency of theſe accounts. His Majeſty's Miniſters have entered into a ſtrict connection with the people of the ſouth, and have perſuaded them to repair to Hindoſtan. They are likewiſe intriguing and laying ſchemes, with a determined reſolution to ruin my affairs and thoſe of the Engliſh Company. I am the faithful ſervant and loyal ſubject of the Circar, and hold no connection with any one. The friendſhip of the Engliſh I keep ever in view. Write me a full anſwer to every particular. Mr. Hoſea likewiſe writes you very fully on this ſubject.

APPENDIX, No. 235.

To Rajah Chite Sing. Written 25th September 1779.

I HAVE received your letter: from the contents of which, as well as from the letters of Mr. Graham, and the copy of a letter which you wrote to that gentleman, and which he tranſmitted for my inſpection, it appears but too clearly, that inſtead of a cheerful compliance with the requiſition of this Government in the immediate payment of the ſum of five lacks of rupees, as your ſhare of the expence of the war for the preſent year, a requiſition which the great burthen of expence under which the Company labour for the defence of the Country, renders neceſſary, and to which you, as a ſubject of theirs, are bound to contribute, have thought proper, under the plea of inability, which is well known to be futile, to endeavour to amuſe the Reſident with vague and diſtant promiſes, meaning probably to protract, if not entirely evade, payment of the ſum required of you. In a letter which I lately wrote you, I informed you in expreſs terms, that this Government neither could nor would recede from ſo reaſonable a demand; and added, that in caſe of non-compliance on your part, Mr. Graham was authoriſed to ſummon a detachment of our forces to enforce our orders if it ſhould be found neceſſary. This I hoped would have opened your eyes, and induced you to relinquiſh a conduct which muſt, if purſued, bring the greateſt diſadvantage on you; but ſince even this intimation of our determination has proved ineffectual, I now think it neceſſary, to inform you, that we have deſired the Commander in Chief to diſpatch Major Camac with the detachment under his command to Benares, there to wait our further orders. He will accordingly begin his march immediately, unleſs the Reſident in the mean time, from the actual receipt of the ſubſidy, ſhall inform him, that it is unneceſſary for him to proceed further; and you will be pleaſed to obſerve, that ſhould you force us to a meaſure ſo contrary to our wiſhes, the whole expence of the detachment, from the time of its march, will be required from you, excluſive of the ſubſidy for the war.

Appendix Nos. 235 & 236.

From Rajah Chite Sing to the Governor General. Received the 25th September 1779.

I have been honoured with your gracious letter, urging me in the ſtrongeſt terms to the payment of five lacks of rupees on account of the ſhare of the expences of the war for the preſent year, and underſtand your pleaſure. Regarding your Highneſs as my maſter, in the repreſentation which I ſent you of my poverty and abſolute inability, I had no views of preſerving my property, and deceiving you by falſe pretences; but I had really no property left but what is apparent to every body, ſuch as elephants, horſes, &c. which for the ſupport of my credit I am obliged to keep, ſince that credit is the gift of your Highneſs's bounty; but ſince you have been pleaſed to direct that I ſhould raiſe the ſum by any means I can, I regard it as the effect of my evil deſtiny, that the repreſentation of my ſituation had no weight, and ſubmit to the neceſſity of this once complying with your order notwithſtanding the greatneſs of my poverty which exceeds all deſcription. I will make good the ſum gradually by the diſpoſal of my effects, and by loans, the particulars of which I cannot fully explain to you.

Since you have honoured me, your moſt faithful and obedient, with the greateſt marks of favour and regard, even to the honouring me with the title of your ſon, I am hopeful, from the continuance of that regard, that you will in future continually keep in view my welfare and intereſt, and will be kindly pleaſed to excuſe me from ſervices which are beyond my ability to perform, on a compliance with which my ſupport, nay even life and the proſperity of the country depends.

From Rajah Chite Sing. Received the 16th December 1779.

Your gracious letter, directing me to pay without delay the ſum of five lacks of rupees as my ſhare of the expences of the war for this year, honoured me by its arrival and made me acquainted with your pleaſure. My protector! before the arrival of your orders I had paid 150,000 rupees to Mr. Thomas Graham, and immediately on the receipt I ſent the balance of 35,000 rupees to the ſaid gentleman: I was not forgetful of it for one inſtant. As the troops were ſent here I have given that gentleman their pay from the day of their march till the day that the ſum was diſcharged, which was not quite 15 days. I am hopeful, that conſidering me to be attached to you from of old, you will protect and ſupport me by your favour and friendſhip, that my honour and dignity may be increaſed by it.

APPENDIX, No. 236.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, 13th December 1779.

READ the following letter from the Reſident at the Vizier's Court.

To the Honourable Warren Haſtings, Eſquire, Governor General, &c. Members of Council.

Honourable Sir, and Gentlemen,

I have delayed thus long addreſſing you on the ſubject of the firſt object of my buſineſs at this Court, in the hope of being able to inform you that I had obtained from his Excellency ſufficient ſupplies for the exigencies of the preſent year. I have had frequent conferences with him upon this ſubject, but have found him uniform and determined in a refuſal of any more tuncaws than thoſe obtained by Mr. Middleton prior to my having charge of this appointment. The encloſed paper N° 1, will ſhew you what they are, and for what ſervices they are granted. N° 2 is an eſtimate of the whole demands upon the Nabob for this year. From theſe accounts it will appear, that the whole amount required for the expences of the year is rupees 1,36,12,188. 12, and the amount granted, rupees 68,80,000.

Appendix. No. 26.

I have in vain laid before him the ruinous conſequences of a diſmiſſion of any part of the troops who are now employed under the command of Britiſh officers, the certain deficiency in the collections, and the laying of his country open to foreign marauders.

I have in vain urged him on the glaring impropriety of refuſing tuncaws upon the ſame diſtricts as laſt year; and giving them to his own troops, without diſcipline, to ſupport his Government, and always ready to plunder every country to which they have been ſent. His anſwer has been invariably, that while he had the means of providing for the demands of the Company, he has never refuſed it; but he is now deprived of that ability by the drought, which has obliged him to give deductions to the amount of twenty-five lacks of rupees; and even now the Aumils are deſirous of being releaſed from their engagement, upon the plea of inability to comply with them; his family, and that of his father and grandfather, after repeated promiſes made to them and broken, are ſtill unprovided for; that he did not believe the Council meant to ſeize the expences of his table and houſehold, which was all that was now left him. When I quitted him, I declared I did not imagine the Governor would ever conſent to the reform of the new brigade, and the other preſent eſtabliſhments for his collections; that if they were not diſmiſſed, they muſt be paid and from the ſources of that country, for the protection of which they were raiſed. That I would leave him, for the preſent, to conſider the means of granting the ſupplies, in the hope of an anſwer more likely to be pleaſing to our Government. A day or two after I received a letter from him, a tranſlate of which, N° 3, I think it neceſſary to lay before you. As I have never been able to induce his Excellency to adopt any other ſentiments than thoſe he firſt declared, and have received another letter from him, expreſſing much diſſatisfaction at my urgency on a point he had determined on, and would not give up unleſs he ſhould be compelled by the Governor and Council, I have thought it needleſs to preſs him further at preſent, but at his requeſt have tranſmitted a letter from him to the Governor General, ſetting forth his diſtreſs.

In this ſituation it only remains for me to lay before you the following extract of Mr. Nathaniel Middleton's letter of the 5th inſtant, the day on which charge was delivered to me.

"When I have of late preſſed his Excellency for further aſſignments he has pleaded inability to anſwer the very heavy demands which will this year fall upon him on account of the drought which has unfortunately happened, to the almoſt total deſtruction of the Khurreff harveſt, and the conſequent dimunition of his revenue. I am concerned to confeſs, there are but two good grounds for this plea. The misfortune has been general throughout the whole of the Vizier's dominions obvious to every body; and ſo very fatal have been its conſequences, that no perſon of either credit or character would enter into engagements with Government for farming the country, without a very heavy deduction in the laſt year's Jumma, which his Excellency has been compelled to allow to all who have hitherto been appointed to farms; and ſome who have engaged, even under theſe circumſtances, have to my knowledge made moſt urgent applications to the Nabob and his Miniſters, to be releaſed from their obligations, and allowed to relinquiſh their farms, which they found they could not hold but at a certain loſs to themſelves.' You will be ſoon convinced, by undoubted teſtimony, and loud complaints from every quarter, of the reality of this misfortune, which has neceſſarily been the means of delaying the general ſettlement of the country, and of preventing my hitherto getting aſſignments for more than rupees 68,82,000; but how far its operation and effects precludes the Nabob from anſwering the demands upon him on public account, you will be the beſt able to judge, from the ſtatements you will obtain of his eſtimated revenue."

As it appears from the whole of this extract, that Mr. Middleton had met with obſtacles, from a reaſon aſſigned, which no human foreſight could prevent, I hope your Honourable Board will not imagine I have been remiſs or inattentive; nothing but a compulſive order from me, upon an undefined right, could obtain the collection of a rupee more than I have tuncaws for; and nothing but a deciſive and ſpeedy inſtruction from you, when the time elapſed, may not occaſion a material loſs in the revenue, can poſſibly procure the grants neceſſary for the current diſburſements from my treaſury.

Upon this principle it is needleſs to add that no bill from the Preſidency can poſſibly be anſwered, ſince the demands on the treaſury upon the preſent eſtabliſhment exceed the expected income; and the laſt drafts of the Honourable Board, and their order for the payment of two lacks and a half of rupees to Captain Popham, which has been complied with, have ſo effectually drained the treaſury, that I have not yet been able to pay the firſt brigade for October. Upon the eſtimate of the preſent year, that of the troops under the command of Britiſh officers, paid by Mr. Wombwell, exceeds the laſt year's, by rupees 4,25,533. 12. 6. and the exceſs of the eſtimate of the temporary brigade is rupees 8,13,559. 13. 9. The paymaſters, upon being applied to by me declare, that the reaſon of this exceſs is, that the laſt year's was only what was ſuppoſed would be the expence, and the preſent year's eſtimate is made upon the actual diſburſements of laſt year. As his Excellency did not ſtart any objections to particular articles of theſe eſtimates, but to the whole, from a want of revenue to pay them, I have not thought proper to curtail any thing. Your letter under date the 25th Auguſt laſt, has occaſioned the incluſion of the army donation, and the oſs by exchange I thought but a proper demand.

Notwithſtanding what has paſſed, I ſhould not relax in my endeavours to prevail upon his Excellency to grant the tuncaws required, but he ſeems to be unmoveable in his preſent reſolution. He is now preparing for his departure to meet the General, and I imagine will not return before the arrival of deciſive inſtructions from your Honourable Board.

I have the honour to be with reſpect,

Lucknow, 19th November 1779. (Signed) E. Purling.

From the Vizier. Received the 16th December 1779.

In a former letter I repreſented you all the particulars of my diſtreſſes, and delivered it to Mr. Middleton, and wrote to the ſame purport to Rajah Gobind Ram. I am confident that you and the gentlemen of the Council will attend to my honour, and I conſider my country and property as not in the leaſt ſeparate from the Company, from you and the gentlemen of the Council; at this time Mr. Purling, who is arrived, at the repreſentations and inſtigations of intereſted perſons, treats me in a manner never before practiſed by any gentleman who has been here. Although I repreſent to him that every thing ſhall be done to his, the Company's and gentlemen's ſatisfaction; but that ſuch a mode of negociating, to which

which he is inſtigated by ſelf-intereſted perſons, is not proper. That he ſhould write to the Governor and Council every thing I ſay to him, and that whatever anſwer they may ſend he ſhould conduct himſelf thereby; but to this he does not agree, and acts according to his own pleaſure. I have wrote all theſe particulars to Rajah Gobind Ram, who will make them known to you. As I know the baſis of my Government to be founded on the favour of God, and your's and the gentlemen of the Council's protection, I hope you will ſend me an anſwer agreeable to my requeſt, keeping my honour in view; and alſo write to Mr. Purling, that as you and the gentlemen of the Council pay regard to my honour, he alſo muſt in like manner attend thereto, and not at the inſtigation of intereſted perſons adopt meaſures which bring diſgrace and diſcredit upon me. Should Mr. Purling converſe with me in the ſame manner as he did before, I cannot put up with the diſgrace, but leaving all my country under his management, will repair to you and the gentlemen of the Council.

Fort William, 31ſt Dec^{r} 1779.

J. E^{d} Colebrooke, Perſian Tranſlator.

To the Nabob of Oude. Written the 15th December 1779.

I have received your Excellency's letter informing me, &c. (recapitulates the contents of the letter) I have likewiſe ſeen a letter from your Excellency to Mr. Purling, the Reſident at your Court, to the ſame effect:—

It is a cauſe of equal concern and ſurprize to me, that you ſhould object or heſitate to grant tuncaws for the charges of an eſtabliſhment which was formed at your own particular ſolicitation for the defence of Robilchund and the Doaub, at a juncture when your ancient and natural enemies the Marattas are actually in arms, and ready to enter your dominions upon the firſt opening which ſhall be given them; nothing in my opinion will deter them from it, but the preſence of a formidable and well-regulated body of troops to oppoſe them. The dangerous conſequences of their entering your country and finding it in a defenceleſs condition, are too obvious and ſtriking for me to mention. Yet this muſt certainly be the caſe if the Company's forces allotted to its protection be withdrawn or diſbanded. You are not to imagine, becauſe you have enjoyed an uninterrupted ſeaſon of peace for ſome years paſt, that you have no enemies to interrupt you, and may therefore reſt in ſecurity without the expence of maintaining this force. On the contrary, it is to their power that you owe this tranquillity; and the neigbouring States, whoſe annual incurſions and ravages in the territories of your late father of bleſſed memory, were the cauſe of the Company's troops being firſt applied for, and ſtationed in your dominions to repel them, will not fail to diſturb you again as ſoon as this bulwark is removed, and the nakedneſs of your country ſhall invite them. Excluſive of this important conſideration, I think it proper to inform your Excellency, that I underſtand a mutual obligation between us to have been implied in the formation and maintenance of this eſtabliſhment. The Company are bound on the one hand to protect your dominions by its means, and you are bound on the other to defray the charges of it; while theſe terms are complied with on both ſides, neither has a right to complain, but you could never ſuppoſe when you applied to us to appoint this force to your ſervice, that the Company would be at the pains to raiſe and diſcipline ſo large a body of men, and to augment their eſtabliſhment by the addition of ſuch an extraordinary number of officers as were neceſſary to command them, if they were liable to be burdened with the ſole weight and expence of this force by a ſudden reſolution on your ſide to diſcharge them without previous and timely notice given to us, and our conſent received; and this too at ſuch a diſtance from the Company's poſſeſſions, as the countries in which they are now ſtationed.

I am convinced that a reſolution ſo pernicious to the real intereſts of your Government, ſo repugnant to the intimate connection which ſubſiſts between us, and ſo dangerous in the end both to your poſſeſſions and the Company's, cannot have been ſuggeſted to you by any but ſecret enemies to your State; and that on a mature conſideration of the caſe, their advice will appear to you as invidious as it does to me.

I therefore recommend to you in the ſtrongeſt manner, not only to ſhun the evil councils of ſuch falſe friends, but to diſmiſs them from your ſervice and confidence, as unworthy of both; I beg you to conſider that it is equally my inclination and intereſt to provide for the ſupport of your Government, and the defence of your dominions, againſt the power and invaſion of a foreign enemy. For this purpoſe General Sir Eyre Coote has thought it adviſable to viſit the different ſtations of the army in your country, and he will be conſtantly attentive to take means for your ſecurity, while your dependence is placed on the Company's alliance and aſſiſtance; but if you are determined to withdraw yourſelf from both, and to diſſolve the union which has ſo long ſubſiſted between your family and this Government, I expect that ſufficient time and notice of your intention be given to prevent our being involved in troubles from the haſty execution of it. I cannot conſent to your diſmiſſing the Company's troops at ſuch a diſtance from home, and at ſuch a criſis, nor can I at preſent agree to recal them. As much time at leaſt muſt be given to diſpoſe of this force, when you ſhall have no further occaſion for their ſervices, as was allowed for the raiſing of it; I therefore requeſt that you will attend to the repreſentations of Mr. Purling, who has been ordered again to apply to you in the name of this Government, for tuncaws for the neceſſary diſburſement of the current year; and although your revenues have ſuffered a diminution by the unfortunate failure of the harveſt, yet I am perſuaded that they will be ſufficient, with economy and attention, to anſwer every ſervice required from them; and that you will therefore cheerfully comply with the demand which Mr. Purling is ordered to make. At all events, the defence of your country is the firſt object to be attended to; and the regular payment of a well-diſciplined body of troops, is indiſpenſably neceſſary for this end. Add to this, that your engagements with the Company are of ſuch a nature as to oblige me to require, and inſiſt on your granting tuncaws for the full amount of their demands upon you for the current year, and on your reſerving funds ſufficient to anſwer them, even ſhould the deficiency of your revenues compel you to leave your own troops unprovided for, or to diſband a part of them to enable you to effect it.

APPENDIX, No. 237.

Extract of a Letter from General Sir Eyre Coote, to the Governor General and Council.

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

THE day before yeſterday I encamped near Allahabad, where the Vizier did me the honour of a viſit; and yeſterday morning, in my way hither, I returned it, and was received by his Excellency with every mark of reſpect and diſtinction.

This morning he called here, and we had ſome general converſation, which principally turned upon the ſubject of his attachment to the Engliſh, and his readineſs to ſhew the ſincerity of it upon all occaſions.

It is to be wiſhed we had employed the influence which ſuch favourable ſentiments muſt have given us, more to the benefit of the country and ourſelves; but I fear the diſtreſſes which evidently appear on the face of the one, and the failure of revenues to the other, are not to be wholly aſcribed to the Vizier's miſmanagement.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 12th November 1779.

PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident;
and
Edward Wheler, Eſquire.

Mr. Barwell indiſpoſed, and Mr. Francis at Houghley.
Sir Eyre Coote gone to viſit the different ſtations of the army.

THE Governor General delivers in the following minute and propoſed heads of a treaty with the Rana of Gohud for the conſideration of the Board.

"The Governor General informs the Board, that during their late receſs he has had ſeveral conferences with the Miniſter deputed by the Rana of Gohud, and inveſted with full powers, on the ſubject of a treaty of alliance offenſive and defenſive, propoſed by the Rana to be concluded between him and the Company. The Governor General lays before the Board a draft of conditions which he has formed on the baſis of the Rana's propoſitions for ſuch a treaty; and which, with the Rana's letter and propoſitions, he deſires may be entered in this place for the information and opinions of the Board.

(Signed) W. H.

Article 1ſt. A treaty of alliance, offenſive and defenſive, ſhall be eſtabliſhed between the Engliſh Company and Maha Rajah Ranna Lockinder Behadre.

2d. Whenever a war ſhall actually take place between the contracting parties and the Marattas, if the Ranna ſhall require the aſſiſtance of an Engliſh force for the purpoſes hereinafter deſcribed, ſuch a force proportioned to the exigency of the ſervice ſhall be immediately ſent, on his requiſition made in writing to the commanding officer at the neareſt ſtation of the Company's troops, ſhall remain with him as long as he ſhall require it, and return, when he ſhall diſmiſs it; the expences thereof ſhall be defrayed by the Ranna, at the fixed rate of twenty thouſand Muchledar rupees of the currency of Benares, or any other ſpecies of rupees of the ſame intrinſic amount, for each battalion of Sepoys on their preſent eſtabliſhment, with their proportion of artillery; the payment to commence on the day when the ſaid force ſhall paſs the borders of the Company's dominions, or the dominions of the Nabob of Oude; and ceaſe on the period ſtipulated for its return to either; four coſs being allowed for each day's march.

3d. This force ſhall be employed for the defence of the Ranna's dominions againſt all foreign or domeſtic enemies, and for the enlargement of his dominions by conqueſt on the Marattas.

4th. Whatever acquiſitions in purſuance of this treaty ſhall be made of countries lying contiguous to the Ranna's dominions, or formerly appertaining to them, whether effected by his or the Engliſh troops ſeparately or in conjunction, or obtained by treaty, ſhall be ſhared in the following proportions, viz. nine annas to the Company, and ſeven annas to the Ranna. The mean amount of the groſs revenue of the Company's ſhare collected in time of peace, in the ten years preceding, after deducting the charges of collection, which ſhall be aſcertained by Aumils choſen by each party, ſhall be fixed and paid by the Ranna, as a perpetual tribute to the Company, and the lands and forts ſhall be ceded to the Ranna.

5th. In caſe it ſhall be judged adviſable to employ the combined forces of the Company and the Ranna, in any diſtant operations againſt the common enemy, beyond the borders and neighbourhood of the Ranna's dominions, on requiſition made in writing from this Government, he ſhall furniſh ten thouſand effective horſe for ſuch ſervice; and each party ſhall bear his own ſeparate expence; which ſhall continue ſeparate until the return of the combined army to the borders of the Ranna's country, or until it ſhall be again employed in the ſervices mentioned in the third article of this treaty.

6th. Whenever the Engliſh forces are employed for the defence of the Ranna's country, or for the acquiſition of territory, the ſervice to be performed ſhall be preſcribed by himſelf; but the mode of executing it ſhall be left to the officer commanding the Engliſh troops.

7th. Whenever the combined troops of the Company and the Ranna ſhall be employed in any remote operations, ſuch as deſcribed in the 5th article, the commanding officer of the Engliſh forces ſhall conſult the Ranna on the choice of the ſervice to be performed; but the ultimate deciſion, in caſe of a difference in opinion, and the mode of conducting ſuch ſervice, ſhall be left entirely to the commanding officer of the Engliſh troops, with a reſervation of the Ranna's complete authority over his own troops.

8th. Whenever peace ſhall be concluded between the Engliſh Company and the Maratta State, the Ranna ſhall be included as a party in the treaty which ſhall be made for that purpoſe; and his preſent poſſeſſions, together with ſuch countries as he ſhall have acquired in the courſe of the war, and which it ſhall be then ſtipulated to leave in his poſſeſſion, ſhall be guaranteed to him by ſuch treaty.

9th. No Engliſh factory ſhall be eſtabliſhed in the dominions of the Ranna. No perſons of any denomination ſhall be ſent into the dominions on the part of the Engliſh Company, or with the licence of the Governor General and Council without his previous conſent, neither ſhall his Ryots be preſſed for any military ſervice, nor any authority exerciſed over them, but his own.

Ordered, That the above papers lie for conſideration.

From Maha Rajah Lockinder Sewae Rajah Ranna Chatter Sing Bahadre Dullar Jung. Received 7th June.

At the time when the late Colonel Leſlie arrived I was honoured with a friendly letter from you, ſince which time I have been conſtantly wiſhing for the happineſs of an interview; and till I hear the pleaſing news, I cannot enjoy peace of mind. I am hopeful that, actuated by a ſincere friendſhip, you will honour me with frequent letters which will afford me a high degree of ſatisfaction. I exert myſelf in complying with whatever the gentlemen of this diſtrict deſire of me, which I doubt not you have heard from them.

Tofuſſil Hoſſein Khan, who is lately gone to your preſence, is fully acquainted with all my affairs both paſt and preſent, and has doubtleſs repreſented the particulars to you: I have now written further particulars to him, which he will relate to you.

He has full power from me to manage my affairs; and I on my part am ready to the utmoſt of my power to promote the Company's affairs. Conſidering me as inſeparably connected with them, let me have the honour to hear often from you.

Liſt of Requeſts ſent to Tofuſſil Huſſein Khan.

You muſt obtain an engagement under the ſeal of the Company to the following effect, and ſend it to me.

Maha Rajah Lokinder Sewae Rajah Ranna Chatter Sing Bahadre Dulleer Jung, who has the moſt dutiful attachment to the intereſts of the Company's Sirkar, in conſideration that the ſaid Lokinder Bahadre is a ſharer of the proſperity and adverſity of the Sirkar, let not at any time any moleſtation be given by the Sirkar to the places places forming his Raje: let them be entirely exempted, and let not the Sirkar in any inſtance be diſpleaſed againſt him; and let no officer of the Sirkar ſuppoſe any diſtinction to exiſt; and on his application let them not fail to afford him aid and ſupport: let him not be oppreſſed from their factories or officers: let them ever keep in view his proſperity, welfare, and honour. Let this be guaranteed by an oath to God.

Whatever country of his Raje the late bleſſed Nabob Sujah-ul-Dowlah Behadre beſtowed on him, let a Sunnud conformable thereto be granted him by the Company's Sirkar, of the 56 Mahals with the forts in the diſtrict of Gowalier, to the junction of which to his Raje the late bleſſed Nabob had ſet his ſignature; of theſe, Sunnuds were obtained for 41 Mahals two Talooks; the Sunnuds for the remaining 15 Mahals were not prepared when the Nabob died, which cauſed the ſuſpenſion of them. I am now hopeful, that a Sunnud for the whole of the 56 Mahals may be granted me from the Company's Sirkar.

Whenever the forces of the Sirkar are employed in conjunction with my forces on an expedition on this ſide the Jummun, whatever countries to the banks of the Nerbudda ſhall fall into the poſſeſſion of the Sirkar, one half thereof ſhall be relinquiſhed to me for the expence of my forces, and the other half ſhall remain under the government of the Sirkar, and be one year kept under the Khalſa; and the collections made that year being made the ground of a permanent ſettlement, they ſhall be given over to me to make the collections, and pay them to the Sirkar. Let whatever expence may be found neceſſary for the ſupport of Tannahs, &c. be deducted; and whenever neceſſity requires the aſſiſtance of the Sirkar's forces, let them join me on my application for that purpoſe. My own forces ſhall be ſupported from my own ſhare, and no charges required from the Sirkar.

If at this time a delay muſt ariſe in the objects propoſed above, let the ſeveral Mahals in an annexed liſt, which are on this ſide the Jummun, in the poſſeſſion of the enemy, be granted to me; and let it be ſtipulated in the treaty, that the new Mahals which have been now beſtowed by the Sirkar, ſhall not be at all moleſted.

Calpee, Zerujee, Coneh, Bhandaer, Buncha, Gourſenaie, the Pergunnah of Giaur, dependent on Sukraum; the Pergunnah of Cutchratah, Cummar Punjehautey.

To Maha Rajah Chatter Sing. Written the 5th July 1779.

I have had the pleaſure to receive your friendly letter, with a liſt of articles encloſed for the formation of a treaty between us; and perfectly underſtand the contents.

I am much pleaſed with the ſentiments of friendſhip with which your letter abounds, and greatly approve of your plan; but as I wiſh to form a treaty with you on ſo firm and ſolid a baſis, as to leave no room for future explanations, I would adviſe that you ſend a perſon in whom you can confide, with full powers to conclude the treaty; or if you think proper, I will ſend a truſty perſon to you for that purpoſe. I requeſt you will ſend me an immediate anſwer, as the ſeaſon is paſſing. Knowing me, &c.

From Maha Rajah Sewae Ranna Chatter Sing Lokinder Bahadre: dated the 5th Shabaun, 19th Auguſt; received 23d September 1779.

After aſſuring you of thoſe ſentiments of friendſhip and regard which I bear you, and which form my greateſt happineſs, be it known to your enlightened mind, that my daily thanks are offered to the Almighty, who has eſtabliſhed this friendſhip between us.

Your agreeable letter, which I anxiouſly expected, has by its arrival afforded me the greateſt pleaſure, and by it contents completed my wiſhes. You write, that you entirely approve of the propoſals which I tranſmitted you; that I will therefore diſpatch a truſty agent without delay, who being joined with a confidential perſon on the part of your Sirkar, they may in conjunction finally ſettle all matters. This afforded me inexpreſſible pleaſure. Appendix No. 238.

As I regard your favour and regard as my firmeſt ſupport, and the warmeſt attachment to you as my higheſt intereſt, I ſhall ſtudy to the utmoſt to improve the connection ſo happily formed with your Sirkar, from the period of which I date my happineſs. The country Powers of this quarter are highly diſpleaſed with this connection; but as I am now under the auſpicious ſhadow of the Engliſh fortune, I have nothing to do with any of them; and I am fully convinced that, ſupported by your favour, any ill deſigns formed againſt me can meet with no ſucceſs.

Immediately on the receipt of your friendly letter I prepared to diſpatch a truſty agent to you; God willing, he will ſhortly arrive at your preſence, and will fully communicate all matters to you. I have alſo written briefly to Tuffuſil Huſſein Khan, who will inform you of the particulars.

Knowing me at all times dependent on your favour, let me be honoured with frequent letters from you, which will inſpire me with confidence, and afford me the higheſt pleaſure.

Poſtſcript.

As Tuffuſil Huſſein Khan, who is perfectly acquainted with my ſentiments, is at your preſence, there did not appear to me the leaſt neceſſity to diſpatch any other perſon to you; yet in compliance with your deſire, I have diſpatched Meer Muzhir Ally, who will repair to your preſence by the route of Cawnpore; but my dependence for the ſettlement of all points is on the aforeſaid Khan, in whom I place implicit confidence. I have mentioned this for your information.

The preſent ſituation of affairs in this quarter is as follows: Umpajee Kinkulla and other agents, who were in the Zilla of Jyepore, at the inſtigation of Madho Row Sindeah, the principal Miniſter at Poonah, have advanced to my borders, and have gained over to their party Sewajee Uppetul, and the other officers of Malwa; they purpoſe ſhortly to invade my country, and to commit hoſtilities againſt me. Having the good fortune of the Engliſh on my ſide, their attempts will, I doubt not, fail of ſucceſs; yet it is neceſſary to take means to oppoſe them, that the country may not ſuffer injury.

Whenever they have invaded my territories, they have gained nothing but ſhame and defeats, and will again be overcome. I therefore requeſt that you will write to the gentlemen in authority in this quarter, that whilſt Meer Muzhir Ally Khan is with you, they will afford me their aſſiſtance, ſhould I find it neceſſary to apply to them, to enable me to inflict on thoſe bad men the puniſhment of their evil conduct. At preſent they have collected but a ſmall force, and may be eaſily defeated; but ſhould they be allowed to gain ſtrength, and to begin hoſtilities, the flame of war once lighted up, may require great efforts to quench it; all I require is, that on my requiſition, a ſmall party of your forces may be ſent to join me, that an immediate end may be put to their attempts. To root out a ſhrub requires but little exertion of the ſtrength of one man, but ſuffer the ſame to take deep root, and the utmoſt efforts of an hundred will be inſufficient.

Extract of a Letter from the ſame to Tuffuſil Huſſein Khan.

I am greatly ſurprized that you deſire me to ſend a truſty agent; for whilſt a friend like you, zealouſly attached to my intereſt, and verſed in affairs, is in Calcutta, what neceſſity can there be for deſiring another perſon to be ſent? But as I did not think it adviſable to refuſe compliance to the deſire of the Nabob, and to the advice of friends, I have thought myſelf obliged to ſend a perſon, who will ſhortly arrive and inform you of the affairs of this quarter; but notwithſtanding his arrival, I leave the regulation of all matters and the whole negociations to you; you will do whatever you judge for my intereſt.

APPENDIX, No. 239.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 2d December 1779.

PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident,

Richard Barwell, Philip Francis, Edward Wheler, } Eſquires.

Sir Eyre Coote abſent on a viſit to the different ſtations of the army.

CONSIDERED the Governor General's minute, entered in conſultation 12th November, with the heads propoſed for a treaty to be concluded with the Rana of Gohud.

Read the letter from the Rana recorded in the books of the Perſian Correſpondence as received the 7th June laſt; alſo another letter dated the 5th of Shawbaun, and received the 3d September.

Read the propoſed heads of a treaty with the Rana of Goad, entered in Conſultation the 12th November.

The Governor General lays before the Board the following amended draft of a treaty propoſed to be executed with the Rana of Goad, and deſires that it may be ſubſtituted for the former entered in conſultation the 12th ultimo, as it contained ſuch alterations propoſed by the Miniſter of the Rana as the Governor General deems reaſonable; and to the treaty in this form, the Miniſter who is now preſent declares his entire concurrence.

Articles of Agreement made and concluded at Fort William in Bengal, between the Honourable the Governor General and Council for the Affairs of the Honourable Engliſh Eaſt India Company, on Behalf of the ſaid Company, on the one part, and Maha Rajah Luckindar Bahadur, Rana of Goad, for himſelf and his Succeſſors, on the other part; viz.

Article 1ſt. Perpetual friendſhip ſhall take place between the Engliſh Company and Maha Rajah Luckindar Bahadur and their ſucceſſors, and an alliance be eſtabliſhed between them for the proſecution of the objects hereinafter mentioned.

2d. Whenever a war ſhall actually take place between the contracting parties and the Marattas, if Maha Rajah Luckindar Behadur ſhall require the aſſiſtance of an Engliſh force from the Company for the defence of his country, or for the acquiſition of territory, ſuch a force, proportioned to the exigency of the ſervice, ſhall be immediately ſent on his requiſition made in writing to the commanding officer of the neareſt ſtation of the Company's troops, ſhall remain with him as long as he ſhall require it, and return when he ſhall diſmiſs it. The expences thereof ſhall be defrayed by the Maha Rajah, at the fixed monthly rate of twenty thouſand Muckſedar rupees, of the currency of Benares, or any other ſpecies of rupees of the ſame intrinſic amount, for each battalion of Sepoys on its preſent eſtabliſhment, with its proportion of artillery; the payment to commence on the day when the ſaid force ſhall paſs the borders of the Company's dominions, or the dominions of the Nabob of Oude, and ceaſe on the period ſtipulated for its return to either, four coſs being allowed for each day's march.

3d. This force ſhall be employed for the defence of the Maha Rajah's dominions againſt all foreign or domeſtic enemies, and for the enlargement of his dominions by conqueſt on the Marattas.

4th. Whatever countries ſhall be acquired from the Marattas in purſuance of this treaty, by the troops of the Company or of the Maha Rajah, ſeparately or in conjunction, whether by war or treaty (except the fifty-ſix Mahls which conſtitute the Maha Rajah's Jaghier, and which are not now in the poſſeſſion of the Marattas) ſhall be ſhared in the following proportions; viz. nine annas to the Company and ſeven to the Maha Rajah. The mean amount of the groſs revenue of the whole, ſhall be aſcertained by Ameens choſen by each party, on the collections made in the ten preceding years; and the amount of the Company's ſhare as determined by the ſaid Ameens, after deducting the charges of collection which are cuſtomary in ſuch countries, ſhall be fixed and paid by the Maha Rajah as a perpetual tribute to the Company, and the lands and forts ſhall be ceded to the Maha Rajah.

5th. In caſe it ſhall be judged adviſable to employ the combined forces of the Company and the Maha Rajah in any hoſtile operation againſt the Marattas, beyond the borders of the Maha Rajah's dominions, on requiſition made to him in writing from this Government, he ſhall furniſh ten thouſand horſe for ſuch ſervice, and each party ſhall bear his own ſeparate expence; and if upon the return of the Engliſh forces towards their own borders the Maha Rajah ſhall have occaſion for their ſervices, and ſhall make a requiſition to retain them, from the inſtant of ſuch requiſition he ſhall pay their charge in the ſame manner as ſtipulated in the 2d article.

6th. Whenever the Engliſh forces are employed for the defence of the Maha Rajah's country, or for the acquiſition of territory, the ſervice to be performed ſhall be preſcribed by himſelf, but the mode of executing it ſhall be left to the direction of the officer commanding the Engliſh troops.

7th. Whenever the combined troops of the Company and the Maha Rajah ſhall be employed in any remote operations, the commanding officer of the Engliſh forces ſhall conſult the Rajah upon all ſervices to be performed; but the ultimate deciſion in caſe of a difference of opinion, and the mode of conducting ſuch ſervices, ſhall be left entirely to the commanding officer of the Engliſh forces, with a reſervation of the Maha Rajah's complete authority over his own troops.

8th. Whenever peace ſhall be concluded between the Company and the Maratta State, the Maha Rajah ſhall be included as a party in the treaty which ſhall be made for that purpoſe, and his preſent poſſeſſions, together with the fort Gorvalier, which of old belongs to the family of the Maha Rajah, if it ſhall be then in his poſſeſſion, and ſuch countries as he ſhall have aquired in the courſe of the war, and which it ſhall then be ſtipulated to leave in his hands, ſhall be guaranteed to him by ſuch treaty.

9th. No Engliſh factory ſhall be eſtabliſhed in the dominions of the Maha Rajah; no perſons of any denomination ſhall be ſent into his dominions on the part of the Engliſh Company, or with the licenſe of the Governor General and Council, without his previous conſent; neither ſhall his Ryots be preſſed for any military ſervice, nor any authority exerciſed over them but his own.

Signed, ſealed and concluded at Fort-William this ſecond day of December, in the year of our Lord One thouſand Seven hundred and Seventy-nine.

Mr. Wheler delivers in the following minute prepared in conſequence of the Governor General's former propoſitions; which he thinks equally applicable to the preſent.

Mr. Wheler—I think myſelf a good deal at a loſs in giving my opinion on the ſubject of the treaty propoſed by the Governor General with the Rana of Gohud, as I think a matter of ſo much importance ſhould not have been introduced without being accompanied with the neceſſary information, to enable the members of the Board to judge of its expediency.

The Rana of Goad is, I believe, almoſt a new name upon our records. I am entirely unacquainted with the ſituation of his capital, except by conſulting the map; the extent of his territory, his revenue, the force he is able to bring into the field, and his perſonal character are points, on which I am equally uninformed; nor do I believe any Engliſhman, whoſe authority can be depended upon, has ever been within the territories of Goad, to aſcertain them; yet theſe are points on which the Board ought to have the moſt accurate information, before they proceed to decide on the propoſed treaty, otherwiſe they may engage in a war with the Marattas, either to ſupport or make conqueſts for a man, who has neither means nor capacity to enable him to bear any proportion in the riſk or charge which may attend ſuch a war.

Uninformed therefore as I am, I can only give my opinion on the general principle of the propoſed alliance, which is, that having for its object war, conqueſt, and increaſe of territory, I conceive it to be contrary to the true intereſt of the Company and Britiſh nation, and to the fundamental policy of the former; and in fact changes the condition of the Company here, from a commercial to a military State; that it is likewiſe in direct oppoſition to all our inſtructions, and peculiarly inexpedient at this time, when our treaſury is exhauſted, theſe provinces drained of their ſpecie; when the nation is engaged in a dangerous war in Europe, and the Company is threatened with a general combination of the Indian Powers againſt all their ſettlements.

How, under ſuch circumſtances, the condition of the Company is to be mended, by hiring out their troops, and making conqueſt for a petty Rajah, ſituated at ſo great a diſtance from their frontier, does not in anywiſe occur to me: I rather think that ſuch an alliance, and the meaſures propoſed in conſequence, are calculated to draw the neighbouring Marattas upon us; to expoſe our extenſive and unguarded frontier to waſte and ravage, and to involve the Company ſtill more in danger and expence, without any adequate proſpect of advantage. I am therefore againſt the treaty.

(Signed) Edwd Wheler.

Mr. Francis delivers in the following minute upon this ſubject.

Mr. Francis,

The Rana of Goad is a prince, with whom the Company have hitherto had no connection, and whoſe name, I believe, is unknown to them. I myſelf confeſs to have no other information concerning him, than what I have been able to collect within theſe few days. I ſee by Major Rennill's map, that his capital is ſituated in latitude 26 d. 20 m. longitude weſt of Calcutta 9 d. 40 m.; Gwalior, the place of which he wants to get poſſeſſion, is a ſtrong fortreſs in the hills, about 80 miles diſtant from Etawa, on the other ſide of the Jumna. From ſome officers who have been in that part of the country, I underſtand that the Rana is very poor; that his country is wild, rocky, and uncultivated; and that his army is little better than a rabble, ill armed and clothed, and without regular pay or diſcipline. The Governor General's motion gives us no information on any of theſe points; yet, in the conſideration of a queſtion of ſuch importance, as an immediate alliance, offenſive and defenſive, to be followed by a future guarantee of future acquiſitions, it ſeems eſſential to us to know, what are the ſtrength and reſources of the Prince with whom we are going to engage; the ſituation and extent of his country; together with the circumſtances and diſpoſition of the Powers who border upon it, and in whoſe diffeſences with him, whatever they may be, we ſhall probably become parties in conſequence of our preſent engagements.

Whether the conqueſt of Gwalior be the Rana's ſole and real object, or whether another expedition into Bundlecund may not be in fact the conſequence of our ſending troops to act with him, is in my judgment very uncertain. Colonel Leſlie ſet out under inſtructions, firſt to proceed towards Bombay, and afterwards to Berar. Inſtead of doing either, he marched into Bundlecund, took poſſeſſion of the capital, and remained there very quietly till he died. I think it not at all unlikely, that the officer who may command the expedition now projected, will follow the example of his immediate predeceſſor. There is nothing to be gained in the country of Goad, or its neighbourhood, whereas the Diamond country offers every temptation, it is the high road to fortune, and therefore the moſt likely to be purſued. Appendix, No. 239.

Having no authentic information before me, on the ſtate and condition of the Rana of Goad, I muſt draw my concluſions from the beſt I have been able to obtain; of courſe they cannot be in favour of a man ſo circumſtanced as I believe the Rana of Goad to be: at the ſame time I have no difficulty in declaring, that if all the facts were reverſed, it would not incline me to aſſent to the meaſure. The event of thoſe treaties in which we have hitherto engaged, does not furniſh me with any encouragement to enter into new ones, formed on the ſame principles or to follow that line of policy; I deem it unwiſe and dangerous in every ſenſe. It is inconſiſtent with the welfare of Bengal to employ our forces in diſtant ſchemes of conqueſt, whether for ourſelves, or others; it is inconſiſtent with the ſafety of Bengal, to ſend our troops beyond the Jumna, and much more to bind ourſelves to let them remain there at the diſcretion of any of the country Powers. The diſtance is too great, and the Rana of Goad too inconſiderable, to ſuffer me to ſuppoſe it poſſible that the impreſſion of any efforts of his, or of ours in conjunction with him, can be felt on the Malabar coaſt, or create a diverſion that can be of the ſmalleſt ſervice to Brigadier General Goddard.

But this, in my judgment, is not the moſt material conſideration. The extent of our preſent frontier, to ſpeak moderately and without the hazard of exaggeration, is full as great as we are able to defend; and if it were not ſo, a ſyſtem of invaſion and conqueſt is equally unnatural to the condition of the Eaſt India Company as a mercantile body, and to that of the territory they poſſeſs in India.

What ſort of concluſions muſt ariſe in the minds of men at home, who are capable of judging of ſuch queſtions, when they ſee that with all our preſent immenſe poſſeſſions, and with all the reſources which we ought to derive from them, it is neceſſary to their ſecurity that we ſhould endeavour to enlarge them.

On the ſame principle, and from the ſame cauſes on which ſuch meaſures are deemed neceſſary now, the future neceſſity of them muſt increaſe with every new acquiſition; we muſt continue to conquer as long as we continue to acquire.

They who think ſuch a ſyſtem of policy eſſential to the ſafety of the Company's actual poſſeſſions, muſt admit, that our ſituation in India is not only very precarious, but incapable of being fixed once for all upon a limited and ſolid foundation. But I am far from admitting that our eſtabliſhment here is of that nature, or that the meaſures in queſtion have any tendency to ſtrengthen or ſecure it.

Mr. Wheler's minute, to which I entirely ſubſcribe, has anticipated a great deal of what I intended to have ſaid. I ſhall therefore only add, that the ſyſtem of which this meaſure makes a part, counteracts the fundamental principles of the Company's policy, and cannot be purſued without direct diſobedience to their poſitive and repeated orders and inſtructions to this Government, nor without overſetting a principle laid down by the Governor General himſelf; and in which I entirely concur with him, that notwithſtanding the ſuperiority of the Britiſh force in India, its general line of action is and muſt be purely the defenſive.

The terms of the propoſed treaty are liable to many difficulties and objections. I ſhall only mention one. Guarantees between Princes and States are uſually (I believe always) reciprocal. There is a manifeſt reaſon, I confeſs, for not calling upon the Rana of Ghode to guarantee, as regularly as he ought to do, the poſſeſſions or future future acquiſitions of this Government; but it is ſuch a reaſon as reduces the Rana very low, and ought to deter us from entering into any alliance with him. It may involve us in the conſtant ſupport of his quarrels with his neighbours; but it offers us no compenſation or aſſiſtance in return, ſuppoſing the Company's poſſeſſions in any other part of India were invaded, nor is it in his power to afford it.

Whether this be a juſt obſervation or not I need not inſiſt upon it; becauſe my oppoſition to the propoſed treaty is founded on principles which do not oblige me to canvas the particular advantage or diſadvantage of every ſpecific article contained in it.

On that general ground of argument, which Mr. Wheler has taken, and to which I have only added a little without improving it, I entirely diſapprove of the propoſition, and proteſt againſt it.

Mr. Barwell—The general object of the propoſed treaty appears to me pointed to the preſent circumſtances of our Government, and that of the Marattas. It ſtrikes me to be well calculated to give ſtrength to both the offenſive and defenſive means we hold within ourſelves, as to weaken thoſe of our immediate enemies the Marattas. In a ſtate of war with that Power, every enemy that is raiſed up to their State, is an advantage to our own plans of conqueſt; acquiſition of territory, and a deſign to engage the forces of the Company in diſtant expeditions, to which the objections of Mr. Wheler and Mr. Francis particularly point, are not meditated by the preſent treaty. It is the defence of theſe provinces, and the diſtreſs of the common enemy, that appears to me to have led to this treaty. If acquiſition of territory, or any advantage ſhall ariſe from ſuch a policy, the Company and the nation will be benefited without any of thoſe riſks that ſeem to be regarded with ſo much apprehenſion in the foregoing minutes. I agree to the propoſed treaty.

Governor General—I had no ſuſpicion that the members of this Government could be ignorant of the conſequence, much leſs of the exiſtence of the Rana of Goad; it was therefore unneceſſary for me to have inſtructed them on theſe points, nor was I forward to introduce a meaſure of ſelf-apparent neceſſity, with arguments which I know would be conteſted, and the meaſure itſelf of courſe oppoſed. We were upon the eve of a war with the Maratta State, a war which is no leſs the effect of the Company's decided orders, than of the meaſures of their ſervants, to which this Government has given its ſanction. From General Goddard's advices, it may be almoſt poſitively concluded, that we are actually in a ſtate of war with them, and poſſibly with other Powers combined with them; had this Government remained in total inaction, had no meaſure of this kind been adopted, I ſhould have expected to have been reproached with ſuffering the Company to be drawn into a war with perhaps the firſt Power in India, without any alliance to ſupport it, or to obviate the predatory incurſions of ſuch an enemy. I am now reproached with forming ſuch an alliance, and on grounds which will only apply to a ſtate of perfect peace and domeſtic ſecurity; were the acquiſitions of territory, or the increaſe of revenue the object, the operations of the treaty would not be limited to the ſeaſon of war. If war has taken place, or ſhall take place, with the Maratta State, the treaty ſecures the ſupport and aſſiſtance of a powerful Prince, whoſe dominions adjoin to our frontier, and lie in one of the principal roads through which the Marattas muſt paſs to invade us; and the objects propoſed by the alliance are ſuch as are moſt likely to weaken the Maratta State, by depriving it of its reſources, and dividing its attention; at the ſame time the principal in the treaty with us, is a man on whoſe perſonal intereſts and enmity to the Maratta State, we may depend for his faithful adherence to it. He ſucceeded to his preſent poſſeſſions by the death of his father, who loſt his life and the fortreſs of Gwalior at the ſame time, in an engagement with the Marattas, with whom the ſon has been ever ſince in a ſtate of warfare. It is notorious, and will be probably known to many well-informed perſons at home, that the Marattas have made various attempts to reduce the preſent Rana, with numerous armies, conducted by their moſt eminent leaders, and once by Ragonaut Row in perſon, and have been as often repulſed with diſcredit to their Government and honour to the Rana. That he was the protector of two of the moſt important and obnoxious characters in Hindoſtan, Gauzo O'Dien and Coſſim Ally Cawn, are facts ſo notorious, that I cannot yet ſuppoſe any member of this Board to be ignorant of them; and theſe alone are preſumptive, but very ſtrong proofs of the power of the man whoſe State could prove an aſylum to ſuch fugitives. His perſonal abilities are equally known, they are univerſally acknowledged and proved by his actions.

I have ſaid that the objects of the treaty and the operations dependent on it, are reſtricted to a ſtate of war with the Marattas. A war in which, with reſpect to the immediate commencement of it, independent of former cauſes, they muſt be the aggreſſors by rejecting the offers of peace which we have made to them. If after all, my ſuppoſition ſhall not be realized by the event, but a peace enſue, the treaty becomes in itſelf null, being reduced to the ſimple tie of friendſhip, which alters nothing of the relative ſtate in which we are at preſent with the Rana; and all the conſequences which Mr. Francis concludes that it will entail upon us, which, ſuppoſe a war with the Marattas, are certainly more likely to happen from ſuch a war, if we have no ſupport, than with a proviſion to avert them. I have had ſuch frequent occaſion to complain of the unfair manner in which Mr. Francis quotes my words and opinions, that I ſhall make no other reply to his aſſertion of the contradiction of the preſent meaſure to my own principles, than that the expreſſion which he has quoted appertains to a different occaſion and a different object, and bears no more relation to the preſent ſubject than the diſpatch of treaſure to Bombay or Surat.

Mr. Francis—Neither Mr. Wheler nor I have profeſſed to be ignorant of the exiſtence of the Rana of Goad. But, when a treaty of alliance, offenſive and defenſive, is propoſed to be concluded with him, I preſume it is not enough to know that he exiſts. I for my own part ſhould have held myſelf indebted to the Governor General, as I always am, for any information he might have thought proper to give me of the circumſtances and ſituation of this Rajah. It is probable that I might have endeavoured to obtain it myſelf from other quarters, if at any period ſince my arrival in Bengal, I had thought it poſſible that an intimate connection of intereſts between the Company and him would ever have been propoſed. When a ſimilar treaty was in agitation with a much greater Prince, (I mean Moodajee Booſla) the Governor General introduced the propoſition with a very particular report of his ſituation, views, family connections, reſources, and intereſts. The lights with which the Governor General's laſt minute have furniſhed me, do not tend to eſtabliſh a favourable opinion either of the Rana's character or ſtrength. I do not wiſh to be connected with a man, who is only known by the protection he afforded to perſons ſo obnoxious to this Government and to India in general, as Coſſim Ally Cawn and Gauzy O'Dien Cawn. And as to the ſtrength which enabled him to give them that protection, I believe it to be purely defenſive: he is a hill Rajah: I conclude he has ſtrong holds in the mountains, and that it is not eaſy to come at him. Admitting it to be true, that at this time, and to ſupport a war which it is ſaid is the effect of the decided orders of the Company, alliances with ſome of the country Powers might be uſeful and neceſſary, it does not follow that all and every alliance deſerves that character. It is not at all unlikely, that we may find ourſelve encumbered and embarraſſed with theburthen of a uſeleſs ally. I mean to uſe the words applied by the Governor General not long ago to our connection with Moodajee Booſla; as I am ſure I expreſs the ſenſe of them. An offenſive union with Hyder Ally or the Nizam, or even with the Rajah of Berar, if he could be ſeparated from his countrymen, might indeed on the principles of the preſent war, be of importance to its ſucceſs. The Rana of Goad is too inconſiderable to be of weight in either ſcale; but if his ſtrength were greater than it is, it would not neceſſarily follow that we ſhould gain any thing by uniting it to ours. Before ſuch a junction can be effected, we muſt croſs the Jumna, and relinquiſh all the ſecurity and other advantages, which the intervention of that great barrier affords to all our poſſeſſions, and to thoſe of our ally. By the ſame act we divide our force, and make it difficult, if not impracticable, for the different parts of it ſo ſeparated to aſſiſt each other. Every operation we undertake on their ſide of the river, ſo far from adding to our ſtrength or diſtreſſing the enemy, is only laying ourſelves open to wounds in a quarter where, if we ſtayed within our own barrier, we might be invulnerable. We relinquiſh a ſituation of ſuperior ſtrength to meet our enemy, if we do meet him, on equal terms. I ſhall trouble the Board with but one word more. The Governor General, it is true, has often complained of unfair quotations, and this complaint, I am informed, has been echoed in England; but I do not admit that it has ever been made with reaſon. Let an inſtance of any moment be pointed out, and I am ready to join iſſue upon it.

Governor General—I have never made the complaint againſt Mr. Francis of an unfair quotation, but I have pointed out the inſtance, and proved it to be unfair. The preſent inſtance is before us. I do remember, that when we were firſt informed of a war, then ſuppoſed to be declared between Great Britain and France, I ſaid, That our part of the war muſt be purely defenſive, becauſe they had all to gain, and we to loſe. I do not know whether theſe were the words; but I am ſure that this was the ſubſtance and ſenſe of the maxim which is now quoted as a contradiction to the propoſal which I make of withſtanding a predatory enemy, already in poſſeſſion of a great part of Hindoſtan, by diſtant and offenſive operations. For the reſt of Mr. Francis's minute, I do not think it neceſſary to reply to it, having, I think, in all our conteſts generally allowed him the laſt argument; and I think, the ſubject was ſufficiently diſcuſſed in the our preceding minutes.

Mr. Francis—I admit that the maxim which I have attributed to the Governor General was introduced on the occaſion he mentions; I nevertheleſs underſtood it to be a general one, at leaſt it certainly could not be confined to the caſe of the war with France, ſince at the ſame point of time, we ſtrongly recommended, and by aſſiſtance promoted, the ſiege of Pondicherry.

Governor General—Let it be added, that I, at the ſame time propoſed a meaſure which from its tendency led to the poſſibility at leaſt of an offenſive war with the Marattas, and this propoſition was made in the ſame minute in which the maxim now attributed to me was introduced; and I will venture to ſay, will not be underſtood from theſe minutes, neither from thoſe of Mr. Francis, or my own.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, 14th February 1780.—Preſent, the Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident; Philip Francis, and Edward Wheler, Eſquires. (Mr. Barwell indiſpoſed. Sir Eyre Coote abſent on a viſit to the different ſtations of the army.)

The Governor General lays before the Board the following minute, with a letter and encloſure from the Commander in Chief. Appendix. No. 239.

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

I have had the honour to receive your letter of the 6th inſtant, encloſing a draft of a treaty propoſed to be entered into between the Honourable Company and Maha Rajah Lookindein, Rana of Gohud; acquainting me that Captain Palmer is deputed to interchange the ratification, and requiring of me in the mean time to comply with any application the Rana may make for the Company's forces to act againſt the Marattas.

In reply; while I beg leave to aſſure you that the Company have no officer more diſpoſed to obey and enforce your commands, and that I ſhall punctually comply with thoſe now before me; yet as a member of the Board I muſt, in vindication of myſelf, and in diſcharge of my duty to my country and the Company, not only proteſt againſt this order, but againſt the treaty itſelf; and requeſt they may both be recorded upon the proceedings relative to this object.

My proteſt againſt the preſent order is founded upon, and limited to the immediate ſtate of our politics reſpecting the Marattas with whom hoſtilities are long ſince ceaſed, and with whom we have at this inſtant an agent negociating in behalf of our Government to eſtabliſh a firm and honourable peace.

In oppoſition to this, when the preſent order may be obeyed, we commence hoſtilities and declare war at the very moment perhaps when the treaty is concluded between us, and in a mode not as it ought to be; when we may, if obliged to renew the war againſt the Marattas by a vigorous effort upon them from all our Preſidencies, in a manner ſuitable to our military fame, and likely to put an immediate and ſucceſsful end to it: no, we muſt by this order carry it on under the patronage of a petty Prince, a tributary to Nudjiff Cawn, ſuppoſed not to poſſeſs above ſix lacks of revenue, and three to four thouſand troops, and commence a war at his inſtigation and pleaſure, while our own policy and intereſt leads us to aim at peace.

My exceptions to the treaty I have ſeparately ſtated in the encloſed proteſt.

But with regard to the order, I repeat and beg to be underſtood that I intend the fulleſt compliance, while I diſclaim in the ſtrongeſt manner any aſſent to the meaſure.

I have the honour to be, &c.

Allahabad, 21ſt December 1779. (Signed) Eyre Coote.

Allahabad, 21ſt Dec. 1779.

Sir Eyre Coote—As a tacit reception of the treaty propoſed to be concluded with the Rana of Gohud, publicly ſent me by the Board, might ſubject me to a ſuſpicion of aſſenting to a meaſure, that I would upon no conſideration ſubſcribe my name to, I think myſelf obliged, in ſupport of my own character and conduct, for which alone I can be reſponſible, to give in the following proteſt againſt it.

Againſt the 1ſt Article: I do not think that an alliance, of the ſolemn nature propoſed, with a Prince of ſo low an eſtimation among thoſe of Hindoſtan as the Rana of Gohud is ſaid to be, can prove any credit to the Company, as neither his name or power can ever benefit them, but on the contrary, his weakneſs and poverty make us conſtantly bear the labour and burden of his avarice and ambition, without reaping benefit, or even reimburſement; in ſhort, raiſe him at the gratuitous expence of our blood and treaſure, not to mention the ſacrifice of our fame.

Againſt the 2d Article: I muſt obſerve, that in caſe of a war with the Marattas, which it pre-ſuppoſes, it places the moſt extraordinary and unprecedented power in the hands of a foreigner, that ever was deviſed by any Government for their own deſtruction

From the poſts neareſt to him, which are our advanced posts, and most essential stations, he may draw off and require what numbers he pleases, and that by a simple application to the officer commanding those particular posts, without reference to our Government: and here permit me to ask, what must be the situation of the unfortunate officer, who having established those stations for the defence of our provinces, and the rest of the army perhaps entirely relying for our security upon their being fully occupied, they are drawn off without his knowledge or consent? and if he should afterwards learn it, reinforce them; this again is liable to the same reduction. He thus remains remediless, laid open to the incursions of the enemy, without means to save his character or credit, while alone responsible.

The command of the advanced part of our army is hereby in fact transferred to the Rana, and enables him legally, and by our own consent, to become, if his interest can be gained, the most powerful and dangerous instrument against us that it is possible to construct; and how far his poverty may make him attainable to our enemies, and in how much he is therein a safe Power to entrust our lives and fame with, I leave to unbiassed reflection to determine.

Further, when once possessing our troops, without the knowledge and consent of our Government he is also enabled legally to deprive us of the power of recalling them; for they are to remain as long as he shall require it, and return when he shall dismiss them; and after all, the expence of them not even insured to us, for there is a bare promise to pay, without the least mention of security.

Against the 3d Article: It is to be observed, that the treaty swerving from its ostensibly declared object, of assisting in his defence against the Marattas, upon a presupposition of both parties being engaged in a Maratta war, now launches into a general war upon all foreign and domestic enemies; thus at once plunging us into a war with all Hindostan, even against our own allies, should the Rana be pleased to bring them under the other objects of his policy.

Against the 4th Article: It is extraordinary, that after our men and treasures shall have been employed, as proposed in the 3d article, against all foreign and domestic enemies; we are only to reap the benefit of acquirements from the Marattas, for the article of division is restricted to them alone. If the sword is to be drawn against whomsoever the Rana may direct, we should at least be entitled to benefit equally by whomsoever may fall under it. The perpetual tribute herein mentioned, is, like the payment of the troops, left without the shadow of security.

The 5th Article, while equally inconsistent with the rest, in oversetting the foregoing proposals, gives the Rana a pre-eminence, entitling him to an attention and consideration from us, which he is not restricted by. We give him the command of our army, which is to obey at his summons; but we are to address him and his Government, not in like manner, to command his officers to attend.

But this self-humiliation is immaterial, in comparison to a further point in this article. By the 2d article, a war is pre-supposed between the Marattas and the contracting parties, and upon our forces assisting his, he is to pay for them; but here, if it is judged expedient to employ the combined forces beyond the Rana's dominions, each party is to bear his own expences. This totally oversets the former article, for by that the combined forces of the Rana, and the Company, are to be employed either in his defence, which may be at home, or to acquire territory, which must be abroad, that is, beyond the dominions of the Rajah; and under both these descriptions we are to be paid (if we can get it) by the 2d article, and bear our own expences by the 5th. And if we are to suppose our forces not combined, in the position of the 2d article, then we are to proceed alone, wherever the Rana may direct, which to any person who may have any feeling left for our credit, is the worse option of the two. Again, by the 5th article, when the combined troops may have marched to Oogein, or Indoor, to seek the enemy and deliver battle, he may then, agreeably to treaty, leave us to stand the brunt alone; point of partial convenience to him, by which, without supposing him to betray us, (which he may also do, agreeable to treaty) our whole army may be lost. Further, when our troops are returning, which supposes a peace made, in which he is to be a party, by the 8th article he may even then stop our troops, though perhaps under the most urgent orders to defend our southern provinces; he may detain them to go amusing himself in foreign conquests, while we may be in the utmost want of them at home.

The 6th Article places the commanding officer in a very disagreeable situation, limiting his power to the mere execution, while the service required may be very dishonourable for our troops to be engaged in.

The 7th Article, of a complexion with the rest, does not omit, in whatever case it may be, to leave the Rana a complete authority over his own troops even in the midst of battle; so that by a difference of opinion they may prove the destruction of our army, instead of an aid to it.

So that by the 2d article, our troops are taken from the advanced posts, without the participation of our Government, or knowledge of the commanding officer, who stationed them for the defence and security of these provinces, and then detained against the power of recalling them; by the 5th article stopt, if under march for our own defence; and lastly, may be left unsupported even in the extremest danger, if we do not blindly follow his opinion.

The 8th Article may make the trifling object of the possession of an hereditary fort, though it must undoubtedly be obtained by our arms, an obstacle in all situations to our making peace with the Marattas; a restriction, the impolicy of which might, upon a foreign invasion, soon be felt. And here it may be observed, that Gwalior is not a fort belonging to his family, but the royal line.

Having now stated my objections to every article of the treaty, for the 9th has no public object in it, I can see the whole in no other light than as dangerous to ourselves, a breach of treaty to the Vizier, and impolitic in the strongest degree, without a single secured benefit. I therefore protest against the whole, and leave the consequences upon those who may carry it into force.

At the same time I must distinguish, that although I disapprove of the treaty now proposed, vesting in a foreign Prince such a command of our army as might be fatal to ourselves, and prevent any officer of reputation taking charge of it in these quarters, a power that no ally should have, yet I am ready now, and at other periods, to enter into any convenient agreement with the Rana, for co-operating with mutual benefit in time of war, without subjecting ourselves to the severe restrictions of the proposed treaty.

But any agreement with him I consider as highly improper, until we have certain information of the state of General Goddard's negociation with the Marattas.

Extract of Bengal Secret Consultations, the 17th February 1780.—Present, the Honourable Warren Hastings, Governor General, President; Philip Francis, and Edward Wheler, Esquires. (M. Barwell indisposed.)

The Governor General proposes that the following reply be written to the letter and protest from Sir Eyre Coote, entered in the last consultation:

Sir,

We have received a letter from you, enclosing a protest, dated the 21st December last, against the treaty concluded

cluded with the Rana of Gohud, which you had thought it neceſſary to make as a member of the Board, in vindication of yourſelf, and to ſend down to be recorded in our proceedings relative to that object.

The great irregularity of an abſent member's reviewing the acts of Government, and proteſting againſt them, after they have been formally and finally determined by a legal vote of the Board, obliges us to take notice of your preſent letter, and to acquaint you that the treaty with the Rana of Gohud became binding on the faith of the Company from the date of its execution in Calcutta; and that the whole Board, as well as every perſon ſubordinate to it, were obliged in duty to give it effect, ſo far as it might be their province reſpectively to bear any concern in the accompliſhment of its ſtipulations. In your preſent ſituation, abſent from our councils, we can only regard you as Commander in Chief of the army, and not reſponſible for any ſteps taken without your participation. In this light we tranſmitted a copy of the treaty to you, not for your opinion upon it, but becauſe it became neceſſary to make you acquainted with its contents, and to entruſt ſome clauſes to be carried into execution under your orders.

We ſhall be at all times willing to receive your opinion upon any meaſures which you may either think fit to propoſe, or which may be yet open to our conſideration, and to allow every degree of weight to the arguments on which it may be founded, that is due to your military knowledge, and to the reſpect which we perſonally bear to your character; but you muſt be ſenſible that, in the preſent caſe, they come too late to be attended with any effect. The impropriety of your preſent claim cannot be more pointedly ſhewn, than by the following clauſe in the concluſion of your minute: "Yet I am ready "now, and at other periods, to enter into any convenient "agreement with the Rana for co-operating with mutual "benefit in time of war, without ſubjecting ourſelves to "the ſevere reſtrictions of the propoſed treaty." This is in effect a propoſition for cancelling a treaty already executed with every formality and ſanction which could be given to it, for the purpoſe of admitting another in its ſtead, which may be propoſed by yourſelf at ſome future and indefinite period; a privilege which, if allowed, would annihilate all the powers which the Board poſſeſs of making alliances.

We do not know whether the Rana has yet made any application to you, for a detachment of our troops to aſſiſt him; but if he ſhall, we think it proper to repeat our injunctions, that ſuch a proportion as you ſhall deem ſufficient to perform the ſervice propoſed, be immediately granted; and we hope, if any requiſition has already been made to you for this purpoſe, that you will have complied with it previous to the receipt of this letter.

Fort William, 17th February, 1780. We are, &c.

Mr. Francis—Without departing from the opinion I delivered, concerning the treaty with the Rana of Gohud, while that meaſure was under deliberation, I agree in the general reaſoning expreſſed in this letter.

Mr. Wheler ſubſcribes to this opinion, and agrees to the letter.

Reſolved, That the letter be written accordingly.

APPENDIX, No. 240.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 6th December 1779.

PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident;

Richard Barwell, Philip Francis, Edward Wheler, } Eſquires.

Lieutenant General Sir Eyre Coote abſent on a viſit to the different ſtations of the army.

THE following minute from the Governor General was ſent in on Saturday laſt; and agreeably to his directions circulated to the members of the Board: Appendix No. 240.

Governor General.—Having, in conſequence of a treaty, paſſed the Board for an alliance with the Rana of Gohud, required of his Vackeel to produce the powers with which he was inveſted for executing it on the part of his maſter, he delivered to me a paper which I ſhall lay before the Board at their next meeting, containing ſimply the Rajah's public ſeal; and which, with his letters declaring the Vackeel to be deputed for the purpoſe of concluding ſuch a treaty, are deemed ſufficient and ample authority, according to the forms and uſage of Indoſtan; but as the Rana has not ſet his name to the paper, and with us the ſignatures of the contracting parties are held indiſpenſable to the validity of all public engagements, I informed the Vackeel of this defect in his powers. He requeſted that they might, with the addition of his own ſeal and ſignature, be admitted for the preſent execution of the treaty; and to remove all doubt, and authenticate it according to our forms, he made me a propoſal, which I now lay before the Board, under his hand and ſeal, for ſending a perſon on the part of this Government to witneſs the Rana's final execution of it, and exchange the ratification; and I recommend it for their approbation.

(Signed) W. H.

Arzie from Muzhir Ally, Vackeel of the Rana of Gohud.

As I underſtand from what you ſaid, that the cuſtoms of your country require that the contracting parties ſhould ſign their names to the treaty to give it credit and validity, I am therefore hopeful, and make it my requeſt, that ſince the Rajah in his letters to you has aſſured you of the validity of my powers, you will for the preſent accept of a Furd, with my ſignature, and the ſeal of the Maha Rajah; and that a gentleman of truſt may be ſent to the Maha Rajah, that all the points which have been ſettled here may be finally concluded there in the preſence of ſuch gentleman; and that in like manner as I have repreſented many things on the part of the Maha Rajah, ſuch gentleman may obtain ſatisfaction in all matters, and ſee the Maha Rajah ſet his ſignature to the treaty. This will be highly pleaſing to the Maha Rajah, and gain me credit with you.

The following opinions were returned on the above minute and Arzee:

I agree to the propoſitions.

(Signed) Richard Barwell.

Mr. Francis—If the Vackeel be not inveſted with ſufficient powers to execute the treaty on the part of his conſtituent, we ought not to have proceeded with him ſo far as we have done: the extent of his powers ſhould regularly have been aſcertained in the firſt inſtance. For my own part, I am perfectly ſatisfied with the Rajah's ſeal, and the contents of his letters. It is not likely that he ſhould refuſe to ratify a treaty by which he is intitled and empowered to require the aſſiſtance of our forces for the defence of his country, or for the acquiſition of territory; without any other limitation or deſcription of the amount of ſuch force, to be ſent immediately on his requiſition, except that it ſhould be proportioned to the exigency of the ſervice, of which the Rana is to be the judge. The deputing a gentleman on purpoſe to Goad, to ſee the treaty ratified, is in my opinion a very uſeleſs, and I am ſure it will be a very expenſive meaſure. I am therefore entirely againſt it: I do not even know that the Rana's ſignature is wanted. The public ſeal, on both ſides, is the true authentication of their public acts reſpectively.

(Signed) P. Francis.

Agreed. E. W.

Reſolved,

Appendix. Nos. 241 & 242.

Reſolved, That a perſon be deputed on the part of this Government to the Rana of Goad for the purpoſe of ſeeing the treaty executed, and for exchanging the ratifications.

The Governor General now produces to the Board the paper mentioned in his minute above recorded, under the ſeal of the Rana of Goad.

Governor General—I move, that Captain Palmer, my military Secretary, may be deputed to interchange the treaties with the Rana of Goad according to the propoſal of the Miniſter, entered in the former part of this day's conſultation.

Mr. Wheler—It having already been agreed by a majority of this Board to ſend a perſon on the part of this Government to witneſs the Rajah's final execution of the treaty, and exchange the ratifications, I aſſent to the Governor General's motion in favour of Captain Palmer.

Mr. Francis—I ſhould have thought it would have been more eaſy and leſs expenſive, to have ſent an officer from the neareſt ſtation, but I have no objection to Captain Palmer.

Mr. Barwell—I agree.

Reſolved, That Captain Palmer be deputed to the Rana of Goad to witneſs his final execution of the treaty entered in conſultation the 2d inſtant, and to exchange the ratification with him.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, 9th December 1779.—Preſent, the Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident; Richard Barwell, Philip Francis, and Edward Wheler, Eſquires. (Sir Eyre Coote abſent on a viſit to the different ſtations of the army.)

The Secretary lays before the Board two drafts of the treaty with the Rana of Goad, engroſſed in the Engliſh and Perſian languages, and reports that Meer Muzzer Ally, the Miniſter of the Rana, is in waiting.

Agreed, That he be admitted.

The treaties are now ſigned by the Board and by the Miniſter of the Rana of Goad.

Ordered, That they be ſent to Captain Palmer to be ratified by the Rana in his preſence according to the former reſolution of the Board.

Warren Haſtings,
P. Francis,
Edwd Wheler.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, 13th Decemb 1779.—Preſent, the Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident; Richard Barwell, Philip Francis, and Edward Wheler, Eſquires. (Sir Eyre Coote abſent on a viſit to the different ſtations of the army.)

The Governor General propoſes, that Captain Palmer be permitted to draw the ſame allowances during his deputation to Goad, as were aſſigned to Mr. Elliot on his deputation to Berar; and that Mr. Thomas Short be appointed Aſſiſtant to Captain Palmer with the ſame allowances as were granted to Mr. Farquhar, Aſſiſtant to Mr. Elliott.

Mr. Wheler—I have not yet conſidered the buſineſs which Captain Palmer is going to undertake, in the ſame light or of the ſame importance with that which was intruſted to the charge of Mr. Elliott; at this diſtance of time I do not perfectly recollect whether the allowances given to that gentleman were not objected to by me: however, I do not mean to revert to a former opinion upon a ſubject ſo perſonal as the preſent, though I would wiſh the allowances had been ſuch on this occaſion as I ſhould have judged ſafe to have acceded to, which, as they are now ſtated, I muſt beg leave to decline.

Mr. Francis—Mr. Elliott's allowances amounted to current rupees 3,318 per month, thoſe of his aſſiſtant to 555, in all 3,873. I think they are much too high for the preſent occaſion, and that as Captain Palmer is only deputed to ſee the treaty with the Rana executed, he cannot have any uſe or employment for an aſſiſtant.

Mr. Barwell—I think the allowances of Mr. Elliott were regulated by thoſe allotted to Colonel Upton on his embaſſy to Poonah; and however large they may have appeared to the Court of Directors, I have reaſon to think, that neither Colonel Upton nor Mr. Elliott were enabled to make any conſiderable ſaving from their allowances; the circumſtances in which Captain Palmer is placed are nearly the ſame, and the appearance he muſt make muſt be regulated upon the ſame principle. The difference of rank between Colonel Upton and Captain Palmer can be no rule to direct the judgment on this occaſion. He is the ſervant of the Government in the ſame line as Colonel Upton was, and he muſt ſupport the ſame character; I therefore aſſent to the motion.

Agreed, That Captain Palmer be permitted to draw the ſame allowances as Mr. Elliott, viz. Lieutenant Colonel's pay, and double Batta per month, Sonaut rupees 1,488. Fixed ſalary 1,000, and contingencies, including Moonchies, ſervants, &c 500.

Agreed, That Mr. Short be appointed Aſſiſtant to Captain Palmer with the ſame allowances as Mr. Farquhar, viz. the pay and Batta of a Captain per month, Sonaut rupees 512.

APPENDIX, No. 241.

From Maha Rajah Ranna Chatter Sing: received 13th March.

AFTER expreſſing the earneſtneſs of his deſire to have a perſonal interview with the Governor, and lamenting the impoſſibility of his enjoying that happineſs at preſent, he proceeds thus:

This is the ſtate of my affairs. At this time a war is on the eve of breaking out between me and the Marattas, occaſioned by my having retaken a diſtrict of which they had diſpoſſeſſed me, and which they will doubtleſs endeavour to recover, in which caſe I have no other hope but in your aid. I flatter myſelf that when I find it neceſſary to apply to you, you will grant my requeſt and oblige me with an army, for the ſupport of which I will agree to ſuch terms as you ſhall be pleaſed to intimate to me.

I have given Wully Ulla his diſpatches, and directed him to proceed to your preſence; from him you will be informed of every particular relative to this quarter. I was ſome time ago honoured with a royal Firmaund to take poſſeſſion of the fort of Goalear, to which 22 Mahals are attached. Regarding this as proceeding from the bounty of the Almighty, and as a means of raiſing me credit, I, with very little trouble, reduced the ſaid fort and Mahals to my obedience, and obtained a Sunnud thereof from the Vizier of the empire. Knowing that this would afford you pleaſure, I could not omit to communicate it to you. I hope that regarding me in the light of a ſincere friend you will frequently favour me with the news of your welfare.

APPENDIX, No. 242.

To Rajah Chatter Sing Lochbinder Behadre; dated the 16th May 1779.

THE deſire which you expreſs of an alliance with me, gives me pleaſure; but it is impoſſible to afford you aſſiſtance at this time: I however recommend your living in terms of friendſhip with the Vizier, and conſulting him; you will favour me with frequent accounts of your health.

From the Nabob Mobarck ul Dowlah.

Shiek Wully Oatah, the Vackeel of Maha Rajah Sewae Rana Chatta Sing, the Rajah of Gohud, has preſented preſented me with a letter from his maſter, and a Nuzzir of five rupees. Having peruſed it, I enclose it for your information. As I hold no connection nor correſpondence with the weſtern Chiefs, and place my ſole reliance and dependance on your favour, be pleaſed to inform me of the conduct you think it proper for me to purſue; if you would have me write an anſwer, favour me with a draft, agreeable to which I will write and deliver to the Vackeel. As he is very preſſing to be diſpatched, that he may return to his maſter, I requeſt you will oblige me with an immediate reply.

Enclosure in the above.

Letter from Maha Ranna Swae Chatta Sing Lokindur Bahadre, to the Nabob Mobarck ul Dowlah; received the 7th Zehedja.

After the uſual compliments:

I have long entertained an earneſt deſire to enjoy the happineſs of an interview with you. Language is too weak to expreſs how greatly I am deſirous of this event: May the Almighty grant the accompliſhment of this wiſh.

My ſituation is as follows: I am on the brink of a war with the Marattas, having recovered from them a place which they had formerly deprived me of; they will doubtleſs reſent this. I was formerly united in the bonds of friendſhip with your Highneſs's anceſtors, and had great hopes from the Nabob Sajah ul Moulk Hiſſam ul Dowlah, Mier Mahomed Jaffier Khan Behadre, Mobabut Jung. The renewal of theſe ties is greatly to be wiſhed.

I ſome time ago addreſſed a letter to the Governor Mr. Haſtings, Jelladut Jung Bahadre, requeſting his aid; to which he replied, That as the ſtricteſt union ſubſiſted between us, whenever I ſhould require it, orders ſhould be ſent to the Chiefs ſtationed in this quarter to aſſiſt me with their forces; I therefore beg leave to requeſt of you, who are the maſter of that country, that you will exert yourſelf in this buſineſs with the Governor, who will pay attention to your deſire. I have no doubt of his immediate compliance with your application, and that he will be kindly pleaſed to grant me the ſervices of a brigade of his forces whenever they may be requiſite. I will diſcharge whatever ſhall be fixed for the expence of the troops. I am hopeful, that regarding me as zealouſly attached to you, you will make me happy by frequent letters.

I received a royal Firmaun for the fort of Gonwalier, with 22 Mahuls, confirmed by a Sunnud from the Vizier. This I mention for your Highneſs's information, and for further particulars beg leave to refer you to Sheik Wully Oatab, to whoſe repreſentations I requeſt your credit and attention.

APPENDIX, No. 243.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, 6th December 1779.

THE Governor General thinks it incumbent on him to lay before the Board the following paper of intelligence, which was encloſed in a letter to him from the Commander in Chief.

Extract of a Letter from Futty Gurr; 20th November 1779.

I have likewiſe juſt now received from Goad the diſagreeable news of the Marattas having made themſelves maſters of the fort of Arhaund (which I had the honour to inform you ſome time ago was inveſted) and put the garriſon to the ſword. The ſame account informs me, that they are preparing to attack another fort; and that the Rajah is by no means in a condition to oppoſe them; his troops being not only inferior in point of number to the enemy, but alſo diſpirited and ready to mutiny on account of the long arrears due to them, which he is at preſent unable to pay. In this ſituation of his affairs, the ſpeedy conqueſt of his whole country muſt be the conſequence of the enemy puſhing their advantage with that briſkneſs which the defenceleſs ſtate of it ſeems to invite. Appendix. No. 243.

Governor General—Having communicated this intelligence to Meer Muzzer Ally, the Rana's Miniſter, he informed me, that he had received no letters from his maſter ſince his arrival; and therefore concluded, that the danger ſtated as impending on his country from the Maratta invaſion, had been much exaggerated; but thought it probable, that the fort of Arhaund, mentioned in the intelligence, had been taken by the Marattas; that it was ſituated on the ſouthern extremity of his dominions, and not capable of much reſiſtance. There can be no doubt that a Maratta force has entered the territories of the Rana of Goad, though of itſelf not likely to be productive of any material conſequences. It appears to me to be the part of a plan, which I was lately informed, by a channel which I have hitherto experienced to be of good authority, had been concerted by the ruling Adminiſtration at Poonah, for the general conduct of the war againſt the Company; namely, that Nana Furneeſe and Hurry Punt Furkia were to conduct the war againſt General Goddard; and that Moodajee Scindia and Tucoojee Holcar were to unite their forces, and proceed immediately againſt the Rana of Goad to reduce his country, and afterwards enter the Doab, and the dominions of the Nabob of Oude, or into the countries dependent on Bengal, as the circumſtances of the times ſhould direct them preferably to either. I have ſince heard that this plan has been changed, and that all the Chiefs above mentioned had united their forces, and were preparing to march directly againſt General Goddard. It appears, however, equally neceſſary to guard againſt any attempts which may have been projected againſt the Rana of Goad, and to ſtrengthen his hands to enable him the better to act in concert with us, if that deſign, from whatever cauſe, ſhall have been ſuſpended; I therefore move, that a copy of the treaty, which it has been agreed to conclude with the Rana of Goad, be immediately tranſmitted to the Commander in Chief, with inſtructions to comply with any immediate requiſition which the Rana of Goad may make for a detachment of our forces, proportioned to the exigency of the ſervice required by it; of which he will of courſe be the judge.

Mr. Wheler—I am againſt the motion.

Mr. Francis—If the Board were diſpoſed to make a right uſe of the intelligence contained in the preceding letter, I ſhould have thought it a fortunate circumſtance that we had received it before any thing had been finally concluded with the Rana's Vackeel. The Rana of Goad's ſituation, by this letter, appears to be conſiderably worſe than what it was repreſented to me: one of his forts was taken; the Marattas were preparing to attack another; and the ſpeedy conqueſt of his whole country was likely to be the conſequence: if this be the caſe, we are going to execute a treaty with a Prince who may have neither an army nor any dominions left. His army is diſpirited and ready to mutiny for want of pay, which he is unable to give them. If he cannot pay his own troops, how will it be poſſible for him to diſcharge the ſubſidy which he engages to pay for ours? Inſtead of enlarging his territories by conqueſt, which is the profeſſed object of the treaty, our firſt labour will be to recover for him what he has already loſt; and this muſt be attempted by marching a part of our army to a conſiderable diſtance on the ſide of the Jumna.

I do not conſider the preſent invaſion of his country by the Marattas, as belonging to or the effect of any particular plan of operations againſt the Company. He is at conſtant enmity with the Marattas; and I look upon this attack as nothing more than a continuance of former hoſtilities againſt him. At all events, we ſhall only diſtreſs ourſelves, and abandon the protection of our own frontier, frontier, by engaging in his defence: I am therefore againſt the motion.

Mr Barwel—I agree to the motion. I cannot adopt the opinion, that to allow the Marattas to conquer a country ſo near to our own frontier, and extend their poſſeſſions quite up to it, will be attended with any of thoſe advantages which have been ſuppoſed as the probable reſult of our not oppoſing their progreſs. The intelligence that has been laid before the Board, rather determined me to engage our Government in the ſupport of the Rana of Goad, than to leave the country an eaſy conqueſt to the only enemy from whom we have any reaſon to apprehend any miſchief.

Agreed to the Governor General's motion; and ordered, That a copy of the treaty with the Rana of Goad be immediately tranſmitted to the Commander in Chief, with the following letter.

To Lieutenant General Sir Eyre Coote, K. B.
Commander in Chief, &c.

Sir,

Maha Rajah Luckinder Behadur, the Rana of Goad, having deputed confidential Miniſters with powers to negociate and conclude a treaty of alliance with this Government and his, of which we encloſe a copy for your information, the original will be formally ſigned and ſealed by us on one part, and by the Miniſters of the Rana on the other part; but we think it neceſſary that it ſhould be likewiſe executed by the Rana in perſon, and have therefore deputed Captain Palmer to ſee it performed, and to exchange the ratifications with him. In the mean time, ſhould the Rana make any application to you for a detachment of the Company's forces to act againſt the Marattas, we requeſt that you will comply with his requiſitions, proportioning the number of troops to the exigency of the ſervice on which they are ſent.

APPENDIX, No. 244.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, 23d December 1779.

RECEIVED the following letter from the Commander in Chief:

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

Captain Popham has juſt informed me, that his party is ready to move, except the Candahar horſe, which were not arrived. I ſpoke to the Nabob concerning them this morning, who aſſures me they are ready to join him whenever they are demanded, and though he is a lack and a half of rupees in arrears to them, they make no objection to marching, and receive the current pay from us, provided they have ſecurity that the Nabob will diſcharge this debt in future; ſo that you will now, gentlemen, pleaſe to give your final orders reſpecting the movement of this detachment, which ſhall be followed by ſuch military inſtructions as I may find neceſſary to give. However, I wiſh ſome further accounts may come from General Goddard, relative to his ſituation before thoſe orders are put in execution, for if all the flying reports I hear be true, it may be neceſſary to move a great part of the troops here, in order to ſecure the junction we meditate, as Captain Popham ſeems ſenſible, that from delay, occaſioned by lateneſs of the ſeaſon, the deſign is too well known through the country.

Indeed, if war is to be continued with the Marattas, other and more conſequential ſteps muſt be taken, than merely the ſupplying General Goddard's army from hence; and I ſhould hope the gentlemen at Madras have taken into conſideration before this time, the letter we addreſſed to them upon that ſubject.

I encloſe the copy of a return I have received from Brigadier General Stibbert, as a convincing proof that the Golandauze have no objection to enter into other corps, either as Sepoys or Laſcars; and that you have conſequently a right to expect they will enliſt with equal facility at Calcutta, unleſs obſtructions are thrown in the way of my orders.

Upon a careful ſurvey of Chunar Ghur, I find myſelf exceedingly diſappointed in it as a place of ſtrength; it is by no means ſuch, as in its preſent ſtate it can only be defended by muſketry, and that to ſo little purpoſe, that I will venture to ſay an army, well conducted, would not be ſtopped four-and-twenty hours by it; but if its natural advantages are properly attended to, it may, at a very moderate expence be made a poſt of great conſequence, where magazines of all kind of ſtores, ſo neceſſary for the ſupplying of all different ſtations, or to anſwer any exigencies in theſe diſtant provinces, might be laid up in ſecurity. Captain Gardner has already laid a plan before you, which I have inſpected, and would recommend to the Board, as anſwering, with ſome ſmall alterations which I mentioned to him, and he approved of, every purpoſe deſired.

The little fort at Buxar will become entirely uſeleſs, unleſs it is kept in repair, and as I think it a poſt of great advantage in many reſpects, I ſhould adviſe its being attended to immediately; the eſtimate is made at ten thouſand rupees, but the ſum of five thouſand would, I ſhould imagine, anſwer the purpoſe at preſent, and an allowance of one hundred rupees per month be ſufficient to keep it up afterwards. By what I have ſeen of Captain Eaton, who commands there, I think he might very properly be entruſted with the management of this buſineſs, as his attention to it has already been ſuch as to induce him to be at the expence of ſeveral little matters himſelf, rather than ſee them run entirely to ruin.

I have the honour to be, &c. &c.

Ordered, That the 6th paragraph be referred to the Military Department, and the 7th paragraph to the Board of Inſpection.

Reſolved, That the following reply be written to the Commander in Chief:

To Lieutenant General Sir Eyre Coote, K. B.
Commander in Chief.

Sir,

We have been favoured with your letter of the 11th inſtant. We beg leave to encloſe, for your information, copy of a letter, which we have juſt received from General Goddard, under date the 28th of October; and that you may be apprized as early as poſſible of his further proceedings, we have directed the Secretary to furniſh you with copies of all letters which we may receive from him, immediately on their arrival. With reſpect to the expediency of ſending Captain Popham's detachment to reinforce General Goddard's army, as you will be the beſt judge whether it can now reach him in time to render any effectual ſervice to the cauſe in which he will be engaged, we requeſt that you will order it, or not, as you ſhall ſee neceſſary.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations,
23d December 1779.

PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident;

Richard

Richard Barwell,
Philip Francis, } Eſquires.
Edward Wheler,

Sir Eyre Coote abſent on a viſit to the different ſtations of the army.

READ the following extract of a letter from the Preſident and Select Committee at Bombay:

Gentlemen,

We yeſterday received advices from Buſſora, dated the 21ſt ultimo, encloſing extract of a letter from His Majeſty's Ambaſſador at the Porte to the Conſul at Aleppo, dated 24th of July, and copy of a paper given in by the Spaniſh Ambaſſador, on the 16th of June, to the Lord Viſcount Weymouth; which amounting to a declaration of war, we loſe no time in tranſmitting you this intereſting intelligence, and copies of the ſaid paper and letter.

By the ſame channel we learn that Sir Charles Hardy, with a fleet of fifty ſail of the line, was to oppoſe the combined fleets of France and Spain, which had not then joined, and that the latter fleet of Indiamen, conſiſting of nine ſail of ſhips, had ſailed from Spithead the 11th June, convoyed to a certain latitude by a ſquadron bound for Newfoundland under Admiral Edwards.

The packet from General Goddard, mentioned in his letter of the 20th, will be forwarded in a few days by the Fez Allum.

We are, &c. &c.

Bombay Caſtle, 31ſt October 1779. (Signed) William Hornby, and Council.

Read a letter from General Goddard, as follows:

Gentlemen,

I had the honour of addreſſing you the 20th inſtant, and informed you of the ſteps I had taken in conſequence of your orders of the 13th September.

The emiſſary Nehab Chund has however anticipated the period limited for receiving a deciſive anſwer by a few days, and this morning brought me letters from the Peiſhwa and Miniſter; the purport of which are referring me to this man for a knowledge of their final ſentiments; he has accordingly in plain and direct terms declared to me, in the name of his maſter, that he will not accede to the propoſals I had made him, or conclude peace with the Engliſh, unleſs Ragonaut Row is delivered up to him, and Salſette reſtored to the Maratta Government.

I have in conſequence of this reply broke off the negociation, as I cannot conſiſtent with your inſtructions, give my conſent to either of theſe points; and purpoſe ſetting out for Bombay immediately to concert with the Honourable Preſident and Select Committee the plan of future operations, upon which, as it will be neceſſary to loſe no time in coming to a determination, I hope ſoon to be able to ſend you the moſt full and particular information.

At preſent I only beg leave to obſerve, that as the Maratta Chiefs ſeem at this time to be united in Council, and as I am well aſſured that the ſentiments of Sindia are the moſt hoſtile of any of them; to make the overture to him as directed in your letter of the 14th June, could not, I am convinced, at this time be productive of any good conſequences; on the contrary it might be conſtrued into a conſciouſneſs of inferiority, and would, it is to be feared, be received by him with deriſion and indifference. Under theſe circumſtances I ſhall defer it until I obtain your further inſtructions, or until circumſtances in the courſe of our operations may render it expedient and advantageous; for as the connection of this Chief with the Miniſter is founded upon conſiderations of intereſt and ambition only, a door will be open for treating with him whenever he can be perſuaded it is for his political advantage to liſten to us.

I have the pleaſure to acquaint you that veſſels have been diſpatched ſome time ago from Bombay down the coaſt of Malabar, to tranſport the Malé detachment, and I have reaſon to expect being ſoon joined by the force.

Appendix. No. 246.

I have the honour to be. &c. &c.

(Sign 4) Thomas Goddard.

Head Quarters Camp near Surat, 28th October 1779.

Ordered, That a copy of the above letter from General Goddard be ſent to the Commander in Chief, and that the Secretary do furniſh him with copies of all letters which may be received from General Goddard immediately on their arrival.

APPENDIX, No. 246.

Extract of a Letter from the Governor General and Council in Bengal to the Court of Directors; dated 14th January 1780.

SOON after receiving a confirmed and particular account of the late unfortunate retreat of the Bombay army before the Maratta forces from Worgaum, which was tranſmitted to us with a copy of the letter written to you by the Preſident and Select Committee on that occaſion, we heard of the ſafe arrival of Colonel Goddard and his detachment at Surat, whither this event had induced him to proceed by direct and ſpeedy marches.

Although the Preſident and Select Committee at Bombay had deputed Mr. Horſely, one of the covenanted ſervants on that eſtabliſhment, to us, with their proceedings, in order to explain any matters of doubt which might ariſe, or to ſatisfy our inquiries on any point of reference which we might make to him reſpecting them, we did not think proper to enter into a ſcrutiny of the conduct of that Board, or the committee appointed by them to manage the political affairs of the expedition; neither did we conſent to paſs any opinion on the charges preferred by the Preſident againſt Colonel Egerton and Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, which were alſo referred to our judgment; but rather choſe to leave the grand point to be decided by the authority of your ultimate ſentence, on a full review of the tranſactions which had been reported to you, and to recommend a general court martial for the trial of the officers accuſed, over whom we could exercile no juriſdiction, unleſs the Select Committee ſhould think neceſſary to ſuſpend them by virtue of their own authority.

But we judged it neceſſary to enter into an immediate and ſerious conſideration of the difficulties into which this unfortunate failure had brought your affairs at Bombay, and to concert ſome effectual and decided plan to retrieve them. In this view we reſolved to grant full powers to Colonel Goddard to treat with the Maratta State for the reſtoration of peace on that ſide of India, and drew up inſtructions for him in conſequence; the ſum of which was, that he ſhould offer them the terms ſtipulated in the treaty of Poonah, provided they would agree to recede from all the claims which they founded upon the convention of Worgaum, and engage never to admit a French force into their dominions, nor to allow that nation to form any ſettlements on the Maratta coaſt: and the conditions thus qualified were to be made the alternative of peace or war: but Colonel Goddard was allowed a diſcretionary power to relax ſo far in his demands upon the Maratta Government as to remit the balance due from the Peiſhwa to the Company, on account of the 12 lacks ſettled by treaty for the expences of the former war, and to give up the difference which had been inſiſted upon between the eſtimates and real value of the country of three lacks, ceded to us by the ſaid treaty, and conteſted by the Preſidency of Bombay, upon the literal conſtruction of it.

Upon the arrival of Mr. Horſely, on the 2d of May, and after due conſideration of the materials which he laid before before us, we thought proper to amplify and extend the inſtructions to Colonel Goddard, allowing the former to remain as the baſis of his conduct, and directing him, if the conditions therein preſcribed ſhould be rejected by the Miniſters, and a war become the conſequence, to adopt the plan laid down by Mr Hornby in his minute of the 30th March 1779, for carrying hoſtilities into the Guzerat country, or not, as the Colonel ſhould think proper; to declare the negociation with Moodajee Booſla at an end, and not to be reſumed without our authority, if he ſhould decline or heſitate to accept the proffered alliance of the Company on the terms ſuggeſted to him; and to treat ſeparately with Madajee Scindia, if he ſhould find that Chief diſpoſed to eſpouſe the intereſts of the Company. The preſent critical ſtate of affairs at Bombay, induced us to commit theſe points to the ſpecial management of Colonel Goddard under our authority, directing him however to apply to the Select Committee at Bombay on all occaſions, and to avail himſelf of their advice and information, previous to the concluſion of any treaty, ſeparately entruſted to him. All other matters of negociation, treaty, or military operation, we left entirely to the Preſident and Select Committee: yet as it is impoſſible to give a complete detail of circumſtances which have employed ſo great a portion of our time in the compaſs of a general letter, we beg leave to refer you to our proceedings at large, and to requeſt your attentive peruſal of the following conſultations; viz.

5th April 1779; 12th ditto; 3d May; 24th ditto; 31ſt ditto; 7th June; 10th ditto; and 14th ditto.

With reſpect to the convention ſigned at Worgaum by Meſſrs. Carnac and Egerton, we thought it incumbent on us entirely to diſavow that obligation, as having been concluded without any authority from this Government, which the Miniſtry of Poonah well knew to be neceſſary to give validity to every public act; and becauſe this was even declared at the time in which it was ſubſcribed, to want the authority of the Government of Bombay itſelf, on which it was immediately to operate, and therefore not binding on the repreſentatives of the Company; but as ſome conſideration appears to be due, in remembrance of the perſonal amity manifeſted by Madajee Scindia, in his interceſſion for ſecuring the ſafe return of the Bombay army after their defeat, we propoſed that the private agreement made by the Committee with him at the ſame time, ſhould not be totally diſregarded; and if his conduct had not been ſuch as to forfeit his pretenſions to our conſideration, we authorize Colonel Goddard to allow him ſuch gratification, in compliance with that agreement, as he might be willing to receive, and the Preſidency of Bombay able to afford.

The deceitful conduct of Madajee Scindia has ſince ſhewn him undeſerving of this conſideration, and was diſcovered before our intentions could be imparted to him.

Ragonaut Row who has been ſurrendered a priſoner to Madajee Scindia, was treated by him with every exterior mark of reſpect, and placed in charge of one of his officers, to be conducted to the northern part of the Maratta dominions, where Scindia had promiſed to grant him a jaghire of 12 lacks of rupees for his ſupport; but Ragoba diſcovering on the road, that nothing was meant by this appearance of kindneſs, but a treacherous pretext to carry him off, and to throw him into cloſe confinement, at a diſtance from the capital, excited an oppoſition in the followers who were allowed to attend him, by which, and by a degree of perſonal bravery, which if credit may be given to the reports of it, chiefly contributed to his ſucceſs, he overpowered the troops of Scindia's officer, and effected his eſcape to Colonel Goddard, at Surat, who received him with aſſurances of perſonal protection.

We thought it adviſable to authorize a continuance of the protection which had been granted to Ragoba; but having bounded our views to the reſtoration of peace, by the terms of our original inſtructions to Colonel Goddard, we made no alteration in them on account of this event, although we gave our ſanction to the attainment of ſome additional advantages which Colonel Goddard intimated his expectations of being able to ſecure from it, if the Miniſters could be brought to enter into a negociation with him; at the ſame time, to prevent his being allured by this hope, we directed, that they ſhould not be ſuffered to interfere with, or impede the general line of conduct preſcribed to him.

Colonel Goddard prevailed ſo far with the Miniſters, as to induce them, after repeated promiſes, to ſend a confidential agent to him to receive the overtures of peace which he had to offer on our part, and to treat with him upon them; but having protracted the negociation a conſiderable time longer than was neceſſary, and finding by the conduct of the agent, that he was only endeavouring to amuſe Colonel Goddard, and to waſte away the fair ſeaſon in promiſes and references to Poonah, while the Chiefs at that place were forming a league to oppoſe him if circumſtances ſhould require it, we thought it not prudent to temporize any longer with them, and therefore ordered, that the propoſals offered to the Miniſters ſhould be immediately repeated, and a peremptory demand made for a definitive anſwer to them within twenty-four hours of their being preſented; the refuſal or evaſion of which ſhould be deemed equivalent to a declaration of war.

We had applied to the Preſidencies of Fort Saint George and Bombay about this time, to reinforce the detachment under Colonel Goddard, with ſuch part of the troops belonging to their eſtabliſhments, as the Commander in Chief thought could be ſpared for that purpoſe, in conſequence of intelligence received by him of a French force collecting at the iſlands, which was ſuppoſed to be intended for a deſcent upon the Malabar coaſt; the Preſident and Select Committee at Bombay have agreed to furniſh their quota of men; and the Preſident and Select Committee at Fort Saint George inform us, that in the preſent critical ſituation of their affairs with Hyder Ally, whoſe diſpoſition they apprehend to be hoſtile to the Engliſh, they cannot ſpare the whole force required from them, but have ordered Colonel Braithwayte, with the troops under his command at Mahé, conſiſting of one company of European infantry, one company of artillery, ſix companies of grenadier, and eight companies of battalion Sepoys, to march on the requiſition of Colonel Goddard, for the ſupport of his army.

In the mean time we find that Colonel Goddard received our final orders to him, on the ſubject of his negociations, and having made a peremptory demand conformable thereto, he was anſwered by the Miniſters, that they would not agree to treat with him for peace on any other terms than the ſurrender of Ragoba's perſon, and the reſtitution of Salſette to the Maratta Government.

Colonel Goddard thought it neceſſary immediately to put an end to his negociations, and to prepare for hoſtilities; in conſequence of which he proceeded to Bombay, to concert a plan of operations with the Preſident and Select Committee there, and to receive charge of the forces which he expected to be furniſhed with from the Bombay garriſon, and from Mahé, by a veſſel which had been diſpatched for them ſome time before.

By private advices communicated to the Governor General, we underſtand that Colonel Goddard left Surat on the 3d November, and was returned on the 10th December, with a reinforcement of the troops from Mahé, and that a detachment from Bombay had alſo joined his army at Surat.

With this united ſtrength, conducted by Colonel Goddard, in whoſe ſkill and experience we place the greateſt confidence, we entertain the moſt ſanguine hopes of a ſucceſsful iſſue to the preſent campaign; notwithſtanding we have reaſon to believe that all the parties in the Maratta Government at Poonah are now united againſt us.

We had reſolved to recruit Colonel Goddard's army, by a reinforcement of 2000 volunteers, to be drafted from the Sepoy corps on this eſtabliſhment, and had given the command of this body to Captain Popham, who had ſerved under Colonel Goddard in his late march, and was returned to this place; but as the ſeaſon is ſo far advanced, and many circumſtances have occurred to prevent the march of this reinforcement hitherto from Cawnpore, the place of its rendezvous, and as we underſtand that Colonel Goddard's detachment is already completed with Sepoys enliſted at Surat, we are in doubt whether it will be neceſſary to ſend it, and have therefore left this point to the judgment and option of the Commander in Chief.

In conſequence of the encomiums paſſed by the Preſident and Select Committee at Bombay on the conduct of Colonel Goddard, and prompted by the experience we have had of his merit and abilities in every part of his expedition to Surat, we beg leave to ſecond an application which they intended to make to you, ſoliciting his appointment to the chief command of the Company's forces on that eſtabliſhment. In the mean time we have thought proper to confer on him the brevet rank of Brigadier General, during the preſent ſervice; as well for the purpoſe of ſecuring him in the principal command of the troops which might be employed againſt the Marattas, as to increaſe his conſequence and authority in that important ſtation, and to diſtinguiſh and reward his merit by this mark of our attention.

The Preſident and Select Committee at Bombay, in their letter to us of the 4th April, expreſs their ſenſe of Colonel Goddard's conduct, and ſolicit from us ſome diſtinguiſhed mark of our and their favour towards him. This we acknowledge was a great incentive to our granting him the ſuperior rank which he now holds, being in our opinion the only effectual means we had of complying with their requeſt; and yet we could not grant it indefinitely, without injuring his ſenior officers on this eſtabliſhment, who had done nothing to forfeit our favour: we were therefore obliged to confine his commiſſion to the preſent ſervice, in which he was not likely to rank with any of thoſe officers under whom he will conſequently take place on his return to his duty at Bengal.

We muſt obſerve that, notwithſtanding the application from the Preſident and Select Committee at Bombay, and the reaſons which we have aſſigned for the conſequent promotion of Colonel Goddard, they appear to have conſidered themſelves injured by this meaſure, as they ſay they diſallow our right to grant ſuch partial rank to any of our officers; remonſtrating againſt it as well as againſt the ſeparate powers which we thought it neceſſary to delegate on the late occaſion to General Goddard, to negociate with the Government at Poonah, as claſhing with the privileges which you have allowed excluſively to them; yet we muſt do them the juſtice to ſay, that for the benefit of the public ſervice, they have agreed to acquieſce in the rank aſſigned to General Goddard, and to ſupport the meaſures which he may adopt in the execution of his truſt as our public Miniſter.

In a letter which we have received from General Goddard, he informed us that he had granted an allowance of 50,000 rupees per month to Ragoba for the ſupport of himſelf and followers, without giving a ſufficient explanation of the principles and motives which induced him, to enable us to judge of the neceſſity for it; but while we found ſo much difficulty in providing means for the indiſpenſable charges of the detachment, and that he himſelf experienced the ſame difficulty in raiſing money for his drafts upon this Government, we could not but diſapprove of ſuch an addition to his expences; we therefore ordered the allowance to be immediately diſcontinued, although we think that the reſtraint which ſuch a gratuity for the time laid upon a number of licentious perſons, whoſe former neceſſities impell'd them to plunder the ſubjects of the Maratta Government for their ſupport, might have ſufficiently evinced our diſpoſition to juſtice and peace, if the Miniſters had been inclined to agree to any reaſonable terms of accommodation with us. To this we muſt add another inſtance of lenity ſhewn by General Goddard, and even acknowledged by the Miniſters themſelves, when on the complaint of ſome of the Amildars in the Guzerat province, he afforded them redreſs againſt the violences offered to them by Ragoba's men. Appendix. No. 247.

A reference was made to us by the Preſident and Select Committee at Bombay concerning the additional rank granted by them to Captain Hartley in conſequence of petitions from ſome of the officers who conceived themſelves aggrieved by this ſuperceſſion of them; but we declined any ſort of interference in this matter, both becauſe the caſe complained againſt was not cognizable by our authority, and becauſe direct appeals had been made to you on the ſubject.

Gauzy o-Deen Cawn, who formerly held the Vizarut of the empire under the two late Kings, having been found at Surat in the diſguiſe of a pilgrim was apprehended by the Chief of that place, and detained until the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay had conſulted us reſpecting the diſpoſal of his perſon. As we did not approve of any acts of violence which could neither be reconciled to juſtice or immediate neceſſity, we deſired them to releaſe this man; but to forbid his appearing within the Company's territories; which they accordingly did.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 17th January 1780.

PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident;

Richard Barwell,
Philip Francis,
Edward Wheler, } Eſquires.

Sir Eyre Coote abſent on a viſit to the different ſtations of the army.

THE following minutes having paſſed in circulation after the draft of the general letter had been ſent round, they are now recorded.

Minute of the Governor General—Informs the Board, and deſires that it may be notified in the general letter to the Court of Directors, that he has advices which he can depend upon, mentioning the departure of General Goddard from Surat to Bombay on the 3d November laſt, and that he was neither returned, nor immediately expected at Surat on the 30th of laſt month.

Agreed. Edwd Wheler.

Mr. Francis deſires it may be mentioned, that he is informed by a private letter of the firſt authority from Fort Saint George, "that it is now certain that the Ma-"rattas and Hyder Ally have formed an alliance."

Agreed. Edwd Wheler.

Governor General—That a peace may have taken place between Hyder Ally and the Marattas I do not doubt; my own advices confirm it; but no alliance between them can be of long duration, as it is unnatural. I am convinced from the whole tenor of Hyder Ally's conduct and diſpoſition, that he will never moleſt us whilſt we endeavour to preſerve a good underſtanding with him. Theſe were lately Mr. Francis's ſentiments as well as mine; and his diſtruſt of the ſame authority on the ſame ſubject I recollect to have been yet ſtronger marked than my own (ſee Conſultation 20th December).

Appendix. No. 248.

I therefore object to this information being given to the Court of Directors in the general letter, as only tending to alarm them without ſufficient cauſe for it.

Mr. Francis—The intelligence I have ſtated to the Board is of a much later date than that which the Governor General alludes to: it contains the poſitive aſſertion of a fact to which I cannot refuſe giving credit, conſidering the authority I have for it. It does not ſay any thing of Hyder Ally's intentions to invade the Carnatic: that was the point on which I entertained the diſtruſt alluded to by the Governor; but even that diſtruſt may be removed by new facts and later advices.

Governor General—I think it proper to inform the Board, that I learn by private intelligence from Surat that on the 30th of Zekoida, anſwering to the 10th of December, General Goddard was returned to that place, and that he had brought with him the Madras detachment from Mahé, ſaid by this account to conſiſt of 500 Europeans and 2,000 Sepoys.

No. 248.

Intelligence from Decan, dated 22d Jawal, 3d November; delivered for Tranſlation 13th January.

Hemunt Pundit Pundham, Narrain Mudlo, Nanna Sahib, and Ballagee Jenandan, are encamped with 4 or 5,000 horſe without the town of Poonah, at Garnier, and are employed in the adminiſtration of the affairs of the country. Hurry Pundit, who reſides in his own houſe at Poonah, has every day a conference with Nanna. Kiſhen Row Mullar is returned home to Baraminty. Lalla Nihalchund, who had come hither after his conferences with the Europeans of Surat, Nanna Sahib has ſent back again to Colonel Goddard to Surat, and told him to aſſent to the payment of no ſum of money which the Engliſh ſhould demand. If they will conform themſelves to that treaty which the Europeans of Bombay made at the time of their defeat, and by which they agree to relinquiſh Taſty and the other Mahals, it is well, peace may be made; but if they will not, do you and Luchmen Row both come away.

Dewajee Pundit, the Dewan of Moodajee Booſla, is gone towards Naigpore, after having made this engagement with Nanna, that in ſix weeks he would march towards Bengal with a large army, and lay waſte the whole country; and at his deſire the Kella of Hoſſungabad, and the city of Hooney, dependant on the Nabob Fizeul-Dowla Bahadre, the Chief of Bopaul Zdal, have been granted to Moodajee Booſla, and they have given Dewajee Pundit a Kareta addreſſed to the Nabob Heyat Mahomet Cawn, the Talookdar of Bopaultal, directing him to deliver up the fort and city to Moodajee Booſla, which Dewajee will diſpatch to the Nabob.

Madjee Scindia is at Kamgonge; he has got ready about ſixty guns of different ſizes; and a large ſupply of powder and ball and other ſtores for the Tope Khana, have been ſent to Madajee Scindia from the Sirkar of Heremunt. Sahib Tocojee Holkar remains ſtill at Babgoung. The news writers in the country of Cokem have written to Nanna that the Engliſh at Bombay have loaded ſix veſſels with military ſtores which are lying at anchor; it is ſuppoſed that they are going to the fort of Baſſire: Nanna Sahib has accordingly put a reinforcement of about 2,000 horſe and Gardy foot, belonging to Hurry Pundit and Jenanden Pundit towards Cokem, to the aſſiſtance of the fort of Baſſire, and the remainder of the Gardy infantry he is preparing to ſend as ſoon as he ſhall have collected them.

It is now reported that the ſhips which were afloat at Bombay have ſailed from thence to ſome quarter.

Hurry Pundit, with the advice of Nanna, carried Heremunt Sahib, to the houſe of Byſajee Koorſe of the Benay country. Byſajee Pundit preſented clothes, jewels, &c. to Heremunt Sahib, who after that ſeating him behind him on his elephant, carried him to his own houſe, honoured him with a Khellaat of thanks; but Byſajee Pundit did not receive it; from hence it is conjectured that he will be reſtored to his former ſtation.

By the reports of the people arrived from Surat it has been learnt, that Dada Sahib Ragonaut Row and the Europeans, with five or ſix battalions and 2,000 horſe, are encamped without the town of Surat; Ragonaut Row has got a boil in his ear which continually emits pus. About 2,000 horſe and foot have been diſpatched by Dada Sahib towards the Pergunnah of Dahy, and two battalions are arrived from Bombay to Colonel Goddard, who has received from Calcutta the title of General inſtead of that of Colonel, and all the ſtores are brought out of the town of Surat; ſuch is the preſent ſtate. The news from Surat which comes in Maratta letters by the Dauk, Nanna Sahib reads in private and keeps them in his own poſſeſſion; and if it is neceſſary to give Madajee Scindia any information, he writes it with his own hand. He has now ſent Anket Row Running to learn the news of Surat, and has diſpatched Kiſhen Row and the ſon of Aumid Row Houſſy at the head of 400 horſe and foot, together with Hurry Sing Row, the Vackeel of Hyder Naig, and a confidential perſon on the part of Aumil Row, for the purpoſe of making a treaty on theſe conditions, to the fort of Heringapatam, where Hyder Naig reſides, with clothes, jewels, &c. That he is to pay for the expences of the preſent year 20 lacks of rupees, and for all other years 12 lacks; and that the country which has been taken from him will be reſtored to him: that if the Europeans ſhould come to their quarter from Madras or Arcot, he muſt obſtruct their march: that as war ſeems inevitable in their quarter with the Europeans he muſt ſend troops to their aſſiſtance; and that as ſoon as they ſhall have made a peace with the Europeans they will march in conjunction with him towards Arcot and Madras, and take poſſeſſion of the country: that whatever part of Arcot, &c. ſhould be taken would remain in his poſſeſſion, and that he muſt therefore, in conſideration of all this, reſtore whatever part of Heremunt Sahib's country he has before taken.—We muſt ſee what will take place. Guldar Khan, the ſon of Ameert Khan deceaſed, is in the Kella of Ranny here with 3,000 horſe and foot. All the environs of the Kella are deſerted, and all the ſmall and large pieces of water are ſpoilt: there is a great ſcarcity of water, and the army of Helmunt Sahib, amounting to about 10,000 horſe and Gardy infantry, with their ſtores, have marched from the fort three coſs of this ſide, to the Nullah of the village of Chomprah. Once or twice ſmall parties of them went towards the fort, but ſeveral being killed and wounded, they returned. Deeſum Mug, the Talookdar of Bhengar in the neighbourhood of the Kellah of Ahmudnagur, having collected 1 or 200 men, was deſirous of taking Mowajee Babba out of the fort of Ahmudnagur. Mowajee Babba ſent ſecretly a letter to Deeſum Mug, which the guards getting information of, ſeized and ſent to Nanna Sahib, who accordingly took up and confined all the Muteſeddies and people employed by Mowajee Babba, and has put guards upon the houſes of Mowajee and all his Muteſeddies, in which there is to the amount of 20 lacks of money and goods.

It is reported, that diſputes have ariſen between Hyder Naig and the Nabob Mahomed Ally, the Soubahdar of Arcot. The Nabob Nizam Ally Khan is at Hydrabad; it is reported he is going to Aurungabad. An anſwer is preparing to the royal Shukka, which before arrived from his Majeſty to Heremunt Sahib. Nanna Sahib has wrote about 60 Maratta letters to the Chiefs of Mangry, who remain at home from a pique: they would not receive the letters, and ſaid that they for five years were not deficient in their duty, and had been put to great expence without ever receiving any thing from the Sirkar, and were not able to attend their duty, from want of the neceſſaries of life. On the 22d Jewal, Nanna Sahib Cawn invited Byſajee Goorſe, and preſented him with clothes, jewels, and every thing belonging to his jaghire and former State, from the Sirkar of Heremunt Sahib, and has raiſed him to his former dignity.

Nanna has invited all the Sirdars of the army, and determined with them upon declaring war with the Europeans. Gopaul Sumbajee and Siccarám Hurry are dead. Whatever I ſhall further learn I will inform you.

APPENDIX, No. 249.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, 17th January 1779.

RESOLVED, That the following letter be written to Brigadier General Goddard:

Sir,

We have received your letter of the 28th October, alſo your duplicate letter of the 10th ultimo; but as the papers to which you refer us for particulars were omitted, we remain ſtill uninformed of your intentions with reſpect to Ragoba, or of the immediate plan of operations which you mean to purſue, further than what we are able to collect from the letter itſelf.

With reſpect to the penſion which you have granted to Ragoba, and on which you deſire our inſtructions, we muſt refer you to our letter of the 29th November, for the ſenſe of our diſſatisfaction with that allowance; and we think it proper now to add the ſtricteſt injunctions, that you do not in any manner ſuffer him to become chargeable to the Company. The general indiſpoſition ſhewn towards him by the Maratta Chiefs, proves that he has little influence in that Government, and that he is not likely to bring any partizans to our aſſiſtance; we are determined therefore to ſtand forth as the principals in the war, and to maintain the character through the whole courſe of it, as the Miniſters, by rejecting the terms of accommodation which we propoſed to them, have in effect made us ſo. For this reaſon we think it neceſſary further to direct, that you do not ſuffer Ragoba to become of too much importance in your preſent operations, and to caution you againſt entering into any ſpecific engagements which may entitle him to a participation in your ſucceſs; unleſs he is able contrary to our preſent expectations, to afford you ſuch effectual and actual ſupport as ſhall juſtify his admiſſion to ſuch benefits.

We have received a paper of intelligence tranſmitted to us from the Preſident and Select Committee at Fort Saint George, which we deem it a juſtice due to you to afford you an opportunity of anſwering; we therefore encloſe a copy of it; and as the breaking off the negociation at Poonah is attributed to an exorbitant demand on your part, beyond the terms which we had authorized you to propoſe, we think it incumbent on us to call upon you for an anſwer; aſſuring you at the ſame time, that the declaration contained in the paper has made no impreſſion on our minds, nor tended in any degree to leſſen that confidence which we have hitherto placed in your fidelity, and which your ſervices, and our knowledge of your character, have merited from us.

The ſeaſon being too far advanced for Captain Popham's detachment, which is ſtill at Cawnpore, to render you any effectual ſervice by marching to your aſſiſtance, we ſhall countermand our order for that purpoſe.

As it is very material for us to be regularly furniſhed with the accounts of your detachment, as well for the purpoſe of fixing and providing your ſupplies, as for entry on our books, we again deſire that you will be punctual in forwarding them to us.

We cannot comply with the laſt paragraph of your letter, dated 28th October, as the power which you ſolicit, to grant brevet rank, and to fill up the vacancies which may happen in your detachment, would not only be incompatible with our late military regulations, but tend to create confuſion in the army.

Fort William, 24th January 1780. We are, &c

Appendix. Nos. 249 & 250. A.

Extract of a Letter from Brigadier General Goddard; dated 27th May 1780.

In anſwer to the paper of Madras intelligence you have tranſmitted me, it is neceſſary to remark upon the little dependance that can be placed upon information originating from ſources ſo ill informed as the perſon who tranſmitted it from Poonah muſt be; and had not you been pleaſed to call upon me for an anſwer to it, I ſhould not myſelf conſider it deſerving of the ſmalleſt attention: at the ſame time, gentlemen, I muſt acknowledge with the warmeſt ſenſe of gratitude, the candid and honourable expreſſions you have made uſe of on the occaſion, from which I have the heartfelt ſatisfaction of being perfectly aſſured, that the paper you communicated to me has failed of making any impreſſion on your minds. I beg leave however, in the moſt ſerious and ſacred manner, as an officer and a man of honour, to declare to you, that I never made any demands of money from the Poonah Durbar, either publicly or privately, directly or indirectly, beyond what I was required to do, either by the expreſs letter of your inſtructions, or by an attention to the particulars communicated to me by the Select Committee of Bombay, relative to the Aurora merchant ſhip on the Maratta coaſt, very little exceeding one lack of rupees in value, and which had been previouſly admitted as a fair and legal charge upon the revenues of the Jamboofier Pergunnah, and communicated to you by the gentlemen of Bombay.

PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident;

Richard Barwell, Philip Francis, Edwd Wheler. } Eſquires.

Sir Eyre Coote on a viſit to the different ſtations of the army.

RECEIVED the following letter from Sir Eyre Coote:

Gentlemen, Lucknow, January 6th 1780.

I am juſt honoured with your letter of the 23d ultimo, encloſing to me a copy of Brigadier General Goddard's letter of the 28th of October, and giving me diſcretional powers for ordering the march of Captain Popham's detachment.

It appears to me, by General Goddard's letter, (the contents of which I own I feel myſelf diſappointed in, as by his correſpondence with me I had been led to a very different expectation) that a war with the Marattas is inevitable, unleſs you chuſe to comply with the terms upon which they offer you peace.

In this ſituation of affairs, I cannot but expreſs ſome uneaſineſs that the information you give me is not accompanied by your reſolutions in what manner we are to proceed; whether you hold it beſt to accede to their propoſitions for peace, to commence an active and vigorous war, or to ſtand merely on the defenſive againſt them.

The firſt or ſecond of theſe require the moſt ſpeedy determination, leſt the appearance of a French force, which we have much reaſon to expect, ſhould heighten their demands in the one caſe, or add ſtrength to the union already formed among themſelves in the other.

I hardly need obſerve to you, gentlemen, that the circumſtances we are in, both at home and here, require from us the moſt immediate, decided, and united meaſures; sures; and that in a correspondence carried on at this distance from the Presidency, it is absolutely necessary, if we would avoid delays, which may prove fatal to our affairs, that I should receive your opinions upon events of importance, as speedily as the information itself.

For want of it, in the present critical instance, I can do no more than endeavour to procure from the Vizier, and to collect together what little heavy artillery is to be met with in these quarters. Our army here is wholly unprovided with them, as well as almost every other military store.

Captain Popham's detachment is ready to march. The undertaking will now be a hazardous one, and cannot be effected without moving an army across the Jumna, to cover and screen his motions, by calling off the powers and attention of the enemy; and it may at the same time prove a check to them in collecting the large sums they are actually employed in raising among the tributary Princes there, the amount of which I shall very soon obtain exact information of.

This, together with a well-timed co-operation on General Goddard's part, to accelerate and facilitate their junction, can alone give hopes of their making good our aim.

But neither this nor any thing else can be attempted until your definitive resolutions are given as to peace, a vigorous war, or a defensive one.

General Goddard's request at the close of his letter I must pointedly object to, as the granting it will undoubtedly increase that confusion in the army which I have been endeavouring to the utmost to relieve them from.

I enclose a return of the army under General Goddard, upon a supposition that the Madras detachment may have joined him.

I have the honour to be, &c.

Reſolved, That the following reply be written to the Commander in Chief.

To Sir Eyre Coote.

Sir,

We have been favoured with your letters, dated the 2d, 3d, and 6th inſtant.

We receive with pleaſure the information which you give us of the ſucceſsful iſſue of your applications to the Vizier for the neceſſary tuncaws on his revenue to anſwer the diſburſements of the troops for the enſuing year.

When we tranſmitted you a copy of General Goddard's letter to us, under date the 28th of October, we ſhould alſo have imparted to you our reſolutions upon it had we formed any; but a preciſe line of conduct having already been laid down for General Goddard in our inſtructions to him, which provided for the event of hoſtilities, General Goddard having informed us, when he ſaw a war was unavoidable that he was going to Bombay to concert the means of carrying it on to advantage; and as the plan of his operations, whatever it might be, muſt be governed in a great meaſure by local and incidental circumſtances which we could neither foreſee nor have any timely acquaintance with, we thought it unneceſſary to take any further ſteps upon the occaſion of his letter.

We have now received a further letter from General Goddard, dated the 10th December, informing us of his return to Surat after having ſettled the plan of his future operations, for the particulars of which he refers us to papers omitted to be encloſed in this letter which is a duplicate: our ſecretary informs us that he has forwarded a copy of it to you; and in order to complete your information we now tranſmit you a draft of our intended reply.

We are of opinion that the ſeaſon is too far advanced to admit of a junction between Captain Popham's detachment and the forces commanded by General Goddard, and that the march of this detachment to the other ſide of India is therefore no longer adviſable; but we think that it may be uſeful on the weſtern frontier of the Vizier's dominions, either to repel an invaſion from the Marattas, if they ſhould attempt to enter at that quarter, or to proceed againſt them on the weſtern ſide of the Jumna if it ſhould be found expedient to ſend a force for that purpoſe, we therefore recommend its continuing ſtill embodied.

We are, &c.

Bombay Select Conſultations, 29th October 1779.

At a Select Committee; PRESENT,

The Honourable William Hornby, Eſquire, Preſident and Governor;
John Carnac, Eſq. Daniel Draper, Eſq.

READ the letter from Bengal, dated 14th ultimo, and a letter received laſt night from General Goddard.

Conſiderations on the preſent ſtate of affairs with the Marattas.

We are concerned to obſerve matters appear ſo ripe for a rupture, when we are ſo little in a condition to contribute any aſſiſtance, either of men or money, towards carrying on a war. In the preſent ſituation of affairs, it is undoubtedly our buſineſs to endeavour to gain time, and to protract the criſis, which the execution of the late order muſt inevitably produce. It ſhould be conſidered that our treaſury is very low, and that we have no reſources of any kind for a ſupply, nor have the Governor General and Council given us the ſmalleſt aſſurances of any aſſiſtance from them. The laſt accounts from Tellicherry give us no reaſonable expectation of the arrival of the fleet in India before January; and in the mean time prudence requires, that we ſhould have regard to our own ſafety, from any attempts of the French, and muſt make us very cautious of diminiſhing the force of this garriſon, by giving any reinforcement to General Goddard; the addition of the force from Madras can likewiſe by no means be depended on, as we underſtand the gentlemen there have ſent an army into the field, and it is very doubtful whether they will chuſe to ſpare us a man till the fleet arrives; and Colonel Braithwaite, by the laſt diſpatch, acquainted the Preſident, that he had not received any orders from his ſuperiors to join General Goddard, without which it appears he did not mean to do it. The ſafety of Captain Popham's detachment, which we learn is to march from the Bengal provinces by the way of Agra, ought likewiſe to be a very powerful argument againſt urging matters too faſt, as in caſe of an immediate rupture, we apprehend there would be very great danger of its being cut off before a junction could be effected; at any rate it muſt take up a very conſiderable length of time before the troops from Madras and Mahé, and Captain Popham's detachment, can be collected, and put in a condition to act offenſively, which, with the ſtate of our finances, an uncertainty reſpecting the fleet, and the ſtrong body of forces on board, which would add ſuch vigour to our operations, make us clearly and deciſively of opinion, that it is not our intereſt, and likewiſe very impolitic, to precipitate matters at this juncture; and it is therefore reſolved, that this our opinion, and our reaſons for it, be immediately ſtated to General Goddard; and that it be ſtrongly recommended to him, if the miniſterial party will not accede to his terms, to endeavour to procraſtinate, and gain time, till we are in a better condition to proſecute an active war.

That it is our buſineſs to procraſtinate with them.

Reaſons for our opinion.

To be recommended to General Goddard, to endeavour to gain time.

It will be alſo highly proper before we come to a rupture, if ſuch ſhould be found to be inevitable, to form connections with ſome of the country Powers, and particularly the Guicawars, as well for proſecuting the war as for the better ſecurity of our northern poſſeſſions, and obtaining a body of horſe, which we imagine will be found abſolutely neceſſary.

Country Powers: neceſſity of forming connections with ſome party.

The Guicawars deemed a proper one

It is alſo highly proper that ſtocks of grain ſhould be collected and laid in at Surat and Broach, not only on account of the probability of a war, but the unfavourableneſs of the ſeaſon.

Stocks of grain to be collected at Surat and Broach.

Reſolved, That the Chiefs at thoſe ſettlements be directed to conſult General Goddard reſpecting the ſtock of grain for his army, and that they actually concert matters ſo as to lay in a quantity between both ſettlements ſufficient for an army of 6,000 men for ſix months. The Chief of Surat ſhould likewiſe ſuggeſt to the Nabob, the propriety on the above conſideration, that care ſhould be taken to prevent the city from ſuffering any want of grain, by ſome timely precautions on that head; and as ghee can be provided cheaper at Bombay, the Chief muſt be acquainted that article will be ſupplied from hence.

A quantity ſufficient for 6,000 men for ſix months to be laid in.

Ghee to be provided from hence.

Directions muſt alſo be ſent to Surat for ſalting a quantity of meat, of which we have none in ſtore.

A quantity of meat to be ſalted at Surat.

Our reaſons for wiſhing General Goddard to temporize and procraſtinate matters, muſt alſo be ſtated to the Governor General and Council, who, we cannot help remarking, muſt have been very well acquainted with the ſtate of our finances at the very time, when, as by their laſt letter they deſire us by every means that may be neceſſary, to render General Goddard's ſucceſs ſpeedy and effectual.

Reaſons for wiſhing General Goddard to temporize, to be ſtated to the Governor General and Council.

Gentlemen,

Goddard, General, letter from.

I think it neceſſary to give you this early information, that in conſequence of inſtructions received from the Honourable the Governor General and Supreme Council, to put the intentions of the Miniſters to an immediate teſt, and obtain a deciſive knowledge of their ſentiments upon the ſubject of the propoſals already made them, I think it neceſſary to declare to Luximon Row, their Vackeel, the ſuſpicions I cannot but entertain of the hoſtile deſigns and inclinations of his maſter, from the delay that has unneceſſarily aroſe in receiving an anſwer to my propoſals, firſt tranſmitted in writing, and afterwards fully communicated by Lolla Nehal Chund in perſon, who had promiſed faithfully to return himſelf, or forward the Miniſter's reply in twenty days at furtheſt; that twice that period had now elapſed; and although he (Luximon Row) had repeatedly amuſed me with accounts of Nehal Chund having received his diſmiſſion, it appeared from his own acknowledgments he had not yet ſet out, and would not in all probability leave Poonah till after the Duſſorah: that, notwithſtanding theſe circumſtances of ſuſpicion, the Engliſh were ſtill ready to ſhew their ſincere inclination for peace, and grant every indulgence they poſſibly could conſiſtent with a regard to their own honour and ſafety, and that therefore I would wait fifteen days more, in which time he ſaid a letter might arrive in reply to one he would diſpatch that inſtant; at the expiration of which, if Nehal Chund did not arrive, or a ſatisfactory anſwer to the propoſals I had tranſmitted by him, I ſhould conſider this delay as a declaration of war, and act accordingly. This paſſed the 18th inſtant, and of courſe the limited period expires the 3d of November. I gave Luximon Row at the ſame time letters to the Peiſhwa and Miniſter to the above effect.

A letter to the Honourable Governor and Supreme Council, with a ſmall parcel containing part of the ſurvey of my route to this place, accompanies this diſpatch, which I take the liberty of recommending to your particular care to give orders for its being ſafely forwarded to them.

I have the Honour to be,
Gentlemen,
Your moſt obedient humble ſervant,
Thomas Goddard.

Camp near Surat,
20th October 1779.

Signed the following letters to General Goddard, and the Chiefs of Surat and Broach.

To Brigadier General Goddard.

Sir,

We have received your letter of the 20th inſtant.—We are concerned to obſerve that matters appear ſo ripe for a rupture when we are ſo little in a condition to contribute any aſſiſtance either of men or money towards carrying on a war. In the preſent ſituation of affairs it is undoubtedly good policy to endeavour to gain time, and to protract the criſis which the late order from Bengal muſt immediately produce if literally complied with. It ſhould be conſidered that our treaſury is very low, and that we have no reſources of any kind for procuring an adequate ſupply, nor have the Governor General and Council given us the ſmalleſt aſſurances of any ſupply from them. By an account from Tellicherry we learn, that the fleet under Sir Edward Hughes, was ſpoke with by a Daniſh ſhip on the 19th of May, no further advanced than the latitude of ſeven degrees north, ſo that we can have no reaſonable expectation of their arrival in India before the month of January; and in the mean time, prudence requires that we ſhould have regard to our own ſafety againſt any attempts of the French, and muſt make us very cautious of diminiſhing our own force by any reinforcement to your army. Any addition of force from Madras can likewiſe by no means be depended on, as we underſtand the gentlemen there have ſent an army into the field under Colonel Harper, and it is very doubtful whether they will chuſe to ſpare us a man until the arrived of the fleet. Colonel Braithwaite has alſo acquainted the Preſident, that he has not yet received orders from his ſuperiors to join you, without which he may perhaps not mean to do it. The ſafety of Captain Popham's detachment muſt likewiſe be put to extreme hazard by an immediate rupture; at any rate it muſt take up a very conſiderable time before the different bodies of troops which are to compoſe the army can be collected and put in a condition to act offenſively, which, with the ſtate of our finances, and the diſtant expectation of the fleet with a body of troops that would diffuſe ſtrength to all our ſettlements in India, all together form a collection of circumſtances that make us clearly and deciſively of opinion it is our buſineſs to procraſtinate and not to precipitate matters at this juncture, and we therefore think it our indiſpenſable duty ſtrongly to recommend to you, if the Miniſters will not accede to the offered terms, not to make any immediate declaration, but, according to their own policy, to endeavour to gain time till we are in a better condition for an active war.

It will alſo be very proper before we come to a rupture, if ſuch ſhould be found inevitable, to form connections with ſome of the country Powers, particularly with the Guicawars, as well for the better proſecution of the war, as for the ſecurity of our northern poſſeſſions; and we alſo apprehend it will be found very neceſſary to engage in our ſervice a conſiderable body of horſe, which cannot be done without a large ſum of money, now abſolutely out of our power to furniſh.

In the mean time we ſhall give orders for eſtabliſhing magazines of ſtores and proviſions at Poonah and Surat for the future exigencies of the army.

humble ſervants,

Surat, letter to the Chief.

Sir,

From the probability of a war with the Marattas, and the unfavourableneſs of the preſent ſeaſon, we deem it highly neceſſary that timely proviſion ſhould be made to ſecure proper ſupplies of grain and proviſions for the army in the field; we therefore now direct, and have ſent the like orders to the Chief of Broach, that after conſulting General Goddard with reſpect to the preſent ſtate of his magazines, you mutually ſo concert matters as to lay in between both ſettlements a ſtock of grain and proviſions ſufficient for an army of 6,000 men for ſix months. We deſire you will likewiſe ſuggeſt to the Nabob the propriety on the above conditions, of his uſing timely precautions to prevent the city from ſuffering any want of grain.

As ghee can be provided cheaper at Bombay than Surat, that article will be ſupplied from hence.

Saturday, 30th. Received from the factors at Buſſorah a copy of the declaration delivered by the Spaniſh Ambaſſador at the Britiſh Court to the Secretary of State, Lord Weymouth; which amounting to a declaration of war, it is judged neceſſary immediately to diſpatch advice thereof to the Preſidencies of Bengal and Madras, and to Sir Edward Vernon, and to the ſubordinate ſettlements.

Sunday, 31ſt. Signed the following letters to the Governor General and Council, the Select Committee at Madras, Sir Edward Vernon, and the Reſident at Anjengo, and circular letters to the ſubordinates, all encloſing copies of the Spaniſh manifeſto.

To the Honourable Warren Haſtings, Eſquire, Governor General, &c. Council at Fort William.

Gentlemen,

Governor General and Council, letter to. We now encloſe a duplicate of our laſt letter, dated the 7th inſtant, and have ſince received your favours of the 16th Auguſt and 14th September.

General Goddard has alſo received your inſtructions correſponding with the laſt-mentioned, and has adviſed us of his proceedings in conſequence; which if the Poonah Government is not pacifically inclined, muſt bring on a criſis much ſooner than we are prepared to meet it. We have explained ourſelves fully on this head to General Goddard, and ſtrongly recommended to him not to precipitate matters, but to endeavour to gain time, and defer any declaration until we are in a better condition for an active war; the good policy of which we are perſuaded you will be convinced of, when you have attentively conſidered the circumſtances we have ſtated to General Goddard in our anſwer to his letter, of both which copies are encloſed, and to which we beg leave to refer.

In our laſt letter we mentioned the ſtate of our finances, which was too minutely explained in the Preſident's minute of the 30th March; and although we flatter ourſelves you have already taken meaſures for ſupplying us, we have not received any aſſurances to this effect; and prudence requires we ſhould be at an abſolute certainty on this important point, before we engage in meaſures that will require the moſt ample reſources: at leaſt we have done our duty in giving the real ſtate of the caſe to General Goddard, with whom at laſt the determination will reſt; aſſuring you at the ſame time, that ſhould he find himſelf reduced to the extremity of recurring to hoſtile meaſures, we ſhall grant every aid our means will admit, conſiſtent with a proper regard to our own ſafety, to render his ſucceſs ſpeedy and effectual.

We yeſterday received advices from Buſſora, dated 21ſt ultimo, encloſing extract of a letter from his Majeſty's Ambaſſador at the Porte to the Conſul at Aleppo, dated the 24th of July; and copy of a paper given in by the Spaniſh Ambaſſador on the 16th of June to the Lord Viſcount Weymouth; which amounting to a declaration of war, we loſe no time in tranſmitting you this intereſting intelligence, and copies of the ſaid paper and letter.

By the ſame channel we learn that Sir Charles Hardy, with a fleet of 50 ſail of the line, was to oppoſe the combined fleets of France and Spain, which had not then joined; and that the latter fleet of Indiamen, conſiſting of nine ſhips, had ſailed from Spithead the 11th of June, convoyed to a certain latitude by a ſquadron bound for Newfoundland, under Admiral Edwards.

The packet from General Goddard, mentioned in his letter of the 20th, will be forwarded in a few days by the Faz Allum. Appendix. No. 253. A.

We are, with reſpect,
Gentlemen,
Your moſt obedient
humble ſervants,

Bombay Caſtle, 31ſt October 1779. William Hornby, &c. Committee.

To the Honourable Sir Thomas Rumbold, Baronet, Preſident, &c. Select Committee at Fort Saint George.

Gentlemen,

Fort Saint George, letter to. The Governor General and Council have acquainted us of their reſolution to form a reſpectable army on this coaſt, and of the quota of troops to be furniſhed from your Preſidency, of which you have been duly adviſed by them; and we wait your advices on the ſubject. But as we underſtand the forces at Myhie are intended as a part of the proportion to be contributed by your Preſidency, and as matters with the Marattas appear to converge faſt to a rupture, we have, on General Goddard's repreſentation of the neceſſity of having his army put into a condition for inſtant and active ſervice, ſent down a ſufficient number of tranſports to bring up the forces, ordnance, and ſtores from Myhie, and hope Colonel Braithwaite will have been furniſhed in time with proper orders from you for complying with our requiſitions.

The fortifications of Bombay having lately been conſiderably augmented with ſeveral new works, we were much in want of cannon for them; and obſerving by a return ſent us by Colonel Braithwaite, the conſiderable quantity of ordnance taken at Mahé, we judged it a very good opportunity for ſupplying our wants, and ordered them to be tranſported to Bombay on the Company's veſſels, which will alſo ſave the very heavy expence of freighting them round to Madras; and we hope be ſatisfactory to you.

We yeſterday received advices from Buſſora, dated 21ſt ultimo, encloſing extract of a letter from his Majeſty's Ambaſſador at the Porte to the Conſul at Aleppo, dated 24th of July; and copy of a paper delivered by the Spaniſh Ambaſſador on the 16th of June to the Lord Viſcount Weymouth, which amounting to a declaration of war, we loſe no time in tranſmitting you this intereſting intelligence, and copies of the ſaid letter and paper.

By the ſame channel we learn that Sir Charles Hardy, with a fleet of 50 ſail of the line, was to oppoſe the combined fleets of France and Spain, which had not then joined; and that the latter fleet of Indiamen, conſiſting of nine ſhips, had ſailed from Spithead the 11th of June, convoyed to a certain latitude by a ſquadron bound to Newfoundland, under Admiral Edwards.

We encloſe packets for the Governor General and Council and Admiral Vernon, and requeſt the former may be forwarded with all poſſible expedition.

We have the honour to be,

November.

Monday 1ſt. Brigadier General Goddard arrived from Surat.

Tueſday 2d. At a Select Committee; preſent, the Honourable William Hornby, Eſquire, Preſident and Governor; John Carnac, and Daniel Draper, Eſquires.

Goddard, General, meets the Committee;

General Goddard having arrived laſt night from Surat, now meets the Committee, and acquaints them of the declaration he ſent to the Poonah Miniſtry, in conſequence of the laſt order from Bengal, as already adviſed in his letter of the 20th ultimo; but before he could receive the Durbar's anſwer thereto, Neal Chund, whom he had formerly diſpatched to Poonah, with his terms, returned from thence on the 27th ultimo, with letters from the Peiſhwa and the Miniſter, the purport of which was ſimply to acknowledge receipt of the propoſal written and ſent by Neal Chund, and referring to him for an anſwer as being fully informed of their ſentiments, which he was to communicate.

informs us of the ſtate of his negociation.

Terms upon which the Marattas will make peace with the Engliſh.

That Neal Chund, in anſwer to the overtures made to the Durbar, plainly declared, That his maſter would not make peace with the Engliſh, unleſs Salſette was relinquiſhed, and the perſon of Ragonath Row delivered up: that upon theſe conditions, and theſe only, he was ready to agree to the propoſals that had been ſent to him, and declared in the moſt pointed terms, that unleſs the above conditions were agreed to, there was no further occaſion for negociation.

Diſmiſſes the Maratta Vackeel;

General Goddard alſo acquaints us, that being at ſome diſtance from Surat when he received this anſwer, he did not give the Vackeel his diſmiſſion till the next day, but acquainting him he was going upon an excurſion into the country, promiſed to ſend his reply to Surat, which he accordingly did, and immediately took ſhipping for Bombay, to conſult with us upon the meaſures to be purſued.

takes ſhipping for Bombay.

Lays before us a return of the army, which is in good condition for ſervice.

General Goddard then lays before us a return of the army at Surat, which appears to be very complete and healthy; and he aſſures us it is in an excellent condition for immediate ſervice, and well ſupplied with proviſions for the preſent.

He alſo acquaints us, that he diſpatched immediate advice of the ſituation of affairs to the Governor General and Council.

The committee of opinion that we ſhould endeavour to gain time, and to protract hoſtilities, unleſs obliged thereto.

Although by this ſtate of the caſe it appears, that a war with the Marattas is inevitable; yet for the reaſons aſſigned in our laſt conſultation, we are ſtill of opinion it is neceſſary to endeavour to gain time, and protract any declaration or acts of hoſtility until matters are more advanced, unleſs they actually commence hoſtilities againſt us. The letter in conſequence to General Goddard, of the 29th, which he has not yet received, is now read to him, together with the account of the rupture with Spain, and our recommendation to obſerve temporizing meaſures for the preſent, is ſtrongly repeated to him.

Temporizing meaſures recommended to General Goddard.

Braithwaite, Colonel, a requiſition ſent for the troops under his command.

To prevent as far as poſſible any diſappointment in the junction of the troops from Mahie, it is reſolved immediately to ſend a poſitive requiſition to Colonel Braithwaite to embark the troops on the veſſels ſent down to receive them, or he muſt be reſponſible for the conſequences. A letter to this effect is now ſigned and diſpatched from the council table.

Madjee Scindia averſe to any accommodation with the Engliſh.

General Goddard acquaints us, that he found Madjee Scindia ſo averſe to any accommodation, and ſo much inclined to hoſtile meaſures, that he did not think proper to commit the honour of the Company, by making any overtures to him.

The meaſures neceſſary to be purſued conſidered.

The meaſures to be purſued being conſidered, we are of opinion that the firſt ſtep ſhould be to endeavour to open a negociation with the Guicawars, on the grounds mentioned in the Preſident's minute of the 30th of March, and with the reſtrictions contained in the letter from the Governor General and Council of the 14th of June. Futty Sing made propoſals to us on thoſe grounds in the year 1772, which it was not then convenient for us to accept, but we hope we ſhall now find him inclined to renew the negociation upon aſſurances of being ſupported againſt the Poonah Government.

Reſolved, That we meet again to-morrow morning, to proceed on the more mature conſideration of this important buſineſs.

Adjourned.

Wm Hornby,
John Carnac,
Edwd Ravenſcroft, Secry. D. Draper.

To Colonel John Braithwaite.

Braithwaite, Colonel, letter to.

Sir,

Matters are now come to that extremity, that a war with the Marattas is really inevitable: and it is abſolutely neceſſary that the army under General Goddard ſhould be put into the moſt reſpectable ſituation to enable us to carry it on with vigour and advantage, and to prevent the poſſibility of the Company's arms being expoſed to any diſhonour, or their ſettlements to the incurſions and depredations of ſo numerous an enemy. We therefore find ourſelves under a neceſſity to prevent as far as we can a diſappointment in the junction of the forces from Mahé, to inform you that the Company's ſervice abſolutely requires their aſſiſtance at Surat; and to ſend you this poſitive requiſition, immediately to embark them on board the tranſports ſent down to receive them, in order that they may proceed to Surat without the ſmalleſt loſs of time, to join the army under General Goddard; and if you do not think proper to comply with the requiſition, you muſt be reſponſible for the conſequences.

We are, Sir,
Your moſt obedient ſervants,

Bombay Caſtle, William Hornby,

Wedneſday 3d. At a Select Committee;—preſent, the Honourable William Hornby, Eſquire, Preſident and Governor; John Carnac, Eſquire, Daniel Draper, Eſquire. General Goddard preſent.

Met to reſume the ſubject of yeſterday's conſultations.

General Goddard lays before us a letter as entered hereafter, on the preſent ſtate of affairs with the Marattas, which is attentively read and conſidered.

Artillery detachment under General Goddard to be completed to a full company.

Reſolved, That the artillery detachment with General Goddard be immediately completed to a full company by two Gallivats under orders for proceeding to Surat.

Conſideration of the meaſures to be purſued deferred till advices arrive from Colonel Braithwaite.
